Dr. Bonfant, the General's friend, is treating Mme. St. Pe until the General's mistress of 17 years turns up with love letters from Mme. St. Pe to the Doctor.

Mme. St. Pe overhears the General demanding the Doctor's blood and runs away to commit suicide. While the General is out saving her, his mistress feels forsaken and tries to kill herself. Secretary Gaston foils the attempt and steals her from Gen. St. Pe.

The General's daughters, madly in love with Gaston, run off to kill themselves while he is demanding the Secretary's blood.

Merle Kelly's excellent portrayal of Gen. St. Pe brings the old soldier to life. His thundering oaths, military arrogance, fatherly lectures to Gaston and charming flirtations with the local ladies give a welcome professional touch to the entire production.

Roberta Katman as Mme. St. Pe nags Kelly so realistically that one begins to feel sorry for him. Her whining voice and biting accusations help one to understand why the General plays around with other women.

Lloyd Hardy's bedside manner as Dr. Bonfant adds a healing balm to the play as he treats Mme. St. Pe and advises the General.

Ron Oldenburg, a Carolina graduate, is the very picture of innocence and naivete as the secretary, until Carol Cohen's sensuous portrayal of the mistress arouses him.

Dominated by a large mural of a cavalry battle scene, Thom Feuerstein's multi-colored set is filled with shields, swords, maps and trophies. He is to be congratulated for the genuine effect of an old soldier's study that he achieved.

Alice Horne and Nancy Watson as the General's daughters, Diana Maupin as the dress-maker and Ed Kiley as the priest also turned in good performances.

The dominant sex then, well handled as a whole, is a bit overdone in spots. Also, during a fight between the General's Daughters over the Secretary a hint of slapstick comedy appears.

Astronaut's Shot Is Delayed Again

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — America's planned attempt to launch astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. on a three-orbit flight around the globe next Tuesday has been postponed for at least one more day, it was reported here Tuesday.

Informed sources said more troubles in the Atlas booster rocket caused scientists to delay the shot from next Tuesday to at least Wednesday.

It also was learned that there was a chance of an even longer delay—"possibly three or four days, depending upon what we learn between now and then," one official close to the program said.

It was the sixth delay in less than two months for the Glenn flight, the free world's first manned orbital voyage around the world.

Rusk Urges US To Support Bonds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk told Congress Tuesday it would be a "political catastrophe" for both the United Nations and the United States if this country failed to back the $200 million U. N. bond issue.

Referring especially to U. N. peace efforts in the Congo, he also said this was no time "for the United Nations to falter or for the United States to falter in what the U. N. is trying to do." He called for strengthening the U. N. machinery.

Rusk appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as it opened hearings on President Kennedy's request for authority to buy up to one-half of the forthcoming U. N. bond issue. U. N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson testifies Wednesday.

Some Critical Reaction

The secretary ran into some critical reaction from Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., who wants Congress to postpone action until the financial intentions of other U. N. members are determined. He challenged State Department assertions that the bond issue would not set a precedent for various kinds of financing schemes by the world organization.

Aiken said four out of five other members who have announced willingness to buy the bonds have pledged amounts virtually equal to sums owed their governments by the United Nations. The only exception is Great Britain.

Britain Pledges $12 Million

Britain has pledged a $12 million purchase. The other countries and their commitments are Canada $6.2 million; Denmark $2.5 million, Norway $1.8 million, Sweden $5.8 million. Against this, Aiken said, the United States has offered $100 million and is owed only $30 million for its special contribution to the Congo operations.

Rusk told the committee it was unfortunate that the bond issue had become "mixed up" with other problems. He said it also would be unfortunate if Congress refused the President's request and created impressions throughout the world that it lacked confidence in the United Nations.

New Movement To Fight Reds Has Started

MIAMI (UPI) — A new continental anti-Communist movement pledged to military action to halt Red penetration and influence in the hemisphere has resulted from the Punta del Este conference, Cuban exile leader Jose Miro Cardona told a news conference here Tuesday.

Miro said top men in seven Latin-American nations, ranging from Costa Rica to Argentina, had declared themselves in on the fight against Communism in the New World. One is a president and three are former presidents, he said.

Castro Official Killed

Miro's statement coincided with underground reports fgrom Havana that a Castro official had been assassinated and two Cuban rebels secretly executed by Castro firing squads.

Travelers from Cuba said unidentified gunmen shot down Castro war crimes tribunal Judge Lt. (jg) Agustin Rumbaut in Santiago last Sunday. Rumbaut, 32, was said to have sentenced four Americans and 17 Cubans to death during his service with military tribunals.

He was reported to have been buried in Havana Monday and his death labelled an "accident."

Terrorists Bomb French Ship

ALGIERS (UPI)—Terrorists believed to be from the Secret Army Organization OAS bombed a steamship carrying French riot police Tuesday and struck with bombs and bullets across Algeria in defiance of President Charles de Gaulle's pledge to wipe out the OAS.

At least 19 persons were killed and nine others wounded in a new day of terrorism by rightwing settlers fighting to keep Algeria French and by Moslems battling for independence. The new casualties raised the toll since Jan. 1 to 672 killed and 1,120 wounded.

Four persons—including an 8-year-old boy and his father, a woman and a police officer—were killed in the port of Bone when a bomb exploded aboard the steamer Ville de Bordeaux, about to sail for Marseille with a unit of riot police.

Several other persons were wounded, two of them seriously in the ship explosion, which paralleled one in Bone harbor two weeks ago aboard a vessel that also was taking riot police back to the French mainland.

GM Sponsors Summer Trip To Europe

Graham Memorial will sponsor a chartered flight to Europe this summer. The ALITALIA DC-8 jet flight will depart from New York for London on June 5 and will return to New York on August 1. Round-trip fare will be only $300, a savings of $146.

During their stay in Europe, students will be responsible for their own arrangements for travel, work or entertainment.

To be eligible, participants must be regularly enrolled, full-time students at UNC and must have been enrolled in the first semester of this academic year.

Reservations, including $150 deposit, must be made by March 1. The flight will be confirmed or cancelled depending upon the number of students signed up at that time. Deposits will not be refundable and the balance of the payment will be due on or before March 31.

Reservations may be made now at the Information Desk in Graham Memorial.

France Speeds Plans For Talks With Rebels

De Gaulle conferred for more than an hour with Premier Michel Debre and other top ministers following his expression of "positive hope" in a broadcast speech Monday night that peace in Algeria was in sight.

Government sources said they discussed the Algerian situation and plans to crush any attempted violence by the terrorist right-wing Secret Army Organization OAS, which is fighting to keep Algeria French.

Calls Cabinet Meeting

De Gaulle scheduled a full cabinet meeting Wednesday and officials said all indications are he is determined to speed up peace taks as much as possible.

Speed also appeared to be the keynote in Tunis, where Algerian rebel government sources said peace talks with France are likely to be resumed "in the very near future."

One reason for speed was the continuing terrorism that brought new shootings, bombings and knifings in Algeria and kept tanks and heavy forces of riot troopers poised in Paris to crush any OAS attempt at violence in the capital.

Bomb Kills Four

In Algeria, a bomb exploded aboard the steamer Ville de Bordeaux as it prepared to leave the eastern port of Bone with a company of riot police bound for France. Four persons were killed and a number of others wounded in the blast.

Four other persons were killed in rapid-fire attacks by gunmen in Algiers. Other terrorist attacks in Algerian towns and cities sent the toll in Moslem-European violence since Jan. 1 to more than 670 killed and more than 1,100 wounded.

Senate OKs School Aid Bill

Final Approval Now Up To House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate drove toward a final vote Tuesday on President Kennedy's $2.67 billion college aid program after rejecting an effort to tack on federal assistance for public grade and high schools.

The public school aid amendment, sponsored by Sen. Pat McNamara, D-Mich., was defeated by voice vote. The action removed a threat that the college measure would become entangled in the religious controversy which scuttled Kennedy's public school aid proposals last year.

A later UPI dispatch reported that the aid bill has passed the Senate and awaits judgment in the House.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., floor manager of the college bill, urged the Senate to reject what he termed "crippling amendments" no matter how laudatory their purpose. He warned that approval of the public school amendment would doom all education legislation in the House this year.

The Senate also defeated a move to replace Kennedy's proposal for 212,500 scholarships, costing $924 million, with a much more modest expansion of a student loan program. The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Frank Lausche, D-Ohio, was defeated on a 50 to 37 roll call vote.

The lawmakers defeated 61-28 another proposal to finance educational facilities by giving states $455 million a year in federal cigarette taxes.

The college measure would authorize $1.5 billion in loans for college classroom construction, the $924 million for four-year scholarships to needy and talented students and $250 million in grants to community and public colleges.

Both public and private colleges would be eligible for aid but no funds could be used to build chapels or classrooms for teaching religion.

Kennedy did not request the community college help in his school proposals last year or in his new education message Tuesday. But the administration accepted the feature.

The House has approved a $1.5 billion college measure carrying only the construction funds.

Kennedy has requested a separate $2.1 billion program of grants to public grade and high schools for classroom construction and teachers' salaries. The measure was scheduled last year in a controversy over efforts to include private and church-supported schools, and the outlook is no brighter this year.

RIGHT DOWN THE MIDDLE—A three or four lane street going through the center of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity House has been made a part of Chapel Hill's Major Thoroughfare Plan.

Street Plan May Evict KA's

A major Chapel Hill thoroughfare, three or four lanes wide, may be constructed through the center of the KA fraternity house in little fraternity court, if the proposal is approved by the State Highway Commission.

However, there is no immediate danger to the KA house or other fraternity property. The proposed street is part of the long-range Thoroughfare Plan of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area and is not likely to be begun soon.

The street would carry most of the traffic now traveling on Columbia Street to and from U. S. 15-501.

The plan has been approved by the Carrboro Board of Commissioners and the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen. It has been sent to the State Highway Commission for its approval, before engineering plans are started.

Also included in the plan is a major street running through Battle Park behind the Forest theater. A wall or other type of barricade will be placed in front of the Old Well on Cameron Ave. Columbia St. will be widened until it hits Raleigh Road and South Columbia will be terminated near the Hospital in a large circular cul-de-sac.

The Battle Park Street will effect no developed property of the University, but it will go through the Crooker Estate. The blockade in front of Old Well is being planned at the University's request to close Cameron to through traffic, and to keep the parking spaces off Cameron open.

Widening the portion of Columbia Street will put the dirt sidewalk running beside Peabody Hall behind the stone wall, running parallel with the street. It is also expected to take a corner off the DKE property, but will not endanger the fraternity house, itself.

The fraternity property street was planned after officials of the hospital requested that South Columbia Street end in the health affairs complex. The hospital officials felt that a major through street should not run through the center of the complex as South Columbia now does. The construction of the Public Health Building on the other side of South Columbia from the hospital would endanger pedestrians going between the two buildings.

Protect Residential Property

Because the major objective of the Thoroughfare Plan is to protect residental areas from unnecessary through traffic, the Pittsboro Street plan was adopted. Pittsboro St. will be widened into a three or four lane through street. The street will be extended from West Cameron to Rosemary St.

The new street will go through the center of the KA House. Right-of-way demands of between 60 and 90 feet may also take parts of the Phi Gam House, the Zet House, and the Sigma Nu House. Also affected by the new street will be the Chapel Hill Junior High School property and the Chapel Hill Public Library.

Right-of-way for the new street could be very costly. The town has strict zoning laws, which make fraternity property very expensive The Chapel Hill School Board is opposed to allowing a major street to run next to the school building and through the playground. The school board wants to sell all of the high school and junior high school property or to refuse to sell a right-of-way through the school land.

Robert H. Peck, Chapel Hill Town Manager, said that the street and other parts of the Thoroughfare Plan, will not be constructed until the State approves the plan and the money is available. "I do not know when the Pittsboro Street will be widened and extended. It is extremely costly and may never be built," Peck added.

The fraternity houses endangered by the Pittsboro St. extension were told of the plans months ago by the University.

Early Steel Talks Urged By Goldberg

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg speaking on behalf of President Kennedy, urged the nation's steel companies and steel workers Tuesday to begin contract negotiations early in order to avoid disruptive stockpiling or a crippling strike.

In identical telegrams to the heads of the major steel firms and President David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers Union, Goldberg said the public interest required an early and non-inflationary settlement. Steel contracts expire June 30 and negotiations normally begin in May.

But the secretary asked the companies and the union to start contract talks "as soon as practicable." Under normal circumstances, he said, the government would not make such a request.

"But these are not normal circumstances," he said. "There are compelling reasons for such a proposal at this time."

Goldberg said steel users already are beginning to stockpile inventories because of fears of a strike. Because of this stockpiling, a settlement would cause a cutback in steel buying and result in higher unemployment, he said.

Such a development would disrupt the nation's current "vigorous economic recovery," the secretary warned.

Probe Suspended On Censorship

Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., of a Senate armed services subcommittee, announced the suspension after a second meeting with McNamara failed to resolve the dispute. Both the subcommittee and McNamara held fast to their previous positions.

At issue is the question of whether McNamara will identify individual reviewers who censored specific speeches by military officers so they can be questioned by the subcommittee about the reasons for certain deletions or changes.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S. C., said after hearing McNamara that his position was unchanged. He said previously that individual speech reviewers had nothing to fear from the subcommittee, but that they must testify so the group can assign responsibility.

McNamara has told Defense Department officials not to link reviewers with speeches they handled and reiterated his stand at the subcommittee meeting.

Robert Kennedy Receives Cheers Of Japanese

TOKYO (UPI)—A small band of Communists tried to shout down Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy during a discussion on democracy at Waseda University Tuesday but his refusal to submit to the heckling brought cheers from thousands of other Japanese students.

Only a few hours before, Kennedy sat cross-legged on a straw mat, drinking milk and tea and munching on a hotdog while a student who participated in the anti-American demonstrations in 1960 explained how small cadres of hard-core Communists take advantage of well-meaning students in Japan.

"I understand," Kennedy told the student who took part in the riots which led to the cancellation of ex-President Eisenhower's visit. Kennedy noted that similar tactics are employed by the Communists in other parts of the world. He was given a practical demonstration of the tactics by a small group of students at Waseda, one of the biggest private universities in Japan.

Jeered and Heckled

They jeered and heckled him and apparently sabotaged the public address system in the attempt to disrupt the scheduled one-hour discussion between Kennedy and the students.

One of the hecklers, 21-year-old Yuzo Tachiya, practically took over the meeting before he was hustled struggling from the stage by school officials. Someone slapped him on the side of the head when he was forced behind the curtain.

Kennedy had invited Tachiya onto the stage to ask a question. But the student pulled out a lengthy prepared questionnaire and read it while Kennedy held the microphone for him.

After Tachiya had completed reading, the public address system went dead and Kennedy's reply could not be heard by the 1,200 students jammed into the auditorium. Kennedy got hold of a battery-powered megaphone, however, and delivered an eight-minute lecture on democracy.

Honor Council

Yesterday, this column carried a criticism of the Men's Honor Council because of inconsistency in handling infractions.

The two cases cited as examples were not isolated instances. They are, we believe, representative of many cases in which the Council has given inequitable consideration to similar incidents.

The inconsistency is due, in part, to one of the basic principles under which cases are decided. That is that each case is considered completely independently, without regard to codification of prior decisions. This means that a student who was found innocent, or given a light penalty on one day, might be severely punished on another. It might mean, and as a matter of fact, has meant, that two students whose infractions are completely similar, can receive entirely different penalties.

Since prior decisions have no bearing on the cases currently considered, the Council not only administers the judiciary codes, it, in effect, writes them. Honor, or gentlemanly conduct (a term which defies interpretation) mean nothing more or less than what the Council decides they mean.

And since the make-up of the Council varies with each spring election, the attitudes, interpretations and dispositions vary. What is vile and reprehensible to one group of councilmen, might be only mildy distasteful to another.

Added to this is another, and even more unpleasant fact: there is no way of insuring that the Council will be staffed with experienced, capable students. Since Council members are popularly elected, almost any student with a pleasant personality, a glib tongue, and mother's picture in his wallet, can win a seat. After he is there, he is bound by little more than his own judgment, which can range from excellent to non-existent. Decisions can be made by as few as six councilmen, any one, or all of whom, can be far too inexperienced to pass judgment on another. If four out of that six decide to suspend a student, he stands suspended, regardless of whether his infraction is serious enough to warrant such a penalty.

Four students—none of them bound by anything more concrete than their own judgment, which can easily be very poor—can suspend another student and permanently injure his future by tagging him as dishonorable, "ungentlemanly", or even criminal. Somehow, this set-up doesn't sound particularly appealing.

We do not mean to imply that all decisions reached by the Council are necessarily unfair. Most of them, we are convinced, are carefully considered and justly decided. But it has been more a matter of good fortune than careful planning that they have been so.

No judicial system, we realize, can be perfect. But ours can definitely be improved.

A Nobel Prize?

It looks as if there might be hope for Louisiana's State Sovereignty Commission. Just when we were almost convinced that the Commission was a wasteful drain on Louisiana's tax structure, we received a lovely, eight-page comic-book which will no doubt be hailed as one of America's great literary achievements.

Entitled "We, the People . . .", the delightful and informative little booklet depicts a dapper, handsome young father in conservative brown dress explaining to his bright young son the dangers of central government. It is printed and distributed by the LSSC to all Louisiana high schools and other interested persons.

Definitely a masterpiece in its field, it rivals Superman for sheer excitement, Little Orphan Annie for warmth, and Pogo for political satire.

Here are some excerpts; we regret that we cannot reproduce the art work:

POP: (State's rights) are very important, Bub. There are some people who think even our state-owned schools, and a lot of other things, all ought to be run out of Washington. Some would even like to control private groups, like your . . . club.

SON: Aw, Pop, y'mean they could make us put ol' girls in our club? NOT girls!

POP: So far, son, you can pick your own friends. But some federal judges have ordered races mixed in school, whether either wanted it or not.

SON: You mean like in Little Rock? But colored people have nice schools. Lots of them are better than ours. Wouldn't it be fair to have separate schools just so long as they were equal?

POP: That's exactly what a federal court held, for many years. And we all got along just fine.

SON: Is it just schools they're doing this to?

POP: No, son. Some of those same people in Washington want to tell people, for instance, that they can't pick their own employees.

SON: Why do these people want to change things?

POP: Tell you the truth, Bub, I don't know. Some of them are just, well, just not very practical. Some are just trying to get votes, to get more power. . . . Some, like the Communists, just want to stir up trouble, to weaken us.

SON: Yeah . . . old Communists. They're just jealous. We can beat them up, any old time . . . huh, Pop?

The above are just a few examples of the kind of wonderful information that the Louisiana State Sovereignty Commission is bestowing upon the state's young people. Isn't that wonderful? How can the kids help growing up to be stalwart defenders of truth, equality, freedom, justice, etc., just like the Commission?

Scales, Sobell Controversy

Where Was Scales?

The January 17, 1962 edition of the DAILY TAR HEEL contained an editorial concerning the former head of the Communist Party in the Carolinas, Junius Scales.

In his book, MASTERS OF DECEIT, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover listed several methods by which the Communist Party drums up sympathy. One of those methods cited was for the party or sympathizers to influence other individuals or groups of non-communists, usually educated, to protest the conviction of Communists or non-Communists.

The Communist party recognizes that such protests can have a great psychological effect upon the public, and can make the public more sympathetic toward Communism and Communists.

It was with regret that we observed the editor of the TAR HEEL as seeming to have been thus influenced to protest in favor of an American communist.

The editor seemed to base his argument on the premises that Scales has sworn off the Communist Party, that he should not be penalized for his beliefs and that, in any event, he could not point out coworkers in the Party because he would implicate persons not now dangerous.

Those are beautiful thoughts. But there seem to be gross inconsistencies.

Mr. Scales is a well-educated man. Some have described him as "brilliant." With his education, surely he knew of the Communist Party's history in Russia and the world before 1956. Why did it take the Hungarian revolt to suggest that perhaps there MIGHT not be arch angels in the Kremlin? Where was Scales during the mass murders of hundreds and thousands of the Russian peasants?

Where was he when Russia swept millions of European people under its iron fist?

Where was he when the Reds were killing Americans in Korea?

Where was he when Russia flattened the Polish revolt for freedom?

And where was Mr. Scales when the Kremlin reneged on every agreement they had ever made?

Surely with his excellent education he was not unaware of the Kremlin's history.

Mr. Scales was unjustified in refusing to point out his former friends in the Party. After supporting such a murderous force as that which the Kremlin represents, it would seem that he owed his country more than he gave it.

Remember that Scales was not tried by the House Un-American Activities Committee. He was tried in Federal courts, and his last appeal was to the United States Supreme Court, a court that has been very lenient toward Communists and Communist activities. It was the job of the Court, not Scales, to decide whether or not his cronies were dangerous to the country.

Many former Communists in this country have tried to repay America for the base injustice they did by belonging to the Communist Party. They have aided in interpreting Communism and in pointing out the Communist menace. It was the least they could do for their country.

But Mr. Scales would not even do this much.

Defending Sobell Is Not Communism

Editor's Note: Rev. Andrews is presently the center of controversy among church officials in Boone. He conducted a "pray-in" in front of the Capitol in Washington, on behalf of Morton Sobell. Various members of the church and student center have accused him of Communist sympathies.

Because I tried, before Christmas, to get a man released from prison who may at one time have been a Communist, some people have gotten the mistaken idea that I am favorable to Communism. I am not. To show how the confusion arises, let me use a parable.

There was once a lawyer who, in the line of duty, had to defend in court a citizen accused of murder. Someone said, "This means the lawyer favors murder." Others said, "No—it means the lawyer believes everyone has a right to legal defense, no matter what the charge."

And there was a doctor who, in line of duty, gave penicillin to a street-walker who was diseased. Someone said, "This means the doctor favors prostitution." Others said, "No—it means the doctor believes in medical treatment for everyone, regardless of their moral condition."

Likewise, there was a minister who, as a duty of conscience, asked for release of a citizen accused of trying to be a spy, because many eminent lawyers and other informed people said the man did not have a fair trial. Someone said, "This means the minister favors spying, or Communism." Others said, "No—it means the minister believes in justice for all citizens, as children of God, regardless of their political views."

In December, when I knelt at the White House fence to seek Presidential clemency for Morton Sobell, I did not do it because Sobell may once have been a Communist. I did it because he is a human being, an American citizen, and an object of God's love. I did it in spite of my disagreement with his politics.

The truth is, I have never met or seen Morton Sobell; I don't know his politics. I became concerned about his case after reading a book about it written by a professor of law at one of our major universities. But even if Sobell were a John Bircher, or a snake-handler, or a man from Mars, he would still be entitled to justice. (If we do not believe that, we do not believe in the America we say we want to defend.)

In our democracy, under the Bill of Rights of our Constitution, every citizen is supposed to be guaranteed a fair trial and a reasonable sentence. But in the Sobell case—as happens at times in any judicial system—there is massive evidence (if you study the record carefully) that the trial was unfair and the sentence extreme.

People don't know it, but Sobell was not accused at the trial of any connection with atomic espionage—the trial judge himself made that clear—and he was not said to have given or received any piece of classified material. Nevertheless, because of the hysteria of the McCarthy era, Sobell was sentenced to 30 years in prison on the flimsy testimony of only one witness, a man who himself faced prosecution for previous perjury.

But let me say, for the record, that I am not, never have been and never will be, a Communist. My own economic philosophy is about as far removed from Communist totalitarianism as one could get. I have at no time in my life ever considered adopting Communism. I have never gotten around to studying Marx or Lenin—or Adam Smith, for that matter—even though informed people should try to keep up with such things. I have read some economics, and I am concerned about economic justice and civil liberties—as every citizen should be—just as I am concerned about racial understanding and world peace.

In my opinion, no country on earth—including the U.S.A. and Russia—has an ideal or nearly-perfect economic system. There are obvious advantages and achievements, and major defects and injustices in all of them. It would suit the realities a lot better if both sides would stop shouting to the world about their superb systems and spend a little more time on honest efforts to improve what they have. This does not mean that all systems are equally good; it does mean that there is no room for self-righteous arrogance on either side.

My views on any social issue are rooted in an active concern for genuine democracy and practical religion, and my views are good for frank and free discussion with anyone.

It is high time that all of us reject the unAmerican slander and misguided zeal which cries "Communism!" every time someone suggests a reform or tries to help right an injustice. Why compliment the Communists by talking as if only they can take a stand for justice? Let's give the Judeo-Christian faith a little credit for vigorously advocating a better world! And let's stop playing into the hands of the Communists by trying to smear every active, honest liberal with red or purple paint—thus revealing our disregard for American democracy, for God, and for the truth.

If, through ignorance or greed or fear, people persist in the error of equating liberalism with Communism, until American democracy is destroyed by those who profess their patriotism most proudly, may God have mercy on our souls! Surely the resourceful spirit and pioneering genius of the American people can come forth with purposes and proposals more positive than that. If we cannot, we are doomed to die—not so much by destruction from without as by default and decay from within. Therefore, while time remains, let us join in a determined effort to make our democracy live, by working to fulfill the American Dream of justice and goodwill at home, and helping establish a just and durable peace for the world.

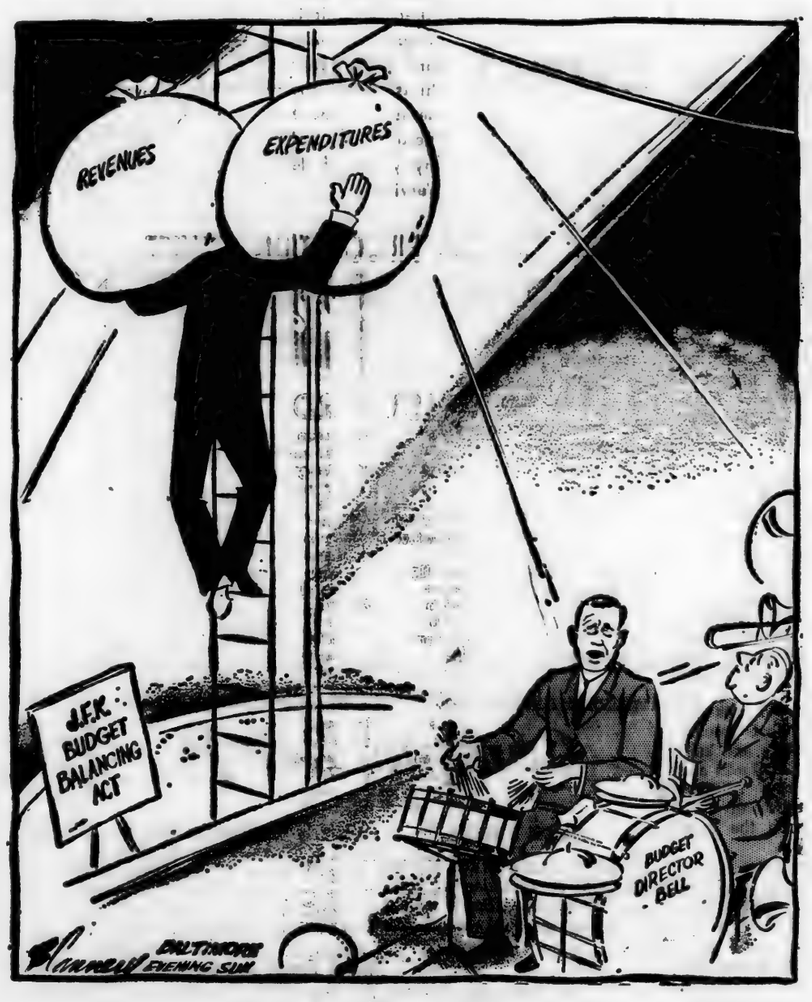
"I Can't Bear To Look"



Robinson's Ramblings

During the recent snowstorm, a minister down in Lumberton was called upon to substitute for the regular minister, who failed to reach the church because of the inclement weather. The speaker began by explaining what a substitute is.

"If you break a window," he said, "and then place a cardboard there instead, that is a substitute."

After the sermon, a woman who had listened intently, shook his hand and said, "You were no substitute—you were a real pane."

Immediately after her husband had left on a business trip, Fate decided to be unkind to a particularly notorious busybody. She started to tryout, almost overnight, a huge wart on the end of her nose. After being annoyed with it for three weeks, she finally had it removed. However, the small bandage protecting the place of removal was still on when she went to the train to meet her husband. He took one look at the prominent patch and exclaimed irritably, "Good lord, Emma, what have you been sticking your nose into this time?"

"May I have your order?" the attractive waitress asked.

"Yes," he replied, "two eggs and a kind word."

The waitress brought the eggs and was moving away when the stranger stopped her.

"What about the kind word?" he said.

"Don't eat the eggs," she whispered.

Last semester one section of Hygiene 12W was composed mostly of married women and was taught by a spinster. The instructor and her class got on very well and at every session there was a great deal of conversation back and forth.

At the end of the semester the spinster passed out mimeographed sheets for her students to evaluate the course. One of the questions asked: "What did you learn in this course?" One of the students replied "Nothing, but I sure hope we taught you something."

U.S. Supports Demagogues

Fidel Castro's announcement that he is and always has been a Communist should surprise no one since it was a well-established, if not widely known, fact long before his revolution. However a large and influential section of what is known as Liberal opinion insisted all along that Castro was not really a Red, but a reformer trying to help his poor exploited people and driven into extremism by a mean, bungling Uncle Sam.

Cuba did not go Communist because of Yankee imperialism, or Little Rock, or because the Eisenhower administration did not understand the aspirations of Latin Americans. It went Communist because a small, dedicated group of Reds were able to create a power vacuum and fill it while American public opinion was paralyzed by an image of them as reformers.

The sad part is that Castro was not the only alternative to Batista in Cuba. Cuba was, by Latin American standards, a prosperous and literate country with a middle class and potential leaders of character and conscience. The mighty influence of America might easily have been applied at the right time to make sure that the Cuban revolution was directed into hopeful channels.

It was the same disastrous story of 1949, when the country was saturated from respectable sources with the idea that Mao Tse Tsung was an "agrarian reformer" only trying to save the peasants from the vicious old warlord Chiang Kai Chek.

Liberal opinion and consequently the American government has been exhibiting a dangerous tendency to support any demagogue in any underdeveloped country who mouths anti-colonialism and reform slogans, no matter how well known his leftist and anti-American leanings, and to urge independence for half-baked nations whose governments at best are sure to be neutralist dictatorships.

Liberals believed the known pro-Communist Lumumba should be supported as legitimate ruler of the Congo. They hailed as democratic leaders the Africans who proceeded to establish anti-American dictatorships. They really believed that world opinion would punish Russia for bomb tests when it would hardly remember Hungary. They believed, and still believe that the students rioted against Nixon in South America and Eisenhower in Japan, not because their simple minds were duped by Communist agitators, but because of just grievances.

They remain unable to resist infatuation with the labels they love. They are presently trying to persuade the country that the barbaric rampage in Angola is an anti-colonial revolt.

All of which makes Liberal claims that anti-communists do not distinguish them sharply enough from Reds, that some decent Liberal citizen is always being smeared by a witch-hunter's insinuations, seem rather silly. Judging from the number of Red sympathizers that Liberal Opinion has mistaken for reformers recently, it is the Liberals who cannot always distinguish a pro-Communist from a man after their own heart.

"The believing mind," the great H. L. Mencken once wrote, "reaches its perihelion with the Liberals. They will believe, he said, in each and every crank who sets up his booth on the fairgrounds, including the Communists. The Communists have their talents too, but they always fall short of believing in the Liberals."

Reds Reject Cease-Fire Appeal For Beseiged Laotian Town

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — The Communist-backed Laotian princes Tuesday rejected a royal Laotian government appeal for an immediate cease-fire at Nam Tha, the town under rebel siege.

The British and Soviet ambassadors to Laos went into rebel-held territory Tuesday with the Canadian, Indian and Polish members of the International Control Commission to back up the cease-fire appeal.

But information minister Bouvan Norising called a special news conference here Tuesday night to announce that "neutralist" Prince Souvanna Phoume and pro-Communist Prince Souphanouvong had rejected the government appeal for an immediate end to the fighting.

The government appeal — the third since the attack on Nam Tha was launched last month—was relayed to the rebel princes by the control commission.

Rebel troops were reported within two miles of Nam Tha. Nam Tha is only 90 miles north of the royal capital of Luang Prabang.

Diplomatic sources said no official cease-fire agreement could be expected since this would amount to an indirect admission that the rebel forces were responsible for violating the nationwide truce declared last May.

UNC's Wrestlers Trample Pfeiffer, Tie Appalachian

Gilchrist, Blackman Continue To Roll As Grapplers Pin Pfeiffer

By ED DUPREE

Carolina's wrestlers literally flattened Pfeiffer's Falcons and steamrolled to an easy 28-10 victory over the visitors in the second half of Carolina's first wrestling doubleheader.

The only match which didn't result in a pin was Tar Heel Jack Jones' decisioned win in the 147-pound division over Pfeiffer's Boyd Stokes.

Pete Gilchrist and Dick Blackman, Carolina's point makers, continued to close in on the UNC scoring record set by Perrin Henderson in 1959. Gilchrist pinned Dick Gardner in the 137-division in 8:14 to notch his second pin of the night and run his season scoring total to 28, only two shy of Henderson's record. Blackman glued Joe Kiker to the mat in only 3:20 in the 157-division. Blackman now has 25 points for the season.

Each of Pfeiffer's wins were also by pins. Larry Crumbley pinned Carolina's Bill Holmes in 4:40 in the 130-pound match and Bob Hand pinned Dick Newhouse in a quick 1:30 in the 167-class.

Louis Arthur started the match off for Carolina by pinning Jerry Mason in 2:10 to give the Tar Heels a 5-0 lead. Crumbly's pin evened the score at 5-5, but Gilchrist's fifth pin in a row gave the homestanders a lead they never relinquished.

Jones' win pushed the score to 13-5 and Blackman's pin made it 18-5. Hand's five-pointer closed the gap to 18-10, but Tom Alexander and Bill Shipp each chalked up pins in the 177 and heavyweight classes to close out the doubleheader in fine style. Alexander pinned Bob Ascher in 5:52 and Shipp, after getting a finger poked in his eye, flattened Jim Schaffer in 7:09.

The win over Pfeiffer gives the Tar Heels a 3-5-1 record. After losing the first five matches of the season, Sam Barnes men have rebounded superbly and should be ready to have their say in the Atlantic Coast Conference championships at Raleigh next month. Carolina still meets Duke and Maryland before the regular season ends.

By JOHN MONTAGUE

The hot-handed Phi Delts started off the Spring Semester intramural season in fine style, crushing Pi Kappa Phi, 78-43, Monday night. With four men finding the range with unusual frequency, the points came fast for the Phi Delta boys. Tom Butler was the top scorer with 24 points, followed by teammates Billy Hubbard, 18, Bobby Reagan, 16, and Jerry Evans, 13. Hobbs had 13 for the losers.

Jim Speight pumped in 19 points for Kappa Sig, but it was not enough as Chi Psi, with four men in double figures, rolled to a 69-41 rout. The big point producers for Chi Psi were Koontz, 17, Barrier, 16, Bondi, 13, and Angell 12. Gene Howden netted 18 and Jerry Rucker got 12 to pace Sigma Nu to a 53-28 win over Theta Chi.

ATO coasted to a 48-32 victory over Beta Roger Penland's 13 markers leading the way. Johnson bucketed 15 as Delta Sig downed DU, 49-40, and footballer Ward Marslender's 11 points were the difference in Phi Gam's 40-29 triumph over DKE.

Alton Russell was high man in the low-scoring Chi Phi-Lamb Chi contest, netting 13 to lead Chi Phi to a 30-21 win. Underwood and Kessler each had 14 points in Sigma Chi's 45-41 decision over Phi Kap Sig. Gene Sigmon, however, was top man in the contest, scoring 19 for the losers.

TEP pushed past Kappa Psi, 32-23, and SPE forfeited to AK Psi to round out Monday's cage schedule.

In volleyball DU downed SAE in the Blue Division, while in the White League, Kappa Psi Pikers beat Chi Phi, Pi Lamb stopped the DU Tigers, and the Phi Delt Sissies won over the hi Delt Losers.

GOLF TRY-OUTS

Students interested in trying out for either the freshman or varsity golf teams should report to Ed Kenney at the Finley Golf Course immediately. Qualifying rounds are tentatively scheduled for next week, depending on the weather.

PETE GILCHRIST, a senior from Charlotte, was the top point man on the Tar Heel wrestling team going into last night's doubleheader. Gilchrist has pinned his opponent in the last three matches and racked up 18 points in 5 matches.

Cabe's Victory Gives Heels 14-14 Tie With Mountaineers

By ED DUPREE

Heavyweight Jerry Cabe decisioned his Appalachian opponent in the final match of the contest to give Carolina's wrestlers a 14-14 tie Tuesday night. The deadlocked thriller was close from the opening match and gave the largest wrestling audience of the season more than enough to yell about.

Pete Gilchrist continued his pinning ways by flattening Appalachian's Swaim midway of the second period. It took the Charlotte senior only 4:14 to chalk up his fourth straight pin of the season. Gilchrist moved five points closer to the UNC mat record of 30 points, set by Perrin Henderson in 1959. He now has 23 points and looms as a top contender for the ACC championship in the 130-pound class. The conference championship meet will be held in Raleigh in March, concurrent with the basketball tournament.

In the opening duel, Carolina's Mickey Nelson lost to ASTC's Crouch on riding time to give the boys from Boone a short-lived 3-0 lead. Gilchrist's performance quickly gave the home team a 5-3 advantage.

But Carolina's lead was also short-lived as Willis Johnson was pinned by Appalachian's Cook in the 137 division. Johnson stuck with the App grappler through the first two periods, but was pinned with 1:46 to go in the match.

Dick Blackman, the second half of Coach Sam Barnes's scoring punch, pulled the Tar Heels into an 8-8 tie by decisioning Yatsko in the 147 class. Blackman, who sat out the West Virginia match because he had been hitting the books excessively during the week, still has a shot at the scoring record held by Henderson. Blackman racked up 17 points in the first half of the season, before missing the West Virginia contest, which the Tar Heels won handily. The Whiteville, N. C. junior now has 20 points.

Tom Grant regained the lead for the Carolina matmen by decisioning Shelton in the 157 class. Grant's three-point win pushed the score to 11-8, but once more the lead was short-lived.

A pair of Appalachian victories followed Grant's win and set the stage for Cabe's sparkling performance in the finale.

Whit Durand was decisioned by the visitors' Mayhew in the 167 division to knot the count at 11-11. Gene Record and Appalachian's Tiddy then squared off in the 177 match which proved to be the most evenly matched of the night. Each wrestler came within a hair of pinning his foe several times, but the advantage bounced back and forth from one second to the next during the entire bout. Tiddy finally decisioned Record to give the visitors a 14-11 lead.

Cabe completely overpowered his opponent, Rollins, in the unlimited division, but couldn't score a pin. His win gave the Tar Heels a moral victory in the first match of the Woollen Gym doubleheader, which saw the Tar Heels meet Pfeiffer also. The Mountaineers have been a perennial wrestling power in the state for years and the tie rates as the second upset in a row for Sam Barnes's grapplers.

TICKETS

Basketball tickets for both the Wake Forest game this Saturday, Feb. 10, and the Maryland game, Feb. 19, are now available on a first come, first served basis to students with ID cards. Tickets may be picked up at the ticket office in Woollen Gym.

Brazilian Calls For Liberation By Communists

Castro To Send 250 To Leftist Festival

Brasilio Rodriguez de Silva, Peasant Federation leader in Rio de Janeiro State, said he is not a Communist "but I believe the Communist party to be the best organized and oriented" in Brazil.

He voiced the hope Brazilian peasants soon would have land reform like in Cuba. He said President Joao Goulart is anxious to help the people "but he is surrounded by many bad, retrogressive interests."

Castro, meanwhile, announced plans to send a 250-man delegation to the leftist world youth-student festival for peace and friendship in Helsinki, Finland, July 27-Aug. 3. A Cuban technical group left Havana for Prague on the first official flight between the two cities carried out by Czech airlines.

Castro sent a cable to Polish Communist first secretary Wladyslaw Gomulka congratulating him on his birthday and thanking the people for their support of Cuba "against the aggressive plans of North American imperialism and its satellites."

A government decree Wednesday reserved for the Cuban state all mineral rights. The decree specified there will be no royalties or payments to landowners whose tracts are exploited.

The council also tightened controls on business, ruling that all transfer payments involving government and private firms shall be carried out in book credits and debits rather than cash. Some exceptions were made for small businesses or private individuals. The council also ruled that all business deals carried out in Cuba during 1962 must be on the basis of government-set prices established by the state central planning board.

. DR. SAM BARNES

Barnes Writes English Book

Dr. Sam Barnes, assistant professor of English at UNC is the author of a paperback manual on the teaching of English composition to freshmen to be published this spring by Odyssey Press.

The manual is titled "Learning Composition by Means of a Controlled Source Pamphlet." The use of controlled-source pamphlets in the teaching of student writing is a revolutionary approach which shifts the difficulties from material collecting to composition.

The product of a program tested for five years at UNC, first under Prof. J. O. Bailey in Advanced Composition, and then under Prof. George Horner in Freshman Composition, the book presents a detailed method for controlled-source teaching of composition.

"At a time when everyone from pundits to professors is concerned with freshmen composition, we have come up with a new concept of how to do it," Barnes said. "We offer no panacea, but it is new!"

The manual is adaptable to quarter, trimester, and semester systems. It is expected to relieve the teacher of much of the mechanics of teaching from controlled-source materials, thus permitting him to concentrate on composition and communication.

Dr. Barnes is a native of Kansas City and received his B. S. degree from Oklahoma A. & M. in 1946, earned his A. M. from UNC, and in 1953, his Ph.D. He joined the UNC faculty in 1950. In addition to his teaching of English he is UNC varsity wrestling coach.

WOULD BE PRIVATELY OWNED

JFK Asks For Radio Satellite Company

By FRED LINDECKE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy asked Congress Wednesday to set up a privately-owned corporation which would operate a worldwide satellite communications system. He proposed public sale of perhaps $1 billion in stock at a minimum of $1,000 a share.

The President told Congress that instant transmission of radio, telephone and television signals via satellites circling the earth "would provide a dramatic demonstration" of U. S. leadership in "this area of space activity."

Scientists said such a communications system opened the possibility of worldwide television coverage of the United Nations. An administration official said it was not known exactly how soon the system would become operational, but it was expected to be established within 10 years.

It has been estimated that it will take between $250 and $500 million to get the system started.

Legislation accompanying a letter Kennedy sent to Congress provided for the corporation to buy satellite-launching services from the federal government, own the satellites and ground facilities needed to operate them, and lease channels of communication to authorized users.

Kennedy said the communications satellites would "provide an alternative means to existing transoceanic cable and microwave systems." More important, he said, it "will permit ready communications among distant corners of the world."

Kennedy said that by the very fact that there could be only one such corporation to bounce communications signals off satellites, it "is by nature a government-created monopoly."

But he took special care to provide that no one telephone or telegraph firm could acquire control of the corporation.

Communications companies would be able to buy the publicy sold stock, which would carry voting rights and pay dividends. But no single investor would be allowed to own more than 15 per cent of the total issue of one million shares or 25 per cent of the stock outstanding at any one time.

"Further protection against undue domination by any one stockholder," Kennedy said, "is the limitation that any individual stockholder or trustee may vote for only two out of the nine to thirteen members of the corporation's board of directors."

Kennedy's plan provided for foreigners to buy shares of stocks and cooperation with overseas communications firms. For example, one official said, the British Postal Service and the U. S. corporation might split 50-50 ownership in some particular satellite via which transmissions would work has been shown by France, Britain, West Germany, Japan and Brazil.

Freshman Awards To Be Given Here

The students are those in the class of 1964 who achieved at least an overall "B" average during their freshman year. The awards will be presented by former Dean of Awards Ernest L. Mackie and Student Body President Harriss.

President Harriss's letter of commendation will cite the concern of the Student Government with the promotion of academic excellence at the University. He states that when such "excellence is demonstrated the Student Government seeks to reward it, hoping that more students will apply themselves toward more vigorous attainment."

This is the second consecutive year that the certificates have been awarded.

Student Legislature will be meeting in Howell Hall.

Symphony Here For Concerts This Sunday

The National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Howard Mitchell, will present two concerts Sunday at 2:30 and 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

The afternoon performance is reserved for UNC students with admission free upon the presentation of ID cards.

At the 8 p.m. performance, the balcony will be reserved for UNC students. Spouses will be admitted to both performances for $1.00.

The National Symphony Orchestra is presented by Graham Memorial in conjunction with the Chapel Hill Concert Series.

Although it receives no subsidy from either the Federal government or the District of Columbia, the National Symphony Orchestra frequently participates in official functions.

The orchestra has played two Presidential Inaugural concerts and several "command performances" at the White House. It played for President Kennedy's Inaugural in 1961.

With an operating budget of close to one million dollars, the orchestra is one of the largest of its kind.

Campus Briefs

There will be a meeting of the hospital committee of the YWCA at 4:30 this afternoon, second floor of Y building. The purpose of the meeting is to reschedule hospital work.

4-H club members at UNC will meet at 6 today in Y-Court. A supper meeting is planned. Project appointments will be made.

Harris Backs APO Exchange

Bill Harriss, president of the student body, said yesterday he hoped students would "give great support to Alpha Phi Omega in its endeavors with the APO Book Exchange."

day and will continue through next

Books are available for all classes, according to APO. Book exchange offices are on second floor, YMCA.

"It seems that each student could profit from selling and buying books from this exchange," said Harriss. "This is certainly one of the most worthwhile projects on campus and it deserves our cooperation and help.

Five Republicans Attend National Leadership School

Five Carolina Young Republicans were among the more than 600 from around the country who attended the YR National Leadership School January 31-February 5 in Washington, D. C.

Bill Patterson, also a UNC student, who is Southeast Regional Director of college Republicans, also attended and participated in a panel.

Participants heard GOP leaders outline plans for the 1962 elections, discussed party philosophy, and took part in organizational work courses.

Among the speakers at the school were Reps. Walter Judd, John Rousellot, Charles Halleck and Senators Barry Goldwater, John Tower and Jacob Javits, as well as former national chairman Thruston Morton and present chairman Rep. William Miller.

UN Bonds Worth More Than Cost, Stevenson Says

President Requests $25 Million Sum

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Foreseeing a continuing military operation in the Congo, U.N. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson told Congress Wednesday that even a $100 million American gift to the United Nations would be "worth the cost many times over."

He made the statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is studying President Kennedy's proposal that this country buy up to half of a proposed $200 million U.N. bond issue.

The former Democratic presidential candidate warmly praised both Kennedy's proposal and the world body itself, which he called a long-term peace-keeping agency.

Earlier, Senate Republican policy chairman Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Iowa, said he felt Congress should require that any U.S. purchase of U.N. bonds should be matched dollar-for-dollar by other countries.

Stevenson said the United Nations faced its greatest challenge in the Congo, where its forces have been used to seek settlement of the strife that new nation has undergone.

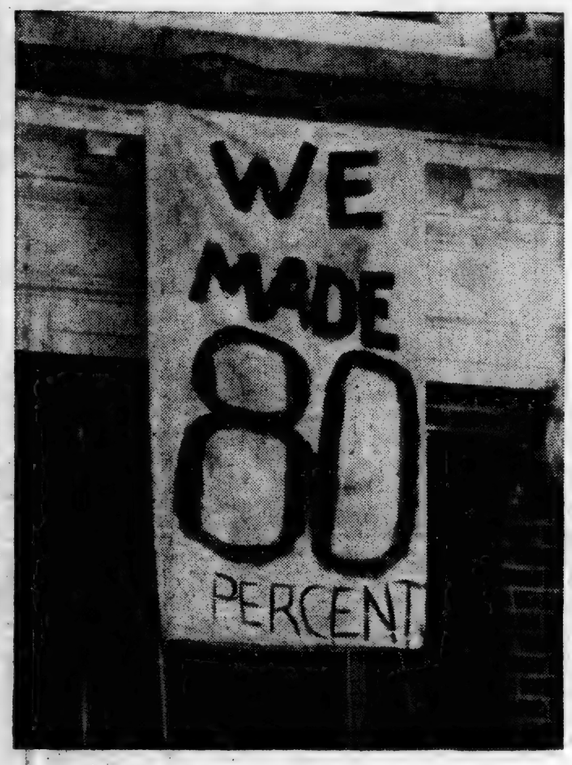
His remarks coincided with a Kennedy request for $25,616,000 to pay this country's share of the U.N. Congolese operation. The President included the item in a proposed supplementary appropriation he sent Congress Wednesday.

Stevenson said he could not predict how soon full peace should be brought to the Congo. But he added: "My guess is that troops will have to remain there in diminishing numbers for some time to come."

As for the bond proposal, he reassured Republicans by saying he saw no reason why a bond-buying member nation could not use yearly repayments on the bonds to help defray its general U.N. assessment.

"If the United Nations had not been available to answer the appeal of the new Congolese government in 1960," Stevenson told the committee, "it seems certain that there would have been a direct confrontation there between the great powers."

Guatemala Puts Down Red-Inspired Revolt



80 PERCENT—Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity flew this banner on their house yesterday to announce that at least 80 percent of their Brothers have made the 2.0 average necessary to return them to rushing status this Spring. Photo by Jim Wallace

To Rush This Semester

Four Fraternities Regain Privileges

Phi Gamma Delta, Keppa Alpha, Phi Kappa Sigma, and St. Anthony Hall social fraternities returned to active status this semester, all exceeding the minimum 80 per cent standard.

Phi Gamma Delta was most auspicious with 100 per cent of the brothers attaining a "C" average, pending the outcome of one course grade.

Ninety-two per cent of Kappa Alpha brothers had at least a 2.0 average. Phi Kappa Sigma had 83 per cent, while St. Anthony Hall was 180 proof.

All four will regain rushing privileges this semester.

Sesa's Rebel Band Invades Port City

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Guatemala Wednesday smashed a pocket-sized revolt which the government blamed on supporters of Cuba's Fidel Castro. Casualties were light.

A government statement said one army officer was killed and three others were wounded in skirmishing with the rebel band around Entre Rios, 15 miles from Puerto Barrios, the country's principal seaport.

The enemy force of an estimated 50 men was reported to have escaped into the mountains with arms seized from two small garrisons overrun in a surprise attack, and the proceeds from an armed robbery against a United Fruit Company branch office in interior Bananera. The amount stolen was not disclosed.

The government identified the revolt leader as ex-captain Marco Antonio Yong Sesa, an army officer also involved in the Castro-backed abortive revolt movement of last Nov. 13.

The communique said the rebel band surprised and disarmed the garrisons in the Morales and Bananera villages 125 miles northeast of here Tuesday. Pursuing troops from the Puerto Barrios garrison caught up with the rebels at Entre Rios. In a brief skirmish, they captured two trucks and weapons, and rescued one of the Bananera troopers captured by the rebels.

Forces loyal to the government are in complete control of the situation, the statement said. However, the government lengthened its curfew here by three hours, making it effective at 9 p.m. instead of midnight as in the past.

President Miguel Ydigoras Fuentas minimized the importance of the attack. "This is merely Communist reaction to our success at the foreign minister's conference at Punta Del Este," he said. The conference, by a majority vote, excluded Cuba from the America family of nations.

Speaking to the United Nations General Assembly in New York, Guatemalan ambassador Guillermo Flores Avenade branded the Castro government "a threat to peace in all the Americas."

Rush To Begin In Two Weeks

Students interested in participating in social fraternity spring rush should leave their names and campus addresses in the Office of Student Affairs, South Building, before noon Saturday.

Spring rush is tentatively scheduled for the week of February 19. The Inter-Fraternity Council will announce specific hours and dates later.

Three To Discuss Berlin Situation On WUNC Radio

Dr. S. Shepard Jones, Dr. Charles B. Robson, and Dr. Leopold Koziebrodzki will discuss the Berlin situation on WUNC radio's "Carolina Roundtable" tonight from 7-8 p.m.

Dr. Robson, professor of political science, specializes on German subjects; Dr. Jones, Burton Craige Professor of Political Science, is a specialist in American foreign policy and international relations; Dr. Koziebrodzki, associate professor of economics and history, specializes on the Soviet Union and the Communist countries of Europe.

The discussion will explore not only the current status of Berlin, but will attempt to evaluate its future and its effect on the United States and Russia, and the world.

Listeners are invited to phone questions in to the panelists during the program, as was done last year. WUNC radio's phone number is 942-3172.

The station is heard at 91.5 on the FM dial. With its new increase in power, it may be heard within a 120-mile radius of Chapel Hill.

Film Society To Give $300 For Project

The UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society announced yesterday that it will make a grant of $300 available to a student who has either studied or is now studying movie production at the University.

The grant is for the production of an experimental 16mm film. The Film Society estimates that the $300 will enable a student to produce a sound film that will be 10 minutes long.

The student who is selected will be given a year to finish the film. Applications including a concise statement as to what the finished film will be, a budget and a recommendation from the RTVMP Department, must be submitted to the Film Society, 401 North Street, by March 30.

The finished film will be due by March 30, 1963. Two progress reports are required. One will be due July 1, 1962, and the second, January 30, 1963.

The society intends to work closely with the department of Radio, TV, and Motion Pictures in administering the grant.

Firemen Get Smoke Scare

What firemen call a "smoke scare" caused a flurry of activity in downtown Chapel Hill and Carrboro shortly after 1 p.m. yesterday. A fire was reported at 112 S. Merritt Mill Road, a road which straddles the boundary line separating the towns.

Chapel Hill Fire Capt. G. S. Baldwin said the alarm was turned in by a woman resident who thought she saw smoke coming from under the eaves of the building, but which actually was just the wind playing tricks.

Federal Money Could Go For Scholarships

UNC has not helped lobby for passage of the college education bill which is now up before the House, but it would probably use any benefits made available by passage of the bill, said J. A. Branch, business manager of the University yesterday.

The major benefit the University would receive from the bill would be aid through scholarships. Dean of Students Charles Henderson said there is still a definite need for scholarships, both for need and for merit.

Now the principal drawbacks of scholarships are restrictions put on them by the donors, he said. "What we need," Henderson said, "is money we can use in a prudent, liberal way.

Can't Use

"You can't give scholarships and loans when the requirements put on them are so specific that they eliminate most, if not all the applicants."

Branch said the University is not depending on the bill to make capital improvements.

The University does not plan to use any building loans made available by the bill. According to Branch the principal needs of the University at present are housing and scholarships.

G. Romney Holds Off Statement

DETROIT (UP) — George Romney told American Motors Corp. stockholders Wednesday they would have to wait until Saturday to find out if he will run for governor of Michigan.

A record crowd of more than 300 shareholders was on hand in AMC's main offices here as Romney presided for perhaps the last time over the annual stockholders meeting.

"I still have not made my decision to run or not to run. I will continue to weigh this awesome decision for the remainder of this week and make an announcement Saturday," he said.

Romney devoted most of his remarks to a review of AMC operations in the past year. He said AMC "has never been stronger" and that is the only reason he had seriously considered tossing his hat into the political ring.

109 Die, 79 Trapped In Saar Mine Blast

SAARBRUECKEN, Germany — (UPI) — A gas explosion ripped through the tunnels of a coal mine Wednesday, killing at least 109 miners and trapping 78 others behind fallen rock and earth where they could not be reached.

The Saarland Mines Commission announced the casualties 14 hours after the blast and said those trapped were "beyond rescue."

At least 85 others were injured by the flash fire that accompanied the explosion, but 200 were rescued unharmed from the fiery death trap a quarter of a mile underground. Authorities said 494 men were believed in the mine at the time of the blast early Wednesday morning.

The scene of the disaster, one of the worst in German mining history, was the coal-rich area on the French-German border, where one out of every nine male Saarlanders works in the mining industry.

Officials said they believed an overheated engine driving a conveyor belt may have touched off the blast, worst in Germany since 1946, when 412 men died in a Ruhr mine.

The explosion of methane gas took place in the Luisenthal Mine outside Saarbrucken in the village of Voelklingen. The mine had taken extra safety precautions against a gas explosion, always a danger in the mines, and several years ago won a special safety award for its efforts.

Rescuers Still Trying

Rescue workers, aided by U. S. Army detachments, swarmed into the disaster area immediately after the blast, but it was five hours before they reached the first group of trapped men. By nightfall, the rescuers still sought to dig through the mass of earth, timbers, coal, and stone toward the areas where the men were trapped.

Argentina May Break Cuban Ties

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Informed sources said Wednesday Argentina will break diplomatic relations with Cuba, possibly within the next 48 hours, "for moral reasons."

It was emphasized that any delay would be due to the need to find some country willing to represent Argentina in Havana. Only seven of 20 hemisphere countries maintain diplomatic relations with the Castro regime.

Biggest stumbling block in the break is the presence of 34 political refugees in the Argentine Embassy in Havana, for whom the Cuban government has denied safe conduct passes out of the country. The refugees include Cardinal Manuel Arteaga, aged Havana archbishop. He is regarded as an embassy "guest" and has been living in a small apartment within the embassy for the past year.

A government reiteration of support for Argentina's abstentionist role in the Punta Del Este conference is expected to accompany any official announcement on Cuba. The armed forces, responsible for the pressure on the government to break with Cuba, are regarded as likely to view the statement as more a "face-saving" gesture by the government than a declaration of defiance.

Secrecy Protects?

Honor Council

Present judicial procedure here requires that all Honor Council hearings will be held in secret except those in which the defendant requests that the Council room be opened to two reporters from the Daily Tar Heel.

The reason given for this procedure is "protection of the defendant"—meaning that an open hearing might damage the defendant's reputation — even if he is found to be innocent of any wrong.

The result of this is that most hearings—probably 80 per cent—are conducted in secret. A student who is hailed before the Council is naturally hesitant to let this fact be known, even if he is innocent. Most, understandably, would prefer to keep the proceedings quiet.

The upshot of this is that much of the campus has little conception of what goes on in hearings. This places an aura of suspicion around the judiciary. Most students are naturally wary of any tribunal which operates, for the most part, in secret.

This feeling is heightened by the fact that Council decisions are often arrived at purely on the basis of each Council's particular interpretation of Honor.

As we see it, there is no really good reason why all hearings should not be open. If the Council or the defendant feels that publicity will damage his reputation, then it is a simple matter to request that no names be used. This would allow the campus to know what goes on behind the Council room doors and protect the defendant as well.

Honor Council members are elected by popular vote. For this reason, if for no other, the student bdy has a right to be informed of Council proceedings. No individual should be deprived of his right to scrutinize the actions of his elected student government officials, particularly when those officials wield the power of suspension and are bound by no codified laws.

If a defendant requests that his name not be used in the report of a Council hearing that request should be honored. But no hearing should be held in secret for any reason.

Too Much Socializing

Toronto

At right on today's page is an unofficial report of the recent Toronto Exchange program sponsored cooperatively between UNC and the University of Toronto.

Take time to read this report.

While reading it, bear in mind that this program is supported partially by funds taken from student activities fees. UNC spends approximately $300 on the exchange; Toronto about two and one-half times that amount.

Consider this and take note of the activities:

—A 27-hour bus ride.

—An eight-hour party.

—Class visits.

—Discussion led by a Harvard professor.

—An ice show.

—One "frolic."

—Hockey.

—Sight-seeing in New York.

—Another bus ride.

While we have been assured that this resume does not give the total picture of the exchange, we think it gives some indication of the program's worth.

If the exchange is to be continued—and there is good reason for continuing it, if it is improved—then some provision should be made for cutting down the pure social activity and adding some more basis for the time, money and energy put into it.

We can see no reason why either school should continue to sponsor international social life, lightly sprinkled with idea exchange.

The program should be re-evaluated or discontinued.

No First

(From Detroit Free Press)

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reports that Russian scientists have found a way to make brandy in five days, six at the most.

Here again the Reds are ridiculous with their claims of a "first." Back when prohibition's blessings lay upon our land there were plenty of bootleggers who would have regarded five-day brandy as practically hand crafted and the processes too long drawn out to be economically feasible.

A UPI REPORT

Kennedy's Educational Aid

In his message on aid to education President Kennedy reiterated his view that the constitution bars across-the-board aid to all but public schools. The hierarchy of Kennedy's own Roman Catholic Church disputes this opinion.

Rejecting charges that his proposals would be a big step toward federal control of education, Kennedy declared, "Let us put to rest the unfounded fears that federal money means federal control."

He said that while the operation of schools must remain the responsibility of state and local governments and private organizations, federal help is urgently needed to meet the nation's education problems. He ticked off federal school legislation dating back to 1787 which he said has operated without federal control.

Less controversial and more likely to win congressional approval in some form, is Kennedy's proposal to spend $2.1 billion over five years to help both private and public colleges build classrooms and provide more than 200,000 scholarships worth up to $1,000 a year to "needy and talented students."

Since scholarships granted in the last year of the program would not run out until four years later, the eventual cost would be even higher.

The House this year approved a $1.5 billion bill providing only the college construction funds. The Senate has passed a $2.6 billion version including the scholarships. Both measures bar funds for chapels and classrooms to teach religion.

Kennedy's other major proposals:

—A 10-year program of matching grants to help build medical and dental schools. This would cost $600 million for the first five years. Also, four-year scholarships and grants for one-fourth of all new medical and dental students. An administration official said the scholarship plan was envisioned as permanent and would cost $9.3 million the first year, congressional approval of scholarships questionable but construction funds likely.

—$747 million in scholarships, grants and other help over five years to enable elementary and secondary school teachers to improve their skills and broaden their knowledge. Some 2,500 scholarships would be awarded annually to permit outstanding teachers to take off for a year of full-time study. Both public and private school teachers would be eligible. Passage this year unsure.

—Expansion of the National Science Foundation's efforts to increase the quality and quantity of science and engineering students. This would boost the Science Foundation's budget by $96 million, to $358 million, the first year. No estimates were made for later years.

—$50 million grants to states and colleges over five years to develop programs "which will offer every adult who is willing and able the opportunity to become literate." Outlook good.

—A five-year, $22 million program to help states and school districts improve education opportunities for migrant workers and their children.

—$26 million in matching grants to states to aid in the constructions of state and other non-profit educational television stations.

—A five-year, $47 million program to help provide special training for physically and mentally handicapped children.

—$500,000 spread over five years to establish a federal advisory council on the arts which would study possible federal aid to cultural activities.

—Gradual reduction of federal aid to "impacted" schools crowded with children of government workers and servicemen as general school aid gets rolling.

Bills embodying all but the adult literacy and teacher quality proposals have been introduced previously.

Outlook for Congressional Approval: Public school aid, not good; some form of college construction and student aid, good; adult illiteracy, good; dental and medical school construction, likely; dental and medical scholarships, questionable; educational TV, may have a good chance; others, not clear.

"Now, Now — Let's Not Have Any Muzzling"

Toronto Report

Weary, winded, but warm again, we're back from the Far North. For the 25 Tarheels returning from their weekend at the University of Toronto, the pace can be described as frantic, the experience, fabulous.

We feel we are only beginning to realize the profits from our investment of time and efforts. In our reciprocal trade of ideas and opinions on everything from the world situation to the ingredients of a good party, we have made new friends.

In summarizing such a trip we must consider the time element: 6 short days including travel and the short side trip to New York. Weary from exams but raring to go, we got underway Wednesday morning reasonably close to schedule on a loud, boisterous and sleepless 27-hour bus ride.

We arrived in Torontoo Tuesday afternoon and spent the evening at a short eight-hour party which introduced to many of us for the first time—Canadian beer. Friday morning visitations to classes began the day.

Friday featured two of the weekend's highlights for us. The first was a discussion entitled "Canada Looks at the U.S." And the second, an excellent student ice show. The discussion was introduced by J. M. S. Careless, professor of history, a Harvard Ph.D., but obviously a Canadian Nationalist. In a concise historical resume, he noted various attitudes which shape Canadian opinions of the United States. He cited our close proximity in culture, economy and general outlook on life as part of the forces which tend to drive Canada toward continental absorption which they must avoid if they are to maintain a national integrity vis-a-vis the U.S. The discussion served to dispel many misconceptions on both sides.

Friday night we saw a superb all-student ice show as part of the U. of T. Winter Carnival weekend. The show featured the best of Canada's skating stars, most of them U. of T. students and many of them champions in international competition. We really appreciated the exhibition of skating skill after we ventured onto the ice the following day in our "frolic" in the snow at a farm outside Toronto where a tobogganing accident netted the second broken leg in as many years.

The Saturday morning discussion on "Comparative Systems of Education" helped us to realize how different and involved the problems of comparison are. That afternoon after the "snow frolic" we attended a reception. At 8 p.m. we were treated to N! H! L! hockey action between New York and Toronto. Afterwards, as with every evening of course, came the party featuring the "twist" and Canada's answer to sub-zero thirst problems.

Returning, we arrived at no respectable hour in New York. Monday was spent seeing the "sights"—museums, galleries, rush hours, the Great White Way the Metropole, a Broadway play or musical in the evening for those who had tickets or could still put one foot in front of the other.

We return to our own academic community with a feeling of enthusiasm which we hope to share with our fellow Tarheels. It has been an exhausting but extremely rewarding experience which we wouldn't trade for anything—even a solid week of sleep.

...Northern Europe At That

Southern Hospitality In Europe...

Editor's Note: Pete Range is a UNC junior currently attending school in Germany under the Goettingen Exchange program.

GOETTINGEN, GERMANY — I wonder if it would have happened in the States? I doubt it, said the other American. Southern Hospitality is a real fact in the United States, but we don't think it quite compares to the kind of hospitality I have met in Northern Europe.

It was ten days before Christmas and I was standing on a highway in Jutland, that part of Denmark from which the Jutes and Angles migrated to England about 1500 years ago, thus forming one of the most important parts of our Anglo-American ancestry. It was darkening into evening there in Aarhus and I thought I might have to walk back into the town and try to find lodging for the night. But then I was picked up by a Dane who had been driving from Copenhagen since that morning. He spoke German and we entered into a congenial conversation as we covered the 100 kilometers to Aaloborg, Denmark, his destination on his business trip. As we drove into the town we went directly to the hostel, where I had hoped to spend the night as is my practice on such trips. The hostel was, however, closed for the winter months and we were forced into other deliberations. A try at the Y.M.C.A. was likewise unsuccessful. Because our hunger was mounting with time, my businessman friend (his family was back in Copenhagen) suggested that we eat dinner before pursuing the problem further.

I was looking over the menu in his hotel restaurant when he said, "What about this?" and pointed to the highest-priced item available, a special Danish Christmas dinner the hotel was offering. When I dubiously pointed at the "10 Kroner" price tag on the meal he waved me off and replied, "Forget it! I want to do it!"

So my host ordered the Christmas Special. And then it broke loose! Just to write out everything which was contained in the meal had taken an entire page of the menu in the first place! We were served Danish beer at our table. About fifteen minutes later we were ushered into a small, cozy room with just one table—the walls covered with rum kegs, Christmas decorations everywhere. We were poured Danish Schnapps and a second beer was offered. On the table were the standard Scandanavian basics, namely three kinds of bread and the butter. The first course was, of course, the fish. At least ten different types of cold fish were distributed around the large platter brought to our table—they were laid out on a series of terraces built up on the platter. Two people could actually never have eaten all that fish—but we made distinct progress. I did not realize how much more was to come and ate perhaps a bit too much from this first course. Next followed the warm course, hot sausage and vegetables. Schnapps and beer still there. Then came No. 3, the cold meats, just as numerous and nicely laid out as the fish had been. I thought I could eat absolutely nothing more after we worked on this quarter of the meal, but the waitress brought still another behind this one, the all-important cheeses—five different kinds. Finally, hardly able to move, we finished an hour-and-a-half of the finest in Danish eating with a Christmas pastry and coffee!

In the meantime my Danish friend had been talking with the waitress about my need of a very inexpensive room. It seemed that nothing was to be had. The next thing I knew, Herr Hasmussen (my host) was pushing a ten-crown bill into my hand, after having already paid for our meal, and telling me to take a room in the hotel for the night. Protesting was useless and would have insulted the sincerity of Danish hospitality. And so it was that I met with a wonderful example of some of the finest hospitality in the world, getting to know a Dane personally and experiencing wonderful Danish eating besides.

As I continued my journey through snowy Norway I encountered an outstanding example of their hospitality too, besides the visits in two families which I had known earlier. A truck was taking me the 600 kilometers from Aslo to Aalesund, up on the west coast. We stopped for midday dinner in a cozy roadside cafe. I was looking over the menu again when he ordered me to follow him into another room. A long table was in this room, beautifully decorated for Christmas. Serving the guests sitting around the one table (mostly truck drivers like my friend) was a typical blonde Norwegian lass, dressed completely in the old and colorful costume of that part of Norway. Here, again the Christmas beer was the first thing to be served. Then followed soup, three meats, several vegetables, and the usual Norwegian line-up of cheeses and breads. Completely filled and satisfied after a truly delicious meal, we were served coffee and a selection of traditional Norwegian Christmas pastries as the finale. As we were leaving, I asked about the price for my meal. "That's already taken care of," said my host, "between me and the cafe." It seems that all the regular customers, mostly truck drivers of course, are treated by the cafe to a free Christmas dinner each year during the holiday season! And thus I was taken in as his guest!

The third example of Scandanavian hospitality presented itself on my return trip to Germany. It was snowing as Herr Bache, a Dane who now lives and manages a factory in Sweden, picked me up from my roadside position in southern Norway. We spent the entire day together, riding 350 kilometers over treacherous snow-covered roads, getting to know each other again through the common language of German, pulling the car out of a ditch together finally reaching his town of Kungsbacka, twenty-five kilometers south of Goeteborg, Sweden, at 8 p.m. Herr Bache invited me to roll my sleeping bag out on a studio couch in his home and spend the night there. I gratefully accepted the invitation as we sat ourselves down to a cold evening meal in his kitchen, tired of our long journey. His family was still vacationing in Norway so there was no space problem—but also no wife to fix a nice warm meal. An interesting man with a wide variety of books, experiences and ideas. Herr Bache and I stayed talking in his living room until rather late in the night. Finally, after giving me breakfast the next morning and some bread and cheese to take with me, my genial Swedish-Danish host delivered me to a good position on the highway for continuing my journey. Since our departure I have heard from Herr Bache again, as he sent me copies of an English-written magazine reviewing many interesting features of Swedish government, life, history, customs, so that I might learn even more about that interesting and hospitable land.

Hitchhiking in the United States can be good as far as reaching destinations is concerned. And "Southern Hospitality" is a fine thing. But I doubt if any of this would have happened in America.

An exhibit of prize-winning photographs, representing the best in photojournalism of 1960, will be on display in Howell Hall until Feb. 17.

The 18th Annual News Pictures of the Year Competition and Exhibition is the oldest and largest of its kind in the world. It is looked upon as tops in photojournalistic achievement and as press photography's own forum. Sponsored jointly by the National Press Photographers Assn., the University of Missouri School of Journalism and Encyclopaedia Britannica, this exhibition has become a regularly scheduled event at many institutions in the United States. It is comprised of 89 prints selected from 6,500 entered by 546 photographers.

Prominent in the exhibit will be the pictures of George Silk of LIFE, who was named "Magazine Photographer of the Year" and Don Sturkey of the Charlotte Observer, who was named "Newspaper Photographer of the Year." Special recognition for outstanding photojournalism achievement was given Arthur Ulhmann of the Milwaukee Journal as the "Newspaper-Magazine Photographer of the Year."

Student Money Aid Tests Scheduled

Julian Mason Jr., instructor in the epartment of English has been appointed Director of Student Financial Aid. He assumed his duties Thursday.

As Director of Student Financial Aid, he is in charge of all scholarships, loans, and self-help jobs for students. He will also continue teaching in the Department of English.

The son of Julian D. Mason of Williamston, Mason attended UNC where he received a B.A. degree. As an undergraduate, he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and to the Order of the Golden Fleece. He received an M.A. degree at George Peabody College in 1954, and is currently completing a Ph.D. degree in English at UNC.

From 1954 through 1955, Mason taught at Tennessee High School in Bristol, Tenn. During 1956 and 1957, he was with an Army Education Center in Germany. Mason became a part-time instructor at UNC in September, 1957; and became a full-time member of the staff in September, 1960.

Pre-Election Meet Is Set

A pre-election meeting for all women students interested in running for the YWCA Cabinet will be held Monday at 4:30 in Gerrard Hall.

The Cabinet and Executive members will speak to the women students and will give a brief summary of their jobs. After the meeting the students may sign up for executive interviews on the door of the YWCA office.

Interviews for the offices of president, vice-president, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer, program chairman and religious emphasis committee chairmen will be held on Feb. 13 to 15 from 2-5:30. Two students will be selected to run for each executive post.

The final election for executive members will be held March 8 in all women's living areas. The other Cabinet members will be selected through interviews by the new executive committee.

Changes Studied For Program In AFROTC

Changes in the AFROTC that would "give the Air Force cadet more time for academic studies" are being considered by the Defense Dept. as the result of suggestions made by an Advisory Panel headed by President William C. Friday.

The Panel on ROTC Affairs has been investigating the proposed changes for three years. The revisions, if adopted by Congress, would greatly change the nature of the AFROTC program.

This panel has suggested three major changes: the first would provide for a two year instead of a four year program beginning in the junior year. According to Capt. W. E. Moore of the UNC AFROTC Department this would "Give us a wider selection base since transfer students from junior colleges could get in the program."

The second feature of the new plan would allow cadets more time for academic work while in school. Drill work would be concentrated in the two summer camps to be held prior to the junior year and after the senior year.

President Friday pointed out that at many schools academic courses are taught by military personnel. This would be changed by the third major proposal.

The Defense Dept hopes that these changes and the feature of additional pay will attract more students to fill its need for more Air Force Officers.

Cubist Sculpture Exhibited

An often reproduced and well known bronze, "Head of a Woman" by Picasso, "The Horse" by Duchamp-Villon, and two bronzes by Jacques Lipchitz, "The Bather" and "Seated Man with Clarinet" are among the outstanding pieces in the exhibition.

The nineteen works in the show date from 1909 to 1930 and have been distributed by the American Federation of Arts. The exhibit will run through Feb. 25 and may be seen on Tuesdays through Fridays from 2:30 to 5 and 8 to 10 p.m., Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Director Is Named For Peace Corps

A new round of Peace Corps Placement Tests will be given Feb. 17 at 8:30 a.m. in centers throughout the country. Those taking the tests will be considered for the many new projects scheduled to begin this spring and summer in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Although some projects call for technical skills, many others require people without specialized training. These projects call for liberal arts graduates for community development projects and people with general farming backgrounds to serve as instructor demonstrators in poultry and livestock care, irrigation, fertilization, and horticulture.

"No one should automatically exclude himself from consideration because he considers himself either too highly skilled or not skilled enough," said Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver in announcing the tests. "We will match qualifications to the growing requests we are receiving from abroad."

Among the many fields providing opportunities for Peace Corps service are teaching, nursing, engineering, city planning, geology, and physical education.

Each applicant will be given a choice of two types of placement tests. One is for those who would like to be considered for positions as secondary-school or college teachers and have a bachelor's degree.

He Loves Me

He Loves Me Not

It is true love or isn't it? Wouldn't you like to know? Through the years a number of tests have been devised in an attempt to find the answer, and most of them we cannot recommend.

However, it just so happens that Valentine's day is coming along next Wednesday, and with it your sure answer. If a chap is really smitten right up to the shoulder, he'll give you one of those wonderful Valentine books from the Intimate every time. If he's the frugal sort who makes a good husband, he'll have it gift-wrapped at no extra charge.

Is it true love that puts that far-away look in his eyes, or just some minor gastric disturbance? Valentine's day will tell.

Dental School Offering Scholarship

The University of North Carolina School of Dentistry is offering a $300 scholarship for the training of a dental assistant during the summer of 1962.

The dental assistant training program is open to high school graduate women between the ages of 18 and 40 and residing in the Fifth Dental District.

The program is offered without tuition or fee charges and the expenses of the student for the three-month period are not expected to exceed $400.

Any girl studying under this program will reside in the Nurses' Dorm and will be subject to University regulations.

Persons interested in this program should apply not later than March 15 to the General Supervisor, Dental Assistants Summer Program, UNC School of Dentistry, P. O. Box 750, Chapel Hill.

Is this the only reason for using Mennen Skin Bracer?

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.

Hot Nuts Leader Says Campus Was Really Swinging In '56

By CHUCK MOONEY

"The Carolina of 1956 is the best place we ever played," says Doug Clark, leader of the "Hot Nuts" combo.

"Back then everything was really swinging, before they cracked down and changed it."

The Hot Nuts, who will play for the Junior Class combo party Friday night, was started when the 11 original members were in high school. Their first job was playing for a UNC fraternity.

Clark discovered their theme song while he was working in the Sigma Nu fraternity house. He heard another combo singing a mild version of it and had them teach it to him.

His brother John has revised it slightly since. "John makes up new verses to it all the time," said Clark. "We hardly ever sing it the same way twice."

"We've had a little trouble with it. One summer we played "The Dome" at Virginia Beach in July and sang it for about 1,400 people," Clark continued.

'The next time we played there the manager of The Dome, the police chief, the mayor and the man who was giving the party called me into the office and told me not to use it.

"They said they'd arrest us if we did. We didn't."

The Hot Nuts travel anywhere to play, Clark said. "We've played at lots of houses—Dartmouth, Princeton, Yale, Ole Miss, Georgia Tech University of Georgia, Auburn, University of Alabama, University of Virginia," Clark said.

'We think Auburn and the University of Alabama have the best looking frats, and University of Virginia has the worst.

"Of course we'd rather play here at Carolina. We always get a good crowd here," he said.

"Once in Atlanta, we couldn't find the Dinkler Plaza Hotel. We had to ask the police. They gave us an escort over there with sirens and everything."

The Hot Nuts will play from 8 to 12 tomorrow night in the American Legion Hut. Admission will be 50 cents per person.

Katangese Say Congo Forced Grave Digging

By NEIL SMITH
United Press International

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI) — The Katanga government Wednesday charged that marauding Congolese troops massacred an entire village in northern Katanga after forcing the terrified natives to dig their own graves.

The communique identified the village as Ruuku, in the Albertville area. It gave only the barest of details and made no mention of the number of alleged victims.

The communique did not make clear whether the villagers were killed first or buried alive by the Congolse troops who have terrorized the region for months. It said only that the troops forced residents to dig their own graves and then buried the entire population.

In the same communique, the government said that the troops responsible for the New Year's massacre of 22 European Roman Catholic priests and lay brothers at Kongolo had posted signs in Albertville claiming the victims were "mercenaries disguised as missionaries."

Strong United Nations forces have been moved into adjoining Kivu Province for a drive against the marauding bands of Congolese soldiers and fanatic youth gangs who have been killing, looting and terrorizing whites and natives in the Kivu-Katanga border regions. The troops are believed to be followers of deposed vice premier Antoine Gizenga, now under detention by the central Congolese government.

Gizengist troops also have been blamed for the murders of 13 U.N. Italian airmen in Kindu last November.

Katanga President Moise Tshombe Wednesday announced that agreement has been reached with the United Nations on the expulsion of all mercenaries from the Katangese armed forces.

The report of the agreement on the mercenary problem, long a major source of friction, followed a meeting between Tshombe and U. N. Congo Chief Sture Linner, U. S. Congo military Commander Gen. Sean McKeown and U.N. civilian representative Georges Dumontet.

Ackland Receives Collection Of Prints From Dr. Jacocks

A recent gift of prints is now on display at the Ackland Art Center. Presented to the Center by Dr. W. P. Jacocks, the gift includes original prints by such artists as Picasso, Chagall, Miro, Whistler and Hogarth.

Dr. Jacocks has been a "most generous donor" to the Ackland Art Center, officials said. Since his retirement he has given the University his entire collection of hundreds of prints. He has continued his donations with additions such as the present collection which is being exhibited.

Dr. Jacocks is a retired physician living in Chapel Hill. He was formerly with the Rockefeller Foundation in India.

Two lithographs of Picasso's "Bull" and "Artist and Child", an etching by Marc Chagall titled "Acrobat" and an etching "Striptease" by Joan Miro are among the prints. Also: an etching by Misch Kohn, a drypoint "Tree" by Peter Takal and a lithograph "With Trumpet of Shadow" by Thomas Viesulas.

One of the first American artists to use the print purely as an art form according to Art Center officials, was James McNeill Whistler. This recent gift by Dr. Jacocks includes three etchings by Whistler, "Nocturne", "Little Lagoon and "The Riva".

Plastic Surgeon Peacock To Tell Of Work In India

Dr. Erle Peacock Jr., plastic surgeon of the UNC School of Medicine, will tell of his experiences with lepers at Vellore, India at a meeting of the Auxiliary of N. C. Memorial Hospital here on Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 10 a.m.

Dr. Peacock, a native of Chapel Hill, has achieved national distinction in his work in plastic surgery, especially in the field of restorative surgery of the hands.

He has just returned from a two-month visit to The Christian Medical College at Vellore. Aside from the lectures that he gave there on the new techniques of plastic surgery, and how this branch of medical science may be used to assist persons with leprosy, he made many visits to the various camps where lepers lived.

His work in India was sponsored by the Office of Rehabilitation of the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The Feb. 13th auxiliary meeting will be Dr. Peacock's first lecture on his experiences in India. He will illustrate his talk with photographic slides.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FALL-OUT

Eight years ago, scientists began to investigate the effects of world-wide fallout from nuclear tests. "The results," says physicist Edward Teller, "were reassuring." In this week's Saturday Evening Post, he tells how much radiation the body can absorb. And why we should stop worrying about fallout.

Unbeaten Florida Swimmers Hand First Loss To UNC

Gators Smash Eight Florida Marks As Tar Heel Mermen Lose, 65-30

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Florida University's powerhouse swimming team broke eight school records yesterday afternoon while coasting to an easy 65-30 victory over Carolina's swimmers in Bowman Gray Indoor Pool.

The issue was never in doubt as the bronze-backed mermen from Gainesville, who have captured nine consecutive Southeastern Conference championships, posted their sixth straight victory of the season in this battle of unbeatens.

Junior freestyler Jerry Green and All-American diver Steve McBride led the assault for coach Buddy Crone's tankers. Green, an All-American himself while breaking state records as a high school prodigy in Miami, erased his own school marks in the 220 and 440 yard freestyle events. He was timed in 2:08 for the former and 4:52.6 for the latter.

All-American McBride, senior co-captain of the Gators put on a spectacular display from the 3-meter board. The Wilmington, Delaware native, who holds both the 1-meter and 3-meter diving titles of the SEC, piled up 260.5 points in his specialty and time and again brought gasps of amazement from the large crowd with his faultless form.

Coach Crone, a former 3-meter diving champion in 1947 while at Carolina, pulled a strategic move in the 200 yard backstroke when he inserted McBride to wear out UNC's Thompson Mann in the first two laps. The unbeaten sophomore was not shaken, however, and went on to cop the first of the two Tar Heel first places.

Carolina's co-captain Bob Briggs won the other as he bested SEC champion Jeff Oromaner in the 200 yard breaststroke.

Every one of the new Gator records was set by an underclassman—a fact which does not cheer UNC coach Pat Earey nor any future opposing coaches in the slightest. The Gators, currently touring the Atlantic Coast, take their unbeaten record to East Carolina tonight and North Carolina State on Friday.

TED MARSHALL, Maryland's ace in the hole, had the best night of his college career Tuesday night against Carolina and led the Terps to a 79-62 win over the favored Tar Heels. The 6-7 sub scored 22 points after riding the bench for thefirst 8 minutes of the game.

'We Outsmarted Ourselves': Smith On Loss To Maryland

By ED DUPREE

"We outsmarted ourselves!" That's how Coach Dean Smith summed up Tuesday night's 79-62 loss to Maryland's up-and-down Terrapins.

When Maryland's Jerry Greenspan drew two quick fouls, the Tar Heel strategy was to force him to commit his third early in the contest. The 6-6 Maryland junior who carried a 15.5 scoring average into the game picked up the foul with 12 minutes remaining and it seemed that Smith's strategy had paid off.

But Ted Marshall, a 6-7, 190-pound bench-warmer, entered the game and pulled the College Park crew away from a 13-13 tie by scoring 16 straight points for the home team .By the time the smoke had cleared, Bud Millikan's boys had taken a 33-21 lead.

The bespectacled Marshall tallied 22 points for the night and paced the Terps to the lop-sided victory. Last year the surprising sub scored 42 points in 18 games for a meager 2.3 scoring average.

Smith planned to keep the ball away from Maryland's pivot man, but when Marshall came into the game this strategy backfired. When Carolina's defence collapsed on the lanky center and fouled him, he connected on 10 or 14 foul shots and scored from the floor with amazing consistency.

Ball handling bugged the speedy Tar Heels as they threw the ball away and made more mistakes than any game this season.

It just wasn't Carolina's night. Jim Hudock and Jim Donohue got into trouble early in the game and were both on the bench during most of Marshall's 16-point spurt. Hudock and Bryan McSweeney fouled out and Donohue, Mike Cooke, and Larry Brown finished the game with four fouls against them.

Dean Smith's shuffle offense had put UNC at the top of the nation in field goal shooting, but this .500 percentage has dropped considerably after the Duke and Maryland losses. "We were getting better shots earlier in the season," the Carolina mentor stated, "but our main problem lately has been sharpness and ball handling."

Smith added that UNC is below the point it had reached prior to the final exam break, but he is looking forward to the last six ACC games in which the Tar Heels play three games at home and two on a neutral court in Charlotte. The sixth game will be at Raleigh against N. C. State, the team that pushed past the Tar Heels into third place Tuesday.

UNC now rests in fourth place in the ACC, but is still very much in the running for first place regular season honors since Duke's Blue Devils fell to N. C. State Tuesday. Duke still holds first place with a 7-2 mark, but leads Wake Forest by only ½ game and State by a full game. The Tar Heels are 1½ games behind the Methodist crew.

The race could tighten up even more on Saturday when Bones McKinney brings his Demon Deacons to Chapel Hill. The last defeat suffered by a Carolina basketball team in Woollen Gym was to Wake Forest two seasons ago and the still "very much alive" Tar Heels will be seeking to keep the home court win streak intact.

Win Tonight Against Davidson Frosh Basketballers Go After 11th

By ED DUPREE

Ken Rosemond's Tar Baby basketball team plays host to a strong frosh team from Davidson tonight at 8 in Woollen Gym. There will be no admission charge for the game.

The Carolina yearlings edged past the Davidson quintet, 67-63, in a January contest at Davidson and Coach Rosemond expects this rematch to be a fine display of freshman basketball.

The Tar Babies lost their first contest of the season last week to Duke's Blue Imps by an 81-60 score. They now have a 10-1 record and will meet Duke in a rubber match on Feb. 24.

Talented Bill Cunningham, whose frosh eligibility ran out last semester, was missing from the lineup, but Rosemond didn't think that was the reason for the lop-sided Duke victory.

"We didn't have the patience to take the good shots and hit only 38 per cent of our attempts. The 17-day exam lay-off and Duke's zone defense were other important factors.

"Pud Hassell did a tremendous job on Tyson (Duke's 7-foot center) and held him to only two field goals and 7 points. Our defense was as good as before, but we didn't wait for the good shots when we got the ball."

The Davidson frosh have nine boys on scholarships and the best of these is Fred Hetzel, a 6-8 high school All-America. Hassell, 6-3, has the task of guarding Hetzel tonight. Don Davidson and Dave Thomas are other sparklers for the high scoring Wildkittens, who have lost only to Duke, Wake Forest, and UNC.

CONFESSIONS OF A CROOKED COP

Safecracking, says Bobbie Whaley, "is a real challenge." And he should know. He committed 43 burglaries while on the force. In this week's Post, this "burglar with a badge" tells why he turned to crime. How he phonied up police reports to cover his tracks. Used official cars for his getaways. And why he feels his superiors are the real culprits.

Wet Jayne Tells Shark Tale After Rescue In Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — A sobbing and dishevelled Jayne Mansfield was brought in from a nearby island Thursday with a harrowing tale of sharks, an overturned boat and a night on a tiny coral reef with the tide lapping ever closer.

The bosomy actress, typed in real life as well as films as a "smart dumb blonde," was admitted to a hospital suffering from exposure after her discovery by a U. S. Coast Guard amphibian plane spearheading a 400-man air-sea rescue search.

Miss Mansfield, 28, her weightlifter husband, Mickey Hargitay, and a Florida hotel promotion man had been missing since Wednesday afternoon when they went waterskiing off this British resort colony.

The actress, her 40-22-35 figure hidden under a blanket and blue flannel robe over her blue-and-white striped bathing suit, murmured only that it was an "awful shock" when she was brought here Thursday morning on the flishing boat Blades II with her two companions.

But Hargitay told a full dramatic story.

His voice broke at a press conference as he said he had left his wife's hospital bedside only because people were saying it might all be a publicity stunt. Hargitay said his wife didn't need publicity and "anyone who would think this up would be very stupid."

Hargitay said he and Jayne were on water skis behind their

JAYNE MANSFIELD

17-foot motorboat with Fort Lauderdale hotel man Jack Drury at the wheel Wednesday afternoon when his wife took a spill about a mile and one-half off an island.

"I went after her," Hargitay said. "She complained that her leg hurt. Then Jack saw some sharks and hollered at us.

"That's all you have to do with Jane, just mention the word 'shark'. She went frantic and got excited."

Drury swung the boat in close and jumped in the water with them to help get Jayne aboard, Hargitay said. With all three pulling on one side, it suddenly flipped over on top of them.

Jayne went underwater, Hargitay said, and then as he searched for her his arm brushed against her and he pulled her to the surface.

"She was unconscious," he said. "I thought she was dead."

The two men finally pulled her atop the capsized boat, he said, and they drifted for about an hour until just at dusk they floated up close to a coral reef about 50 feet in size all around.

At dawn, he said, they saw that Rose Island was not far away. They walked, waded and swam to the island-holding Jane between them the "two blocks" they had to swim.

They collapsed on the rocky beach of Rose Island and went to sleep, he said. They were awakened by the noise of the plane flying overhead. Then they were brought the 15 miles into Nassau by boat.

Bryan Pierce, skipper of the Blades II, the rescue boat that picked them up, said his 35 years experience at sea and their appearance convinced him Hargitay's story was true.

Dr. Meyer Rassin, of the Rassin Hospital where Miss Mansfields was taken, said she had suffered "quite severe exposure and the effects of bites from numerous mosquitoes and sand flies." He said he had given her a sedative although she was emotionally calm.

Tiros Satellite To Help Predict Weather Outlook

New Moon Will Aid In Preparations For John Glenn's Orbit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States hurled into orbit Thursday a beautifully functioning new weather satellite. Among varied duties, it will help forecast conditions for John Glenn's scheduled space flight Wednesday.

The Tiros IV's television cameras and infra-red sensers, alternating as the satellite passed through daylight and darkness, were sending back cloud-cover pictures "of execellent quality" from 450 to 525 miles up.

This most advanced of America's experimental weather-watching devices was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., at 7:43 a.m. EST by a three-stage Thor-Delta rocket. It completed its first orbit in about 100 minutes.

The satellite's speed was ranging between 16,700 and 17,000 miles an hour. The angle of its orbit carried it over an area ranging roughly 3,500 miles to the north and south of the Equator.

Dr. Morris Topper of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA said the new satellite would provide useful weather information along portions of astronaut Glenn's orbital path not covered by other means.

It is quite possible, Topper said, that these weather reports would be of vital importance should Glenn's spacecraft fail to come down in one of the three prime recovery areas. These areas already are well covered by conventional weather observance.

Glenn himself will be watching the world's weather from an altitude of about 100 miles. Scientists said there was a good chance that he and Tiros would observe some of the same cloud patterns during their swings around the earth.

One of the Tiros IV cameras has a new type lens which photographs an area 450 miles on a side, giving more detail and less distortion than bigger lenses. The other camera covers an area 750 miles on the side.

Pictures from the cameras and the sensors were being recorded on 400-foot reels of tape, then being relayed on earth command to stations at Wallops Island, Va., and Princeton, N. J.

Ground stations also were giving the satellite a picture-snapping schedule to follow on succeeding passes around the earth.

As in earlier Tiros experiments, the pictures were being processed for distribution to weather forecasters throughout the world.

Investigators Blocked By Kennedy's Refusal

Names Of 'Muzzlers' Are Not Disclosed

By JOHN A. GOLDSMITH
(United Press International)

WASHINGTON — President Kennedy invoked his power of executive privilege Thursday to block Senate "muzzling" investigators from obtaining the names of individual censors who reviewed specific military speeches.

Chairman John C. Stennis, D.-Miss., of the special Senate investigating subcommittee promptly upheld the President's historic right to do so. But he said the inquiry into speech review practices of the Defense and State departments would continue.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, D.-S.C., who demanded the Senate investigation, denounced Kennedy's order as "one of the most dangerous acts" ever committed by a president. He accused the President of invoking "the executive Fifth Amendment."

In a letter read to the armed forces subcommittee by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, Kennedy said that public disclosure of the information sought by the senators would be contrary to the public interest.

He also declared that he was acting in accordance with precedents set by other presidents from George Washington to Dwight D. Eisenhower. In 1957, Eisenhower invoked the privilege in almost identical circumstances.

Executive privilege is the separation of powers procedure under which presidents traditionally have kept confidential information which they considered to be solely the business of the executive branch. Stennis said he had no course but to uphold it now.

McNamara later told newsmen that he did not think the issue of executive privilege will come up again.

"I don't believe it will," he said. "The President made his statement and we will do all in our power to furnish the information requested."

In challenging Kennedy's action, Thurmond quoted Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy as saying last September that the administration would lean over backwards to give congressional committees information they sought and to avoid using executive privilege. Thurmond added that the President's action ran counter to his brother's statements. But the senator noted that the attorney general said at the time he was not ruling out some future instance in which executive privilege might be used.

The dispute centers around Thurmond's demand that individual Pentagon censors be called before the subcommittee to explain why they made certain changes and deletions in anti-Communist speeches. Thurmond said the changes reflected a "defeatist" policy.

The President took the position that the censors' superior—McNamara—was responsible for their action and that employee morale would be shattered if they were subjected to "harassment." He said McNamara had offered to testify as to the reason for each change.

Dr. Steere is the author of several books including "Work and Contemplation," 1957; "On Listening to Another," 1955; and "Doors Into Life," 1948. He translated Kierkegaard, the Danish philosopher, and published the translation in 1938 in a book entitled "Purity of Heart."

Three Killed By Paris Mob

PARIS (UPI) — Three persons were killed and at least 240 injured Thursday night when a Communist-led mob of 10,000 demonstrators battled police in a riot that began as a protest against the Secret Army Organization OAS.

While the mob fought police with clubs and paving stones in the working class section of east Paris the OAS exploded plastic bombs in other sections. One damaged the offices of the Soviet Tass News agency.

Late Permission

There will be campus-wide late permission of 2 a.m. on the night of Feb. 17 for the Winter German's Concert, Woman's Council Secretary Faye Clow announced yesterday.

The Council also announced that there will be sign-out permission on Feb. 20 for the Raleigh Concert Series.

Dr. Discusses Female Problems At Conference

Dr. Cleo Dawson, lecturer and psychologist from Lexington, Ky., will be the featured banquet speaker at the 7th annual "Spotlight on Women" conference to be held at UNC the weekend of February 17-18.

She will speak at 7 p.m., Saturday, February 17, at the conference banquet in the Carolina Inn. The title of her speech is "For Every Problem There's An Answer."

Dr. Dawson has become widely known throughout the world with her popular lectures on the understanding of women in business, social, and family life. It was she who advised that American men make their women do some good hard work, such as changing a flat tire.

Front page headlines throughout the world featured Dr. Dawson's talk on the management of women which she gave at the Chicago Rotary Club. This lecture was subsequently published in "The Rotarian" and was condensed in the "Reader's Digest" in December 1957, under the title "How to Manage a Woman." This article was rated third in reader's interest of all the articles the magazine had ever published.

Dr. Dawson was born on a Texas cattle ranch close to the Rio Grande. She is a product of five universities: a speech graduate of the Baylor College of Expression, a bachelor's degree from Southern Methodist University, and a master's and a doctorate from the University of Kentucky where she spent 10 years teaching.

She began her study of psychology, language, and human relations early in life. Demands upon her interest in trends of psychology and world affairs drew her into the fields of lecturing and writing.

Dr. Dawson is the author of the best seller, "She Came to the Valley," a novel of the Rio Grande. She soon will have a new book published entitled "How to Manage Women."

Howard President To Talk In Durham

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, President of Howard University and member of the American Civil Liberties Union, will speak on race relations at the Durham St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church at 7:00 p.m.

Long a prominent figure in Negro education, Dr. Johnson has also served on various National Advisory Councils for United States territories. In addition, he has worked with the National Council for the Prevention of War, the National Council of Christian and Jews, and the Advisory Council for the National Youth Administration.

State Peace Corps Parley To Be Here

A statewide college Peace Corps Conference will be held at UNC March 16-17, Charles Henderson, Dean of Student Affairs, announced today.

Several Washington officials of the Peace Corps will participate in the conference, and all North Carolina colleges have been invited to send student delegates. The opening address will be given by Paul Geren, Deputy Director of the Peace Corps, on Friday, March 16, at 8 p.m. in Howell Hall auditorium.

At 9 a.m. Saturday in Howell Hall three Peace Corps officials will conduct a symposium on "The Peace Corps in Operation." Those participating will be Bill Moyers, associate director for Public Affairs and the Corps' liaison official in Washington, D. C.; Franklin Williams, special assistant to Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver; and Warren W. Wiggins, associate director for Program Development and Operation.

The symposium will cover the areas of project development, volunteer recruitment, selection and training of volunteers, and project information.

A luncheon for delegates will be held at the Carolina Inn following the symposium. The Reverend William Coffin, chaplain of Yale University and a member of the Peace Corps' National Advisory Board, will be the principal speaker.

Student delegates will also gather for small seminar meetings Saturday. They will study Peace Corps policies, organization and operation, and Peace Corps problems and how they are being solved, according to Henderson.

The public is invited to attend Geren's opening address and the symposium. A question-and-answer period for those attending will conclude the symposium.

YWCA Cabinet Sponsors Meet

A pre-election meeting for all women students interested in running for the YWCA Cabinet will be held Monday, Feb. 12 at 4:30 in Gerrard Hall.

The offices open to new students include the seven executive posts — president, vice-president, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer, program chairman and religious emphasis chairman—as well as over 10 committee chairmen.

At the meeting the present Cabinet members will give a brief summary of their duties and students may sign up for interviews for the seven executive positions.

Occupational Health Program Slated Here

A seminar in environmental health will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at the UNC School of Public Health. The guest speaker will be Dr. Herbert E. Stokinger, chief of the Toxicology Section, Occupational Health Research and Training Facility, U. S. Public Health Service, Cincinnati. His topic will be "Ozone, Its Effect on Physiologic Systems."

The general theme of this series of seminars, which are held each Saturday morning, is "Microcontaminants in the Environment." The programs are sponsored by the Department of Sanitary Engineering of the UNC School of Public Health.

The next speaker on the series, on Saturday, Feb. 17, will be Dr. Roy R. Kuebler Jr. of the Department of Biostatistics of the UNC School of Public Health. Dr. Kuebler's subject will be "Statistical Aspects of Particular Matter in the Causation of Disease."

The seminar will be held in Room 123, North Wing of the new School of Public Health Building. All interested persons are invited.

Campus Chest To Aid Five

The Campus Chest has selected the five charities to be benefitted by this year's campaign which will start March 1.

The five charities selected were Mental Health, the American Friends Service Committee, the Heart Association, the Tours Scholarship program, and the World University Service.

The Chest plans to give $1,000 to Mental Health to fulfill a previous commitment. The money donated to the American Friends Service Committee and the World University Service will be used to aid students around the world in the form of food, clothing and books.

The donation to the Heart Association will go to Dr. Thomas C. Gibson of N. C. Memorial Hospital to assist his research on the improvement of the electrocardiograph.

$750 will be given to the Tours Scholarship program to finance the planning of the scholarship for next year.

Carolina Campus Of Forty Years Ago Lacked Intramurals, Mail Delivery, And Females

By OWEN BISHOP

At this point in a new semester most students are inclined to look on the University of North Carolina as offering its students little more than quizzes, book reports, term papers and examinations. But, believe it or not, it could be worse.

Just imagine yourself a student here before 1923. Graham Memorial and the Tin Can were yet to be built. There was no such thing as on-campus mail delivery—students had to go to the Post Office to pick up their mail.

Intramural athletics were nonexistent. And, gentlemen, imagine the plight of your social life in a student body of 2200, with only 90 co-eds—all of whom lived in private homes off campus.

Campus Improvements

In 1923-24, however, a few improvements were made. Graham Memorial and the Tin Can were begun, on-campus mail delivery was initiated and intramural athletics came into being.

That year the University appropriated funds for the physical development of the "average" student and proceeded with the construction of 15 tennis courts and what the "Tar Heel" referred to at the time as a "mammoth" gymnasium.

To coordinate this "mass athletic" program, the forerunner of the present Interdormitory Council, the Carolina Dormitory Club, was organized.

A few of the 12 dormitories then on campus had organized the year before and had attempted athletic contests; but, lacking any central group to coordinate their activities they made little progress.

12 Campus Groups

Under plans outlined by John Purser, then student director of the athletic program and now a Charlotte businessmen, the campus was divided into 12 groups, including one for students living in fraternity houses.

Each group or dormitory was to elect three officers, two of whom—the president and secretary-treasurer—would serve as representatives on the executive committee of the Dormitory Club. The third officer, the intramural manager, would oversee the schedule of his group and see to it that it was represented in each sport.

The Dormitory Club elected Robert W. Linker, now of the UNC Romance Languages Department, as its president. Besides coordinating intramurals, the Club promoted quiet in the dormitories during study hours and facilitated contact between dormitory leaders and the offices of the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. It met every month in the social rooms of the Presbyterian Church.

The intramural program featured the usual sports of tag football, basketball, soccer, boxing, wrestling and cross-country, as well as one innovation—pushball. In this sport a leather ball, six feet in diameter, was placed in the center of a football field. The opposing teams—each of undetermined number—pushed against the ball from opposite sides, the purpose being to push it beyond a goal line.

Trophies and Cups

Trophies and loving cups for the winners in these contests were donated by various institutions around the campus.

The Sport Gram, the intramural newspaper, was distributed over the campus in a rather unique way. It was enclosed in the laundry packages before they were returned to the students.

Over all, the athletic program proved to be quite successful. According to the "Tar Heel" of Dec. 7, 1923, "a total of somewhere around five hundred" individual students participated in it during the first quarter of the school year.

By the end of the 1924 Spring quarter, both the intramural program and the Dormitory Club were firmly established as essential institutions on the Carolina campus. At that time the "Tar Heel" reported the Club's plans to expand the intramural program in the coming year as well as to set aside social centers in all dormitories and to organize the town students into wards for participation in club activities.

How To Improve It:

Honor Council

In past articles we have tried to point out some of the shortcomings of the student judiciary system, particularly the Honor Council.

While some of the criticisms have perhaps been somewhat over-emphasized, the motive in doing so was simply to make clear that a danger does exist. Every judicial decision is an important one; its effects reach far beyond the boundaries of the campus and are permanently felt.

But questions are easy to pose; answers are not so simple. What can be done to correct some of the problems inherent in the Honor Council?

First, and possibly most important, is the make-up of the Council itself. At present, any undergraduate student who holds a C average and is otherwise in good standing can hold a seat. This means that the Council can be made up of any proportion of freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors. Although this allows for equitable representation from each class, it also permits students who are too young and inexperienced to hold Council seats.

The majority of freshmen who enter Carolina have little real conception of what living under an honor system means, not to mention having the knowledge and experience to pass judgment accordingly. And while wisdom is not necessarily a by-product of age or class standing, it is perhaps the best measurable indicator.

For this reason, Honor Council membership should be limited to those who have been in attendance at least three semesters. This would insure that the Council be made up of students who have had some experience in living under the system they will administer. This is no guarantee of competence, but is a step in the right direction.

Secondly, no Council decision should be rendered by fewer than nine members, nor should any penalty be decided by less than a two-thirds vote. At present, six men can hand down a verdict, which means that only four of them need concur to convict and suspend a student. Other penalties require only a simple majority. We believe any Honor Council penalty is serious enough to warrant more than majority agreement.

As for procedure, the leeway currently allowed the Council in deciding cases is too broad. A bill to go before Student Legislature soon will help codify this procedure, making it standard from year to year. This bill, if passed, should help make decisions more consistent. However, further codification concerning gravity of offenses is necessary to further standardize decisions, making them less liable to vary from case to case. At the same time, such codification would necessarily have to be broadly based to allow for unusual cases and possible extenuating circumstances.

Anther procedure which might aid in insuring that Council members have adequate experience would be to require that all new members sit in on five sessions before they are granted the privilege to vote. At present, there is no requirement that new members have any previous experience, although there is an unofficial practice of asking new members to hear a few cases before they are allowed to vote.

* * *

These are merely suggestions. Some of them might require that the number of Council members be raised from 16 to a higher number in order to have the minimum number of members present and voting.

Some might be impractical, although we think any or all of them can be effected with a minimum of effort. They would help to eliminate most of the errors that hurt the Council in the eyes of both the students and the administration and place it in a position of respect and confidence.

The honor system is the best system, although it is perhaps out of vogue to say so. We have no quarrels with the system itself, nor with its principles.

We do think, however, that the Honor Council could be reformed in the suggested ways to make it a more equitable and just body, less prone to error and more able to deal justly with students.

No Fireworks

The "muzzling" of the military probe thus far has produced nothing startling. In fact, a majority of the officers testifying deny having any impression of being gagged.

The practice of previewing speeches for consistency of policy is sound. The problem is that policy is not always clear, and that censorship is an imperfect art, dependent upon individual judgment.

Secretary McNamara's insistence that full responsibility for any criticism be placed on him is commendable. Subordinates following his orders could become convenient scapegoats for probers whose appetites have not been satisfied.

Let the critics of the program fight it out with McNamara. He seems well able to take care of himself.

Ayn Rand's Basic Ideas Contained In 'Anthem'

ANTHEM.
By Ayn Rand.
Signet
123 pages.

Ayn Rand is famous today as the writer of the recent bestsellers THE FOUNTAINHEAD and ATLAS SHRUGGED: however, she is also the authoress of ANTHEM. Anthem was one of her earlier works. It was written in 1936, published in Great Britain in 1938, and finally appeared in the United States in 1946. It has only recently become available in paperback as a Signet Book. It is a much shorter novel than her more recent works and it is far less complex. ANTHEM contains most of the basic elements of her philosophy, which she goes on to elaborate at such great length in her later works. It is concise to the point where one rather wishes that it did not end after only 123 very short pages.

Anthem is the incisive account of life in a futuristic society which has regressed technologically; however, its social structure has progressed to a horrifying point of collectivization. There is no such thing as the individual. The use of the first person singular is a crime in that society which has for its motto:

"We are one in all and all in one.
There are no men but only the great WE,
One, indivisible and forever."

Personality is stifled and emotion is forbidden. Miss Rand is concerned with one character, Equality 7-2521, and with his struggle for individualism and the rediscovery of the "I".

The basic premise of her philosophy in ANTHEM is that as society moves toward collectivization the individual must not be engulfed. He must retain freedom of thought and spirit. It is the individual, not the crowd, who counts. The only road to greatness is through individuality and a break with the bonds of society.

This novel is written with the greatest clarity and simplicity. If one has not read anything by Miss Rand, then ANTHEM is the place to start. It is doubtful that anyone who has ever thought about the loss of individuality in our society or who has not wanted to conform to the herd will disagree with Miss Rand's thesis. Some readers will be stimulated by ANTHEM. Others may find that it contains a creed for them. Still others may find in ANTHEM the articulate statement of thoughts which they have unsuccessfully been trying to formulate for themselves. Everyone will recognize that they have been exposed to a new and refreshingly original view of society.

'POPulation Explosion'...More $

Americans usually take the figures of the "population explosion" in their stride because the problem appears to be so inevitable and everpresent.

That the population of the nation jumped from 151 million people in 1950 to 179 million in 1960 worried few persons. That the percentage jump of 18 per cent was the greatest for any ten-year period in 50 years worried few persons.

The other "facts of life" which the census announced had been predicted by sociologists for years and surprised few: people are moving from the country and from the city into the suburbs; population is leaving most Southern areas (except the big cities) faster than it is entering . . . . .

But there is one factor in the population growth which may be the most important for the long-term and certainly is the most urgent: more than two-thirds of the additional Americans are aged under 18 or over 65. This increase in the number of young and old means practically the same number of people in their working years now have to support almost double the number of dependents.

This means schools.

It means hospitals. Hospitals for the old and for the mentally retarded. It means correctional schools for the young (and old) who get in trouble.

It means virtually the same number of taxpayers are paying for these increased services.

More schools. More colleges and universities. More hospitals and correctional institutions.

North Carolina is presently facing this problem. Last year's defeated bond issue would have provided funds for higher education, correctional schools and mental health institutions. With its defeat by the tax-fearing voters the state was faced with a critical situation.

UNC officials are still searching for ways to obtain the funds which the defeated issue would have allowed to be raised. Carolina would have gotten almost $6 million dollars for capital improvements. N. C. State, Woman's College, other state-supported colleges, and community colleges were in the issue to the extent of approximately $27 million more.

At Chapel Hill the University is marking time until appropriations can be secured in other ways.

The renovation of Cobb dormitory, and an additional undergraduate reading room in the Library is being planned. Other state schools are searching for room to put new students and places in which to teach them.

UNC enrollment is up from 8,600 to 9,500 this year and will continue to increase. More students will be "qualified" to attend college, but many of these students —particularly those from out-of-state—are already being turned down for lack of dormitory and classroom space and more will be turned down in the future.

There will be a similar pressure for admittance into the smaller state-supported colleges and the growing community colleges.

* * *

The bond issue included badly-needed appropriations ($7.4 million) for mental health institutions.

North Carolina, in common with most Southern states, has an understaffed, inadequate institutional set-up for the treatment of mental illnesses.

Half-a-million dollars were provided for local hospital construction—this money will have to be gotten somewhere else. More than a million dollars was included for state training schools, which are woefully inadequate.

Supporters of any future bond issues will have to overcome the reluctance of many individuals to spend tax money on badly-needed state improvements in the fields of education and hospital care.

The population increase and its resultant effect on the number of people under 18 and above 65 can only be weathered by intelligent action on the part of government officials and the voters.

The "explosion" is more than a handy term, used by politicians lacking subjects for a real speech.

The explosion has direct and impending consequences for the taxpayer, for the young and for the old.

'Dyeing The Snow'

A Jacob's Ladder
Denise Levertov
New Directions
$2.95

A recent release from New Directions Paperback Publishing Co., "A Jacob's Ladder," by Denise Levertov, opens with a thought that is a little strong for a traditionalist such as myself:

"As you read, a white bear leisurely pees, dyeing the snow
saffron . . . ."

Truthfully, once Miss Levertov gets this out of her system, she settles down to some excellent poetry. Incidentally, I am assuming she is a Miss; it would take a hell of a strong man to marry a girl who sees white bears leisurely dyeing the snow, etc.

The precision of her choice of words is amazing; like a black-and-white motion picture with the film slipping, disjointed images come and go too quickly, leaving the reader with a desire to go back and examine each frame more closely:

"On the kitchen wall a flash
swift pilgrimage of pigeons, a spiral celebration of air . . . . ."

Slices of surrealism such as this and poems like "The Rainwalkers" make "A Jacob's Ladder" a very interesting book indeed.

The only distraction is that Miss Levertov's typewriter seems to have developed hiccups at the most critical spots, splicing thoughts and drawing-and-quartering complete ideas. This is rough on those of us still enamoured of Tennyson's measured pace.

A note in the back of the book calls to our attention the fact that Miss Levertov's mother is Welsh and her father, an Anglican clergyman, was by birth a Russian Jew. This may explain something.

All in all, the book is an interesting if mildly incoherent bit of writing. I greatly admire Miss Levertov's talent with words.

As concerns her verse patterns,
I still don't dig

Death Toll Set At 300 In Explosion

SARRBRUCKEN, Germany (UPI) — Saarland officials set the death toll Thursday at about 300 in the gas explosion which ripped through the Luisenthal coal mine Wednesday with a blinding flash of flame and a shock wave that killed like a sledgehammer.

Carl Hugo, director of the Saarland Mines Commission, announced 283 bodies had been recovered. He said approximately 10 or 15 men were missing and that "there are no longer any prospects that they can be rescued." Of the 100 miners who escaped 81 are on the critical list, he said.

Hugo's announcement brought an end to the mass vigil kept by crowds of tearful women and children outside the mine. One woman, mother of three sons lost on the same shift, truged home after 24 hours at the mine. A few stayed on though hope was gone.

Officials said they were convinced an explosion of methane gas caused the disaster, and despite the safety precautions which have won the mine many safety awards, the miners apparently opened up a gas pocket which was set off by an electric spark.

Hugo disclosed that officials first considered sealing off three side tunnels, entombing the men where they had fallen, but that later inspection showed the tunnels were safe. The mine itself was closed while officials and weary rescue workers checked through the rubble.

U. S. Army helicopter teams which flew to help carry the injured miners to hospitals returned to their bases.

It was the worst mining disaster since 1946 when 412 persons died in a Ruhr coal mine blast.

All of the nation was in mourning. The government announced in Bonn that President Heinrich Luebke would deliver a funeral oration at a mass funeral on Saturday.

Yesterday's Answer

Pictured here is the artist's conception of how the new ZBT house will look. The house which will be started soon, is to be the first one constructed on the new fraternity court on the Raleigh highway. Plans for the house were released today.

ZBT Releases Architect's Plans For Chapter House

Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity yesterday released drawings of its new house that will be the first to be built in the new fraternity court on Finley Golf Course Rd. Construction of the $200,000-plus house is expected to start this Spring.

The two-floor house will be located at the southeast corner of the new fraternity court, fronting on Finley Rd. and overlooking the golf course in the rear. It is being built for ZBT by the Alphi Pi of ZBT Foundation, Inc.

The living and dining areas of the brick house will be on the first floor and will include a three-room housemother's apartment, a sunken living room with fireplace, a dining room with seating for 80 persons, kitchen, music room and chapter meeting room.

Sliding glass doors on the first floor will open onto an inner courtyard surrounded by a brick wall. The courtyard may also be reached by two second floor stairways at the rear of the house.

All sleeping rooms will be on the second floor, with each room opening onto a screened balcony and an inner hallway. Each bedroom will contain separate study facilities for each occupant.

A paved parking lot will be adjacent to the house and the architects expect that most of the trees now on the lot will be left for shade.

The house is expected to "fulfill the housing needs of the present and future membership of the fraternity," Foundation President Alan B. Heilig stated. "We want it to be a credit to the University and the fraternity."

Kennedy Trying To Corner Reds On N-Test Questions

By STEWART HENSLEY
(United Press International)

WASHINGTON—President Kennedy is trying to maneuver Russia into a corner on the atmospheric test question in an effort to achieve a real "break-through" toward an effective nuclear test ban.

The President's strategy has become increasingly clear in recent days.

The American and British proposal Thursday for a Big Three foreign ministers meeting to open the Geneva disarmament conference next month was one part of this strategy aimed at bringing a halt in the nuclear arms race.

Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev most likely will cry "blackmail" when the full pattern of U.S. moves becomes clear. However, American and British officials believe that Kennedy's course will underline the fact that Russia is to blame for the race if it must continue.

Expect More Tests

American officials involved in the matter expect Kennedy to announce at the end of this month his reluctant decision to resume atmospheric tests in about eight weeks. He will couple the announcement with another U.S. pledge to work diligently meanwhile, to try to achieve a disarmament agreement that will rule out the need for such tests.

The Geneva disarmament conference, convening a couple of weeks after the expected announcement, will meet with the full knowledge that U.S. atmospheric tests are to be resumed unless Russia comes quickly to terms on a foolproof test ban treaty. It will be emphasized that work on such a treaty was near completion when Russia last September stopped negotiating and broke a three-year moratorium on atmospheric blasts.

The U.S. hope is that the Soviet Union, at the Geneva talks, will be under heavy and increasing pressure from other countries, including the neutrals, to come to terms with the United States and Britain in an effort to head off the new series of American tests.

Would Justify Tests

Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, in calling for a "supreme effort" at the 18-nation Geneva conference opening March 14, said they considered the "massive Soviet tests" in the atmosphere late last year "would justify the West" in resuming tests for purely military reasons. Kennedy can be expected in coming weeks to hammer over harder at the theme upon which he spoke with feeling at his news conference Wednesday. This is that there is nothing "inconsistent" in preparing for new tests while at the same time working hard toward disarmament."

The President's view is that he would be failing his obligation for national and "free world" security if he did not prepare for and carry out new tests to develop and refine weapons unless the Kremlin agrees to a foolproof inspection and control system.

Two Removed From Dorms

In the first case tried by the IDC Court this semester, two students were removed from one dorm to another, placed in campus probation for one semester, and fined $10 each.

The students were tried on a violation of quiet hours charge which was made after they had created a prolonged disturbance in the dorm. One of them had to be taken to the infirmary in order to quieten him.

IDC Party Opens Spring Twisting

Continuing the trend toward more twistable music for IDC dances, which was begun late last fall, the Swing Shifters will play for the dance.

The affair is free of charge and will be held from 8 to 12. A bus will leave from Y-Court at eight for all who might need transportation.

Swimmers Meet Maryland For ACC Lead

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

First place in the ACC will be on the line this afternoon when North Carolina's swimming team battles the University of Maryland at 4:00 in College Park.

The Tar Heels, who suffered their first setback Wednesday at the hands of mighty Florida, have won two meets in conference competition. They are 5-1 overall, having defeated East Carolina twice and VMI in adition to league victories over Duke and Clemson.

Coach Pat Earey's mermen, co-holder of the 1961 ACC championship with Maryland and North Carolina State, will be out to avenge last year's tough 50-45 loss, which deprived them of sole ownership of the title.

Unbeaten Thompson Mann, the sophomore phenom from Hickory, Va., will lead the Tar Heels in their quest to get back on the winning track. Mann and Jim Huffman will probably race in the backstroke and medley relay events.

Senior cocaptain Bob Briggs, who along with Mann garnered a first place in the Florida meet, will start in his speciality—the 200-yard breastroke. Bob Bilbro, Carolina's other co-captain and Bryan Williams are set in the freestyle sprints while Willie Bloom and either Frank Lea or Art Merrill will swim the freestyle distances.

In the 200-yard butterfly, Earey will probably go with Barry King and Randy Dodson. Doug Fambrough, who performed so well against Florida's All-American Steve McBride, and Sandy Patterson will do the diving for Carolina.

Earey's tankmen will have their hands full today in trying to stop the Terps. Coach Bill Campbell's crew, which has vanquished five conference foes, including the vaunted N. C. State team, has only to win this afternoon to sew up the championship.

The College Park mermen, 7-1, on the season, feature three of last year's individual ACC champions, two of whom broke records in their specialties.

Ray Ostrander set a new mark of 22.6 in the 50-yard freestyle while Dave Fleming smashed the 100 yard butterfly record with a 56.4 clocking. The versatile Ostrander also ran both the 200-yard indivdual medley and the 100-yard backstroke events in the 1960 ACC championships. The head-on clashes between he and Carolina's Mann may determine the outcome of today's races.

Hardwood Hilites

By ED DUPREE

The Atlantic Coast Conference is in the midst of one of its wildest season rat races in nine basketball seasons. Not since 1956 has the jockeying for positions been so hectic. That season UNC and N.C. State finished with 11-3 records, while Wake Forest and Duke compiled 10-4 marks.

An ACC team has to lead a charmed life to go through 14 neighborhood contests without defeat. Carolina's 1957 National Champions were the only team to do this and the fabulous Tar Heels had to struggle through overtime games with Maryland and South Carolina, not to mention narrow victories over Wake Forest and Duke. Frank McGuire's unbeaten team was experienced in pressure-packed games by the time it tangled with Michigan State and Kansas in the NCAA playoffs.

In 1954, the only season in which all eight teams played less than 14 games, Duke captured the top spot with a 9-1 slate. Four times a 12-2 mark has been good enough for top seeding in the tournament, and twice an 11-3 record was best.

Duke's Blue Devils now lead the ACC by a half game margin and Coach Vic Bubas's crew has a 7-2 mark. Finishing the season with only two losses would be a feat since the Methodists must play four of their five games on the road. Toughest of these could be their journey to College Park, where Maryland has already ambushed UNC and Wake Forest.

The ACC is—and has always been—a home court league. Winning a game in another team's backyard takes a tremendous effort by the visiting squad.

Carolina's Dean Smith thinks the home crowds are an important factor, but not so much as the goals the players are accustomed to shooting at each day in practice. The Tar Heel coach pointed out that "it takes a good team to win at home, but a great team to win on the road."

Coach Smith added that an 11-3 season slate should take the top spot, while a 10-4 mark would be a cinch for a tie.

Using the home court advantage as a yardstick, Wake Forest is this column's pick to take first place in the regular season standings, but the ACC championship—decided in the tournament—is up for grabs.

The Demon Deacons are currently in second place with a 6-2 mark. They play four of their six games in Winston-Salem's Memorial Coliseum where they've lost only to Ohio State. Bones McKinney also brings his once high-ranked Deacs to Chapel Hill and Raleigh for important contests, but home court games with Maryland and Duke could be the key to a fast finish like the Baptists had last season when they took the conference championship.

N.C. State's Wolfpack has only four games remaining and none of these are on the enemy's home court. Everett Case's boys play host to UNC and Wake and meet Clemson and South Carolina at Charlotte. The Pack sports a 7-3 record and is only a half game behind Duke. Case is gleefully looking ahead to the tournament, played in the friendly confines of Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh.

Carolina's Tar Heels are currently in fourth place with a 5-3 record and Dean Smith takes his boys to only one more enemy court—Reynolds Coliseum. The Chapel Hillians meet Wake, Duke, and Maryland in Woollen Gym, where a Carolina team hasn't lost since the 1959-60 season. The remaining two games will be at Charlotte against Clemson and South Carolina. Tar Heel teams have always played well in Charlotte, where this year's edition romped over Notre Dame, 99-80, in January.

Maryland is still in the running, but the Terps play four of their seven games on the road. They'll meet Duke, Virginia, and Clemson at home while trying to improve on their 3-4 mark. Road games at South Carolina, Clemson, Wake, and UNC could be disastrous to Bud Millikan's men.

The other three—South Carolina, Clemson, and Virginia have little hope of finishing in the first division, but by tournament time they'll start from scratch, just as Maryland and the Big Four.

All the marbles go to the tournament winner in March, but meanwhile the red-hot scramble for the seeded positions has three weeks to go—and anything and everything could happen.

Tar Heel Track Men Host State College Tonight At 6

By MARTY KRUMING

Labeled as one of the finest winter track teams to ever represent Carolina, Coach Dale Ranson's Tar Heels return to the Tin Can this evening to battle N.C. State in a meet beginning at six. Only last month the Wolfpack was soundly trounced at Chapel Hill.

In the V.M.I. relays held last weekend, Carolina's showing was highlighted by the individual performances of senior co-captain Rett Everett in the two-mile run and Tom Clark's 6-4 leap in the high jump. Everett's lightning time of 9:30.1 was good enough to earn him the "most valuable runner" award for the meet, and a tie of the old record set by Wayne Bishop of Carolina in 1959. In the distance medley, featuring Scott Brent, Bob Hart, Jerry Stuver, and Charlie Little, and in the sprint medley, the Tar Heels copped two firsts. Although the schools entered in the relays were not given a total score, Coach Ranson was delighted with the efforts of the entire squad.

The Tar Heels should have no difficulty breezing past State. Both co-captain Barrie Tiedemann and junior Heath Whittle, whose vault of 14 feet in the V.M.I. relays was good enough to take second, have cleared the 14-foot mark in official competition this season. As for the other field events, Harvey Henry in the shot put and John O'Bannon and Dick Lewisohn in the broad jump have turned in creditable showings. Everett's entrance in the mile run should be a highlight for the fans attending tonight.

With Quantico's German-born pole vaulter John Uelses having become the first man to break the sixteen-foot barrier, Ranson hopes to bring the Marine squad back for a return engagement before the close of the season. Although Ueless won the Carolina meet with a vault of 15 feet, he just barely missed at 15-6.

Gum Company Is Accused By FTC

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) Thursday accused the nation's biggest manufaucturer of bubble gum of illegally monopolizing the sale of cards bearing pictures of big league baseball players.

It filed the complaint against Topps Chewing Gum, Inc., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The FTC said that Topps has exclusive picture card contracts with 414 of the 421 baseball players in the major leagues. The 7 bubble gum holdouts were not identified.

According to the FTC, the company also has signed up virtually all of about 1,500 minor league players of major league caliber or potential.

The FTC complaint said the company has used threats of legal action and secret payments to baseball players' agents to frustrate the effort of its competitors to use the players' pictures on similar cards.

The company was accused of signing up minor league players for $5 to contracts that bind them from granting picture card rights to anyone other than Topps.

McGill Still Leads Scoring Wake's Chappell Is Fourth

McGill still ranks No. 1 in the nation with a 36.1-point average, but Workman cut the leader's margin nearly in half last week, according to the latest NCAA Service Bureau figures, which included games through Feb. 6.

Workman's average has risen to 33.7 while Jack (The Shot) Foley is third with a 31.6 mark. Len Chappell of Wake Forest (28.6) and Jimmy Rayl of Indiana (27.9) complete the top five scorers.

All-America Jerry Lucas of Ohio State leads in field goal shooting with a .636 average while Tommy Boyer of Arkansas heads the free throw department with a .955 mark.

Paul Silas of Creighton rates as the top rebounder, grabbing 23 per cent of all rebounds in his games.

Carolina Caravan

By JAKE WADE

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina's cagers will welcome the opportunity of cavorting on the hardwood of their own cozy and friendly Woollen Gym when they tangle with the Wake Forest Deacs Saturday afternoon . . . . The Tar Heels haven't exactly distinguished themselves on their journeys abroad this season, all losses so far having been on the road . . . There is consolation in the fact that they get another shot at all their conquerors, except Indiana, and right where they toil daily in practice and where most of the cheering will be for them . . . . Forgetting about game sites, all those affiliated with the team are puzzled over Carolina's recent loss of sharpness that was shown in earlier efforts.

Larry Brown's mother came down from New York to see him play at College Park and, while grieving over the Tar Heels' loss, nevertheless loaded up her debonair son with goodies to bring back to the campus . . . . Buck Freeman, once an able assistant to Franklin McGuire when he coached here, also commuted from New York to watch the Maryland game . . . . Charlie Shaffer may report to the football squad for the wind-up of off-season practice after the basketball campaign ends . . . Tar Heel wrestler Pete Gilchrist has had five straight pins for Dr. Sam Barnes' up-and-coming team . . . . And Dick Blackman so far this season has collected 25 points . . . Both he and Pete stand to break the schools' individual wrestling scoring record . . . . Pete's from Charlotte, Blackman from Whiteville.

THIS AND THAT—Runner John Gutknecht, the UNC graduate student who is the national six-mile cross country champion, was wed recently to Miss Lillian Anne Terry of Durham, the nuptials taking place at Rockingham . . . Ben Gallagher, the Charlottean who had to forfeit his last year of football eligibility at Carolina because of scholastic difficulties, has caught on with the Minnesota Vikings . . . . That's the pro outfit on which Rip Hawkins starred last season as a rookie, leading the league in pass interceptions . . . The Tar Heels have a three-year pact with Michigan State and a two-year deal with Ohio State, the Big Ten footbal powers they will meet for the first time next season.

UNC track coach Dale Ranson will be taking off soon on a short leave of absence to teach the Chicago Cubs how to be swifter . . . . . This will be the second year he has taught his "fleetness running" to the big leaguers . . . On that recent balmy Sunday, upwards of 200 golfers toured the University's Finley course, very unusual for this time of year . . . . Members of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association have received invitations to a golf party and banquet March 6 at Greenville to kick off the college baseball season . . . Reynolds May and other Greenville citizens will be hosts.

States Could Decide School Aid Planning

Civil Rights Snag May Block Proposal Made In Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new proposal was made Friday to allow Congress to toss to the states the hot potato of federal aid for private schools, but it immediately ran into a civil rights snag.

Rep. Cleveland M. Baily, D-W. Va., chairman of a House general education subcommittee, enthusiastically announced a "new approach" to the school aid controversy and said it would "cut the heart out of the religious dispute."

$500 Million

It would allocate nearly $500 million over a three-year period of new school aid to the states and let them decide whether to pass on any of it to parochial or other private schools. But integrationists quickly objected because this also would allow aid to private schools opened in defiance of school integration orders.

This threw a wet blanket on the Baily plan, casting doubt on whether it would be able to get off the ground. However, Baily said his committee would begin hearings Feb. 27 on the proposal.

Two Per Cent

It would provide federal aid to public schools at a rate of 2 per cent of what each now spends for education. It would be up to the states to decide whether any of the money were used for support of private schools.

Baily said he believed this approach would be approved by Congress as it would "transfer the fight over parochial school aid from Washington to the 50 state capitals."

However, Chairman Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., of the parent House Education and Labor Committee, immediately raised the civil rights angle even before seeing a copy of Baily's proposal.

Not Unchallenged

"Under no condition would I allow such legislation to go unchallenged in committee or on the floor," Powell, a Negro, asserted. He said he would insist on a provision to ban federal aid to segregated schools.

Baily's plan differs from the aid proposal insisted on by President Kennedy — and apparently doomed to failure — in that it would base federal aid on what a state is now spending for education, whereas Kennedy proposes to base it on public school enrollment .

Legislature Gives Awards

Student Legislature Passes New Campus Election Law

The Student Legislature Thursday night passed a general elections law that will go into effect at the Spring elections. The bill was passed after lengthy debate over the wording of its thirteen amendments. The new law replaces the elections law of 1957 under which the Fall elections were held after a subsequent law was declared invalid.

150 freshman received awards for making a B average or better during the Fall semester. The awards were presented by ex-Dean Ernest Mackie in a ceremony before the entire legislature.

The Communications Committee was established as a permanent committee with the function of publicizing Student Government activities to the campus and other schools. $150 was appropriated for the use of the committee. The Legislature voted to return to committee a request for an additional $150 that was to be used to finance the establishment of dormitory newspapers.

Nuclear Testing

A resolution concerning nuclear testing that condemned the Soviet violation of the 1958 moratorium was returned to committee.

An additional $250 was appropriated for the use of Student Government to cover unexpected expenses that resulted from participation in the Bond Issue drive this Fall.

A bill to provide $75 for the Dance Committee in order to pay fo ra page in the Yackety-Yack was tabled.

A motion to discontinue a campus poll to determine the student body's sentiment toward the Entertainment Committee was defeat after the body legislature that such a poll was necessary for the continuation of campus wide entertainment.

New bills were presented Thursday night for the clarification of presidential succession, the effective review of presidential appointments, the appropriation of $150 to the Honor System Commission, and the appropriation of $600 for a Cuban Refugee scholarship.

Extra U.N. Session May Be Necessary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State Department officials said Friday an emergency session of the U. N. General assembly probably will be necessary if member nations do not buy the proposed $200 million bond issue to finance U. N. Congo operations.

Assistant Secretary of State Harlan Cleveland told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the United Nations has made no assessments for Congo operations beyond July 1 and is relying entirely on the proposed bond issue.

Klutznick

Philip M. Klutznick, deputy U. S. representative to the United Nations said that if the bond issue fails, "there will be a need for an emergency session" of the General Assembly to find some other means of financing Congo operations.

Cleveland and Klutznick testified in support of President Kennedy's proposal to buy half of the $200 million bonds.

Klutznick told the committee that U. S. purchase of $100 million of the bonds would "demonstrate support that would have a far greater moral and spiritual value than the monetary value."

Plan Endorsed

Meantime, acting chairman John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., made public a letter in which President Eugene R. Black of the World Bank endorsed the bond plan as a "sound one" and said he was urging participation.

Canada, Norway, Finland, Sweden and Denmark already have announced that they will buy part of the remaining $100 million.

Ruling Made On Dag's Crash

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (UPI) — A Rhodesian government commission, ruling that pilot error caused the plane crash that killed former United Nations Secretary Dag Hammarsjold Sept. 17, said Friday:

"The aircraft was allowed by its pilots to descend too low so that it struck trees and was brought to the ground."

Infirmary

James Collins, George Hildreth, Stan Biggers, Thomas Wilson, Dale Bassinger, Helen Ann Palmitier, Joseph Davies, George Petrie, Marvin Wachs, Hugh Hays, Phillip King, Gerald Schrum, Percy Jessup, John Wyatt, Josha Bailey, and William White.

Pan Hellenic Pushes Drive For Books

"Shorten their sentences with sentences" is the theme of the Pan Hellenic Council's drive to collect 7,000 books for the library at Central Prison in Raleigh.

The books will be used to aid the prison's recently established academic program that seeks to rehabilitate prisoners by giving them a chance to obtain an education.

"If this book drive accomplishes one-half of its goal, it will step up our program at the prison as much as two years," Dr. R. E. Timberlake, principle of the Education Rehabilitation Program, stated recently.

The Council will pick up books at these student residences next week:

Thurmond Wants No Muzzle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., defending a questionnaire on communism he gave a group of Marines in connection with alleged military "muzzling" hearings said Friday:

"Nobody has done anything wrong. They his critics are trying to make a mountain out of a molehill . . . they the press are not going to muzzle me. Nobody's going to muzzle me."

Debre's Cousin Feared Kidnapped

PARIS (UPI) — Marc-Andre Schwartz, 19-year-old university student and second cousin of Premier Michel Debre, was missing Friday and feared kidnapped by the outlawed Secret Army Organization OAS in a move to embarrass the government.

Police late Friday found the youth's car abandoned near the village of Cognieres, about 18 miles southeast of Paris, and said this supported the theory he had been kidnapped.

The mystery of the missing student was the latest incident in a French political situation made more alarming by government charges the Communist party had massed 3,000 professional shock troops, obviously trained for street fighting, in Thursday night's rioting in which eight persons were killed.

Paris was brought to a halt Friday for one hour by a general strike called by students and trade unions to protest the Place de la Bastille violence. Banks, offices and some stores closed. Subways and buses halted for an hour. But there was no violence.

Violence Continues

Violence in Algeria continued unabated. In Oran, fire and explosions wrecked the Palice of Justice in the heart of the city. In Algeria, police completed questioning 10,000 persons for suspected OAS activities against a background of murders and bombings.

The missing student is the son of Laurent Schwartz, a distinguished mathematician well known for his leftist views and for his demands that President Charles de Gaulle grant independence to Algeria over OAS opposition.

Schwartz said he received an anonymous telephone call Wednesday evening and that a "young sounding" voice asked to speak to Marc-Andre. He said that when told his son was out the caller asked to speak to Madame Marie-Helene Schwartz, the boy's mother.

He said the caller told her, "We are going to kidnap your son and that will be a double blow." Schwartz said he supposed the caller meant it would be a blow both to the father and to Premier Debre.

Schwartz said the family took the threat seriously and it was agreed the boy would only travel by car and would keep his parents informed of his movements. He left for the university Thursday after telling his family he would not attend the demonstration at the Place de la Bastille. Since then, Schwartz said, he has not been seen.

Shock Troops Operate

Maurice Legay, director of Paris municipal police, told newsmen: "These were not ordinary demonstrators but Communist shock troops, acting on commands and evidently trained for street fighting."

Legay made these other points:

The Communists obviously had been trained to pick up tear gas bombs quickly and fling them back at Police.

Organized squads of about 25 to 30 Communists were moved quickly to reinforce points where police had demonstrators on the run.

U. S. A-Tests Are Predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The First U. S. nuclear tests in the atmosphere in more than three years probably will take place over Nevada early next month if President Kennedy decides to resume such experiments, officials said Friday.

They would be small, low yield shots to be followed in a month or six weeks by a series of large tests from Christmas Island in the mid Pacific, the officials said.

Plan Would Cost Between $4-5 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara opened a drive in Congress Friday for the administration's program to build fallout shelters for 20 million people in schools, hospitals and other public buildings. It would cost between $400 and $500 million.

Warning that public shelters would not provide protection for everyone, he also appealed for private construction of family shelters in basements and yards and for locally-financed group shelters in factories, apartment buildings and similar construction.

Underwrite

Under the program, the government would underwrite about 62.5 per cent of the construction costs. The money would come from a $695 million appropriation previously sought by President Kennedy for the total civil defense program.

In a letter to Congress, McNamara said there seemed to be no practical way of avoiding loss of life during a nuclear attack. But he added that the government-backed shelters would save enough people to "create the base for recovery after attack."

Under the program, shelters would be built in schools, colleges, hospitals, clinics and welfare institutions. The subsidy aid would be limited to shelters which could protect at least 50 people.

Survey

The Defense Department already is surveying and marking spaces in present buildings which could be used immediately, or with minor preparation, to protect about 50 million people. Some of these are about ready to be stocked wtih supplies.

But McNamara said these would be of use mostly during daytime working hours. The new program is designed for protection at night as well.

Placement Service Will Benefit About 500

By CHUCK MOONEY

The University Placement Service will find jobs for about 550 Carolina graduates this year at average salaries of $400 per month for men and $300 for women.

"Last year we placed 564 students," said Placement Service Director Joe M. Galloway. "And we expect at least that many this year.

"We will provide job counseling to any students who seeks assistance and we will help undergraduates get summer pobs," he said.

The Placement Service, 204 Gardner, will do all this and more. How does a student get this service?

Student Must Register

At the beginning of his last year at UNC a student should register with the Service. This consits of filling out a personal data sheet—home, degree, age, marital status, interests, college activities, work experience military service reference and type of work desired.

Through special arrangements with the Service, the Duplicating Department reproduces 50 copies of the data sheet and the Photo Lab supplies 25 photographs to be put on them.

Confidential rating sheets are given to two or more professors by the student for information about the student's abilities, emotional stability, social qualities, faithfulness to duties, industry and character in general. A transcript of his grades is also put in the file.

"It's a good idea for a student to make certain some of his professors know him personally," Galloway said. "Then they can be effective as references."

Information to Employers

All this information is kept at the Service and given only to company representatives who are going to interview the student for a job.

Last year Director Galloway, by visits, letters and phone calls, invited companies throughout the country to recruit here.

Interviews Now In Progress

Those interviews are in progress now. Some of the companies that will recruit here this month are: National Aeronautics — Space Administration, Armstrong Cork Co., Chemstrand, E. I. duPont de Nemours, First National Bank of Atlanta, Mutual of New York, Colgate-Polmolive Co., Southern Bell Telephone, Western Electric, American Telephone & Telegraph, Texaco, and National Security Agency.

"These interviews are worthwhile," said Galloway. "One boy was recently hired by a major public accounting firm. He'll start at $500 a month."

"We advise students to leave a record with us whether they immediately use our service or not," he said. "They may need it several years from now if they want to change jobs.

"By then the people who knew the student may be gone. Recommendations may be hard to get. But a file in our office will always be here and will satisfy any prospective employer.

The personal data sheets that "Recently a UNC alumnus, who had been in California for five years, asked us to help him come back East. We found him a job for about $14,000 a year with a banking firm."

Jobs After Discharge

The Service also helps boys who go into military service. "If a student will leave a record with us, we'll help him find a job when he is discharged," Galloway said.

"Last month we placed a boy, who had been in the army, with a medical supply company. He started at $450 a month with an expense account and a company car.

"We assist women as well as men. We placed a young lady with an insurance company last summer at $300 a month."

Campus interviews aren't the only way that the Service finds jobs. They get letters from companies about specific positions and refer students to them.

Summer Jobs Also

The office also helps undergraduates get summer jobs. "Last year 54 companies recruited for summer jobs on campus and we received 115 letters about different types of summer jobs," Galloway said. "Unfortunately we had more students wanting summer jobs than we had companies wanting students."

The Service Career Library of information about companies is open to any student—registered or not. "Our library, job files and directories are always open," he said. "Many students get ideas from just looking at our material and can find jobs on their own."

A series of lectures to help students get jobs is sponsored by the Service. Some recent ones were on writing effective business letters, interviewing techniques and summer employment.

Unanswered

Last year, Chapel Hill author John Ehle wrote an article for the Raleigh News and Observer in which he was highly critical of the University.

In the article, Mr. Ehle found fault with several aspects of Carolina as an educational institution. Among his criticisms, he aimed a particularly sharp arrow at the absence of what, for lack of better terminology, is called the "creative atmosphere" in Chapel Hill.

With characteristic aplomb, the University peered over the top of its glasses, muttered "innaccurate," "incomplete" and "hasty" — and wrote off John Ehle as a carping malcontent.

Yet no one has satisfactorily met the criticism, nor, as far as we can observe, even taken stock of where the University is going in regard to encouraging creativity. While the rest of the University races to excel, emphasis on creativity is virtually ignored.

This is not to say that every student who enters Carolina should be either handed a palette, chained to a typewriter, or handcuffed to a piano. But we wonder if the emphasis is being placed properly; if all channels have been opened.

Carolina, for instance, does not grant a Fine Arts degree. Why not? Surely there are interested students —students who are often bogged down with "requirements" until they are forced onto the fringes of the academic community, instead of being properly located in its center.

Is the University squeezing creativity out of the picture- Probably not. But it is not unfair to ask exactly how it is being encouraged.

That is what John Ehle asked.

He apparently must wait a long time for an answer.

Junius Scales

The New York Times has joined the voices calling for the commutation of Julnius Scales' prison sentence.

Scales is the former chieftain of the Communist Party in North Carlina and long a familiar figure in the Chapel Hill area. He was sentenced to six years' imprisonment under the Smith Act after he expressed his disillusionment with the Communists and quit the party.

Editors of The Times listed President Robert F. Goheen of Princeton, Socialist leader Norman Thomas and theologian Reinhold Niebuhr among those asking the President to intervene in the Scales case.

Also taking an active role in the commutation effort is McNeill Smith of Greensboro, Scales' lawyer at the time of his trial in February, 1958. Scales' conviction under the membership clause of the Smith Act was affirmed by the Supreme Court last June by a 5-4 decision.

* * *

The principal argument for commutation or parole is that Scales was never charged with personally advocating violent overthrow of the government, but with being an active member of an organization advocating such action and having knowledge of its purpose.

In the same issue containing the editorial on Scales is a letter from Theodore Draper, author of "The Roots of American Communism." He effectively sums up the case for commutation.

In commenting on his letter The Times notes:

"Scales, a defector from communism, is in prison while persons still actively engaged in party leadership are being freed by the courts or being exempted from trial . . . The explanation lies in the government's inability to muster the kind of evidence necessary for conviction under the quixotic standards the Supreme Court established in differentiating the Scales case from that of John F. Noto, a Communist organizer, whom the court ordered freed."

Scales and Noto were the government's test cases of the party membership clause. When Scales was first tried and convicted in 1955, he was still a member. He said his reason for quitting the party in 1957 was revulsion against the revelations of Khrushchev at the Twentieth Party Congress and the brutal Russian suppression of the Hungarian revolution.

His lawyer maintains that Scales was an intellectual convert to communism, not a Bolshevik bomber, and that his resignation from the party did not constitute any attempt to make a deal with the government to end prosecution.

The factors favoring review of his sentence, then, are these:

—He renounced his allegiance to the Communist Party.

—There is no evidence he personally advocated violent overthrow of the government.

—His prison sentence was even heavier than those given under the "leadership clause" of the Smith Act.

Native North Carolinian Gerald W. Johnson, writing in The New Republic, had these comments on the Scales case:

"What happened was that Junius Scales, a sixth-generation native, white Protestant, of Anglo-Saxon ancestry — therefore a man with no organized friends at all—shortly after he came of voting age swallowed the Communist rumble-bumble and held it down until 1956, when Khrushchev's famous speech formally admitted that Stalin had been what sensible people had all along believed he was. This was too much for Scales and he renounced the doctrine, thereby incurring the venomous hatred of the Communist Party.

"But at first he had been its fair-haired darling. For generations his family had been wealthy and socially prominent—a great-uncle had been governor of the state and there was some connection with a Revolutionary patriot who became an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Such a convert was a prize indeed for the Communists, and they promptly made him state chairman . . ."

Johnson concludes that Scales is serving six years behind bars for "thinking the wrong thoughts," and does not believe that should be a crime punishable by imprisonment.

We have no way of knowing whether Junius Scales was sincere in his recantation. We do know that the current wave of anti-commuism in the United States makes it an exteremely inopportune time for Presidential action in his behalf.

Without benefit of the trial transcript and without knowledge of the government's complete case against Scales, we would not join The Times in expressing the opinion that "the President would enhance respect for American justice" by commuting his sentence.

We do, however, agree that this unusual case is worthy of his review.

Detmar Schnitkner:

German Student Life

Editor's Note: Detmar Schnitker is currently studying at UNC under the Goettingen Exchange program.

What are the differences in the life of an American and a German student? It starts with the housing. As we have only a few dormitories at our universities, the German student has to find a room somewhere in the city. Because of the housing shortage, it is sometimes a difficult obstacle to surmount. But, once settled and enrolled, he has comparatively much freedom to take the courses of his choice and to make up his study plan. Only in some laboratory courses or seminars he has to pass quizzes or to hand in papers.

That means he stands under much less guidance and control than an American student. An equivalent to the A. B. is a comprehensive oral exam which the German student has to pass after his fifth or sixth semester. This exam does not include a degree; it is only a preliminary condition for admission to candidacy for the diploma—the equivalent to the master's degree. The final requirements for the diploma include the completion of a written thesis and a passing of a second comprehensive oral exam.

If the student should happen to fail either the preliminary or the final oral exam, he is permitted to attempt it again only once, and this no later than a year after the original exam. So much for studies.

But how does the social life compare with that of an American university? Except for some lectures of common interest, the university does not do anything for the entertainment of its students—no free flicks, no concert series, no football or basketball games. University means the faculty, the institutes, the school buildings, and nothing else. There are many different social fraternities, but no sororities, which offer their hospitality. As everywhere the opinion about fraternities differs widely. Those who are not a member call them conservative or even reactionary and fight sharply against them. But the fact that about forty per cent of all male students are in fraternities attests to their popularity.

We too have a student government which is elected each year. At Gottingen we elect one representative for every two hundred students. These representatives in turn elect four officers. The student representatives of all German universities succeeded in 1956 to have the government in Bonn pay for all needy and outstanding students. Thus, about twenty per cent of all German students have their entire studies paid for by the government.

One thing in common to both the American and the German university—that is, that the number of students is increasing rapidly so that the universities often fail to keep pace in creating new facilities for the students.

HOUSE AND COATES:

Two Men In The Grand Procession

By BILL SNIDER
Greensboro Daily News

Everybody is forever talking about the "end of an era." At Chapel Hill they did it when Kemp Plummer Battle, Edward Kidder Graham and Frank Porter Graham left the presidency, and somebody will invariably do it again now that Robert Burton House and Albert Coates are laying down some of their duties for the more leisurely pace of retirement.

It is not out of place to discuss Bob House and Albert Coates in the same breath.

Albert Coates once described Bob House as "plain as an old shoe; honest as an old field pine; tough as a top sergeant; blunt as the crack of doom; impulsive to a hurt; generous to a fault; quick to fly off the handle and dangerous as an ax flying off an axehelve when he does; quick to confess he was not himself when he did—though it is hard to imagine who he was, because God knows he could not be anybody else . . ."

And this can be said of the father of the Institute of Government as well as the son of "Miss Sue and the sheriff" who came up to Chapel Hill to teach in the humanities, move up to chancellor and serve the university through good times and bad for over 30 years.

When Bob House, then a young graduate, enlisted in World War I, he wrote a letter to President Edward K. Graham in which he said: "I am about to leave for France, aware of what going there means and glad to go. Before I go I want to send my love to you and Carolina, because you two both send me and at the same time make me hate to go. You send me because you have taught me ideals that won't let me stay here. You make me hate to go because I cherish you with the same love I bear my parents . . ."

First of all, then, it was the love of North Carolina and the love of the university that motivated Bob House and Albert Coates. The Institute of Government is Albert and Gladys Coates' child and their adoptive grandchildren are the Institute graduates—from governors to township constables—who have been touched by its magic.

Albert Coates, in that enduring dialogue he carries on with all who will listen, once said of his "child," sired and reared during the depth of the Great Depression:

"In the end I came to understand the predicament of the Confederate soldier who explained that he was eating green persimmons to draw up his stomach to fit his rations. My time had come to eat some green persimmons. When salaries were cut during the depression, my wife and I moved out of a house and lived for three years in a rented room. We sold the lot we had bought as a site for the home we had hoped to build. As Institute revenues ran lower I pieced them out with my salary . . . For a long time I wondered whether we were priming the pump or filling the well."

And Bob House reflected that same basic faith when he said: "Every North Carolinian worth his salt was born in a panic, brought up in a depression, and buried on a debit balance."

For the newer generations, the courage and faith of these men are an unexperienced wonder. They came upon a North Carolina still touched by "Old Rip" and, if not poverty-stricken, at least forced to make much of a little. The Institute of Government began as an illegitimate, shoe-string operation. It was no institution. It was a dream in the minds of Gladys and Albert Coates. They brought it alive. There is no finer illustration in Modern North Carolina of the truth of the old saw that every institution is the lengthening shadow of an individual.

So now these gallant Tar Heels, mellowed by harmonica music and the satisfaction of watching gray-flannel successors carry traditions onward, will take it easier. They cannot really retire. Bob House left the chancellorship five years ago, but he has been illuminating the classroom lecture halls ever since "relating literature to life, history to current events, philosophy to facts, figures to folks . . . "

And Albert Coates will only pretend to retire as director of the Institute. He will go right on teaching in the University Law School, as he has been teaching all along. His great desk full of chicken-scratching notes and odds and ends, ideas and inspirations cannot lose its vitality as long as Albert is around to keep it in disorder.

The inspiration of such men can never be measured. It can only continue to light up the halls and paths of the university. Two poor boys from the Coastal Plains came up to gain nourishment from the light on the Hill. There they stood on the shoulders of their predecessors in faith, courage and love.

Now they bequeath that heritage, enriched by their own contributions, to others—to the Fridays and the Aycocks and all the rest in the continuing grand procession.

"The doors which opened to him on this campus in 1912," wrote Albert Coates of Bob House, "were not ordinary doors opening on barren walls enclosing a deadend retreat; they were 'magic casements opening on the foam of perilous seas in fairy lands forlorn'; from those magic seas he has looked to this institution as his Ala Mater, loved her, followed her, lived in her great and magnificent light, learned her great language and caught her clear accent, and made her his pattern to live and to die."

And so would Bob House write of Albert Coates. And so must the University and the State write of them both.

Liberal Dictionary

The most cherishable aspect of the liberal philosophy (?) is the comic relief which it furnishes so readily and so consistently. There is nothing more ridiculous than a clown who fancies himself an acrobat, as the liberals prove by their choice of vocabulary. A few examples follow:

BIGOT—any person not a liberal.

FREE PROGRESSIVE PRESS—the newspapers that don't like Barry Goldwater.

LIBERAL—a person who tolerates other people's views. (P.S. Especially if he agrees with them.)

REACTIONARY—anyone who likes anything that Goldwater likes. Yes, that includes the B-70 Valkyrie bomber.

Before making this primer, I asked a liberal of my acquaintance what he most disliked about Goldwater.

"Hell, I don't like him because he's a damn Jew," my friend answered.

He may have been kidding, and probably was. But he wasn't smiling.

Another Letter On Mental Health

To the Editor:

I had recently an opportunity to read your Sunday Edition, January 14th, in which a Mr. Charles B. Alan wrote three paragraphs for the editorial page, "Fraud or Fradulent? Is Mental Illness."

I am sure that if Mr. Alan had taken the time to study the many reports that emanate from mental institutions, private investigators, parents and families of the mentally ill, he would have allowed intelligence rather than emotion to dictate his words.

The medical society and psychological association agree that mental illness is a fact, not fiction, and deserves the same attention and understanding that we give to cancer, heart disease, crippling conditions, or any physiological malfunctions.

I invite Mr. Alan to visit some of our mental hospitals to see first hand those he says are fradulently accepting money from the state.. I sincerely hope that the problems of life never become such for Mr. Charles B. Alan that he be pushed over the brink into mental illness, a she, like all of us, is not immune to the problems of life and indeed, we all have our breaking point.

Allies Defying Red Air Route Rules

BERLIN (UPI) — The United States Friday barred the Soviet military commandant from the American Sector of West Berlin and disclosed the Western Allies were defying Soviet attempts to restrict air traffic to and from the city.

The Allies not only flew more missions through the air corridors than normal, but the U. S. Air Force flew West German President Heinrich Luebeke out of Berlin to West Germany in defiance of East German protests such flights were illegal.

In another show of American determination to maintain its rights of access to West Berlin the army sent a military road convoy through 110 miles of East German territory from Berlin to West Germany for training. There were no incidents.

Col. Andrei V. Solovyev, the Soviet commandant in Berlin, tried to pass through the American Sector Friday for a meeting in the British Sector with British commandant Maj. Gen. Sir Rohan Delacombe but turned back when an American military policeman attempted to question him.

"Are you Colonel Solovyev?" the MP asked.

Solovyev Turns Back

Solovyev did not reply. He ordered his driver to turn around and drive back to East Berlin. He had been advised by the British commandant's office to enter Berlin through a crossing point to the British Sector but refused.

Solovyev has been refused entry to the American Sector through the Friedrichstrasse crossing point since late December following an incident in which the U. S. commandant, Maj. Gen. Albert Watson II, turned back when East German police demanded the identity papers of his civilian companions.

Sentencing In Basketball Fixes Postponed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The sentencing of four men who have pleaded guilty in the college basketball bribery scandal was postponed in general sessions court again Friday until March 14 by Judge Joseph A. Sarafite.

The four, were Aaron Wagman of New York, who has pleaded guilty to 37 counts of bribery and one of conspiracy, former University of Alabama players Jerry Vogel and Daniel Quindazzi, and former University of North Carolina player Louis Brown.

March 14 also has been set for the date of sentencing of Joseph Hacken of New York, who pleaded guilty earlier this week to bribing a Seton Hall player and offering a bribe to an NYU player.

NSA Sponsors Youth Exchange With USSR

The Young Adult Council of the National Student Association will co-sponsor an exchange to the Soviet Union late this year for about six American youths. All nominations for the exchange must be made before February 19.

The exchange, which will also be sponsored by the Committee of Youth Organizations of the U.S. S.R., is aimed at better understanding between the two countries.

Persons eligible for the program must be in their early thirties or younger. It will be necessary that the applicants have a knowledge of the Russian language and of current U. S. and foreign affairs.

The delegates will be selected so that all regions of the country will be represented. They will be asked to have experience with youth groups, particularly the Y.A.C.

Mine Deaths Up To 299

SAARBRUECKEN, Germany, (UPI) — Rescue teams have found 15 more bodies in the explosion-torn Luisenthal Coal Mine and one injured miner has died, bringing the death toll to 299, Saarland officials reported Friday.

Rubble slowed the work of raising the bodies to the surface for official counting but authorities said 24 bodies were found Thursday night and another 15 Friday.

Approximately 100 miners escaped unharmed and 80 others were injured in the Wednesday blast.

Della Reese At N.C. College

A benefit concert for the scholarship fund of the North Carolina College Alumni Association will feature Della Reese in the college's R. L. McDougald Gymnasium on February 22.

According to George Nixon, General Alumni president, NCC alumni chapters contributed over $3,000 to the scholarship program during the fiftieth anniversary celebration. "This does not represent the numerous individual donations, and we hope to increase this amount this year," Nixon said.

This marks the first concert appearance here of the famous gospel and blues singer, who was on the Ed Sullivan TV show January 28. She will present a one-woman show entitled "From the Gospel to the Blues—Portrait of Della Reese."

On the stage of the 5,000 seat McDougald gymnasium, Miss Reese will be backed by a full orchestra, conducted by Duke Ellington's son, Mercer Ellington. In addition, the famous Meditation singers, which Miss Reese founded will perform with her in concert.

A native of Detroit, Michigan, Miss Reese gained nationwide acclaim on the hit tune "Don't You Know," recorded in 1959. Her other hits include "Someday," "Won't You Come Home Bill Bailey," and "In the Still of the Night."

THE TRUE AND TRAGICAL TALE OF HAPPY JACK SIGAFOOS

Who would have thought that Happy Jack Sigafoos, the boy the sky never rained on, would teeter on the edge of a life of crime?

Certainly there was no sign of it in his boyhood. His home life was tranquil and uplifting. His mother was a nice fat lady who hummed a lot and gave baskets to the poor. His father was a respected citizen who could imitate more than 400 bird calls and once saved an elderly widow from drowning in his good suit. (That is, Mr. Sigafoos was in his good suit; the elderly widow was in swimming trunks.) Happy Jack's life was nothing short of idyllic—till he went off to college.

Here Happy Jack quickly became a typical freshman—tweedy, seedy, and needy. He learned the joys of rounding out his personality, and he learned the cost. His allowance vanished like dew before the morning sun. There were times, it grieves me to report, when he didn't even have enough money for a pack of Marlboro Cigarettes—and you know how miserable that can be! To be deprived of Marlboro's matchless flavor, its easy-drawing filter, its subtly blended tastiness, its refreshing mildness, its ineffable excellence, its soft pack or flip-top box—why, it is a prospect to break the heart in twain!

Marlboro-less and miserable, Happy Jack tried to get more money from home. He wrote long, impassioned letters, pointing out that the modern, large-capacity girl simply could not be courted on his meager allowance. But all Jack got back from home were tiresome homilies about thrift and prudence.

Then one dark day a sinister sophomore came up to Jack and said, "For one dollar I will sell you a list of fiendishly clever lies to tell your father when you need some extra money."

He gave Jack the list of fiendishly clever lies. Jack read:

1. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to buy a new house for the Dean of Men.

2. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to buy a headstone for Rover, our late beloved dormitory watchdog.

3. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to endow a chair of Etruscan Art.

4. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to build our own particle accelerator.

For a moment poor Jack was tempted; surely his father could not but support all these laudable causes. Then Jack's good upbringing came to the fore. He turned to the sinister sophomore and said, "No, thank you. I could not deceive my aged parent so. And as for you, sir, I can only say—fie!"

Upon hearing this the sinister sophomore broke into a huge grin. He whipped off his black hat and pasty face—and who do you think it was? None other than Mr. Sigafoos, Happy Jack's father, that's who!

"Good lad!" cried Mr. Sigafoos. "You have passed your test brilliantly." With that he gave Happy Jack a half million dollars in small bills and a red convertible containing power steering and four nubile maidens.

Crime does not pay!

Money and girls haven't changed Happy Jack. Except for the minor bulge in his cashmere jacket caused by (1) a pack of Marlboros and (2) a box of Marlboros, he's the same old Sigafoos.

Tar Heels Clash With McKinney's Deacons

UNC-Wake Rivalry Started In 1910

By ED DUPREE

One of the longest and bitterest rivalries in the south will be renewed this afternoon in Woollen Gym when Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels play host to the Demon Deacons from Wake Forest at 2.

The Tar Heels and Deacons have met one hundred times since 1910 and Carolina has emerged victorious in 72 of those battles.

More recently the Tar Heels have taken the measure of the Baptists on 11 of 14 occasions. One of these three losses was an 91-72 defeat at Winston-Salem last month. The fast-moving Tar Heels will be seeking revenge for that earlier loss and fighting to tie the Deacs for third place in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Another chip on the shoulders of Carolina's basketballers is the last loss suffered by a UNC team in Woollen Gym. On that night a big sophomore named Len Chappell and a pint-sized guard labeled Billy Packer teamed up with Wake Forest veterans, Dave Budd, George Ritchie, and other Deacs who have since left the scene, to paste an 80-69 loss on Frank McGuire's boys.

But the game that stands out as one of the hardest played, and which caused the Deacons to lose their home game with Carolina for the next season took place on Feb. 12, 1959. Carolina's team that season had run up nine straight ACC victories and the Deacs wanted an upset. But the stronger Tar Heels won the game, 75-66, and had to survive a wholesale riot at the game's finish to polish off their scrappy competitors.

The scrappiest of these was Wake's Dave Budd, a husky 6-6 forward who squared off with Carolina's All-American to be, Lee Shaffer, in the final 30 seconds. The fight quickly spread to the rest of the players and then the fans got into the act. After the police had broken the melee up, both coaches removed their starting line-ups and put in the subs. An ACC ruling moved the Wake home game to Greensboro for the 1960 season.

So, the Tar Heels and Baptists collide again today—on regional television. Third place in the ACC is at stake and both teams still have an excellent shot at first place for the regular season.

A bitter pill for Wake Forest to swallow is their current 9-8 record overall—their ACC mark is 6-2. Bones McKinney's Chappell-led crew ranked as high as third in the nation early in the season, but top-ranked Ohio State cut the Deacons down to size. They haven't been the same since.

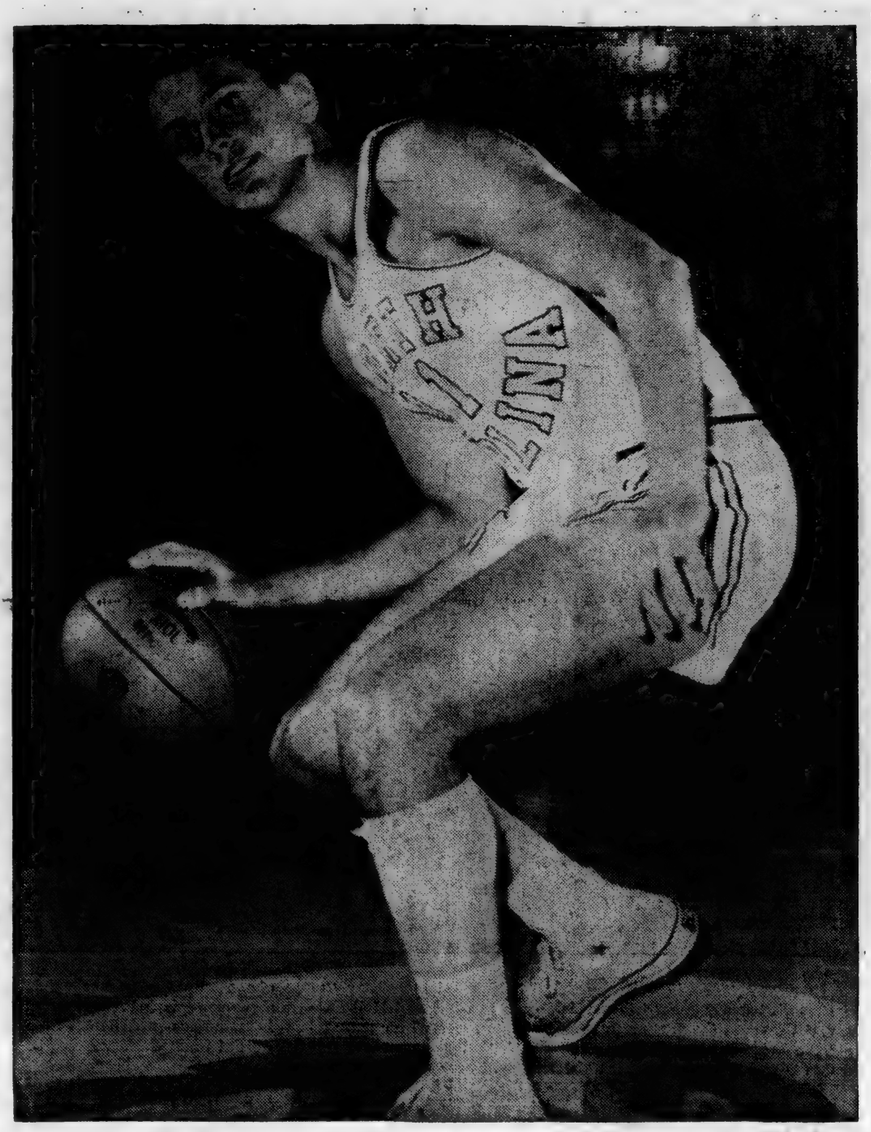
Dean Smith's shorter and faster Tar Heels have a 6-4 mark—5-3 in the conference. Thus a victory would tie them for third with the visitors.

Jim Hudock will start at center for Carolina and "the best guard combination in the ACC" in the eyes of Smith, Donnie Walsh and Larry Brown, will start in the backcourt. The other two UNC starters should come from Jim Donohue, Bryan McSweeney, Mike Cooke, and Charlie Shaffer.

Len Chappell has been scoring 30 points at will in the last four Wake Forest games and he is the most dangerous Deac. Billy Packer and Dave Wiedeman are the probable starters at guard. McKinney can choose his other starters from a lengthy list which includes 6-11 Bob Woollard, Frank Christy, Dick Carmichael, Bill Hull, and Tommy McCoy.

Chappell leads the ACC in scoring with a 28.8 average and is fourth in the nation. Packer's 12.6 mark is second best on the Wake Forest club.

Hudock paces the Carolina scorers with a 16.2 average. Brown and Walsh have racked up their share of points with 15.5 and 13.9 averages, respectively. Walsh has a sizzling .567 field goal mark for the season.



LARRY BROWN—Carolina's 5-11 guard from Long Beach, N. Y. Larry is the number two scorer on the Tar Heel team with a 15.5 average. He's also the deadliest UNC foul shooter with a .792 percentage. Brown teams up with Donnie Walsh, another New Yorker, to give Coach Dean Smith one of the shadpest guard combinations in the ACC.

DUKE-UNC TICKETS

Basketball tickets for the Carolina-Duke game on Feb. 24 will be distributed next week. Students whose names begin with the letters N-Z have priority on tickets from Monday Feb. 12 through Wednesday Feb. 14. After Wednesday tickets will be available on a first come, first served basis.

Tar Baby Basketballers Meet Wake Freshman Today At Noon

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The Carolina freshman try to return to their winning ways this afternoon when they face the Wake Forest frosh in a preliminary to the Carolina-Wake varsity clash. The freshman game will start at 12 noon.

Coach Ken Rosemond's crew, who won 10 straight games without a loss prior to semester break, have severely felt the loss, due to the termination of freshman eligibility, of top scorer and rebounder Billy Cunningham. The Tar Babies minus their 6-5 ace from Brooklyn, have dropped their last two contests—both by considerable margins.

On Feb. 3, the UNC frosh bowed to Duke 81-60 and just Thursday night, they were soundly trounced by Davidson 79-65. With Cunningham, the Tar Babies had defeated these teams—the former by 12 points, the latter by 4.

Rosemond has had to go with 5 men, none of whom are over 6-4, and this height problem has been one of the main difficulties plaguing the freshman coach in the two defeats.

This afternoon, the Tar Babies will start 6-4 Ray Respess at center. The Pantego jumpshooter, currently averaging 14.4 points a game, has netted 30 points in the two post-break losses, and has been a standout under the boards.

Respess has received rebounding help from forwards Bill Brown (converted from guard in the absence of Cunningham) and Pud Hassel. Brown, the 6-3 Durham native, is scoring at a 12.3 clip while Hassel, whose personal consecutive victory streak was halted at 86 with the Duke loss, has a 7.9 averarge.

At the guard positions, Rosemond will start 6-2 Jay Neary and 5-11 Bill Taylor. Taylor hit a season high of 10 in the defeat at Duke and now owns a 5.5 per game mark. Neary, the Cambria Heights, N. Y. flash with the blistering moves, sports the highest average on the team. The speedy guard has meshed 17.6 points a game and like Respess, has scored 30 in the last two contests. He, Respess and Brown are all over the 50% mark in field goal percentage.

The Wake freshmen, who were bombed by Carolina 79-58 earlier in the season, feature a Winston-Salem product as their main attraction. He is 6-5 center Richard Herring. Herring scored 31 points against Carolina, while holding Cunningham to only 10.

The Deaclets, coached by former Wake Forest star Jackie Murdock, will support Herring with forwards Al Lozier, 6-5 and Danny Loftin, 6-2. The guards will probably be 6-0 John Anderson and 6-1 Billy Smith. 6-5 Stuart Highsmith and 6-4 Jay Martin should also see a lot of action.

Billy Loes Baffles New York Mets

By NORMAN MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Loes, baseball's modern-day eccentric, advised the New York Mets Friday he planned to quit baseball and he hinted a personal clash with someone motivated his decision.

In characteristic Loes fashion, his decision baffled the Mets and those who have followed his zany major league career for the past 12 years.

"No reason, it was just like that," Loes replied when asked for a reason for his announcement.

Then, when a newsman pressed him, he said: "It was a combination of a lot of things. I don't want to go into because I don't want to knock anyone."

But he would not elaborate beyond that and it would not surprise many baseball people if the 32-year-old righthander popped up in a major league uniform again early during the coming season.

Purchased Last Fall

Loes said he had no immediate job offers and had no idea of what he might do out of baseball.

Loes was purchased conditionally by the Mets last fall from the San Francisco Giants for an estimated $25,000. If and when he advises the Mets in writing of his wish to retire, he will revert to the Giants' inactive list and the Mets will be refunded their purchase price.

For the past three seasons, Loes has complained about a sore arm. And it was believed that his discouragement about his arm condition may have been a contributing factor to his retirement decision.

Since he received his contract from the new National League club about a month ago, Loes had a discussion with Johnny Murphy, the Mets' chief scout who is charged with signing the players.

"Most of the discussion was about Loes' arm," a Mets official said. "He kept telling Murphy how much it hurt. It sounded strange for a pitcher who had not yet signed his contract."

Figured In Stengel's Plans

Loes figured to earn approximately $20,000 if he could stay with the Mets throughout the entire season.

Manager Casey Stengel, in sizing up the Mets' pitching prospects two weeks ago, included Loes in his plans. When a newsman made a point of Loes' eccentricities, Stengle replied: "Yeah, well I know a lot of smart guys who can't get the ball over the plate."

Following newspaper stories that quoted Loes as saying he intended to quit, Murphy telephoned the pitcher Friday at his Long Island home.

"I have made up my mind that I am not going to play baseball this season," Loes told Murphy.

Ingemar K O'd Bygraves In 7th

By LARS PORNE

GOTEBORG, Sweden (UPI) — Former heavyweight champion Ingemar Johannson made a successful start on the comeback trail Friday night by scoring a technical knockout over West Indian Joe Bygraves in the seventh round before a selout 6,200 in the Maesshallen Sports Hall.

The scheduled 10-round bout was stopped at two minutes and eight seconds of the seventh.

Johansson, fighting for the first time since he was stopped in the 10th round last March 13 by champion Floyd Patterson, weighed 199 pounds. Bygraves scaled 208½.

Referee Andrew Smyth of Belfast halted the bout when Bygraves was hanging on the ropes practically helpless and bleeding freely from a cut on his left brow.

Johannson was in command throughout but his showing disappointed the spectators, although he won more impressively Friday night than in their first fight, Feb. 24, 1956, when Ingemar had to be content with a 10-round decision.

Johansson, 29, had gone into the ring favored at 5-1 over his 30-year-old opponent, former champion of the British Empire.

Davidson Frosh Defeat UNC

By ED DUPREE

Charlie Marcon's six straight points broke up a close ball game and led Davidson's frosh basketballers to a 79-65 win over Carolina's Tar Babies Thursday night at Woollen Gym.

The score was 49-49 when Marcon hit his hot streak—after that Coach Ken Rosemond's squad never closed the gap again. Baskets by Dave Thomas and Phil Squier pushed the lead to ten points by the 6:47 mark. In five minutes, the Wildkittens came from a 49-46 deficit and tallied 13 consecutive points to break the game open.

Marcon scored 13 points in the last half—11 in the last 11 minutes. The Davidson forward finished with 18 points and was topped only by 6-8 Fred Hetzel who poured in 24 points—12 in each half.

Hetzel dominated both backboards and paced the Kittens to a 49-27 advantage in rebounding—but the defensive play of UNC's Pud Hassell kept the big center confused for most of the first half. Despite Hassell's defensive work Hetzel popped in four field goals in the first half. In the final 20 minutes, the big boy showed the form which made him a high school All-American. He poured in three quick field goals to start the second half and then teamed up with Marcon and Squier to turn the game into a rout in the final ten minutes. Hetzel finished with ten field goals and four foul shots for his total.

The visitors started fast and built up a 14-7 lead after eight minutes. They held leads of 21-14 and 27-20 during the half, but the Tar Heel yearlings started chopping away at the lead until they had gained a 30-29 advantage. Hetzel scored five straight points to give Davidson a 34-30 lead at the midway mark.

The second half was a free scoring battle for the first five minutes. Hassell hit a jump shot and Bill Brown scored on a layup to even the score at 34-34. Don Davidson regained the lead for the Cats, but Respess countered with a tap-in to tie it again. While Hetzel was scoring his six straight points, Brown, Jay Neary, and Ray Respess scored two each for Carolina and the score was again knotted at 42-42.

Three points by Respess gave the Tar Babies a 45-42 lead at the 15 minute mark, but Tom White narrowed the lead to one for Davidson. A lay-up by Brown gave the homestanders a three-point advantage again, but Hetzel countered again for the Southern Conference frosh.

At the 13:30 mark, Bill Taylor, Neary, and Hassell pulled a one-minute freeze to bring Davidson out of its tight zone—then Hassell connected again to give the Tar Babies a 49-46 lead. Then Marcon took over and UNC trailed for the remainder of the contest.

The Wildcat frosh connected on 32 of 65 shots from the floor for a 49.2 percentage, while the Tar Babies hit on 26 of 60 for 43.3 per cent. Davidson's 15-25 on the foul line for 60 per cent also topped the UNC mark. Carolina hit on only 13 of their 26 charity tosses for a feeble 50 per cent.

US Gets Powers For Abel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States exchanged U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Russian master spy Rudolph Abel on a lonely Berlin bridge Saturday and secretly flew him home to freedom and a happy reunion with his family.

The 35-year-old flier will be kept from newsmen and the public until he has been thoroughly questioned by U. S. authorities about his ill-fated flight over Russia on May 1, 1960.

The Russians claimed that Powers, imprisoned for aerial espionage in August, 1960, was released "to improve relations between the Soviet Union and the United States. But State Department officials cautioned that it had no major cold war significance.

In a series of fiction-like developments that began unfolding before dawn, Moscow freed both Powers and Frederic L. Pryor, a young American student who had been held by East German authorities since August 1961.

In return, the Soviets got back Abel who was convicted in 1957 and sentenced to 30 years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for conspiring to send U. S. defense and nuclear secrets to Russia.

Spectacular

Powers, whose spying mission over the Soviet Union sparked one of the most spectacular diplomatic incidents of the cold war—a bitter exchange between former President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev—flew back to the United States almost as soon as he was placed in the hands of American authorities.

But the time of his arrival and his future whereabouts were shrouded in secrecy as tight as that which first surrounded his espionage flight over Russia.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, who announced the exchange at 3:17 a.m. EST, would say only that he was en route home and would arrive some time Saturday or Sunday.

No Announcement

He said flatly that there would be no announcement of the time or place of arrival.

It was known, however, that U. S. officials planned to give Powers time for a family reunion and then conduct an exhaustive interview before letting him go home. He is not expected to be available for questioning by the press before 10 days or two weeks.

Powers, Moscow reports said, was released last Thursday from Vladimir prison, 110 miles east of the Russian capital. He had served less than two years of the 10-year espionage term handed down by a Soviet court on Aug. 19, 1960.

Late Carolina Rally Falls Short

By ED DUPREE
DTH Sports Editor

Once again it was huge Len Chappell who paced the Demon Deacon attack and almost singlehandedly overpowered the smaller Carolina team. The 6-8, 240-pound tower connected on 16 of 24 shots from the floor and added four of five from the foul line for 36 points to lead the scoring for both teams.

The visiting Deacons captured a 47-37 halftime advantage and stretched the lead to 53-39 in the opening minutes of the second period. But the home team was not to be denied. They chopped away at the Wake Forest lead and with 8:50 remaining were behind only 68-63.

Two minutes later the Blue and White trailed Coach Bones McKinney's crew, 71-69. Deacon guard Billy Packer then hit on a jump shot to make it a four-point lead. From then on it was all Chappel. He lowered the boom on UNC by scoring seven markers in two minutes and 18 seconds. When Chappel hit a lay-up for his 36th point, the Baptists held an 80-73 lead.

Wild Finish

The final two and a half minutes were even wilder than the first 37 and a half. Though down seven points, the Heels refused to quit. Donnie Walsh connected on a jump shot to close the gap to five, but Butch Hassell—cousin of UNC frosh starter, Pud—countered with a jump to push the lead back to seven.

Mike Cooke then hit a lay-up and added a foul shot for a three-point play to close the gap to four. Again Hassell scored a pair, this time from the foul line, and Wake led 84-78. UNC's Mike Cooke was thrown out of the game for fouling Hassell deliberately. Only 46 seconds remained when Hassell sunk his free tosses.

Carolina's final points came on a pair of charity heaves by Larry Brown, who tied Jim Hudock for UNC scoring honors with 21 points. A foul shot by Bill Hull and a two-pointer for Dave Wiedeman gave the Deacons their final seven-point win.

The Wake Forest guards, Packer and Wiedeman, followed Chappell in scoring with 14 points each. Wiedeman hit on six of eight shots from the floor and added two points from the foul line. Packer was true on six of eleven attempts the floor. He missed only one of up two points on the line.

Four Tar Heels hit for double figures. Don Walsh hit for 13 and big Jim Donohue added 11, ten of them coming in the last half. Donohue was near-perfect from the floor. He missed onl yone of six shots during the regionally televised contest. The top Tar Heel scorers, Brown and Hudock, had 8-15 and 7-13, respectively from the floor.

Heels Hot From Floor

The Tar Heels returned to their dead-eye shooting of the season's first eight games when they moved to the top of the nation in field goal accuracy. They pumped in 32 of 62 shots and showed a 51.6 shooting percentage. From the foul line they hit only 16 of 24 for a 66.7 mark.

But the Winston-Salem boys were even hotter. Sparked by Chappell's

'La Strada' Set As Sunday Cinema

"La Strada," tonight's Sunday Cinema presentation, will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in Carroll Hall.

"La Strada" won an Academy Award for Best Foreign Film of the Year; Grand Prize Winner, Venice International Film Festival; and New York Film Critics' "Year's Best Foreign Film."

Other awards came from the National Board of Review, Joseph Burstyn Award, Golden Gate Awards, and the Edinburgh Film Festival of 1957.

Quinn, Basehart

"La Strada" stars Anthony Quinn, Richard Basehart, and Giulietta Masina.

"Excellent—Highest Rating. An unforgettable experience," said the New York Post. "A picture to place among the deathless masterpieces, it is a performance of astonishing power . . ."

Reds Claim Plane Attacked In Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — Soviet diplomats here Saturday said an unidentified jet plane fired on a Russian transport flying supplies to the pro-Communist Laotian rebels Friday, wounding two Soviet airmen.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said no American jet aircraft are operating over this crisis-torn Southeast Asian kingdom. Several neighboring nations, including Communist China, have jets but the diplomats made no specific charges.

NSA DEFEATED

HAMILTON, N. Y.—The student senate of Colgate University defeated a motion to join the National Student Association by a 23-20 vote last week.

The motion had been pending since the middle of fall semester. An NSA official was invited to speak to the senate and discussion programs concerning the Association were held.

MURDER CHARGE

URBANA-CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — A University of Illinois coed has been charged with murder in the death of her new-born child.

Miss Hightower told police she thought the baby was dead because it did not cry. When she was unable to flush the infant down the toilet, she said she dropped it in an incinerator chute.

George Allen To Address 'Spotlight On Women' Meet

Tobacco Institute, Inc., will be a featured speaker at the seventh annual "Spotlight on Women" conference to be held here next weekend.

He is former director of the U.S. Information Agency and a former Asst. Secretary of State. He is also a Career Ambassador.

Allen will make the keynote address at 2 p.m., Saturday, in Carroll Hall. The title of his address is "Behind the Iron Curtain." He will be introduced by Alexander Heard, dean of the UNC graduate school.

A native of Durham, Allen worked his way through Trinity College (now Duke University) where he received a B.A. degree in 1924. While an undergraduate, he decided to enter the Foreign Service. To prepare for this, Allen became a school teacher and principal in Buncombe County near Asheville, and also served as a reporter for the Asheville Times and the Durham Herald-Sun.

Harvard Degree

Allen attended Harvard where he studied international law and won the coveted Charles Sumner Prize in International Relations. He received a master's degree from Harvard in 1929.

After taking the Foreign Service examination in 1930, and becoming a member of its staff, Allen began a career of 30 years of active service. He made the highest mark on the examination at that time.

Allen's first post abroad was that of vice-consul at Kingston, Jamaica. Following that, he served in Shanghai, China; Patras, Greece; and Cairo, Egypt. In 1938 he returned to Washington for assignment in the Department of State's Division of Near Eastern Affairs.

Ambassador to Iran

In 1946, at the age of 42, Allen was appointed Ambassador to Iran by President Truman. He became the United States' youngest ambassador abroad.

Conferences in which Allen has participated are the Foreign Ministers' Conference in Moscow in 1943; the Roosevelt-Churchill Conference in Cairo in 1943; and the United Nations Conference in San Francisco and the Potsdam Conference in 1945. He was chairman of the U.S. delegation to the UNESCO Conference at Beirut in 1948 and Paris in 1949.

Allen has served as United States Ahbassador to Yugoslavia in 1949, to India in 1953, and to Greece in 1956. On two occasions, he has served as Assistant Secretary of State.

Summer Plan Program Set By YM-YW

The YM-YWCA program committee next week will sponsor an "Invest Your Summer" information booth and a program of short talks by students having experience in summer work camps.

David Dansby, NoNo Menco, Mark Perry, Jim Wagner, Betsey Rich, Jim McCorkle, Jack Boswell, Judy Fisher, and Donna Snyder will tell about their experiences in camps and projects. Among these camps are American Friends Service Committee work camps and international seminars, Seminars Abroad, Encampment for Citizenship, Experiment in International Living, Operations Crossroads Africa, World Council of Churches work camps, the Scandinavian International Seminar Program, and other camps and seminars.

Students interested in using their summer vacations for such projects are invited to come to Carroll Hall at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

European Summer Work Available

There are approximately 1500 jobs still available for college students who wish to spend the summer working in Europe the American Student Information Service has announced.

All jobs pay the standard wage of the country in which they are located. Wages range from room and board only in Spain to $150 a month in the highest paid positions in Germany.

Free information about the jobs can be obtained from the American Student Information Service, 22 Avenue de la Liberte, Luxembourg.

National Symphony Plays Today

The 96-piece National Symphony Orchestra will present two performances in Memorial Hall today, at 2:30 and again at 8 p.m.

All seats at the afternoon performance will be reserved for students and the balcony will be reserved at the evening performance.

Admission is free with I.D. cards. Spouses and dates will be admitted for $1.

The orchestra will play the following program: Excerpts from Romeo and Juliet by Berlioz, Symphony No. One by Samuel Barber; Ravel's Raphnis and Chloe No. Two and Haydn's Symphony No. 104.

Graham Memorial is sponsoring the concert in conjunction with the Chapel Hill Concert Series.

Presbyterians Will Present Religious Play

A religious drama, "Cry Dawn in Dark Babylon," will be presented at the Presbyterian Student Center tonight by a Religious Drama Team that is now touring throughout the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

The team, which will present the drama at 7 p.m. as a part of the regular evening worship service, is made up of students at the Union Theological Seminary and the Presbyterian School of Christian Education of Richmond, Va.

"Cry Dawn in Dark Babylon" is a play about death, resurrection and the church. It is an examination of St. Paul's words, "Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead; for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all come alive."

The play details with a modern family in which the only child dies. After this tragedy the parents are forced to ask questions about the Resurrection and the meaning of faith. They then find the answers in the church and thus there is dawn in Babylon.

The drama relies chiefly on the audience's imagination to provide the stage setting. The team uses a minimum of scenery and props, and costumes are merely suggested.

Two UNC Staff Members Have Volumes Published

Jessie Rehder—like the squirrels, the Old Well and Davie Poplar—is firmly established at UNC. She isn't nearly so well-known as they nor has she been there nearly so long, but for at least a dozen or so students each year she is the pivot about which everything else at the University revolves. She teaches writing. They are students in writing.

JESSE REHDER

LEON ROOKE

On January 26, The Odyssey Press published her new book on writing, "The Young Writer at Work." The book is aimed as a text to be used in colleges and universities and is also an anthology of good short stories.

The book may not teach one how to write, but after reading it and working the numerous assignments one will at least know, by the success or failure of one's assignments, whether one can write. In that sense the book offers just what young writers need to develop their craftsmanship. For it is all there: the lessons in style, plot, character, locale, viewpoint: everything, in fact, that is commonly the stumbling ground for beginning fiction writers.

Story of Students

"The Young Writer at Work" is the story of students who want to write, of students as they are learning to write, of students who eventually do write.

Students take creative writing courses for all kinds of reasons and all kinds take creative writing courses and they are all in this book, the hoodlums, the teaset, the talented and the very talented. There are numerous UNC writers represented in "The Young Writer at Work."

Nothing helps and worries writers more than the reading of good writing. It helps them because it makes them want to write as well and it worries them because they become afraid they can't.

Famous Writers and Others

Complete stories included in the book are "The Alligator" (previously unpublished) and "The Proud and the Virtuous" by Doris Betts; "The Field of Blue Children" by Tennessee Williams; "The Use of Force" by William Carlos Williams; "Eveline" by James Joyce; "The Lost Beach" and "The First Supper" by Louise Hardeman.

"Miss Brill" by Katherine Mansfield; "The Day After Tomorrow" by Charles Nesbit; "The Saints in Caesar's Household" by Anne Tyler; and "The Tonsil Operation (at Age Six)" by Cherry Parker.

There are also long and short excerpts from the work of F. Scott Fitzgerald, Thomas Wolfe, Mark Twain, Carson McCullers, William Styron, Max Steele, Normal Mailer, Betty Smith, Hemingway, Faulkner and many others.

Excerpts from student and post-student writing is also abundantly displayed in the work of Ralph Dennis, Wally Kuralt, Hugh A. McEachern, Leon Capetanos, Leon Rooke, and others designated only by their initials.

NSA Sponsors School Study

The National Student Association has established a program whereby college students can spend a week at a Southern Negro College and observe campus life. Applications are due before Feb. 17.

The purpose of the program, according to national affairs vice-president Paul Potter, is that there there will be a "greater understanding of the contemporary South and the problem of Negro education."

The college which will be visited is Tougaloo Southern Christian College near Jackson, Miss. This school, founded in 1869 and with a present enrollment of 500, has been deeply involved in many current civil rights questions. In 1961, nine Tougaloo students were the first from Mississippi to be involved in a sit-in movement.

Sen. Thurmond

In taking strong stands against revealing names of the censors of military speeches, both President Kennedy and Secretary of Defense McNamara must have remembered the witch-hunts of the McCarthy period.

Secretary McNamara, who has had the full support of the President since the inquiry kicked off by charges of "muzzling" by Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina has said that he would not subject members of his department to "harrassment."

The Secretary doubtless had reference to the volume of mail which has been received by Willis Lawrence, one of the dozen or so Pentagon censors who blue-pencil military speeches. Lawrence said this week that he had been called "a traitor, Pro-Red and all sorts of things," since he was called up before the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee two weeks ago to answer questions concerning "muzzling."

Since McNamara was unable to fend off the inquiry on his own, the President was pushed into using his right to executive privilege. In this instance, the President acted clearly within his right. The Constitution is necessarily vague on the matter, and the courts have been generally unwilling to force the issue.

That both the President and Secretary McNamara acted wisely is generally conceded, except by Sen. Thurmond and others of the pot-banging set. The New York Times of Feb. 9 reported that it was evident that Sen. Thurmond was the only Senator on the subcommittee who objected to the decision.

Fortunately, President Kennedy made it clear that his decision to use the Executive privilege—the first time he has used it in his term of office—in no way established a clear precedent. The President stated in his letter to the Secretary the principle involved could not be "automatically applied to every request for information" and that every case "must be judged on its own merits."

It is well that the President made this distinction. The governmental power balance could well be hamstrung by indiscriminate use of the Executive privilege. The right of the Congress to know and judge executive actions is basic to that balance.

Yet the duty of the President to insure the smooth functioning of executive departments should not be upset, as it might have been in this case, primarily as a result of the South Carolina Senator's screeching.

It is unfortunate that Sen. Thurmond was unable to push the investigation far enough to force the use of the privilege. It is equally unfortunate that the Senator continues to rant about "muzzling." He is fighting a lonely and, hopefully, a losing battle.

How much more dust he will be able to kick up to cloud policy decisions remains to be seen. Late this week he declared that he would continue his plans to present a major speech on the Senate floor which he says will show that State Department policy reflects a "false conception of the world Communist conspiracy." He has called the President's use of Executive privilege—which he termed the "executive fifth amendment"—one of the "most dangerous acts that has ever been committed by a president of the United States."

The Senator's declaration, which he made despite Sen. John Stennis' outspoken defense of the President's use of the privilege, leads us to wonder at his motives. Either this, or we must question his wisdom, particularly in light of all that has gone before.

The bitterness of his attack and his rejection of all considerations except his own personal battle have resulted in some violent tactics. He has used his podium as a Senator unwisely and sometimes even viciously.

We hope he will extract his foot from his mouth long enough to close it. His shouting promises to do little real good and might serve to do genuine harm.

High Ceiling

A fortnight ago President Kennedy recommended an increase of ten billion dollars in the legal ceiling on the national debt. The Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives has now made a first move in this direction. But instead of an increase of ten billion, the committee has approved an increase of only two.

This action is really meaningless, for it is certain—from a glance at the proposed expenditures recommended by the President and a second glance at the anticipated revenues now in sight—that the national debt will increase by much more than two billion dollars before the end of the year. Why, then, this small increase? Apparently to uphold the prestige of Congress, which alone has power under the Constitution "to borrow money on the credit of the United States."

What really determines the size of the national debt is not the legal ceiling which Congress puts on it—witness the fact that this ceiling has had to be lifted fourteen times since 1938—but the amount of money spent by Congress in relation to the amount brought in by taxes. The trouble with these fictitious "ceilings" is that they sometimes handicap the Treasury in its effort to borrow money on the most advantageous terms. The present ceiling ($298 billion) has had precisely this effect four times in the last thirty days.

"However, We've Been Known To Make Deals"

King Should Broaden Himself

To the editor:

As an enthusiastic participant in the recent Toronto Exchange, I feel compelled to respond to Thursday's editorial. Not only do I object to such superficial, uninformed, and irresponsible editor criticism of such a worthwhile program, but I am amazed that the editor of our venerable newspaper, certainly an astute and responsible person, should take such a strong position on something about which he obviously knows so little.

I suppose that my evaluation of the exchange would be termed subjective by some, having been brainwashed by the warmth and friendliness of the Canadian people and having enjoyed to the fullest the stimulating intellectual and social program of activities with which I was presented in Toronto. However, I must attempt to give substance to certain aspects of Mr. King's understandably limited outline of the exchange activities.

The intellectual program of events was not done justice in the article written by a member of the exchange. The Friday afternoon seminar, keynoted by Professor Careless, concerned itself with the background and causes of the rising tide of Canadian nationalism. This movement, so vital to our foreign and economic policies, receives scant attention in this country. The reflection of the varying attitudes of the Canadian people toward the United States, as seen in the seminar, proved to be a startling revelation for many of the Carolina students.

The Saturday morning discussion was led by a Toronto professor who had studied and taught at Yale University and the University of Oklahoma before returning to Toronto. His impressions of the American college student gained through experience in these two poles of the American college scene provided a pertinent and humorous contrast to the Canadian students' attitudes and scholastic habits and stimulated a lively discussion which revealed many interesting differences and simularities (sic) in the in the educational systems of the two nations.

However excellent the program of organized mental activities, the real value of the Toronto Exchange lay in the informal contacts which Mr. King, despite his worldliness, fails to recognize. Although the Daily Tar Heel office or even that colorful campus watering-hole, Y-Court, may fail to yield people or relationships which provide meaningful educational experiences, this was certainly not the case with the Toronto Exchange. The real transmission of ideas, information, and opinions among intelligent people always achieves its greatest depth at the social level, which lacks the limiting aspects of an organized seminar or discussion. You cannot learn to know people in such austere circumstances and it is not until you feel that you know others that any real intellectual interchange begins. Even such unlikely surroundings as a Canadian beer-party provided conversations and experiences which will be of lasting significance in terms of the intellectual maturity of all concerned. Besides, the value of a calculated intake of alcoholic beverages as a means of stimulating deeper, aesthetic intellectual exchanges has long been recognized by many cultural groups, among them a small but noted sect of Turkish poets.

If Mr. King cannot appreciate the real value of "socializing" and see beyond the superficial impressions left by returning Tar Heels' tales of inspired Bacchic rites, then his has been a colorless and meaningless life indeed. I might suggest that he expand his range of interests and activities and overcome the provincial outlook and limited experience that his editorial reveals. Perhaps even a trip to Canada would be in order.

—Myron Simmons

Editor's Note: Nothing would please me more than to become a member of the Canadian Club. Please enter my name at the top of the list of volunteers.

However, in the event I fail to qualify as a participant in this admittedly worthy program, may I submit this alternate plan: After choosing 26 worthies and receiving an adequate appropriation from Student Legislature, we will all form a daisy chain and dance three times around the campus singing "Oh Canada." After which, suitable surroundings will be chosen—perhaps the Forest Theater—and all participants will re-enact the orgiastic scenes from "La Dolce Vita."

Thus primed for intellectual stimulation, we will discuss the comparative incidence of gastric hyperacidity among the Australian koala bear and the Canadian mongoose.

We will then take a side-trip to Carrboro.

NSA

Is It Democratic?

In a changing world it is extremely important that the modern American student acquaint himself with the organization that represents him nationally and internationally. Much has been said about the National Student Association, both complimentary and otherwise, but such comments are meaningless to most of us unless the structure of the organization is explained. It is our hope that through a series of articles explaining the NSA, student interest in this important area of student government can be generated, and fact can be separated from fiction.

To begin with the U.S. NSA is a democratic organization. Each year member universities from all over the country send delegates to the National Congress. (Within regions member universities send delegates to the Regional Assemblies.) To a certain extent the perfect arrangement would be direct election of the representatives at each school. Although this is done at many universities, Carolina and others find that election schedules make such a system impractical. Carolina's Student Legislature officially appoints our representatives, and last year the SG president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, attorney-general, DTH editor (his alternate) and the UNC NSA Coordinator attended. These student leaders represented Carolina at the NSA Congress held last summer at the University of Wisconsin.

Both criticism and commendation has been heaped upon the NSA because its actions do not typify the "average American student" (if such a creature exists). To be sure the policies adopted would not be supported 100% on campus. But it should be noted that these measures did meet opposition in the Congress. In the DTH earlier this year an article appeared in which it was stated that the barrier between NSA and "the student" was the fact that the NSA delegates were interested leaders while "the students" were generally apathetic. It is truly our hope that NSA can become more of a student voice, not because it avoids debatable issues, but because more students deliberate its policies and resolve to somehow have a hand in shaping them, if only through a ballot in an SG election.

I have read articles by certain conservatives (not to infer that only conservatives criticize NSA) who advocate UNC's withdrawal from the NSA because of the NSA's pro-liberal policies. While we on the NSA committee here at Carolina welcome suggestions, it seems to us that the reason NSA espouses liberal goals is because a majority of the delegates were liberal. Rather than withdraw from a confederation which does not demand that its member schools agree with all its policies, would it not be better to strengthen this group as a representative assembly and work within its framework as a minority? The conservatives are welcome to control the NSA if the majority of the delegates sent there wish to vote accordingly.

In subsequent articles we shall attempt to explain NSA's major areas of activity, its Congress, its committees and subcommittees, and its policies. Additional information can be picked up from Bill Straughn, NSA Coordinator, in the SG offices in GM. All students should have a legitimate concern with the issues which affect them in their role as students, no matter where these issues arise. Here at Carolina we can express our ideas and aspirations through our student government; we can also join our fellow students across the country through the U.S. NSA and express our opinions on a national and international level.

Reflections

From the New Republic:

"On January 2, the House Un-American Activities Committee issued a further defense of its film 'Operation Abolition,' admitting only one mistake, since corrected, about Harry Bridges.

"The American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California has now issued a version of the film called 'Operation Correction,' applying sub-titles to show how time sequences were continually juggled, inserting revisions in the soundtrack to reveal deliberate distortion."

The reason for sub-titles being used in the ACLU version of the film, we are certain, is that "Operation Abolition" speaks a foreign language.

An un-American language.

'Who Are The Extremists?'

The rise of Convervatism on college campuses and throughout the country in general has been most disheartening to the Liberals, who have had a virtual monopoly on intellectual vociferance and political power over the last thirty years. The groundswell of activity on the Right has taken many Liberals by surprise, and has led to incompetent responses on their part. Instead of relying on calm, intellectual rebuttal to stem the growing number of Conservatives, the Liberals have resorted to, at best, name-calling, and at worst, slander and innuendo in their desperate attempt to discredit their opposition. The Liberals, of all people, have become very irrational when confronted with viewpoints other than their own. Most exemplary of this irrationality is their attempt to label any activity to the right of center as "Extremism."

Who, in fact, are the Extremists? In New York City, Pete Seeger, the folk singer thrown in jail for contempt of Congress, led a rowdy bunch of "beards and leotards" through the streets chanting "You Can Dig Your Grave in Your Own Back Yard" and "I Ain't Gonna Study War No More," along with placards denouncing nuclear tests, arms, and fallout shelters.

"In spite of court orders (quoting from the "National Review," Feb. 13, 1962), students, acting under the strategic guidance of CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) maintained a 24-hour sitdown in the corridors outside the office of the Chancellor of the University of Chicago. Their professed complaint was the 'gradualness' of the University—which has a notorious record of liberality on all racial and civil rights matters—in opening all housing it owns to total integration."

Harold Taylor, former President of Sarah Lawrence College, told 1,500 anti-arms demonstrators outside the UN to demand immediate unilateral disarmament on the part of the U.S.

"Nine hundred professors (also from "National Review") of universities on the Eastern Seaboard denounced in large newspaper advertisements and press releases the idea of building any sort of fallout shelters." These people, who think "fallout shelters" breed defeatism and fear in the general populace, are also the same people who wish to "ban the Bomb" because they fear nuclear war. Now, it would appear that those who fear the consequences of nuclear war, and therefore want to ban the bomb, would be the same people who would take steps to protect themselves by building fallout shelters. But such is not the case.

Another example of Extremism on the Left, and there are many, is the position of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. This extreme Leftist organization maintains its campaign in favor of the Castro regime in spite of the fact that Castro is avowedly Communist.

Harvard and Yale, citadels of Liberal thought, have arbitrarily denied their students the right to participate in the National Defense Education Act. This was done because Harvard and Yale wished to "protect" their students from the injustices of having to sign a Loyalty oath in order to receive loans. But it is apparent that the real infringement on freedom was that imposed by Harvard and Yale's administrations, who denied their students the freedom to sign the oath or not, as the students wished. Harvard and Yale (and several other colleges) have violated the very rights that they seek to protect.

When taken as a group, these examples of Liberal extremism: a) advocate policies that would strip this country of its means for protecting itself from possible enemies, b) to give aid and comfort to enemies of the United States, c) arbitrarily reject public laws, d) put forth crude slogans, e) appeal to fear and ignorance, and f) offend the integrity of the American people.

But perhaps many Liberals abhor the above examples of Extremism. They should be commended for their insight and common sense. We do not mean to condemn all Liberals for the antics of some of their associates. But, likewise, the Liberals should show a little tolerance toward the Conservatives, who also object to groups like the John Birch Society who, through hatred and distrust, subvert the legitimate beliefs of Conservatives. If the Liberals in Journalism and in public life insist on calling everyone from Robert A. Taft to Barry Goldwater an "extremist," then perhaps they should clean up their own backyard, which is also cluttered with "Extremists."

How He MIGHT Teach

The present situation of the younger university teacher is probably more exciting than that of any of his counterparts since the mid-seventeenth century.

The reasons for this are obvious. Behind the modern professor lies an enormously significant intellectual revolution, in front of him sit rows of students largely unaware of the implications of the revolution, and the question how to effect a vital engagement of the two forces is no longer unanswerable.

What IS the answer? Like everything in teaching, it takes the form of an obligation, a duty.

When students bring him snippets of random sexology in (unconscious slander of) Freud's name, the teacher must confront them with a whole new vision of the nature of the mind.

When they appear in his classroom dressed in caps and cloaks of seventeenth-century psycho-dualism on which are appliqued, like tinsel stars, such nonce phrases as "relativity theory," "interdeterminacy principle," "existential gap," he must seek to turn them out (by drawing on whatever of the new psychology, physiology, and physics can be quickly taught) with an intuition of the "world" as a process, an uncertain act of continual human creation.

When they offer him gabble about conformity and the organization man, he must show them (by furnishing relevant anthropology and sociology) that the old icon, the individual, is only another image in the civilizing but risky dream of the West.

When they brandish exegetical notes taken during prep-school sessions on "The Waste Land," he must press them toward the perception that a revolution has taken place in all the arts—a revolution made inevitable by the imagination's effort to master orders and systems of reality which, unlike those of the past, are in no part the invention of artists.

When fake issues, idle arguments of adolescent "Democrats" and "Republicans," or boyish current-events talk about Red China hating Red Russia, threaten to fog the glass, he must aim at the revelation of the mass state as the chief political and social phenomenon of the age, East AND West. And at every moment he must insist on the necessity of bringing alive in reflection whole continents and civilizations that hitherto have barely existed in the Western mind.

His duty, in short, is to teach new heavens and a new earth, to show his students into the world of Now, to drive himself toward that full consciousness of the times which is the only armor left against mere irony or mere wanness.

Peace Talks To Continue With Algeria

PARIS (UPI)—President Charles de Gaulle will begin the final and decisive phase of peace talks with the Algerian rebels "almost at once" despite right-wing extremist violence and Communist-backed strikes and riots, responsible government sources said Saturday.

The French Communist party, which spearheaded a bloody riot Thursday night to protest violence by the outlawed Secret Army Organization (OAS), defied De Gaulle further by calling for a series of strikes and demonstrations Monday to protest "police violence."

Fury Spurred

The left-wing group's fury was spurred by the alleged OAS kidnaping of 19-year-old MarcAndre Schwartz, son of a prominent left-wing leader and a cousin of Premier Michel Debre. Young Schwartz turned up safe and sound Saturday and said he was kidnaped at gunpoint.

The government was cracking down on both the right and the left. The Interior Ministry announced it would ban all demonstrations Monday and accused the Communists of throwing in 3,000 trained shock troops as a weapon of subversion.

In Algiers, 5,000 French troops, gendarmes and police swarmed through the European working district of Bab-el-Oued and arrested 21 suspects of the OAS and found 192 weapons. But elsewhere in Algeria OAS violence added to the death toll now approaching the 750 mark since Jan. 1.

The French army in Algeria has battled the rebel liberation movement for seven long and costly years. De Gaulle is determined to end the war and build up France's continental armed might.

Textiles Will Fight Competition

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The textile industry will resume next week its campaign to shrink the competitive advantage of foreign goods on U.S. store shelves.

The U.S. Tariff Commission is scheduled to begin Tuesday hearings on a proposal calling for an 8½-cent-a-pound fee on the cotton content of textile imports.

The fee would be roughly equivalent to the difference in prices paid for domestic cotton and that of foreign mills.

The hearings have a strong political overtone.

The latest effort of the textile industry to curb imports comes against a backdrop of apparently successful negotiations for a long-term agreement on textiles and heatedly-denied reports that the hearings would be a sham.

The White House announced Friday a five-year agreement between 16 major cotton exporting and importing nations. It said the agreement would help safeguard the American cotton textile industry against injury from imports.

Romney GOP Candidate For Governor

DETROIT (UPI)—George Romney, president of American Motors Corp. and prominently mentioned as a 1964 presidential dark-horse, Saturday announced he is a Republican candidate for governor of Michigan.

Romney, who has already forced the state Republican Party to accept his terms after saying the party has been controlled by "big business," said he will launch a "citizen campaign to get Michigan rolling."

Board to Meet

Romney, 54, said he will meet with the board of directors of American Motors Monday to ask for a leave of absence from his posts of AMC president and board chairman.

He resigned, immediately after his announcement of candidacy, from the "Citizens for Michigan," the "third political force" organization which he formed three years ago to try to resolve the deadlock between Michigan Republicans and Democrats over state money matters.

Until less than a year ago, Romney had not made public his political party affiliation.

Immediate Endorsement

Romney was given immediate endorsements as the Republican candidate for governor by national and state GOP leaders. He has been mentioned by former President Eisenhower, by 1960 nominee Richard M. Nixon and by Sen. Barry Goldwater, Republican con-

Powers Is Released

Last Wednesday

Abel had been released from Atlanta last Wednesday and taken to New York. He was flown to Europe only after U. S. authorities had assurances that Powers definitely would be set free.

The remarkable series of events that led to the trade began when Abel's wife sought clemency for his husband and wrote Kennedy before his inauguration. Negiotiations are conducted in large part by Abel's U. S.-appointed attorney, James B. Donovan.

Informed sources said the President had never discussed the case with any Soviet official. And there were no plans for him to interview Powers as he did when two RB47 pilots were set free by the Russians soon after his inauguration.

RB47 Pilots

The RB47 pilots were on a military mission. Powers was not.

Similarly, in their announcement on Powers' release, the Soviets made no mention of Abel, who was considered a top spy.

Powers' wife, Barbara, had been told previously that her husband was about to be released. Actual news that he was free, she said, was "the greatest happiness I

Controversial Questionnaire Is Discarded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senators conducting an inquiry into alleged military censorship discarded a controversial questionnaire on communism and may well abandon all such group testing, informed sources said Saturday.

They said the questionnaire, which created a furor after secretly being given to some marines and airmen here, was useless because of the publicity it received.

Opposed

The questionnaire technique is also opposed by some participants in the study, they said.

Members of the subcommittee are expected to meet next week to discuss the controversy created by the marine quiz and to decide where to go now. This is in light of President Kennedy's action invoking executive privilege and directing state and defense department reviewers not to answer on specific speech deletions.

Speech Review

Undersecretary of State George Ball was said to be eager to appear before the subcommittee to outline the State Department's speech review policies. The Department's role in censorship has been sharply attacked by Sen. Strom Thurmond, D.-S.C., who claims department speech change reflected a "no-win" policy in the cold war.

Thurmond also wants the subcommittee to continue with the military phase of the speech censorship inquiry. Several witnesses are still to be heard, including Gen. George H. Decker, army chief of staff.

Respess Hits 26, Neary 24 As Tar Babies Rip Deaclets

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK
DTH Asst. Sports Editor

UNC's freshman basketball team snapped a two-game losing streak yesterday afternoon in forgfing to their eleventh win of the season—an 83-70 verdict over the Wake Forest yearlings.

The Wake Deaclets, who were soundly trounced 79-58 by Carolina earlier in the season at Winston-Salem, took the early lead in this one and when 6-5 Al Lozier hit a jumper with 12:20 to go in the half, the Tar Babies found themselves down by seven, 19-12. Rosemond called time out and when play resumed, Carolina seemed to find the shooting range. Ray Respess, Jay Neary and Pud Hassell hit consecutive jump shots to cut the Wake lead to one and from then on it was nip and tuck to the end of the period.

Neary, the 6-2 speedster from Cambria Heights, N. Y., put on a one-man show in the first half to keep the Tar Babies in the game. The jump-shooting ace, who leads the frosh season scoring, netted 18 of his 24 points in the opening period to pace Carolina to a 42-39 halftime lead.

Herring Begins To Click

At the outset of the second half, Richard Herring, Wake's 6-5 center who had been held to just eight points in the first half, and 6-1 guard John Anderson began to click from the outside. The two matched Carolina basket for basket until the count reached 55 apiece with 19:32 remaining in the game. At that point, Respess, who led all scorers with his 26 markers, canned a layup. Fouled on the play, Ray made the free throw, and gave Carolina three-point lead it never relinquished.

The Tar Babies had a little breathing room when with seven minutes left, Respess and Bill Brown combined for 8 straight points, interrupted only by Herring's long one-hander. At 16:30 of the final period, 5-11 guard Bill Taylor stole the ball at mid-court, and recade in for the easy layup. This made it 75-64 and a minute later, when the Deaclets' Herring committed his fifth and disqualifying foul, it was all over for Wake.

The Winston-Salem cagers, who also lost Anderson and their top rebounder Lozier on fouls in the second half, shot a very commendable 42.9% from the floor and netted 16 of 19 free throws for 84%. Herring, who finished with 23 points, was 9 for 20 from the field and Anderson 5 for 11. Wayne Burroughs, the Deaclets' other guard, had a hot hand in the second half. He meshed 6 of 9 field goal attempts and added a foul shot for 13 points.

Carolina Shoots 50%

Carolina returned to pre-semester break shooting form as the Tar Babies hit 28 of 56 field goal tries for an even 50%. Inaccuracy at the foul line cost the Chapel Hillians an even bigger victory. The blue and white could only manage 27 of 41 free throws—a paltry mark of only 65%.

Respess led the Tar Babies in accuracy with 10 for 15 from the floor while Neary was 9 for 18. Brown tied Wake's Lozier for the rebound high with 10. 5-10 Stu Ellington, sent into the game when starter Pud Hassell picked up his fourth personal with 8:51 to go in the first half, played a fine floor game and contributed 6 rebounds.

The UNC frosh, with only losses to Duke and Davidson marring their 11 victories, return to action this Wednesday night at 6:15 when they face North Carolina State in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum.

The gold and black-clad Deacons soared ahead early in the first half and held a 13-5 lead with 15:50 remaining. The Tar Heels caught McKinney's invaders at the 9:07 mark on a three-point play by Jim Hudock and seconds later Larry Brown scored on a lay-up to give the Chapel Hillians their first lead of the game at 26-24.

UNC's Last Lead

Chappell tied the score with a lay-up, but Cooke countered with a jumper to give Carolina its last lead of the game. Minutes later Chappell scored again and was fouled by Donohue—the foul was Donohue's third and Smith pulled him from the game. Chapel added the one-pointer and Wake had a 32-29 lead. The Deacs outscored UNC 15-8 in the final six minutes to take a 47-37 halftime lead, which they never lost.

The victory enabled Wake to move into a tie for first place in the ACC with Duke, but the Blue Devils met Virginia Saturday night. Both teams had 7-2 records prior to the Duke-UVA affair.

Maryland Swimmers Edge Carolina For ACC Title

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

For the second consecutive year, the University of Maryland swimming team has crushed the championship hopes of the Carolina swimmers.

The Terps, undefeated in six conference dual meets, won the 1962 championship Friday afternoon by edging the Tar Heels, 49-46. Last year, Maryland handed Coach Pat Earey's mermen their only loss in leage competition with a 50-45 victory at Chapel Hill. The win gave the College Park tankers a share of the 1961 title with Carolina and North Carolina State. This year, Maryland has the crown all to itself.

Mike Schaeberle gave the Terrapins their clinching points when he nipped Carolina Co-Captain Bob Briggs in the 200-yard breaststroke. That gave the Champions a 49-39 lead with only the 400-yard freestyle relay to go. Carolina took that race but it was too late to do any good.

Earey's strategic move of holding ace backstroker Thompson Mann out of his 200-yard specialty in order to pile up points in the relays, backfired when Dave Fleming, swimming the butterfly leg of the medley relay, paced Maryland to a win in that first event with a 54.4 clocking for his distaonce.

A bright note of consolation for the Tar Heels lay in the fact that they had the meet's only double winners in Jim Huffman and Willie Bloom. Huffman, a junior from Moylan, Pa., won the 50-yard freestyle and 200-yard backstroke events while Bloom, a product of Baltimore and brother of last year's Tar Heel star merman Harry Bloom, posted victories in the 220 and 440 yard freestyle distance races.

The Summary

50-yard freestyle—(1) Huffman, UNC; (2) Williams, UNC; (3) Duke, Md., 23.6.

200-yard medliey relay—(1) T. Lupien, Md.; (2) King, UNC; (3) H. Lupien, Md.; 2:12.1.

200-yard breaststroke—(1) Shaeberle, Md.; (2) Briggs, UNC; (3) T. Lupien, Md.; 2:26.3.

Track Team Bombs State, 91-12

By MARTY KRUMING

Living up to all the optimistic expectations of head coach Dale Ranson, the varsity winter track team swamped an exceptionally weak N. C. State squad 91-12 in the Tin Can Friday evening.

With the exception of the eight lap relay, the Tar Heels swept all twelve events in the meet. John O'Bannon and Dick Lewisohn led off the meet by taking one-two in the broad jump as O'Bannon won with a jump of 21'9". Next came the 70-yard low hurdles in which the Tar Heels copped all three places.

With senior co-captain Barrie Tiedemann and junior Heath Whittle having both cleared the the 14-foot barrier in official competition this season, the spotlight was on these two valuters. Although Tiedemann captured first with a height of 14 feet, his teammate was not far behind in second.

The main event of the evening was the mile run in which fast striding senior co-captain Rett Everett was an excellent choice for blue honors. This 5'10" speedster from Greenville, let no one down as he completed his run in a winning time of 4:22.1. It was at this point that the Wolfpack penetrated the scoring column as Edwards took a second.

Harvey Henry's heave of 46 feet in the shot put earned him a first and the combination of Charlie Little, Bob Bennett, and sophomore Dave Brunson overwhelmed State n the 880. Winning time for this event was 1:57.3.

Returning to the field events, Greensboro sensation Tommy Clark, who holds the freshman high jump record at 6-6½, cleared the bar at 6-2 to take an undisputed first. In the V.M.I. Relays last weekend Clark tied for first against such track powerhouses as Maryland, Navy, and The Citadel.

The Wolfpack's only other scoring threat came in the 440 yard run as it took second and third behind Bob Hart's winning time of 50.0 Hart was also a member of the sprint medley and distance medley teams which placed unmber one in the V.M.I. Relays.

Carolina's rivals also received a whitewashing in the two-mile run in which Carmine Lunetta paced Mike Folk and Charlie Tromba to a 1, 2, 3 finish at 9:43.6.

NORTH-SOUTH DOUBLEHEADER

UNC students can attend the North-South doubleheader in Charlotte Friday and Saturday for only $1 per night. A student ID card must be presented at a special gate at the Charlotte Coliseum in order to purchase a ticket.

UNC meets Clemson Friday, while N.C. State plays South Carolina. The North Carolina teams swap opponents for Saturday's games.

SHOOK WILL SPEAK

Professor Edwin M. Shook of Harvard University will give an illustrated lecture at a meeting of the North Carolina Society of the Archaeological Society of America at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 16, in the auditorium of the Ackland Art Center. He will talk about "The Ruins of Tikal, Guatemala."

Dean Smith Commends Chappell's Play

By MARTY KRUMING

For All-American candidate Lennie Chappell it was another successful day in his quest for the ACC indivdual scoring title. The massive 6-8 center and co-captain of the Deacons was sensational as he racked up 36 points and 14 rebounds.

Head coach Dean Smith realized that Chappell could be given the ball on the outside, but not under the basket, if Carolina was to win the game.

"Lennie is so strong that he's hard to stop underneath," said Smith. The Tar Heel mentor especially commended the fine play of sophomore Mike Cooke, forward Jim Donohue, and captain Jim Hudock.

Cooke provided hustle and key points in the closing minutes of the contest. Smith called the turning point of the game the point where Donohue picked up his third foul and had to leave the game for the remainder of the half.

Returning to Chappell, Smith said, "It was abiilty, not garbage shots that gave Chappell so many points on tap-ins and close shots."

Gendarmes Repel Leftist Rallies In Paris Plazas

25,000 Join Forces To Squelch Riots Against DeGaulle

PARIS (UPI)—An army of 25-000 police Monday night frustrated leftist plans for a "silent" mass rally in defiance of President Charles de Gaulle.

In one of the biggest shows of force in Paris in recent times, the government stationed helmeted riot police, mobile gendarmes and city patrolmen to block every approach to the huge Place de la Republique where the rally was to have been held.

Tanks and armed cars were poised in the suburbs to assist the police if needed in an atmosphere made tense by the Algerian situation.

March Silently

The demonstrators, estimated by police at about 20,000, marched silently in large groups up the five big boulevards which converge on the square. At the police barriers, they were turned away, and they marched off again without protest in an almost eerie silence.

There was no violence.

Other peaceful demonstrations were held in Marseille, Lyon and other big provincial cities—all in defiance of a ban decreed by the interior ministry on orders of De Gaulle.

The demonstrations by Communists and Socialists were called, along with a half-hearted 30-minute general strike, to protest the killing of eight civilians in rioting in Paris last Thursday.

Rioted During Protest

The rioting last week erupted during leftist protest demonstrations against violence caused by the Secret Army Organization (OAS), which is pledged to keep Algeria French. The right-wing OAS has stepped up terrorism with reports that French and Algerian rebel negotiators are nearing agreement on independence for Algeria.

The OAS showed its defiance Monday night by setting off a bomb near the Justice Ministry. The plastic bomb wrecked the front of a building a block from the ministry, and injured one man.

Another half-day general strike was ordered for Tuesday when the funeral of the eight riot victims will take place. Most of the victims were Communists, and the big French Communist party hoped to get a turnout of at least 150,000 for the funeral.

French Guard In Funeral Of OAS Member

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Hundreds of French troop and tio police reinforcements stood guard against violence Monday during a public funeral for a French army deserter who poined the Secret Army Organization (OAS) and was killed while trying to run o police roadblock.

More than 8,000 Europeans walked in the funeral procession through the strangely quiet streets of Algiers behind the hearse carrying the body of ex-Capt. Phillippe Pivain.

Funerals of Europeans frequently have touched off indiscriminate widespread attacks against Algerians. An army helicopter hovered over the city and police troops lined the route of the funeral procession.

But there was no report of any violence.

Most European shops and businesses were shut under orders from the extremist OAS which called for a general strike during the funeral.

Pivian, son of a retired admiral, deserted from his French army post in Germany four months ago to join the OAS campaign against President Charles de Gaulle's self-determination program for Algeria.

Pivian was shot and killed Wednesday when he tried to crash through a police roadblock. OAS sympathizers marked the spot with flowers and gathered in menacing crowds since, stirring fears of violence during the funeral.

Security forces carried out new raids during the day in search of suspected terrorists. It was the third such operation in Algiers in the past three days.

IN STUDENT RELATIONS

Governor Appoints Patterson To Post

By CHARLES COOPER

Gov. Terry Sanford has appointed Hank Patterson, vice-president of the student body, to his Committee on Foreign Student Relations.

Under his direction, the group will organize home hospitality visits, in which the foreign students now studying in the state, will have an opportunity to spend vacations with North Carolina families. Other duties will include introducing students to the culture, industry and government of the state.

Secretariat

In other student government activity, the Secretariat is interviewing girls this week for positions as secretaries in the offices.

Research is currently under way by the Academic Affairs Committee to determine the possibility of including a humanities course in the curriculum next year. An SG spokesman also said that they had finished tabulating the results from a course study in the zoology department.

The Campus Affairs Committee, the group in charge of improving facilities on the campus, has recently finished a study on changes in the cut policy.

Instructor's Option

Its findings stated that little could be done other than a continuation of the instructors option system, by which the individua professor decides his own cut policy, and a program of information for all new professors and graduate instructors.

In other activities, the Campus Affairs, under the direction of Tony Harrington, has set up a system of night study rooms and will continue to open them as they are needed. Studies are now in progress to determine the need for street repairs and a solution to the fraternity parking problem.

Sign-Painters Greet Bobby In Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy arrived Monday for a week-long visit in Indonesia where anti-American sentiment has flared in the dispute with The Netherlands over Dutch New Guinea.

Anti-Americans had smeared walls and buildings in Jakarta with red-painted "Kennedy go Home" and other hostile slogans Sunday night. But less than four hours before his arrival a small army of painters wielding whitewash brushes covered up the signs along Kennedy's motorcade route.

Kennedy was greeted at the airport by Indonesian officials led by Atty. Gen. Gunawan, who will be his host during the visit. In a brief statement, Kennedy said he brought greetings from President Kennedy and the American people to the Indonesian people and President Sukarno.

The anti-American signs were believed to be the work of a Communist youth group. Communists tried to disrupt Kennedy's visit to Japan, also.

Authorities said they had no clue to the identity of the sign-painters. Lt. Col. Sukisno, deputy chief of the Jakarta war administration, said the signs were a violation of martial law and an investigation had been ordered.

The U. S. Embassy, which has been under special armed guard since it was attacked by a mob of teen-agers on Feb. 5, declined to comment.

A Jakarta Communist delegation Monday submitted letters to the government and army to be relayed to Kennedy. The letters demanded that Kennedy declare the U. S. administration's "real position" on the territorial dispute between Indonesia and the Dutch, and for "guarantees"that the United States will not side with the Dutch by permitting aircraft or ships to use bases in American territory.

Mrs. Chanlett, the wife of UNC sanitary engineering professor Emil T. Chanlett, will speak at 11:30 a.m. Sunday. Her topic is "Spotlight on South of the Border."

American Plane Crashes In Saigon

SAIGON, South Viet Nam, Tuesday (UPI)—Nine bodies were found Monday in the scattered wreckage of a C47 transport that crashed with eight Americans and two South Vietnamese officers aboard.

The plane crashed into a junglecovered mountain Sunday during a lowlevel leaflet drop 80 miles north of Saigon on the fringe of a Communist Viet Cong guerrilla stronghold.

The 10th person aboard the aircraft still was listed as missing. American and Vietnamese search teams reached the scene Monday.

The U. S. Embassy said it was not known whether the South Vietnamese air force plane was shot down by the Communist guerrillas or crashed from some other cause.

Leaflets were being dropped on the edge of a Communist area known as "zone B." The plane fell near the town of Blae about midway between Saigon and the mountain resort of Dalat.

The embassy said the Americans were U. S. Army and Air Force personnel attached to the military advisory group in South Viet Nam.

Atlantic Storm Darkens Hopes For Glenn Orbit

Gale-Force Winds Strike Canaveral During Refueling

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The Federal Space Agency said Monday it would attempt to launch astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. into orbit Wednesday morning despite a forecast for "marginal" weather in the Atlantic recovery zones.

But Project Mercury officials held out the possibility of a last-minute postponement if weather does not improve in the areas where Glenn's capsule is to land after it completes are, two, or three trips around the earth.

Causing all the trouble was a forecast of possible increased cloudiness, high winds and rough seas in the recovery areas along part of Glenn's first orbit path across the Atlantic. Gale force winds and 10-foot waves churned up hundreds of square miles of the ocean on this route.

Sea and weather conditions must be as perfect as possible so that Glenn can be picked up by the recovery force when he comes down.

Glenn, the Atlas booster, and the capsulet were "in a 'go' condition," the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said. The astronaut underwent a thorough physical examination Monday, the first of two he will have before he climbs into the capsule Wednesday morning for his flight.

The decision to go ahead with the Wednesday morning target date was made during a mission review by Project Mercury officials on Cape Canaveral.

At the same time, technicians began pouring more than 120 tons of high-grade kerosene fuel into the 93-foot Atlas rocket whose job it is to hurl Glenn into space at more than 17,000 miles an hour.

At the cape launch site, the weather was the mildest it has been for a week, and the prospects for Wednesday were fairly good.

The weather bureau also held out hope that sea conditions may become "sufficiently quiet by the planned launch time." The plan, weather permitting, is to launch Glenn between 7:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. EST Wednesday on a world tour of one, two, or three orbits.

This meant that America's Mercury man-into-space program, which has spent more than $400 million over a period of nearly four years, will possibly have to "shoot for a hole" in the weather to meet its goal of putting a man into orbit Wednesday.

Conant Heads Statewide School Probe

A team of experts on education, headed by Dr. James B. Conant, former president of Harvard University, began a study of teacher education in North Carolina yesterday, and will probe into teacher education at Chapel Hill, Duke and other institutions in the state.

A report on "the education of American teachers" will be prepared in about 18 months, Dr. Conant said.

The two year study was begun in September and is being sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

Dr. Conant announced that he and members of his staff are visiting schools in 15 states. The institutions are of all types, both public and private which are engaged in the training of teachers.

The Conant team is attempting difference of opinion on various methods of teacher training, he said.

The team is particularly interested to identify issues and listen to ed in the elementary and secondary schools with regard to subject matter fields, Dr. Conant said.

Members of the team are E. A. Dunham head of the education department of Duke University who is on leave from Duke; Professor Jeremiah Finch of Princeton University; Robert Carbonna who recently received a degree from Chicago University, a specialist in elementary education and Professor John I. Goodland of the University of California. At California at Los Angeles whose speciality is the teaching of elementary teachers.

Dr. Conant and members of his staff will be visiting North Carolina College at Durham, Duke, and St. Augustine College, all located in the state.

At UNC, members of the Conant team met with School of Education faculty A. K. King, C. F. Brown, Neill Scott, Neill Rosser, Roy E. Summerfield Hardwick Harshman, Donald Tarbot, Samuel Holton A Clegg, Annie Lee Jones and Sterling Harris discussing courses in the area of "the pupil" courses in "the School" area and student teaching.

Other faculty members consulted by the staff are John B. Chase Jr., Neal H. Tracy and W. Palmer for a conference on teaching methods in science and mathematics; Charles Bernard and Neill Scott on Admissions; Samuel Holton on methods in social sciences; E. A. Cameron Claiborne S. Jones and E. C. Markham on science and mathematics courses for teachers; Sterling Harris on methods of teaching English; Carl Pogg, Douglas Eyre and F. W. Cleveland on social studies; Hugh Holman and George Harper on English courses for teachers, and with six teachers in the school of Education who are on the block program or were student teachers in the fall semester.

Khrushy Might Attend Talks —By Himself

MOSCOW (UPI) — Western diplomats speculated Monday that Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev will attend the Geneva disarmament conference even though President Kennedy has turned down his proposal for summit talks. The diplomats believed that Khrushchev, a self-styled champion of disarmament recognizes the propaganda possibilities offered by the 18-nation conference scheduled to begin March 14.

They noted that the Communist leader attended the United Nations session in 1960 under similar circumstances.

Khrushchev's proposal for the heads of state of the 18 nations to meet in Geneva was seen by some Western experts here as a Soviet bid to open up East-West negotiations on a broad range of international problems related to disarmament.

The experts did not rule out the possibility that a principal Kremlin aim was to forestall resumption of U. S. nuclear tests in the atmosphere by keeping alive hopes for some settlement on a test ban treaty. Such tests could produce important military advances for the United States.

Dramatist Schary To Visit Here

Dore Schary, screen and Broadway producer and director, will be artist-in-residence at UNC for the week of March 1962.

He is being brought here through funds from a newly-established annual gift to the Carolina Playmakers by an anonymous donor.

Harry Davis, chairman of the department of dramatic art and director of the Carolina Playmakers, said that Schary's time here would be spent "primarily with the students."

Schary, producer-director of the musical hit "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" and "Something About a Soldier," currently showing on Broadway, wrote the show "Sunrise at Campobello" for the stage and later adapted it to the screen.

Boy's Town

Davis said that Schary's visit will enable "the drama students to have first-hand professional guidance. Educational theater is the major source for professional theater personnel," he said, "and it must respect and aim for the highest professional standards. The students need to be confronted with professional standards and requirements."

Pam Parker

Carolina Coed Competes For Georgia Title

Pam Parker, a senior majoring in English, is a contestant in the Georgia State Dairy Princess Contest, sponsored by the American Dairy Association of Georgia, Inc.

The Georgia Dairy Princess will be selected from a total of eight contestants at the Dinkler Plaza Hotel in Atlanta, Ga. The "Princess" will represent Georgia's dairy industry during 1962.

Pam is the daughter of Representative and Mrs. H. Walstein Parker of Sylvania, Ga. Pam is being sponsored in the contest by the Screven County Farm Bureau.

Pam attended Wesleyan College before entering UNC. While at Carolina, she has been president of the women's legislative body of the student government, a member of Women's Residence Council and House Council, a member of the Canadian Exchange Program to visit the University of Toronto, and a writer for the Daily Tar Heel.

At Wesleyan College, Pam received two honor scholarships and was tapped into the freshman honor society. She was also chosen "Miss Freshman Class." She served as treasurer of the Student Government Association and as delegate to the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments.

YRC, YDC to Debate N. C. One-Party System

UNC's Young Republicans Club and Young Democrats Club will debate the state one-party system Feb. 27.

The topic is "Resolved, that the one-party system in North Carolina has been detrimental to the best interest of the state and its citizens."

Earl Baker and Mack Armstrong will debate for the YRC and John Killian and Joe Roberts for the YDC. The debate will be held in the Law School courtroom of Manning Hall.

Later Summit May Be Held Before June

By DONALD MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has reached an initial decision to reject Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's proposal for a disarmament summit conference next month but is leaving the door open for such a meeting later, it was learned Monday.

The Kennedy administration will confer further with other governments to work out a final answer to Khrushchev's proposal for a heads-of-government meeting in Geneva March 14.

Meanwhile, it became known that the initial attitude of administration officials is as follows:

—They welcomed the fact that Khrushchev's reply to a Feb. 7 suggestion by President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan for a foreign ministers meeting on disarmament was positive and differed only on the levels of the talks.

—But they took the view that a disarmament conference at the summit which became deadlocked at the start could be a grave setback for disarmament prospects.

—The administration feels the role of heads of government should be confined to working out points which remain unsolved after serious negotiations and substantial progress by lower-level officials, rather than trying to tackle the detail of negotiations themselves.

Two Conditions Noted

As for a summit conference later, the administration appeared to condition any agreement on two factors—progress by the foreign ministers and continued reduction of East-West tensions.

The U. S. attitude appeared to be that bringing 18 national leaders together would be the most cumbersome way of starting complex negotiations.

According to protocol, each leader would have to make a formal speech. Protocol also would call for the speeches to be scheduled on separate days. The session could last for two weeks.

There also is a feeling that in this formal setting the national leaders would "freeze" their positions, meaning there could be no give and take bargaining.

There was no word when an answer to Khrushchev's proposal might go out to the Kremlin, except that it would not be Monday. Nor was it clear whether the United States alone, the United States and Britain, or some other combination of countries would dispatch the response.

Beginning consultations with the United States on a reply to the Russian's summit proposal, British Ambassador Sir David Armsby Gore put his position this way: "I don't think it will be suitable that heads of government start this conversation. At a later date, maybe."

Film Group Plans Program Of Experimental Features

A special program of experimental shorts introduced and distributed by Cinema 16, New York, will be shown by the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society next Monday at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

A non-profit organization, Cinema 16 is the world's largest film society with nearly 10,000 members seeing monthly programs in two theaters and a large school auditorium in New York City.

Introducing the shorts program will be "Coming Shortly," made in England by Tony Rose and an Edinburgh International Festival winner satirizing movie trailers. This one advertises an imaginary feature film, "Mame," the story of a poor girl who climbed the ladder of fame sin by sin.

"Sunlight"

"Sunlight" (U.S.), has a Negro cast enacting a revealing episode in a man's life, climaxed by a surprise ending. Scored by a co-op of San Francisco musicians, it is the first directorial effort of a young Negro film maker, Melvin Van.

An original satire from Argentina, "Symphony in No B Flat," set in the future, explores some of the rather "unexpected" efforts of radioactive fallout. Rodolfo Kuhn directed this Argentinian mixture of Rabelais and Charles Adams."

"Go Slow on the Brighton" (England), is another Edinburgh Festival winner and BBC's answer to Cinerama. Camera "magic" whips the spectator from London to Brighton at 800 miles per hour, compressing an hour's journey into four minutes in an illusion of extreme speed.

Twilight Zone

The Swedish "Hallucinations" by Peter Weiss are twelve subconscious tableaux envisioned in twilight between waking and sleeping. Weiss, a modern painter, fuses nudes and semi-abstract shapes in bizarre, surrealist compositions. Special music reinforces the macabre "dream" atmosphere. The film won an Edinburgh prize and top prize at the Arets Smalfilm Competition in Stockholm.

"Mother's Day" is a 22-min. short by the late James Broughton. "Mother's Day recaptures, in surrealism, the egocenctricity, sensuality and sadism of childhood in striking images and pictorial symbols. Juxtaposing memory, fantasy and document, it evokes an imaginative and ironic portrayal of childhood," said the Film Society.

Alexander Hammid's "The Private Life of a Cat" completes the Cinema 16 program. Shown national on CBS-TV's Omnibus after being banned for commercial distribution, the picture humorously and tenderly explores love, birth and growth in an ordinary cat family and according to some critics, offers analogies with humans.

On the bottom right of today's page, the group offers a brief outline of its general outlook, with an almost tacit invitation to sit in on a meeting.

To our way of thinking, the organization has been too long in the shadows—well outside the campus mainstream, functioning, for the most part, in silence. This is not to say that the group holds clandestine meetings at which individuals are indoctrinated into the mysteries of a secret leftist coterie—merely that its scope has been limited.

Carolina—indeed, any college or university—needs the kind of political stimulation that groups like the New Left can provide. Ideas are the meat of education. But they must be heard, discussed and dissected. If they are valid, they will stand. If they are faulty, they will fall.

The "Liberal-Conservative" controversy at Carolina has all-too-often been nothing more than a tempest in a tea-pot which finds individual functioning purely and simply under their label. "Liberals" square off with "conservatives" in much the same manner as schoolboys in a rag-tag game of pick-up football, with team One against team Two.

Idea exchange is lost in flurries of name-calling and "you're another one" arguments which generally result in little more than a few frazzled tempers, overworked adrenalin glands and not a damn thing reconciled. Each camp pulls further back into its own territory to glare at the "enemy," exchange methods of attack and bolster the collective ego.

Meanwhile, everyone forgets exactly how he came to fall under the particular label of his group and loses the ability to re-evaluate his own position in light of whatever information — or misinformation— he has gained. The battle is the thing . . . the cause is often forgotten.

The New Left group, however, appears to be taking stock of itself first, defining its terms, so to speak. If the cause is there, then let it become an issue. If not, then the crusade is Quixotic, the "enemy" a political, economic or social windmill. This is the valid approach to pinning down and answering some of the questions that are becoming increasing more ill-posed and nebulous.

Kindergarten?

The little quiz administered the other day to selected Marines was labeled by Charles A. Byrne, Stennis Committee functionary who gave it, as a test of "knowledge" of the Cold War.

It tests nothing of the sort. Only three of the 18 questions published in a recent newspaper account have directly to do with the Cold War. Such questions as "What are the populations of Russia, China, Cuba, France and the United States?" or "What didn't the Marine Corps like about "Operation Abolition?" or "What is the American Nazi Party?" may relate in some odd way to the cold war. They may even be desirable knowledge for the soldiery. But that is a matter of opinion.

In fact, answers to several of the questions themselves are matters of opinion, not "knowledge." Such questions as "What is the menace of Communism to the free world?" and "Do you think the Communists are trying to influence the armed services?" require statements of belief and opinion, not recitation of "fact."

Now, it is one thing to test members of the armed services as part of a general training program on their knowledge of established and agreed-upon facts. It is another for petty employees of a Senate committee, behind the back of the chairman and its majority, to test a handful of servicemen for opinions on which Americans disagree strenuously, especially, when it is blandly said that any "leftist" responses —whatever they are—will be turned over, with the testee's name, to his commander.

This kindergarten-type seatwork reached a depth of absurdity when it asked the Marines to identify or describe "dialectical materialism." Probably not more than 5 per cent of the members of Congress themselves could define "dialectical materialism" except perhaps by quoting by rote a dictionary label. Indeed, there is a strong possibility that Karl Marx himself did not know what he meant by it.

Basically, the outrage of the whole affair is that it was designed to embarrass General Shoup, commandant of the Marine Corps and a Congressional Medal of Honor wearer, because he happens to believe that a Marine's business is to fight when called on and not to engage in political debate.

ATTITUDES by Clotfelter

Textbook Cooperative Needed

In the past ten days students have suffered from an honest-to-goodness "monopoly": the textbook market on campus.

The University Book Exchange is in a position to give any price it chooses for used textbooks and can ask any price it chooses when reselling them. New texts are sold at regular commercial prices, with nary a discount to be had.

By no stretch of the imagination does the Intimate Bookshop deserve the title "competitor." Its existence in no way disturbs the monopoly.

There is, of course, a reason why the University cannot sell books at discount prices. The Umstead Act forbids state-supported institutions from competing with commercial enterprises ("competing in the genuine sense of the word, where the competitors cut prices, improve service, and increase variety of products . . . in order to take business away from the opposition.) So . . . the book-ex annually returns a whopping profit to the University.

Because of this legislation the Book Exchange cannot be expected to help ease the student's financial burden in this area.

That the burden is heavy can be attested to by any student who has bought textbooks (or by those students who are either unable or unwilling to pay the prices, and don't buy books at all) The economic welfare of UNC studentry demands an attempt to solve, or at least modify, the present situation.

* * *

Several answers are possible: a student cooperative off-campus or on-campus; an individual-oriented national cooperative union; or the hope that the Intimate will begin to act like a competitor and cut textbook prices. The last solution is tacitly unrealistic.

An on-campus or off-campus cooperative would have the advantages that it:

—Could be supported in part by student organizations and would have a greater chance for success in its early years.

—Could serve all UNC students.

—Would be able to diversify into other fields where students are in an economic pinch, such as clothing goods.

Unfortunately, a student cooperative on campus would almost certainly violate the Umstead Act, in the same way the book-ex would.

A much preferable system would have the cooperative established off-campus and sponsored by an independent student group, rather than student government. Off-campus student cooperatives have been successfully set up in several college communities, such as Harvard, Oberlin, and the Universities of California and Wisconsin. An off-campus store could be more diversified in its product field and would be exempt from the Umstead Act.

* * *

At its December meeting the National Executive Committee of the National Student Assocation (NSA) passed a resolution recommending the activities of a book cooperative to its member schools. The cooperative, which hopes to operate on a broader scale than at present, is the International Student Cooperative Union (ISCU), with headquarters at the University of Chicago.

Under the present ISCU plan, individual students become members of the cooperative, paying a $1 membership fee at the beginning. A member receives all texts at a 10 per cent discount and any other available book at a 25 per cent discount.

The ISCU plan would have the advantages of individual participation and near-term practicability, and the disadvantages of a cumbersome, time-consuming setup for the delivery of books.

* * *

An off-campus student cooperative in Chapel Hill would be more valuable in the long run, although difficult to establish. Both it and the ISCU program aim toward the same result by different paths: to free the UNC student from an oppressive economic monopoly.

U. S. Movement Hurts Reds

THE FIGHT IS FORGING AHEAD

America's anti-Communist movement is hurting the Reds and the work is out to stop it at all costs. This is heartening news for those fighting the good fight who may not always be aware of how their joint efforts are succeeding.

Some interesting facts were released this fall from previously "classified" testimony before the Senate subcommittee on internal security. The witness was Edward Hunter, former government employee and psychological warfare specialist who has authored several books on Communist brainwashing techniques.

Hunter said the Communists' evaluation of the U. S. anti-Communist movement as a first-magnitude threat to Red world conquest plans was revealed by the inclusion of orders for its eradication in the 81-party manifesto of December, 1960. The order was unprecedented in Communist party history.

This means that the American patriots had best gird themselves for a psychological warfare onslaught that will employ every diabolical and dirty tactic in the Red repertoire of deceit, and every possible means of pressure.

Nobody realizes more clearly than the Kremlin, Hunter said, that "If the anti-communist movement is not destroyed before it attains solidarity and stability and becomes sure of its ground, it will be fatal to the Communist movement everywhere."

The anti-Communist counter-offensive already is cutting inroads through the American national mind, discrediting, vilifying, smearing the sources of anti-Communist thought.

The purpose: Take the sting out of the anti-Communist movement. Here are the immediate targets.

(1) Make anti-Communism an unpopular thing to discuss or to express.

(2) Convince America that the Red threat to this country is far away overseas, not at home.

The goal: Take the force out of the anti-Communist movement so that the Communist forces can win by default.

Americans can take heart that their patriotism is paying off, but all should be alerted, too, that the fight for freedom must be unrelenting.

A NOTE ON HISTORY . . .

Perhaps Georgi Dimitrov was more prophetic than he knew when he told the Lenin School of Political Warfare during the early stages of Red Tide:

"As Soviet power grows, there will be greater aversion to Communist parties everywhere. So we must practice the techniques of withdrawal. Never appear in the foreground; let our friends do the work. We must always remember that one sympathizer is generally worth more than a dozen militant Communists.

"A university professor, who without being a party member lends himself to the interests of the Soviet Union, is worth more than a hundred men with party cards. A writer of reputation or a retired general is worth more than 500 poor devils who don't know any better than to get themselves beaten up by the police. Every man has his value, his merit. The writer who, without being a party member, defends the Soviet Union, the union leader who is outside our ranks but defends Soviet international policy, is worth more than a thousand party members."

AN ETERNAL TRUTH . . .

"The history of liberty is a history of the limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it. When we resist the concentration of power, we are resisting the processes of death, because a concentration of power is what always precedes the destruction of human liberties."

It is shameful that the "Liberals" of today do not espouse this basic principle of true liberalism. The tide has turned against Wilson and his ideals toward some undefined formula for Utopia. But the moon can rise again and shed its light, and the tide can turn once more.

Leftists Invite Discussion

Dear Editor:

Rather more than a year ago a group of graduate students who are interested in discussing contemporary problems from a liberal or socialist standpoint began meeting informally every two or three weeks. The group has since expanded to include a few faculty and undergraduate members, and it now counts regularly on getting twenty or more people to its meetings. It is still informally constituted (it has no elected officers) but it is run by an executive committee of six graduate students drawn from six different fields. It calls itself the New Left Club—a title borrowed from a movement that has been very active in England the last few years.

The group has deliberately avoided publishing a manifesto or a statement of policy. There is such diversity of opinion within the group that it would be quite impossible to achieve unanimity on a general policy. And anyway it seems inappropriate for a discussion group to publish a statement of political conclusions; if the problems have already been solved, they hardly merit discussion.

The members can all be described as "left of Kennedy" but any more precise description would be innaccurate. There are several liberal Democrats, several democratic socialists and two or three Marxists; there are no Trotskyites, Stalinists or members of the Communist Party, though such people would be welcome at our meetings insofar as they would enliven the discussions. Anyone is welcome to join the group so long as he shares enough of the basic assumptions of the political Left to make discussion possible—such assumptions as that all political action should be grounded on a belief in humane values and in egalitarianism.

This semester the group will be meeting every two or three weeks. These meetings will be announced in the Tar Heel. The first meeting will be held this Thursday in Graham Memorial at 8:30 p.m., when Dr. Blackman will lead a discussion on the Draft Program for the 22nd Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

In addition, the New Left Club is setting up two study groups to meet independently of the regular meetings. Each of these groups will devote intensive study to a particular problem. One will deal with industrialization in the South, bringing the combined efforts of historians, sociologists, economists and political scientists to bear on this topic. The other will read and discuss Trotsky's "History of the Russian Revolution," the great classic in Marxist history. It is hoped that by the end of the semester these people will have extended their knowledge of both Marxism and the Russian Revolution. Anyone wishing to participate in either of these study groups should be sure to come to the meeting on Thursday.

Andrews Should Not Advance Liberalism

To The Editor:

The February 7, 1962 issue of the Daily Tar Heel contained a letter from the Rev. David Andrews in Defense of his "Pray-In" Conducted in Washington, D. C. on behalf of Morton Sobell. Several statements in Mr. Andrews's letter deserve closer consideration.

As reasons for his "Pray-In", Mr. Andrews says, "I did it because he is a human being, an American citizen, and an object of God's love." Using these three reasons as a criterion, one must admit that virtually every man in a penitentiary can qualify for Mr. Andrews's sympathy. But in the case of Morton Sobell, Mr. Andrews believes that justice was not done, and he says that he believes in justice for everyone.

Even such heinous evildoers as John Birchites, snake handlers, or men from Mars (I wonder who passed judgment on this choice group). After having studied the so-called facts in a book ". . . written by a professor of law at one of our major universities," Mr. Andrews expresses grave concern over the manner in which the Sobell trial was conducted. Really, Mr. Andrews, don't you believe that the courts are more qualified to pass judgment on the facts and fairness of the Sobell trial than someone who has written or read a book pervaded with preconceived opinions?

Mr. Andrews has the following to say concerning his attitude toward Communism:

" . . . I am not, never have been and never will be a Communist. My own economic philosophy is about as far removed from Communist totalitarianism as one could get."

Two sentences later he says, "I have never gotten around to studying Marx or Lenin . . ." Now, if a man admittedly has never examined the philosophy of another society, can he make any comparison, rational or not, between his philosophy and theirs?

Rev. Andrews refers to the attempts ". . . to smear every active, honest liberal with red . . ." and people persist in ". . . equating Liberalism with Communism." The assumption must be that he is the "Liberal" in question since the first paragraph of his letter states that " . . . some people have gotten the mistaken idea that I am favorable to Communism." Isn't it wonderful Out of the dark ugly nescience suddenly shines forth the pure, noble, godly light of Liberalism.

I do not believe that Mr. Andrews is a Communist sympathizer in any way whatsoever. I am sure that he loves and believes in the American way of life and that he tries to be a good American citizen.

He is, however, reckless, ill-advised, and mistaken in his pursuit. Rev. Andrews's apparent use of his clerical position as a means to disguise the promotion of a political cause (Liberalism) is reprehensible.

Robinson's Ramblings

Public relations object lessons rarely hit the world's front pages. But India recently unwittingly gave all students of public relations, particularly those in government and business, a bagful of public relations "don'ts."

Every public official and businessman should study carefully the public relations aspects of India's speedy conquest of Goa. Begin with India's self-serving declarations prior to the conquest that administration in Goa was collapsing. Examine carefully the words leading to the fight between India's UN delegate and a newspaperman. In the end, read the unfavorable world reaction to the conquest of Goa.

There is something to be learned in each step of the shameful process of swallowing up Goa. Here are some of the "don'ts" to remember:

1. Don't make the mistake, even a small one, which erases many years of building up good public relations, based on good performance and good behavior. (Item: The conquest of Goa wiped out in minutes the image of India, laboriously self-built for nearly 15 years, as a nation dedicated to non-violence and spiritual leadership.)

2. Don't talk from both sides of your mouth if you want to win friends and influence people as part of a program of achieving good public relations. (Item: Years of holier-than-thou international declarations by India were cancelled out, probably permanently, by one swoop on Goa.)

TO HOLD CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy will hold a news conference at 11 a.m. EST Wednesday, the White House announced Monday.

Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said there were no plans for the conference to be carried "live" on radio or television.

Entertainment Ideas To Be Polled Here

The Communications Committee of Student Legislature is currently conducting a poll of student opinion on the Campus Entertainment Committee.

The Entertainment Committee was established last spring for the purpose of providing week-end entertainment for students. This fall it presented the Four Aces in a weekend concert and suffered a loss of $2,800.

The purpose of the poll, according to Robin Britt, chairman of the Communications Committee, is to determine whether or not students feel there is need for the Entertainment Committee.

The survey also is designed to supply other information.

Parking Fines Pay 1-4 Of Police Costs

By JOE DeBLASIO

Parking fines will pay for approximately one quarter of the total police budget in Chapel Hill this year.

According to Capt. Coy Durham of the Chapel Hill Police Department, the revenue from parking tickets for the year of 1961 was $34,286.

The total budgeted amount for traffic expenses, including the police salaries, in Chapel Hill is $126,342. This amount includes the jail, parking meters and other traffic expenditures.

About 35 to 40 thousand tickets were given in 1961. Some of these were never collected. Offenders who have only one ticket and do not pay are usually not pressed for payment, Durham said.

Red Letter

If the offender has more than one ticket and does not pay, the police department, as a courtesy, will inform him through a "red letter" warning. He has five days to fill this warning and then he may be summoned for trial.

The warnings are sent to the owner of the vehicle. Therefore many students may not get the warning because it will be sent to their parents in whose names the automobile is registered.

No immediate plans are being made for building new parking meter spaces, Durham said. There was an attempt to get the corner lot of Rosemary and Columbia streets, now owned by the Merchant's Parking Service, but this was not feasible, he said.

Ex-Tar Heel Lou Brown Tells Story In Magazine

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lou Brown, former University of North Carolina basketball player awaiting sentencing on point-shaving charges, said Monday in a magazine article the New York district attorney's office has evidence against another prime fixer still at large in the college basketball scandal.

Brown said in the Look Magazine article that the D. A.'s office has a tape recording between himself and the unidentified fixer which establishes "Fixer X" as a key agent for gamblers in bribing players.

In the article, Brown also said fixer Aaron Wagman once double-crossed another fixer, and that Jerry Graves, former Mississippi State star, nearly suffered underworld reprisal for failing to deliver a fixed game.

He also said the odds published in the newspapers aren't all accurate and told how Eddie Bowler of La Salle couldn't do anything wrong one night while trying to shave points.

In reference to "Fixer X", Brown said the D. A.'s office had him set up two meetings in which Brown carried hidden microphones which recorded their talks. Brown said that Fixer X told him: " . . . They will never get me. For one reason: Between me and jail is a stone wall . . . and the name of that stone wall is (he named a certain man). We have been through a lot together, and he will never talk."

Brown said "Fixer X" was an associate of Wagman, who has pleaded guilty of 37 counts of bribery and one of conspiracy and is scheduled to be sentenced March 14.

The North Carolina State-La Salle game at Philadelphia on Dec. 21, 1960, was when Wagman pulled an intricate double-cross over another fixer, Bob Kraw, according to Brown. He said Kraw had made deals with two N. S. State players and found out that a third N. C. Wagman. Kraw then mG State man was "working" for Wagman. Kraw then suggested to Wagman that they pool their players, said Brown, but Wagman double-crossed Kraw by not telling his N. C. State player.

And also unknown by Kraw, Wagman had a La Salle player "working" the game to nullify Kraw's fix. Brown said Wagman won more than $250,000 on the game.

Brown said that Graves, accused of taking $4,750 in bribes, was saved by New York detectives from being roughed up. Graves, who said he took the money but didn't shave any points, infuriated the gamblers when a fix didn't work out. A thug was sent to Mississippi, but fortunately Graves was protected by detectives who were investigating him.

TICKETS

A limited number of tickets to tomorrow's UNC- N. C. State basketball game at Raleigh are available at the Woollen Gym ticket office. The tickets are on sale to students at regular price.

Students whose names begin with the letters N-Z still have priority on tickets for the Duke-UNC game on Feb 24. The priority period runs through Wednesday. Beginning Thursday morning tickets will be available on a first come, first served basis.

Intramural Bowling Entry Deadline Is Tomorrow

Tommorow is the deadline date for entries in the All-Campus Intramural Bowling Tournament. This tourney will be conducted on a team basis, with teams being divided into leagues for round-robin competition.

The winner of each league will advance to the single-elimination play-offs for the campus chaimpionship.

The regular intramural eligibility rules will be followed in forming the teams. A team will consist of four players and any organization may enter as many teams as desired. No ringers will be allowed.

Matches will be played between four and six on week-day afternoons. Because bowling involves the use of commercial facilities, team managers will be responsible for seeing that the match is played before the deadline, turning in the correct scores to the Intramural Officer, and collecting money from his team to pay the lane manager for the match.

PETE GILCHRIST

Gilchrist Nears Mark

By Curry Kirkpatrick

"I try not to think about it."

These are the words of North Carolina's star wrestler Pete Gilchrist in reference to his closing in on Perrin Henderson's all-time Carolina record of 30 total points in a season.

The Charlotte senior, DTH Athlete of the Week by virtue of his sparkling performance last Tuesday night when he registered two successive pins in a rare wrestling double header, has scored 28 points in the seven matches he has been in and is now just two shy of Henderson's mark, set in 1959.

Sitting on a small table in the secluded wrestling room of Woollen Gym, the lean, 5-11 wrestler, who fights in the 130-pound weight division for coach Sam Barnes' grapplers, added, "I'm very aware of the record but the pressure in the matches is so great, anyway, that I try to keep my mind off it."

Boasts 5 Straight Pins

The 22-year-old English major, after dropping his first individual match in the opening meet against Washington and Lee, has come on strong in his assault on the record book by scoring pins (worth 5 points apiece) in his last five matches. With three more regular season meets plus the ACC Championships left to go, Pete is a cinch to smash the historic mark, and become Carolina's all-time point-getter.

Gilchrist began his grappling career as a 103-pound freshman at Charlotte's Woodbury Forest High School. He wrestled all during his secondary school years and grew slowly as he progressed in the different weight classes until, in his senior year, he reached 125 pounds.

Sat Out Last Season

The soft-spoken master of the mats has always fought in the 130-pound class, having performed both in his freshman and sophomore years. As a soph, Pete posted 21 points in addition to a 5-point win in the ACC Championships, giving a hint of things to come. But last year Gilchrist was forced to give up wrestling in order to devote more time to his studies and as a result, sat out the entire season.

1962 is a different story, however, and Gilchrist, whom Barnes had depended on to be his big man, has responded brilliantly.

Pete, who belongs to Delta Kappa Epsilon, the same fraternity that produced last year's top wrestling point man—Pope Shufford, spends his time water skiing and reading best sellers—when he isn't studying, wrestling, or thinking about the record.

Dogs in Alaska also have fleas.

Politicos Open Week Of Action

Cuban Refugee Scholarship Bill Held In Committee

By JIM CLOTFELTER

The Student and University Parties met last night to open a week of active student politics on both the campus and national levels.

SP members discussed the role of Student Legislature and heard program committee reports on the honor system.

The UP discussed its proposed convention procedure. No action had been taken at either party meeting by 8 last night.

Student Legislature, the Young Americans for Freedom, the New Left Club and the theater picketing group will also meet this week.

Committee Action

The Ways and Means Committee passed out favorably a bill to "clarify the order of presidential succession," and a bill to "provide for the effective review of presidential appointments."

A bill to appropriate $150 to the Honor System Commission was passed out favorably by legislative Finance Committee. A $600 Cuban refugee scholarship bill was held in the committee.

Reorganization

The Judicial Committee passed out favorably a bill reorganizing the attorney general's staff. Study of a legislative redistricting bill was postponed.

The bills passed by committees will come to the floor at Legislature Thursday night The nuclear testing resolution is expected to come to the floor, also.

A relatively new group, primarily composed of "leftist" graduate students. the New Left Club will meet Thursday night at 8:30 in Graham Memorial, Roland Parker lounge.

The group will discuss the draft program of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

YAF

The U N C chapter of the national "conservative" student organization, the Young Americans for Freedom, will meet Thursday night at 8 in the Law School courtroom.

Earl Baker, president of the UNC Young Republicans Club, will speak on "The Need for Unity in a Young Conservative Movement." The meeting is open to the public.

The Citizens Committee for Open Movies, which picketed the Chapel Hill theaters, will hold an open meeting Thursday at 8 in the St. Josephs Church to discuss future plans for the group.

GILBERT SELDES

Gilbert Seldes, Critic, To Speak At Symposium

Entertainment critic and author Gilbert Seldes will speak on the "Revolutions in Art" this spring as part of the Carolina Symposium.

The Symposium program on "Today's Revolutions" will feature Seldes and John Grierson the night of April 2.

Seldes, called a "career nonconformist in the world of ideas" by the Baltimore Evening Sun, has worked in radio, television, movies and the theater, and has done entertainment criticism.

TV Department

He created the television program department of CBS and helped to produce the historical feature film, "This Is America." He did a series, "Immigrants All-Americans All."

He published "The Seven Lively Arts" in 1924. A recent critic called it "a time-defying book."

Seldes wrote "The Great Audience" and "The Public Arts," and several studies of the motion picture industry.

Years of Locust

Other books by the critic are: "The Stammering Century," a study of eccentric political, social, and religious movements in the United States; "The Years of the Locust," on the early phases of the Great Depression, and "Mainland," a more generalized examination of the essential American character.

He has written serveral plays, including "Lysistrata."

Seldes began as a reporter and was briefly a war correspondent and political writer in America for L'Echo de Paris. He has been an editorial writer for Colliers, has written numerous articles for the Saturday Evening Post, and has been managing editor of The Dial.

Saturday Review

His article on mass communication, particularly television, appear regularly in the Saturday Review. In a recent issue of the magazine he was referred to as "the most experienced of our cultural philosophers."

Seldes, 68, graduated from Harvard University in 1914.

Laotian Troops Halt Communist Assault

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — Royal army troops repulsed a pro-Communist rebel assault on the Nam Tha front in Laos Monday, killing 14 enemy soldiers and capturing 10 others, the Defense Ministry said Tuesday.

The comminique gave no details of the attack except to say it was made northeast of the beleaguerer provincial capital in northwestern Laos. The rebel forces, backed by heavy artillery, have besieged the town for weeks.

Walker Nixed By Goldwater And J. Tower

Name Is Removed From GOP Program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker has been scratched from the program of a Madison Square Garden rally as a result of objections by GOP Sens. Barry Goldwater, Ariz., and John G. Tower, Tex., it was learned Tuesday.

Walker's invitation to appear at the March 7 rally in New York City was withdrawn by Young Americans for Freedom. The conservative youth group advised the former general his appearance might be taken as an endorsement of his Democratic candidacy for governor of Texas.

Walker said in Dallas, however, that as far as he knew, the invitation had not been withdrawn. He said he had been invited by Goldwater.

Meantime, Secretary of State Dean Rusk called in a group of senators to discuss U.S. Congo policy, including the administration's stand on a visa application by Katanga President Moise Tshombe, scheduled to be honored at the rally.

Says Application Incomplete

Tower, who has taken the lead in pressing the State Department to grant the visa, attended the lunch session. The State Department said recently it had not acted on Tshombe's visa because he filed an "incomplete application."

A spokesman for Tower said the question of Walker's appearance was raised with both Tower and Goldwater, who are to deliver speeches at the rally, before the former division commander jumped into the Texas gubernatorial race.

Tower, it was said, suggested that if Walker entered politics, he would become a partisan. The senator was said to have suggested it might be well to ask the former general to withdraw from the rally.

After Walker's candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination became official, officers of Young Americans for Freedom decided to make no change in the program, it was said.

Gives Group Choice

Goldwater then was reported to have told the group he would not participate if Walker was retained. Tower apparently shared this feeling but did not take as strong a position.

Reds Accuse U.S. Of Trying To Dodge Summit Meeting

Glenn May Blast Off This A.M.

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. was reported "smiling and anxious" to rocket into space early Wednesday —but stormy weather over the Atlantic gave him a bare 50-50 chance of taking off on America's first orbital flight.

At the same time, scientists were determined to give Glenn a "go" if they could find "a hole to shoot through" in any clouds over Cape Canaveral and if weather in recovery areas looked favorable. If at all possible, they did not want to disappoint the spaceman again.

From a technical standpoint, all phases of the man-in-orbit program were ready for a one, two, or three-orbit flight sometime between 7:30 a.m., EST, and 12:30 p.m., EST. Glenn's 10-story rocket and "Friendship-7" space capsule were reported in top condition.

However, Lt. Col. John A. (Shorty) Powers, astronaut spokesman, said chances for a launch were just about 50-50 because of the tricky weather that plagues the firing and recovery areas at this time of year. There were two chief areas of concern.

The National Aeronautics & Space Administration (NASA) reported that "marginal conditions, fresh winds and moderately high seas" were likely in the Atlantic where the 40-year-old Glenn would splash down after a one-orbit flight.

At the Cape Canaveral launch site, the forecast was for clouds or fog which could persist until mid-morning. Such conditions imperiled chances for a three-orbit flight. On such a ride, lasting nearly five hours, Glenn must be launched early enough to give recovery ships in the Atlantic at least three hours of daylight to search for him if necessary.

Thus the weather could close in on Glenn with a vise that limited him to a two-orbit flight, if any. The word from hangar 8 where Glenn spent his final pre-flight hours indicated he did not relish the unfavorable weather forecasts and the circumstances that have forced seven postponements of the flight in two months.

Powers said that all the Mercury astronauts, despite indoctrination on the uncertainties of rocketry, are "instinctively impatient." Even so, he said, they are "accustomed to waiting." He described Glenn as "smiling and anxious."

For Protection Of 25,000

Duke To Construct Fallout Shelters

Duke University's Fall Out Preparedness Committee has announced plans for the protection of 25,000 people from radioactive injury in the case of nuclear attack.

The Committee, composed of administration officials, the Duke radiation safety officer and a radioisotope expert, has been making plans since last July for the shelter of all the people making up the Duke community, including hospital patients, staff, students, employees and their families.

Plans call for the housing of groups of people in various campus buildings, which have areas that are under ground.

Not Prime

It is estimated by the panel that since Durham is not a prime target area, a minimum of one hour would be available to seek protection. Refugees would occupy the shelter areas, all on the Men's Campus (West) in an effort to eliminate duplication of effort.

Ten buildings on the West campus have been designated shelter areas. Mostly in corridors, these would have to be occupied for six hours and then radiation would be at a level low enough to allow moving into rooms. Fallout refugees would be divided into groups of about 200 to 400 each with a unit-control officer, medical personnel and a radiation control technician assigned to it.

Structures containing the groups would vary in the number accommodated, ranging from 351 in the Law School to 15,000 in the Medical Center.

Auxiliary Supply

Plans also include provisions for a 300-kilowatt auxiliary electric power supply and wells that would provide an emergency water supply in the event of the pollution of the local reservoirs, and fans for the ventilation of pure air.

Khruschev Opposes Inspection Plans

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union reaffirmed its opposition to disarmament controls Tuesday and said the United States is trying to sidestep Premier Kikita S. Khrushchev's call for a summit conference in Geneva.

The Kremlin gave Khrushchev's proposal wide publicity in the major official information outlets, indicating the Soviet leaders plan a tough stand on the proposal with fullest possible propaganda exploitation of any rejection by the West.

Publication of Khrushchev's letter to President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan bolstered the belief that the premier intends to attend the 18 - nation Geneva disarmament conference opening March 14 even if the Western leaders stay away.

While urging the convening of a top-level meeting, Moscow Radio made it clear that the Kremlin has not changed its opposition to Western demands for international controls over disarmament. It said the controls proposal is a Western attempt to set up a spy network.

"The plan of setting up an international system of espionage under the pretext of inspection has nothing in common with the cessation of nuclear tests and the solving of the disarmament problem," the radio said. "The Soviet Union has stated more than once that it would never accept such proposals."

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia was critical of Secretary of State Dean Rusk's statement that any summit meeting should be proceded by a foreign ministers' meeting.

Izvestia said Rusk's arguments "are absolutely untonable." Denying speculation that Khrushchev actually wants to discuss a wide range of East-West problems, Izvestia said the premier "stated with absolute clarity" that he wants to discuss only disarmament. It indicated that Khrushchev considers a summit "necessary" to tackle the crucial disarmament problem.

The official Communist party newspaper Pravda said Khrushchev's principal aim in proposing the summit conference is to promote "peaceful co-existence" between East and West.

Rusk Holds Talk With Ambassadors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk Tuesday discussed with the British and French ambassadors Allied diplomatic strategy which some high officials believes will lead to a summit conference with Russia this summer or fall.

Administration sources said the strategy is to hold out the possibility of a top level meeting as "bait" to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in an effort to secure uRssian concessions at the Geneva disarmament talks and to keep the Berlin crisis subdued.

House Speaks To Freshman Class Tonight

Chancellor Emeritus Robert House will be the guest speaker at the open meeting of the freshman class tonight in Carroll Hall at 7:30.

Details of two class dances will be announced at thi stime.

Class president Bob Spearman will give a summary of the accomplishments of the class officers since elections and committee reports wil be given on the activities and plans of the various committees. Discussions willl be held on projects for the class, also.

Y Shows Display On Camps

As a service to students desiring information about available summer work camps and projects in the U.S. and abroad, the YM-YMCA program committee this week will sponsor an "Invest Your Summer" information booth in the YWCA office.

Information concerning seminars, Seminars Abroad, Encampment for Citizenship, Experiment in International Living, Operations Crossroads Africa, World Council of Churches work camps, the Scandinavian International Seminar Program, and other camps and seminars will be available.

There will be an information booth inside the YWCA office from Tuesday through Friday where brochures on many of these summer projects will be displayed.

String Group Plays Sunday

The North Carolina String Quartet will present its annual spring concert in Hill Hall February 20 at 8 p.m.

The Quartet consists of four musicians who are connected with the University. They have played together nine years.

Edgar Alden, first violinist, teaches violin, music theory, music appreciation, and graduate courses in musicology, and is associate conductor of the University Symphony.

He is a graduate of Oberlin College, and returned to Chapel Hill after army service in World War II to complete his Ph.D. in music. In addition to teaching, he has an active concert schedule as a soloist and ensemble player.

His wife, Dorothy Alden, plays viola in the ensemble. A graduate of Oberlin, she teaches string classes. She is also a violinist, and often appears with her husband in duo-violin recitals.

Jean Heard, second violinist, studied with Ottokar Cadek at the University of Alabama and with Mischa Mischakoff and Edouard Dethier at the Julliard School of Music in New York. Her husband is Alexander Heard, political scientist and dean of the Graduate School.

Mary Gray Clarke, a part-time instructor in the Music Department, is cellist in the quartet, and also first cellist in the University Symphony. She holds master's degrees from the Manhattan School of Music and from UNC and she has performed in Germany.

Artist Shannon Opens Show

ARTIST ROBERT SHANNON explains the techniques of metal sculpture to an interested observer. The work on the left is "Trio," on the right is "Angel."

"Paintings Upstairs" serves both as a name and a direction to Chapel Hill's latest effort at communication between artists and art lovers.

The sign "Paintings Upstairs" hangs outside the Country Store on Franklin Street, across from the Zoom Zoom, and directs the public to a small second floor studio. Here Jane Haslam, a graduate in Art History from DePauw University, and Eleanor Smith who graduated from the Art Department of the University of North Carolina, have opened a gallery in which local artists can display their works for sale.

The gallery opened last Sunday with a one man show by Robert Shannon. In the future group shows by local artists will be featured. "Our purpose is to provide an outlet for local art" says Eleanor Smith." We plan to display works of high quality and those which will sell." Remarking that these are not always the same, she went on to say that she and her partner will select the works to be shown.

Robert Shannon has recently received his masters degree from the UNC art department and his works are well known in this area. His display includes paintings, metal sculptures, and graphic pieces.

According to Mr. Shannon, the most outstanding characteristic of his work is that it retains some degree of subject matter. His themes are generally universal and sometimes religious. Through a series of about 15 works he deals with a theme of "procession," which he attempts to convey on both an universal and individual level.

Mr. Shannon explains that his purpose is to "interpret artistically through the painting, intellectually through his subject and emotionally through the response he arouses in the observer." He finds that most of his paintings are interpreted by the public as he intends.

At this time Mr. Shannon's main interest is in metal sculpture. One of these works is an angel, which was begun as a Christmas tree ornament and ended up as a statue taller than the tree!

According to Eleanor Smith, Mr. Shannon's works are expensive for this area because the artist is so well recognized. The According to national scales they are inexpensive for the quality they represent.

SCIENTIFIC SOCIETY MEETING

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society will meet at 7:30 p.m. this Tuesday in 265 Phillips Hall. Papers will be presented by Dr. Walter R. Benson and Dr. William M. Brinkhous.

Threat Within

Much note has been made of late of the "re-awakening" of political consciousness in colleges. Students, we understand, are becoming increasingly better informed and more interested in the critical issues outside the academic environs.

Probably they are. At Carolina, the interest in current political issues outside the campus seems to be on the rise. Political controverty, and Carolina has not been withbecoming emotional as well as academic. Undergraduate concern with national and internaional policy and issues has given an immediacy to these problems. Internally, civil rights—especially in the South—is the focal point of activity ,and Carolina has not been without her version.

The highly publicized Rise of Conservatism has done its share toward injecting new spirit and life into tired or non-existent controversy of broad scope. The UNC chapter of the Young Americans for Freedom, as yet not as vocal as might be expected, promises to spark added interest. The New Left, at the other end of the scale, is causing comment.

Part of the result of this renewed interest in issues outside the narrow campus confines has been that campus government is threatened by inertia.

Nationally, the New York Times reported recently, student government and campus issues are taking a back seat to the broader, and infinitely more complex questions posed by the world outside. At Columbia, the student body recently voted to abolish the exisiting student governing body, and subsequently refused to re-establish a reformed version, while nationally-oriented groups flourished.

At Brown University, the student court—comparable to the Honor Council here—was abolished, with the consent of the student government.

Students at the University of Connecticut allowed the administration to take a hand in administering the student activities budget, which had previously been handled exclusively by the students.

At Carolina, fortunately, student government has been able to incorporate some of the interest in national and international problems into the local governmental system, primarily through affiliation with the National Student Association.

Still, outside interests are hurting local government. Many political aspirants regard campus politics as trivial and inconsequential in comparison with broader problems outside. Positions in student government are often seen as nice, token distinction with little real meaning outside the pages of the Yack.

Aspirants for campus office are generally glad-handers and tooth-flashers, out primarily for either personal glory or gratification of fraternity ego.

Fortunately, not all campus offices are filled with this breed. Some are held by responsible, concerned individuals whose interests are broadly based, yet are centered primarily on the campus, Too, student government here is less a token organization than on many campuses—although it must be said that student government seems to be less autonomous than it should be, since the administration is not always idulgent.

Student government, at any rate, needs to undergo a resurgence. This might involve a tug-of-war between the students and the administration, although past performance indicates that this might not be necessary.

Much of the administrative resistance to certain student government policies stems from a lack of genuine confidence in student ability, coupled with restraints imposed elsewhere—by parental demands and other outside influences. Still, much of it is caused by students themselves, students who fail to respond to the added responsibilities of self-government.

Student government, because of the rapid growth of the University and the changing demands that are posed because if it, is in a critical period. It has not sufficiently met the challenge of change boldly. Until it does, it is threatened more by its own shortcomings than by administrative limitations imposed upon it.

Powers' Return

U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers' early return from Soviet captivity may present the man with a more difficult test than his capture 21 months ago.

Whether this new breed of 20th century "spy" is, in fact, a national hero, a sort of prodigal son or an unfortunate victim of circumstance, it is unlikely that his return will be widely marked by honorific fatted calves.

So far as those questions involve his personal role in the U-2 affair, perhaps Powers himself can't be certain of the answers. And so far as those questions involve his courtroom statements which the Soviets put to such effective propaganda use, perhaps no answers can entirely remove the doubts that produced the questions in the first place.

This possibility will, we suspect, be more obvious to Francis Gary Powers than to anyone else. He can only know that his countrymen are asking hard, searching questions. He can't know how the answers to those questions sit.

HONOR COUNCIL

Suggestions For Improvement

In recent issues of the DTH the Honor Council has been questioned as to its veracity and practicality. It is our opinion that the editor, in questioning the methods in which the Honor Council conducts its trials and arrives at its judgments, is most definitely warranted and hits upon a very sore point in college life.

For it is one of the hard facts of college life that honor systems are dying out in colleges throughout our nation in an ever increasing rate. Mass cheating, according to many national magazines, seems to be running rampant throughout our colleges.

Now the question is why is this happening? Is it because the youth attending college today has caught some kind of moral cancer which is rotting away their sense of values? This seems to be the sort of attitude taken by many arm chair critic of youth today.

But this sort of criticism does little to alter or aid a bad situation. Taking our honor system as an example, the real problem seems to be within this system itself. In the first place, although students are given information about the honor system during orientation, they retain little of this information and care less about how the honor actually functions. This is no indictment on the complacency of the students, but more of an indictment on the honor system. For the system, by its very composure, does not allow for student participation. The closest the students ever get to the honor system is when they elect members to serve on the honor council. (As for the dubious qualifications of these members, the editor of this paper has already expressed our views).

After electing the members of the council, the student body loses all contact with the honor system as far as participation, unless, of course, they have the misfortune of appearing before the council. Yet, how can the honor system survive when the students do not participate in its functioning?

This exclusion of participation of the student body is our main objection to our present honor system. Our other objections concern the procedure of the honor council in conducting its cases. These objections center around the fact that honor council members act as both judge and jury. We feel the two should be separate and therefore recommend the following changes:

(1) The honor council should be maintained as a means of supplying a permanent foreman for a jury. Violations are to be reported to this council which is still elected by the student body.

(2) A judge from the law school faculty should preside at all trials.

(3) The Attorney General and his staff should be members of the law school and should supply the prosecuting attorney.

(4) The defense attorney should also be made available by the law school. The defendant may plead his own defense.

(5) A jury should be elected at random from the student body. Members of this jury, consisting of eleven selected students plus one foreman from the council, will be cross examined by each attorney and can be disqualified if warranted by a bias or any other valid reason.

(6) A unanimous vote is required to find a defendant guilty.

(7) Whether the trial is open to the public is up to the defendant and his lawyer.

(8) Court records should be kept of each trial and be made available to the public at all times. Precedents should be given careful consideration in the judging of future trials.

Of course, no system is entirely accurate, but we feel that if given considerable thought the merits of the above system can be seen.

The council would be available for reporting infractions and also would serve to supply a permanent foreman which would rotate with each case. Therefore the same member would not be present at all trials eliminating the possibility of a professional jury system which could result in the jury serving as both judge and jury.

By having a judge from the law school faculty we feel that he would be able to preside with a more mature mind and, of course, more legal experience. Considering the seriousness of the nature of these cases, this is of the utmost importance. The importance of having law students serve as both prosecuting and defense attorney is obviously based on their technical knowledge of the law. Furthermore, since this might be considered a proving ground for these law students, all facets of each case would be thoroughly explored and a more just decision arrived upon.

The most important point is the selection of the jury. Under present form it would appear that the council hearing the cases is both judge and jury and could easily show bias or even worse, disinterest. In our suggested plan the student body would supply the jurors. Subpoenaed by the council, they would be cross examined until eleven members have been agreed upon by both attorneys. The twelfth member, as previously mentioned, is the permanent foreman from the council. This system would result in a new, more interested, unbiased jury.

This would also make the honor system more binding and successful as each student would become an integral part of it, not an outsider.

To remove as much doubt as possible, verdicts must be reached unanimously. This could raise doubts in peoples minds as to hung juries and other complications, but in a question as serious as this—a student's future—there should be no doubt whatsoever. All too often the attitude seems to be one of running through many cases in a relatively short period of time without consideration to "due process of law". Students of law school and certainly their professors would be considerably more on guard against such an occurrence, and there would be far less chances of railroading.

This proposed system has, no doubt, many objections and shortcomings, but we feel that if examined closely this system would be more authentic and accurate than the present system. Besides giving the defendant some assurance of legality, it involves the entire campus in a large campus community. We believe a jury system would give the honor system the cohesion it needs to function as our way of life. In short, the jury system is a way in which the student body can identify itself with the honor system. As of this moment we as students lack this identity, and until we have this identity we can never truly say that we live under and by the honor system.

If you'd rather sit with your girl and hold hands than go to a basketball game. (Or you might be a cheapskate.)

On Test Ban

Coroner's Verdict

The Soviet Union killed the test-ban treaty at Geneva on January 29th and President Kennedy buried it at his press conference recently. There is very little chance that it can be resurrected. Thirty-nine months of effort and 353 patient negotiating sessions have thus come to naught.

President Kennedy dashed remaining hope for a treaty by disclosing that this country would insist upon an inspection system to safeguard it against the possibility of secret preparation for a nuclear test. The Soviet Union which already has refused to agree to inspections required to determine if an explosion has taken place is hardly likely to consent to inspections needed to discover if preparations are under way.

Disarmament, it is pretty clear at this point, is going to have to be sought by another route. There is no longer any international confidence in the utility of test-ban negotiations. It is too bad, for these negotiations were once viewed as the most hopeful of all the disarmament efforts since World War II.

The United States position on the test-ban treaty has shifted in the past. This country once went so far as to offer on April 13, 1957, to join in an un-inspected ban on atmospheric explosions. That is very far from the new position stated by President Kennedy. Yet, this is not sheer whimsicality.

The sudden suspension of the test moratorium painfully reminded the United States that it is difficult for an open society to maintain a readiness to test and relatively easy for a closed society to do so. Out of these conclusions came the President's anxiety to forestall a treaty without some assurance against surprise testing. It is not clear how persuasive such an inspection of preparations would have to be, but apparently the President did not have in mind a search for "preparations" going back to the scientists' blackboard but only an inspection going back to the construction stages and involving minimum surveillance at a relatively few points. However little inspection might be involved it surely is more than the Russians would allow.

The disarmament sessions at Geneva next month will commence under a cloud that will not be dissipated by the West's effort to lift the meeting to a foreign-minister level. Yet, perhaps it was time to have a coroner's verdict on the dead test-ban treaty. It is difficult to imagine a bridge between the positions of the Soviet Union and of the United States. Perhaps it is time to study the feasibility of the control of vehicles for the delivery of nuclear weapons and other means of arms limitation. In any case there is not much use in repining over the fate of the test-ban-treaty. The nations must resume the search for another formula by which they can achieve the first steps toward arms control and arms limitation.

Romney Could Spark Political Awakening

George Rommey is off and running as a Republican candidate for governor of Michigan. And many of the cheers of encouragement you hear come from those who look forward to the day George Romney takes off after the presidency.

Some Republicans, in fact, already are saying that the man is almost too good to be true.

Consider:

His is the classic rags-to-riches success story, from beet-picker to corporation president.

He has an evangelistic fervor for the causes he believes in. He's handsome. He radiates personal charm. He's filled to overflowing with self-confidence.

He is a proven advocate of "non-partisanship." He has a model family, and is a strong leader in a non-controversial religious sect.

And finally, he has a good chance of winning the Michigan governorship, a considerable achievement for a man on his first venture into party politics.

* * *

One can understand the joy in the GOP camp when one looks at the other potential candidates in '64. Goldwater is committed to the conservatives, a minority group. Rockefeller has been downgraded by most professional politicians primarily because of his divorce. Nixon already has lost to Kennedy once, and may well lose the California governor's race this fall.

Each major candidate, then, is placed at a disadvantage before the campaign even starts.

But Romney? He's got that thing called mass appeal, at least for the present.

Though nominally a Republican, he has severely criticized the Republican Party as being too business-oriented. This could gain him Democratic votes.

He slaps the Democratic Party, on the other hand, as "too much of a union party," which could get him votes from the anti-union forces. And this statement shouldn't hurt him too much with the unions, because Romney in 1961 signed a three-year contract with the United Auto Workers which included the first employee profit-sharing plan in the auto industry.

* * *

It is, of course, premature today to say that Romney will be a candidate in 1964. He's got to win that governorship first.

But present Gov. John B. Swainson is a lackluster sort of fellow, lacking the spark of magnetism that made Mennen G. Williams a perennial winner. He won the governorship by only 40,000 votes in 1960, in a state that has voted strongly Democrat for the past seven terms.

This, then, will be a governor's race worth watching. If Romney wins, the victory will give national Republican politics a much-needed shot of adrenalin, which in turn will cause a flurry of defensive activity among the Democrats.

And a strong revival of interest in two-party politics never hurt a city, a state or a nation.

175 UNC Seniors Do Teaching Work

By CHUCK MOONEY

CHAPEL HILL — The largest number of future teachers in UNC history will enter public schools this spring for pactice teaching said Assoc. Prof. Neill A. Rosser recently.

More than 25 schools will get 175 UNC student teachers.

Part of them—those who specialize in social studies, sciences and English—will do practice teaching for two short periods of time instead of one long period as before.

"While they're in University classes, students don't see conditions as they actually are," said Dr. Rosser. "By sending them out to look at public schools before we start classes, we hope to help them understand what we are talking about in our classes.

"It should also give them an idea of what they will be doing. They can make plans for their practice teaching while they're still at the University."

The student teachers are spending the first two weeks in UNC School of Education classes learning principles of teaching and planning for courses they will teach in public schools.

They go to their public school assignments on Feb. 19 for two weeks to see what the actual conditions are.

On March 5 they come back for four weeks of classes at UNC. Those who will teach in the elementary schools will study child growth and development, elementary school organization and methods of elementary school teaching. Those who will teach in high school will study adolescent growth and development, high school organization and methods of teaching high school courses. All will study educational psychology and other education courses.

The students start teaching for six weeks on April 2 in public schools under the supervision of regular teachers and a traveling university supervisor.

University exams and evaluation of the practice teaching begin in May.

Student teachers will be assigned to: Glenwood Elementary, Jr. High and Sr. High schools in Chapel Hill; Broughton Sr. High, Daniels Jr. High, Morson Jr. High and Martin Jr. High schools in Raleigh; Durham Sr. High, Brogden Jr. High and the elementary schools in Durham; elementary schools in Goldsboro; Reynolds Sr. High and the Jr. High schools in Winston-Salem; South Alamance High, Pittsboro High, Hillsboro High, Sanford Jr. High and Sr. High, Cary High, Graham High and Durham County's Northern High.

"We arranged with the public schools for 175 positions," said Dr. Rosse. "We'll assign the individual student a position on the basis of his qualifications, personality, specialities and location preferences."

CALL UP WINGMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)— The New York Rangers have called up winger Red Gilbert on a conditional basis. If the 20-year-old Gilbert makes good, the Rangers will send a player in exchange to their Kitchner, Ont., fram club in the Eastern Pro League.

DIETER MAHNKE

Mahnke Heads Student U. N. Meet At NCS

UNC will be among the approximately fifty colleges and universities sending delegates to the fifth Middle South U. N. Model General Assembly which opens for a two-day session at N. C. State College on Thursday. Presiding at the sessions will be Dieter Mahncke, a UNC senior, who is this year's president.

Three delegations of Carolina students will represent the U.S.S.R., Mexico, and The Netherlands at the model assembly.

Phillip Ray Matthews, a senior whose major is political science, is chairman of the Russian Delegations. Serving with him will be Bob Powell, Carol Krapf, Curtis Gans, Jubee Mullis, and Roy Kirk, Jr. Last year's UNC U.S.S.R. delegation was chosen as the most outstanding delegation attending.

Hugo Spechar, a sophomore, will head the Mexican delegation. Others on the delegation will be Hildy Kay, Marie Overby and Robert Glenn Sherer, Jr.

Albert E. Fairchild, also a sophomore, will head The Netherlands delegation. Delegation members will be Marcia O'Donnell, F. William Loescher, Clare Stoddard, William R. Bowerman, and Mary Shugart.

Final meeting of all three Carolina delegations will be held Wednesday, 7 p.m., in the cabinet room of the YM-YWCA, 2nd floor, Y building.

Mrs. Violet Wurfel of the UNC political science department, will act as faculty adviser to the Carolina delegations.

Israeli Students Chase Off Reds Who Insult T. Kennedy

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A small group of Communists Tuesday shouted anti-American slogans at Edward (Ted) M. Kennedy during a visit to the Hebrew University but was routed by other students after a brief scuffle.

President Kennedy's youngest brother, on a private two-day visit to Israel, was later to meet Premier David Ben-Gurion and President Itzvak Ben-Zvi.

A small Communist faction began shouting "Kennedy go home" and waving anti-American placards when he walked onto the campus of the university where he was to speak to the student body. Other students in the crowd of 2,000 waiting outside the lecture room promptly bore down on the Communists. The hecklers were shoved aside, their posters torn down and their jeers drowned out by cheers.

The signs, in red ink, read: "Kennedy personna non grata," "Hands off Communist party U.S.A." and "Free American political prisoners."

AF Riflemen Get 13th Win

Cadets on the Carolina AFROTC Rifle Team gained their 13th victory in 14 matches this season in a meet here Saturday. The win was over teams from Air Force, Army and Naval ROTC units in the annual UNC-Duke-State Invitational Rifle Match.

The UNC AFROTC shooters took the match with 1360 of a possible 1500 points. Other team scores were: N. C. State Army ROTC—1333; UNC NROTC—1329; Duke AFROTC—1026.

Carolina AFROTC Cadet Leigh Beadle of Arlington, Va. was the highest individual scorer with 291 of a possible 300 points. Runners-up were Kaliski of Duke with 281 and Bumgardner of State with 278 points.

MATHEMATICS COLLOQUIUM

Professor Thomas R. Brahana of the University of Georgia will speak on "Embedding Two dimensional Complexes in E3" at a UNC mathematics colloquium at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 21, in 383 Phillips Hall. The colloquium will be preceded by a coffee hour at 3:30 p.m. in the Phillips Hall lounge.

Germans Club To Sponsor Twist Show

The German Club has lined up a twisting, rock-and-roll show for the winter concert on February 17, from 3 to 5 p.m.

Four acts will include Ernie K-Doe, the Isley Brothers, Lee Dorsey, and the Five Royales. All will be backed with their own bands.

"Ya Ya", "Do Re Me", and "Certain Girl," "Mother-in-Law," by Dorsey and K-Doe respectively are stand-out hits of both performers.

The Five Royales sang and made popular, "To Tell the Truth," Ray Charles then picked it up. Their specialty is rhythm and blues. RCA has recorded the Isley Brothers on their "Shout" album.

Carolina Meets State On Court, In Pool

Heels Seek To Halt Streak

By ED DUPREE

Carolina's Tar Heels will have two objectives when they meet N. C. State tonight at 8:15 at Raleigh in an Atlantic Coast Conference headliner.

Both objectives concern streaks, Carolina's personal three game losing steak and a string of eight consecutive regular season victories over Coach Everett Case's Wolfpack.

The win skein against the Raleigh basketballers started with an 81-69 Tar Heel victory in 1958 and ends with last month's 66-56 encounter in Chapel Hill.

The last time a State team defeated UNC in the regular season was in the first game of the 1958 series when the Pack edged Carolina 58-57 in overtime. Oddly enough, that last Wolfpack victory was in Woollen Gym. It was way back in 1956, when State dropped Carolina 79-73, that the Raleigh boys last won a regular season game from UNC in Reynolds Coliseum.

Including the ACC tournament and Dixie Classic, UNC has lost only one of its last ten games to State. Case's crew stomped the 1959 team in the finals of the tournament by 80-56.

Longest Since 1955

The current three game losing streak at the hands of Duke, Maryland, and Wake Forest, has pushed the Carolina record to 6-5 overall, 5-4 in the ACC. A check of the records reveals that a Carolina team has not lost three games in a row since 1955. Frank McGuire's team was sailing along with a 9-5 record that season, and then lost three consecutive games. A victory over Wake Forest broke the streak, but the '55 squad became UNC's only team of the past pecade with a losing record when it ended the season by losing to State, Duke, and Wake Forest.

The three games which Carolina has lost in a row this season were termed key games by Coach Dean Smith. The fourth key game is today's battle. Since his team lost three key contests, Smith would like nothing better than to win the fourth one and stay in the running for regular season laurels in the ACC.

Hustled Against Wake

Smith commended his team's shooting and hustle against Wake Forest. "The boys played well against Wake, but most important, they showed a great deal of spark and hustle."

The starting unit for UNC tonight will be the same that started against Wake Forest Saturday. Donnie Walsh and Larry Brown will patrol the backcourt posts, Jim Hudock will start at center, and Bryan McSweeney and Jim Donohue will be the forwards.

Starters for Ev Case's team, now 7-3 in the ACC, and 8-4 overall, should be flashy Ken Rohloff and Jon Speaks at the guards, Russ Marvel at center ,and John Punger and Pete Auksel at forwards.

JOHN PUNGER, 6-5 junior forward, will be a big man for N. C. State in tonight's UNC-State basketball game at Raleigh.

Dieter Krause Leaves School

Dieter Krause, a top reserive on Carolina's varsity basketball team and a strater fo rthe first three games, will not be in school this semester. The 6-5 forward fell below the minimum quality point average to remain in school and was not allowed to register for the spring semester.

The Norfolk, Va., basketballer, who was born in Germany, was a valuable substitute for Coach Dean Smith. He had a 4-1 average for the opening ten games of the semester and his height will be missed in the season's second half.

Smith said that Krause will take correspondence courses and come to summer school in order to be eligible for basketball next year.

Champions Meet Duke All-Stars

The Carolina Champions put their 14-0 record on the line Thursday night when they face Howard Hurt's Duke All-Stars at 8 in the Durham high school gym.

The contest is a benefit for the Heart Fund and tickets can be purchased for one dollar at the door.

The Champions, ex-UNC stars, feature Lennie Rosenbluth, Ray Stanley, Tony Radovich, Danny Lotz, Al Long, and Joe Quigg. Doug Moe played with the Champs before joining the army.

Besides Hut, the All-Stars will go with Doug Kistler, Carroll Youngkin, John Frye, and Jay Beal. The Champions have downed the Stars in five previous meetings.

UELSES TO COMPETE

QUANTICA, Va. (UPI)—Officials at the Quantico Marine base expect pole vaulter John Uelses to compete in the National AAU meet in New York Feb. 24. Uelses, the only man to vault 16 feet, is recovering from a virus that has kept him out of recent competition.

Swimmers Meet For Second Place

By Curry Kirkpatrick

The UNC swimming team, a 67-28 victor over Virginia last Saturday, travels to Raleigh today to meet North Carolina State in an all-important ACC match scheduled for 4:00 in the State College Pool.

Coach Pat Earey's mermen, who dropped a heart-breaking 49-46 decision to Maryland on Friday thus giving the Terps the regular season Championship, are still very much in the running for post-season honors.

A win today at State would give the Blue Dolphins second place in the ACC behind unbeaten Maryland. Since the final ACC Champion is determined this year on the basis of both the regular-season finish and a team's finish in the ACC Championship races on Feb. 22, Carolina can still pull it out.

But it won't be easy. Coach Willis Casey's Wolfpack tankers have lost only to Maryland and powerful Florida and this afternoon will be out to advance their own interests on the title.

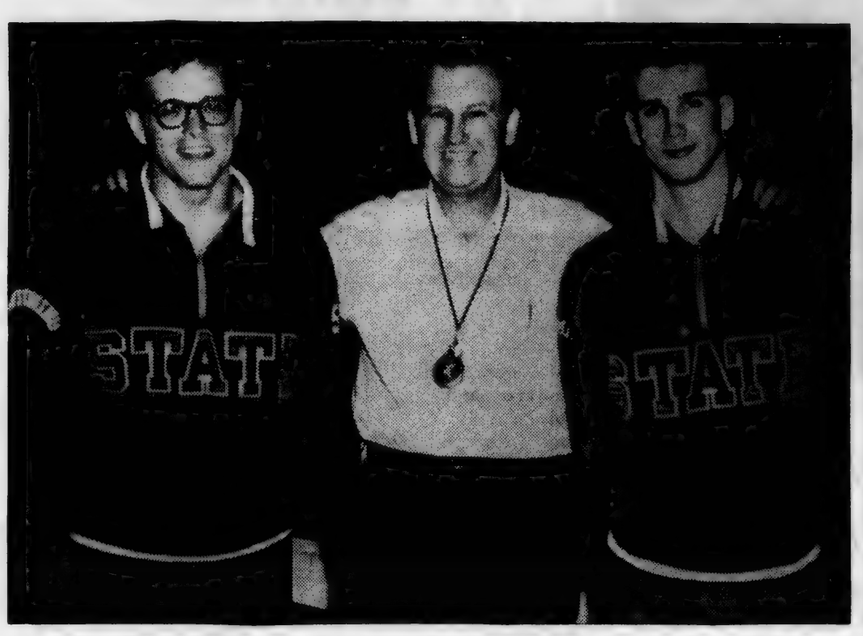
The Raleigh mermen, ACC co-champions last year with Carolina and Maryland, are led by All-Americans Pete Fogarasy and Ed Spencer. Fogarasy, a junior from New Haven, Conn., set two ACC records in the Conference Championships last year. He was timed in 1:05 for a 100-yard breastroke mark and also broke the 200-yard breastroke record with a clocking of 2:20.7.

Spencer, who was the 1961 ACC individual champion in the 400-yard freestyle and 200-yard butterfly events, holds no less than three conference records. The Wallingford, Pa., native owns marks of 4:10.6 in the 400 free, 53.4 in the 100 butterfly and 2:04.9 in the 200 butterfly.

Against the perenially - strong State mermen, Earey will send Carolina co-captains Bob Briggs, and Bob Bilbro; ace backstroker Thompson Mann, versatile Jim Huffman, and distance man Willie Bloom, himself a conference record-holder in the 200-yard freestyle.

PALMER MOVES UP

DUNEDIN, Fla (UPI)—Arnold Palmer has moved into second place in the money standings on the winter professional golf tour. Palmer's triumph in the Phoenix Open gave him a total of $12,425 for the year. Gene Littled leads the unofficial money-winning list with $14,186.66.



N. C. State swimming coach Willis Casey poses between two of his bread and butter swimmers. Pete Fogarasy (L) is an All-American breaststroker from New Haven, Conn., and Ed Spencer (R) is an All-American butterfly performer from Wallingford, Pa. Both of the Wolfpack All-Americans are juniors and should be the top men in their events in today's swim meet.

UNC Freshmen Meet State In Varsity Preliminary

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

North Carolina's freshman basketball team goes after win number 12 tonight when it faces the State College frosh in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum.

Coach Ken Rosemond's Tar Babies, who polished off Wake Forest 83-70 in their last outing, have already beaten State twice this year. On January 8, the Carolina frosh nipped State 73-70 with departed star Billy Cunningham's season high of 31 points making the difference. Nine days later, the Tar Babies again whipped State, this time at Chapel Hill by 84-72, as Cunningham made his last appearance in a freshman uniform.

Saturday, Rosemond's cagers looked sharp in the win over Wake as they returned to their deadeye shooting habits. The frosh shot 50 per cent from the floor as Ray Respess and Jay Neary lead the way with 26 and 24 points, respectively.

Neary, the 6-2 Cambria Heights, N. Y. flash, who leads the frosh season scoring, will be joined in the backcourt by 5-11 Bill Taylor. Taylor, elevated to a starting slot in the absence of Cunningham, turned in his best performance of the season Saturday as he scored 10 points and played a sparkling floor game.

Rosemond, in addition to 6-4 center Respess, will start Pud Hassell and Bill Brown at the forward slots. Brown led all rebounders in the Wake clash with 10 and Hassell played his usual fine defensive game before being hampered with fouls.

State is led by their 6-8 center Charlie Grob. The Roselle, N. J. husky has been a hard man to move under the boards in the two previous contests, and will have a distinct height and weight advantage over his Carolina counterpart, Respess.

Coach Lou Pucillo's Wolflets also feature two sharpshooting forwards in 6-5 Larry Worsley and 6-2 John Arganbright. Arganbright, who chose State over his Columbus, Ohio hometown school—Ohio State University, pumped in 21 points in the 84-72 loss to Carolina.

— Tickets —

A limited number of tickets to today's UNC-N. C. State basketball game at Raleigh are available at the Woollen Gym ticket office. The tickets are on sale to students at regular price.

Students whose names begin with the letter N-Z still have priority on tickets for the Duke-UNC game on Feb. 24. The priority period runs through Wednesday. Beginning Thursday morning tickets will be available on a first come, first served basis.

UNC students can attend the North - South doubleheader in Charlotte Friday and Saturday for only $1 per night. A student ID card must be presented at a special gate at the Charlotte Coliseum in order to purchase a ticket.

Last Second Basket Gives Theta Chi Victory

By John Montague

A number of lop-sided victories and Theta Chi's thrilling double overtime triumph over the Phi Delt Joints highlighted Monday's intramural cage action. Such scores as 66-0, 58-24, 50-12, 64-12, and 53-19 dotted the day's card, while Andy Beale's two overtime goals helped Theta Chi punch out its 28-26 win over the Joints.

All of Monday's games were Fraternity White contests. Here is a brief re-cap:

Chi Psi Styes 54, Delta Sig 29

Fred Seely dropped in 25 points as the Chi Psi crew had rather smooth sailing in this one. Larry Foust's 10 points topped the Stars' scoring.

Phi Delt 66, Beta Szbticks 0

This is the second shut-out of the season in the frat circuit. Joe Webb was high man with 15 points, followed by Ed Pleasants and Charlie Jonas with 14, and Tom Rogers with 11.

Beta GL-70 50, Tep Tidbits 12

Sae Studs 53, Du Lakers 19

The Studs had very little trouble in demolishing the Lakers. John May with 13, Polk Dillon with 12, and Jim Barton with 11 led the way.

ATO Rooters 64, Dke Straf 12

Pika Pandas 63, Pi Polecats 34

Smith bucketed 22 and Heilis hit for 15 to pace the Pandas in this rout. Lohr and Richards also contributed to the PIKA cause, each getting 10 points.

Phi Delt Squirrels 52, Chi Phi 5, 24

An evenly-balanced scoring punch won the Squirrels an easy victory here. Paul Burroughs, George Cox, and Kent Campbell each netted an even dozen, while Dick Hendrickson chipped in with 10.

Tep Tepids 43, Beta Rinkydinks 14

Dke Whites 43, Chi Psi Psychos 21

Bob Gray, McMillan, and Tim Burnett combined for 13, 12 and 10 points respectively as the Whites marched right over the Psychos.

ATO Drills 40, Phi Phantoms 25

In one of the closer contests of the day, Pete Green's 12 points led the way for the ATO boys. John Tedesco's 10-point output was tops for the Phantoms.

Phi Kap Flashes 39, Du Hawks 20

The Phi Kap's had better luck in this one, with Marine's 12 points paving the way. Ron McArthur matched this total for the Hawks to share the scoring honors.

Pika Pounders 31, Sae Eaters 26

Steady Cash netted 15 points for the Eaters, but it was not quite enough as the Pounders, led by Jules Johnson's 13 points, slipped by SAE by five points.

There were three forfeits to round out the Monday's results. The PIKA Peaks forfeited to the Sigma Nu Losers, the Kappa Psi Scrub to the Kappa Sig Plumbers, and the Kappa Psi Celts to the Chi Phi Foxes.

In the handball tournament, the only match played Monday saw TEP eliminate Lambda Chi. The DKS Dollars took an 8-6, 8-10, 11-9 victory over the Pi Lambs in the volleyball tournament's only action of the afternoon.

HOW TO BE A BWOC

Ladies, let me be frank. The days of the college year dwindle down to a precious few. And some of you—let's face it—have not yet become BWOC's. Yes, I know, you've been busy what with going to class and walking your cheetah, but really, ladies, becoming a BWOC is so easy if you'll only follow a few simple rules.

The first and most basic step on the road to being a BWOC is to attract attention. Get yourself noticed. But be very, very careful not to do it the wrong way. I mean, any old girl is bound to be noticed if she goes around with a placard that says, "HEY! LOOKIT ME!" Don't you make such a horrid gaffe. On your placard put: "ZUT! REGARDEZ MOI!" This, as you can see, lends a whole new dimension of tone and dignity.

Once you have been noticed, it is no longer necessary to carry the placard. It will suffice if, from time to time, you make distinctive noises. If, for instance, every three or four minutes you cry, "Whippoorwill!" you cannot but stay fresh in the minds of onlookers.

We come now to clothes, a vital accessory to the BWOC—indeed, to any girl who wishes to remain out of jail. But to the BWOC clothes are more than just a decent cover; they are, it is not too much to say, a way of life.

This spring the "little boy look" is all the rage on campus. Every coed, in a mad effort to look like a little boy, is wearing short pants, knee sox, and boyshirts. But the BWOC is doing more. She has gone the whole hog in achieving little boyhood. She has frogs in her pockets, scabs on her knees, down on her upper lip, and is followed everywhere by a dog named Spot.

All this, of course, is only by day. When evening falls and her date comes calling, the BWOC is the very picture of chic femininity. She dresses in severe, simple basic black, relieved only by a fourteen pound charm bracelet. Her hair is exquisitely coiffed, with a fresh rubber band around the pony tail. Her daytime sneakers have been replaced by fashionable high heeled pumps, and she does not remove them until she gets to the movies.

After the movies, at the campus cafe, the BWOC undergoes her severest test. The true BWOC will never, never, never, order the entire menu. This is gluttony and can only cause one's date to blanch. The true BWOC will pick six or seven good entrees and then have nothing more till dessert. This is class and is the hallmark of the true BWOC.

Finally, the BWOC, upon being asked by the cigarette vendor which is the brand of her choice, will always reply, "Marlboro, of course!" For any girl knows that a Marlboro in one's hand stamps one instantly as a person of taste and discernment, as the possessor of an educated palate, as a connoisseur of the finer, loftier pleasures. This Marlboro, this badge of savoir-faire, comes to you in flip-top boxes that flip, or in soft packs that are soft, with a filter that filters and a flavor that is flavorful, in all fifty states of the Union and Duluth. © 1962 Max Shulman

Legislature Will Debate A-Test Plan

Several Other Bills On Floor Tonight

Final action will be taken on several bills of importance when the Student Legislature meets tonight at 7:30.

One of these, the resolution against nuclear testing, has been pending for several weeks, and extensive debate is expected.

The resolution condemns the Soviet Union's "unilateral repudiation" of the nuclear testing ban and urges the United States government to refrain from resuming testing in the atmosphere.

Scholarship

Another bill that will be up for consideration tonight will be one to appropriate $600 for a scholarship for a Cuban refugee student.

A bill to provide effective legislative review of presidential appointments is scheduled for consideration as well as a bill to clarify the succession to the office of President, in the event of his inability to fulfill his duties.

A bill to allot $150 for the Honor System Commission will be considered during the session. This money would be used to have three more copies of the Honor System film made for use during the Commission's tour of high schools this spring.

George Rosental, chairman of the Judicial Committee, said that there was a strong possibility that the bill on redistricting which has been in the Judicial Committee may come on the floor tonight also. This bill would provide new and more equal zoning of the legislative and judicial districts.

There will also be consideration of a bill providing for the election of four of the five delegates to the National Student Congress of the National Student Association, the other two delegates, the president and vice-president of the student body will be automatic delegates.

Junior Class Picks Dr. Boyd As Its Teacher-Of-The-Month

Dr. Bernard Boyd has been selected as the Junior Class Teacher-of-the-Month for February. The James A. Gray Professor of Biblical Literature is the first to receive the award. The selection was announced by Junior Class President Richard Vinroot and Jeff Guller, chairman heading the project.

Dr. Boyd is recognized principally on the UNC campus for his course on "The Origins of the Bible," known as Religion 38. To thousands of Carolina students Dr. Boyd has imparted an interpretation of the Bible that is easy to grasp and meaningful within the context of our modern times. His teachings provide a fresh approach to the subject matter that transcends mere religious dogma. Essentially, he has treated the course as objectively as possible, without deference to any particular theological views.

"It is this honest objectivism, combined with a delightful, sometimes shocking sense of humor that has earned him the praise and respect of so many students. To establish a point clearly, Dr. Boyd will not hesitate to refer to Biblical wearing apparel as London Fogs and Weejuns."

From English To Theology

Born in Mount Pleasant, South Carolina, 52 years ago, the professor attended Presbyterian College (A.B.) and received a Master's degree in English at Princeton University. Originally he aspired to teach English in college but changed his mind and went to the Theological Seminary at Princeton. His formal education was terminated with his Th.D. at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia.

A highlight of Dr. Boyd's interesting career was his service as a chaplain in World War II. From 1943 to 1945 he was with the U.S. Marines in the Pacific Area and was the recipient of a Purple Heart during the Okinawa campaign.

Before coming to Carolina, Dr. Boyd taught at both Presbyterian (1936-1946) and Davidson College (1947-1950) as Professor of Bible. He has been at UNC ever since, assuming the position of Chairman of the Department of Religion just two years later, which he held until 1960.

Dr. Boyd's talents have not been limited to the confines of the Carolina campus. He is in continual demand as a theologian and speaker throughout the country. A few years ago he filmed a Biblical series for use on national educational television, and three of his courses have appeared on WUNC-TV. The University has previously singled out his excellence by selecting him for a Tanner Award for Distinction in College Teaching.

Student Party Caucuses Tonight

The Student Party will caucus tonight at 6:30 in Graham Memorial's Grail Room. Discussion will include the role of Legislature on resolutions concerning national and international issues, party floor leader Dwight Wheless said Tuesday.

UP Will Revamp Party Convention

The University Party moved to amend its by-laws through a basic change in convention procedure in a meeting Tuesday night.

The party unanimously passed a resolution which would set up the spring nominating convention on a system basically oriented around national convention processes. Each dorm, fraternity, or sorority having a minimum of five UP members would be allowed a five-member delegation with each member possessing a vote. For every additional UP member the institution would be allotted an extra delegate.

Each residence would be required to file a list of UP members with the sergeant-at-arms 24 hours before the convention so that the size of its delegation could be computed. In addition, each delegation would be required to have a minimum of five delegates on the floor at all times to keep voting privileges. "In this way, block voting and constant movement on the convention floor would be eliminated," said Inman Allen, party member and leader in the move for amendment.

Bill Criswell, party chairman and originator of the idea for the new procedure, said, "Many dorm students have refrained from attending UP conventions because they felt they didn't have a chance . . . the responsibility for a smooth democratic convention shall lie on the shoulders of the delegates."

In other action the party heard that $150 each had been given to the Freshman class, the Sophomore class, and the Carolina Symposium.

Hillel Student Cabinet Elected

Jerry Jacobs has been elected president of the Hillel Student Cabinet for the year 1962-1963. Jacobs is a member of Pi Lambda Phi Fraternity, and manager of the Hillel basketball team.

Pharmacists Hear Med Professors

Three professors of the School of Medicine will address pharmacists here tonight at 8 at UNC School of Pharmacy.

This is the second of a six-meeting series of a drug symposium sponsored by the School of Pharmacy.

The speakers will be Dr. William J. Cromartie, professor of bacteriology and director of Bacteriological and Serological Laboratories; Dr. William R. Straughn Jr., associate professor of bacteriology and Dr. William K. Spitznagel, associate professor of bacteriology.

The first three meetings of the symposium are being devoted to antibiotic drugs. The remaining three sessions will concern various pharmaceuticals used in the treatment of cardiovascular (heart) diseases.

The meetings will continue through March 4.

The speakers for next week, Wednesday, Feb. 21, are Drs. Cromartie and Spitznagel and Dr. John H. Schwab, associate professor of bacteriology.

'Third Degree'

Complaints About Long Are Aired In SP Meet

Honor System Talks Highlight Conclave

Men's Honor Council Chairman George Campbell Tuesday night aired student complaints that Asst. Dean of Student Affairs William G. Long has used "third degree" tactics in questioning defendants prior to their hearings.

Honor system talks by Campbell and Jey Deifell, chairman of the Honor System Commission, opened a three-and-a-half hour meeting. The SP program committee had requested them to give a system presentation.

"I've been told by quite a few defendants," Campbell said, "that Dean Long gave them the 'third degree' when he talked with them prior to their hearings."

"I haven't been aware of any such practices being used," Dean Long said yesterday when asked about the charges, "but I can't prevent people saying things about me."

When asked about Campbell's making the statement at an open meeting, Dean Long stated, "I think it's a fair comment and he has every legal right to his opinion.

"I think Mr. Campbell is one of the finest chairmen we've had in a long time and I think he understands the problems we both face."

Campbell said he had no personal knowledge of such action. He said he felt Long was a "fair man."

The chairman said he did not object to Long questioning persons accused of honor infractions, but could "see where questioning would hurt."

Bob Maddry New Orientation Head

Bob Maddry has been appointed Chairman of the Campus Orientation Committee, Student Body President Bill Harriss announced yesterday.

A committee composed of the past chairman of the Orientation committee, the presidents of the IDC and IFC, the president of the Pan-Hellenic Council, the chairman of the Women's Residence Council, the chairman of the Carolina Women's Council and the president of the Student Body, acting as chairman of this group, selects the head of the orientation committee.

BOB MADDRY

Orientation Counselor

Maddry has served as orientation counselor and last year was a member of the Orientation committee. He is also president of Sigma Nu social fraternity.

The new chairman will be searching for ways to shorten the length of the orientation period without losing the benefits and essentials of the plan, and a greater degree of emphasis on academics, he said.

President Harriss stated, "I feel the utmost confidence in Bob, and I am sure that he will do a highly commendable job in this work."

Committee Duties

The orientation committee, the rest of which will be chosen by March 15, has as its duties, the general overseeing of the campus orientation program, the revision of the manual for orientation counselors, the choosing and training of counselors and physical arrangements during the period of orientation.

Interviews for committee members will begin in about two weeks, according to Maddry. He also requested that any ideas about orientation and how it can be improved be called in to either he or Bill Harriss.

Music Workshop Is Set For Spring

The Extension Division, in conjunction with the North Carolina Symphony Society, will sponsor a workshop for interested teachers, principals, supervisors, concert chairmen and others engaged in preparing school children throughout the State for attendance at the full symphony's series of free children's concerts this spring.

The workshop will be conducted in Chapel Hill on Saturday, Feb. 24, starting at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Adeline McCall, director of the children's division of the N. C. Symphony Society, will be in charge of the seminar. She will review the music the symphony will play, give demonstrations of percussion scores and show how children can make various percussion instruments to be used in the audience participation portions of the program.

Appreciation To Be Taught

Songs the children will sing to orchestral accompaniment will be taught during the workshop sessions. Demonstrations will also be given in dance and rhythmic activities appropriate to the appreciation and understanding of the music which Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, musical director of the symphony, has programmed.

Mrs. McCall is supervisor of music in the Chapel Hill elementary schools and has served on various committees of the Music Educators National Conference. She recently held workshop seminars at the University of Indiana, Ohio State University, and at several colleges in the North Carolina area.

Previous workshops covering North Carolina Little Symphony programs for 1962 have proved especially valuable to the public school teacher and the music supervisor in the city and county school systems and to many others whose interests lie in the field of music appreciation for the elementary and high school student. Sessions were held in Morganton on October 24 and in Chapel Hill last Dec. 2. Both workshops were well attended. Last year three similar worshop seminars were attended by more than 300 educators from various parts of the State.

The North Carolina Little Symphony has already commenced its 1962 tour. The Full Symphony of some 65-70 musicians will begin its programs for school children on April 11 in Roanake Rapids and will wind up the current season with a concert in Hickory on May 18.

Wreck Victims' Condition Good

RALEIGH—Two State College professors were said by the Wake Memorial Hospital to be improved and resting comfortably, and a third was in good condition at Highsmith Hospital in Fayetteville, after a Monday night collision near Fayetteville which took the life of a young Fort Bragg reservist.

Alvin M. Fountain, 61, and Robert Wynne, 31, were resting comfortably in Wake Memorial Hospital Wednesday afternoon and Paul A. Brodenburg, 38, was in good condition in the Fayetteville hospital. Fountain received a fractured right arm, Wynne a broken right leg, and Brodenburg cuts and bruises.

The accident, which occurred on N.C. 210 near Ft. Bragg, took the life of Pfc. Joseph P. Yeager, 22, of Ft. Bragg. An occupant of the Yeager car, Pfc. Richard L. Sibley, 21, received cuts and bruises on the face and scalp.

Retailers To Meet Sunday

The 12th annual Retailers Activities Clinic will be held at UNC Sunday and Monday. The clinic is sponsored annually by the University and the North Carolina Merchants Association. Officials from N. C. merchants associations and chambers of commerce will be attending. Major clinic sessions will be held in the Carolina Inn and Carroll Hall.

John Harden of John Harden Associates, Greensboro public relations firm, will be the after-dinner speaker, giving an address entitled "To See Ourselves as Others See Us," in which he will cover the public relations programs of retailers and retail organizations.

Don Kimrey, 1961 president of the Raleigh Merchants Bureau, will be the speaker at the "presidents breakfast," Monday, February 19, at 8:30 a.m. in the Carolina Inn ballroom. Kimrey's address is entitled "How to Make the Most of 'Your' Presidency."

Clinic sessions will begin at 10 a.m. February 19 in Carroll Hall. Dr. R. S. Winslow, UNC professor of economics and director of the Bureau of Business Service and Research, will give the welcome for the University. Sessions will include the premiere southern showing of a new film, "Too Good to Be True," a 20-minute film of the Association of Better Business Bureaus covering the evils of "bait and switch" advertising.

Sherwood Michael, manager of Thalheimer's in Winston-Salem, will give a presentation entitled "Retail Employment Problems of 1962," in which problems posed by new state and federal laws will be discussed.

Conclusion

The clinic will conclude with its annual luncheon which will be held at 1 p.m. in the Carolina Inn ballroom. Luncheon speaker is Laurence A. Alexander of New York, president of National Downtown Services, Inc., and editor and publisher of Downtown Idea Exchange newsletter. Alexander's address is entitled "Fads, Fallacies, and a Few Facts About Downtown," in which he will discuss downtown problems and what is being done about them.

Registration will be held from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Carolina Inn, Sunday, and will be followed by a reception and a dinner in the Carolina Inn balroom.

Electric Corp. Meets Monday

Office managers and bookkeepers of the Tarheel Electric Membership Corporation will gather at the School of Business Administration for a four-day EMC Office Managers Institute, February 19-22.

The EMC personnel will attend courses in organization, money and credit, and effect of group participation.

The courses will be taught by UNC faculty members Dr. Claude George, assistant dean and professor in the School of Business Administration; Dr. David Lapkin, professor, Department of Economics; and Dr. Harry Upshaw, associate professor, Department of psychology.

SP Urges Passage Of A-Test Note

The Student Party recommended legislative passage of a nuclear testing resolution by a 22-11 vote at its Tuesday night meeting.

The resolution is expected to come to the floor in Student Legislature Thursday night.

It calls for the U.S. government to "refrain from resuming nuclear testing in the atmosphere, so long as such a policy does not jeopardize the deterrent capabilities of the United States."

Kippy Carter was elected to a Dorm Men's II seat. Dave Williams to Town Men's III, and Rita Johnson to Dorm Women's I. Four other seats were left unfilled.

Dave Williams, SP vice-chairman, then introduced a resolution recommending that Student Legislature defeat the nuclear testing bill.

Opposition

Bill Harriss, president of the student body, and Hank Patterson, vice-president, spoke against the Williams resolution. John Randall, Legislature parliamentarian, and Robin Britt, the legislative bill's sponsor, also spoke against the new resolution.

Bill Phillips, Rufus Edminsten and Dick Akers spoke for the Williams resolution. Supporters of the resolution claimed the nuclear bill was unconstitutional and invalid for Legislature to consider.

The SP also changed its meeting night from Tuesday to Monday, effective next meeting.

Speaker Named For 'Spotlight'

Mrs. Eliska Chanlett, U.S. Delegate to the Inter American Commission of Women, will speak on "Spotlight South of the Border" at the "Spotlight on Women" conference to be held here Feb. 17-18.

Born in Brno, Czechoslovakia, Mrs. Chanlett attended schools there and in Geneva, Switzerland. She received certificates for the teaching of French from the Universities of Geneva and Aix (Cannes branch). She received a B.A. degree with highest honors from the University of North Carolina, where she majored in sociology and minored in political science and psychology. She has an M.A. in sociology from UNC.

Currently, Mrs. Chanlett is a visiting lecturer in French at North Carolina College at Durham. In the past she has held positions with the Institute of Latin American Studies, the Institute of Research in Social Science, and the Bureau of Public Records Collection and Research at UNC. In 1957 and 1959, she served as a consultant with the Overseas Education Fund.

In the past 20 years, Mrs. Chanlett has travelled extensively to many Latin American countries, including Brazil, Dominican Republic, Honduras, Peru, Argentina, Venezuela, Uruguay, Chile and Colombia.

Why The Silence?

An undertone of student resentment surrounding some aspects of the student judiciary finally came out into the open where they can be thrashed out completely with a minimum of tip-toeing, veiled statement and innuendo.

At the same time, several of the participants in the discussion, notably Honor Council spokesmen Jey Deifell and George Campbell, felt it necessary to withhold part of their presentations due to "the presence of a Daily Tar Heel reporter."

While we are aware that the two men are accustomed to functioning, for the most part, behind closed doors, we are still a bit alarmed that they feel there are things that can be said in an open party meeting that cannot be reported to the campus at large. With the possible exception of the names of specific persons involved in hearings, there is no part of Council procedure, or any other matter involving student government, that should not be made wholly known to every student who cares to be informed.

Part of the distrust of the judiciary that already exists comes from a lack of information and rumors that are neither confirmed nor denied by Council members.

For some time, the student body president, members of the Honor Council and others have been participating in an extensive program of speaking engagements, discussions and presentations designed to clarify judicial procedure. Why the hesitation to make a full presentation when statements might be quoted?

We have no idea what statements Campbell and Deifell planned to make, nor why they were withheld. We are certain, however, that no constructive effect can result from clandestine presentations made with full regard to the presence of reporters. Far too many student government representatives —and the members of the administration as well—choose to make all remarks "off the record" and keep communication at a minimum on controversial matters.

As a case in point, we now have a report on our desk which provides statistics concerning the number of cases coming before the various councils and courts during a certain period, and their disposition.

There is nothing in the report of any major interest. All in all, it is little more than an innocuous statistical report of judicial activity. Yet, a member of the administration told us recently that "he would rather we wouldn't print it."

The fact is, we could see no reason to print it, nor did we intend to do so. We still don't—at least not until we can find something in it that's particularly enlightening.

The point is, the administration member did not want it printed. Why not? Why, too, are the Councils hesitant to have open trials or make statements for publication.

We are not suggesting that anyone has anything to hide. We don't think they have. But we are alarmed about the hesitancy to bring ticklish judicial problems out in the open sufficiently to solve them. Everything that surrounds judicial problems seems to be discussed in whispered tones, while everyone is looking the other way.

The honor system is supposed to be a student system. Its problems are student problems; this is ideally true, at least. The way things seem to be going, the system is the private property of the relatively few who are directly connected with it—at least where its defiencies are concerned.

Many people are beginning to tire of endless platitudes, tepid homilies and overworked moralizing. It's time the judicial system was carefully discussed. And we don't mean just the bright side. Most people are well aware of that.

We'd like to know what's wrong with it. From there, some solution can be found to remedy its faults.

Why Bother?

"Nobody is going to muzzle me," Senator Strom Thurmond told the press Friday, declaring he'd spill any information about military censorship unduly sealed up by the Stennis committee.

Now, the Senator seems on past evidence to have an ample imagination. But whatever sinister hand he feels may be clapped over his not overly laconic mouth, there is no sign, present or future, that Senator Thurmond is in danger of being "muzzled."

To muzzle the Senator, though it might give everyone's ears a rest, would be an unconstitutional act. Article I, Section 6, of the U. S. Constitution says, in part, of senators and congressmen: " . . .For any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place." This is what is known as congressional immunity. Senator Thurmond enjoys it.

"I Hear They Let Powers Out"

Kill Or Be Killed

To The Editor:

Norwood Pratt's well-written and factually correct article which I read with approval, has given me the excuse to point out some things that need saying.

Right now and for the next fifty or one hundred years, the free world is going to have to be quick on its feet just to survive. For the past few (15) years the United States has been acting like a punch-drunk boxer warding off blows and backing up in a circle begging for time and waiting for the bell. No one can win a fight that way.

At least three times in recorded history, Western Civilization has had its proverbial back to the wall. All that saved it was its strong will to fight and survive—a ye - shall -not - pass - while - I - live -and - I - intend - to - kill - you - before - you - can - kill - me attitude. First: the Greeks vs. the Persians. The battles of Marithon and Thermopole. Second: Charles Martel's French vs. the Moslems; third: a handful of English long-bowmen killing a successor to Gengis Kahn somewhere in France to halt the Hords of the Tarters.

We are faced with such a situation now. Let us fight to save our life, our property, our wives, sweethearts, parents, and children.

The Communists of Russian exterminated several million Coulacks, Russian peasants owning 10 or 15 acres of land each. If the Communists win here, there will be no saving us, no honorable defeat, only death in concentration camps by execution and starvation.

I would rather die fighting. It is better for a man to die knowing that he has personally killed several of the enemy, especially if he knows he is taking many Russians with him.

If our army surrenders, I will continue to fight and take an obscene joy in each Communist, Chinese, Russian, or home-grown American I kill. Any man or woman with an iota of patriotism or guts, or integrity will do the same.

If we manage to avert or survive a nuclear holocaust; the plagues of biological warfare; subversion, which is our greatest danger; for another hundred years or so then Norwood Pratt's predicted stail mate will probably come about.

If we do not, either the Communists will win and we will become extinct or we will win and their form of government becomes extinct. The big difference is they will kill us to the last man, woman, and child; and freedom—life as we know it—will be stifled, perhaps forever, if not for several hundred years, while we will only destroy their government if we win.

Student Legislature Action This Week

Bills to clarify the order of presidential succession and to provide for the effective review of presidential appointments were both favorably passed out of the Ways and Means committee this week. Both will come to the floor of Student Legislature tonight.

Scott Summers's appointments review bill specifically calls on the Ways and Means committee to exercise the general review authority given to Legislature.

In the past legislators have rubber-stamped presidential appointments, rarely, if ever, questioning the President's decision. This bill provides a sensible means to exercise the check on executive power.

TESTING

The nuclear testing resolution, which the Student Party endorsed 22-11 Tuesday, will probably come to the floor tonight. Opponents of the resolution will bring out the traditional arguments that for Legislature to take such a stand would be unconstitutional and invalid. Other opponents will be more honest and openly oppose the bill itself, rather than using "unconstitutional" as a smokescreen argument.

This resolution, however, is not a clear-cut proposition. There is considerable question whether students wish their legislature to pass such a resolution.

However, the issue in question is one which demands quick attention, if it is to be considered at all. Legislature is not only the "most representative body on campus," as resolution supporters claim, but the ONLY representative body on campus.

These considerations are augmented by the obvious difficulty of holding an accurate campus-wide poll one month before spring elections and by the traditional Anglo-American dependence on representation by relatively small, democratically-elected bodies. The resolution should be passed.

SCHOLARSHIP

A bill calling for a $600 Cuban refugee scholarship was held in the Finance Committee this week. In its present form it does not deserve passage by Legislature.

"Many (refugees) are from previously well-to-do families," the bill says in defense of giving a refugee scholarship—as if this has anything to do with the problem.

"Most (refugees) are in dire financial conditions due to the loss of their properties in Cuba," the bill continues, overlooking the tremendous amount of U. S. relief given the refugees since the Castro takeover.

The question as to whether a refugee scholarship is needed at all should be considered by the Legislature.

Fire Hazards Are Many

It can not be denied that the University recognizes the constant fire damage done by careless students. The University has increased its efforts to protect its property but at the same time has grown unexcuseably lax and irresponsible itself in its duty to protect the students themselves.

The majority of the dorms provide no fire escape, and thus rely totally upon the fire extinguishers for any such emergency. In far too many of the dorms these fire extinguishers are all but inoperable. The vast majority have not been inspected since early 1960. This time lapse on the chemical-type extinguishers renders its contents practically inert and useless. While on the pressure-type the air pressure has dropped to a dangerous low. The seams on many are weak and corroded. On others the rubber hose has become brittle with age and would only crumble if its use were required. I can only hope that these conditions will be quickly corrected before a grave and avoidable tragedy occurs. I feel that the irresponsibility of the students and the University with their lives and the lives of others cannot be excused or tolerated.

AL BUTLER

Real Muzzling Issue Is Ultimate Control

To the Editor:

Your vicious attack on Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina is most trivial, and the personal nature of your assault hits a new low for the DTH.

The matter of censorship of military speeches is NOT the REAL issue here, but in fact the issue is preservation of Congressional control over the military.

Mr. Robert E. Hansen, Commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, filed a statement with the Special Preparedness Subcommittee, which contended, among other things, that "ultimate control" of the military rested in Congress, which was also a view of the late Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Charles Evans Hughes. To quote Mr. Hansen further, "Defense organization must facilitate at the national level the jointure of civilian judgment and direction with broad, professional military advice." How can we have "broad, professional military advice" if military leaders have their every word censored?

The Executive privilege which Pres. Kennedy used here sets a dangerous precedent in the control of Congress over the military, especially in view of the fact the recent changes in the Defense Department of an organizational nature is a trend toward the expansion of power resting in the Sec. of Defense.

The Legislative branch cannot supervise the Defense Department adequately with the usurping of its power by the Executive branch of government. The power to "raise and support armies . . . to provide and maintain a navy . . . and to make rules for the government of the land and naval forces" is specifically rested in Congress, and the will of Congress is being thwarted in this case. The Congress is having a great deal of trouble analyzing the sprawling Department of Defense at present, and obtaining frank opinions and information. Sec. McNamara's viewpoint of "loyalty down" is just another roadblock to Congress, for Congress is interested in the SOURCE of policy or grounds for importing a DEFEATIST attitude into censored military speeches.

This disguising of the REAL issue involved, and instead the smearing of a great American from a neighboring state, is typical of the stands taken by the DTH.

It is my sincere hope that in the future, the DTH can stay away from peripheral matters and the exhibition of personal wrath, and give due attention to the real issues at hand, in this case, the growing inbalance of power between the branches of government.

—ROBERT G. CLAWSON, JR.

Editor's Note: President Kennedy made it clear that his use of the Executive privilege was in no way to be interpreted as a precedent. Further, the responsibility for speech censorshop is ultimately that of Secretary McNamara. Little could have been gained and much could have been lost by Thurmond's inference that individual censors, acting under orders, should be held responsible.

The Executive privilege, used indiscriminately, could be extremely dangerous. However, as a block to what could become witch-hunting—as it was in this case—it was wisely used.

Reader Hits Student Apathy Toward Politics, Religion

Dear Editor:

I am rather concerned about the general apathy on this campus. I have never seen things so dull anywhere. Supposedly a campus which does not preoccupy itself with topics such as politics or religion usually builds up to an avid interest in some other subject, such as sex.

To be sure, there is a tiny undercurrent of political feeling, but there is no tie-in with the major part of the student body. There can be no controversy on this campus because most students will not associate themselves with any particular view or opinion. I said the other alternative would be something like sex or liquor. It seems, however, that there is only a mild interest in either of these. Everyone is afraid of being "caught."

To use a banal expression, what this campus needs are a few vociferous individuals with half-decent ideas to stand up in public and speak their minds.

This could be done by use of soapboxes almost anywhere, or better yet in a public auditorium. For instance, a place such as Gerrard Hall or some rather large classroom-auditorium could be opened in the evening for any student or group of students who wanted merely to stand up and expand their beliefs or challenge each other to debates. Students would be responsible for their own publicity and other such matters. Let's have some enterprise on this campus.

Y's Claude Shotts Devotes Life To Work For Others

By WILLIAM N. HICKS III

Claude Shotts, Secretary of the YMCA since 1947, has devoted his life to service. Graduating from the University of Alabama in engineering and mathematics, he went on to graduate work at Yale, Harvard, and Northwestern Universities, and, during the course of his studies, decided to spend his life in the service of his fellow man.

He went into YMCA work at Northwestern, where he was secretary, and from there moved to Colgate and M.I.T. In 1942, he moved to Washington, D. C., where he worked with the National Service Board for Religious Objectors.

When the war ended, Shotts went to work with the Office of U.S. Military Operations in Berlin. There he worked in all four sectors of Berlin, bringing relief to the war-torn German population. From Berlin he came to the University and to the desk of secretary of the Y.

Good Foundation

"There was a good foundation here to build on," he said. When he arrived, the first Freshman Camp was getting underway. A year later the Campus Chest was begun, and the same year, the Cosmopolitan Club was organized. Because McCarthyism was in full swing, "a good political discussion was hard to come-by in the early 1950's," but, as the fear died down, discussion groups were started.

Shotts was quick to point out that the staff members of the Y do not think up things for the students to do. "It is up to the staff to be sensitive to student ideas and to help the students fulfill these ideas," said the Secretary.

Today Students Must Think

In comparing the students of his generation with those of today, he noted that, "Today, one must think." The student of his day usually planned to work in the town where he was born. It took a depression, a war, and an automation and mechanization unheard of in his day to scatter county populations across the country.

"Students of today are more concerned about their own identity than they were in my student days," continued Shotts. "Life was very simple then. Transportation was slow, people stayed around the home, and there were almost no students from other states. A foreign student was unheard of when I was at Alabama, and a "Yankee" was more of a curiosity than a foreign student is today."

Athletics For Fun

The athletics of Shotts' student days were still on a campus participation basis, with the idea being to play for fun. "It was not an alumni program when I was a student."

Shotts attributes the feeling of today's students that they are individuals in society, to the grouping in on place of large masses of people. "In my home town, I could go for three years and never see a person I did not know. Today, I can look outside my office and see fifty strangers."

He feels that today's student is much less sure of the future than which has made brute strength obsolete.

In comparing other YMCAs he has worked for with Carolina's, he said that they were much the the student in the early 1920's. "When I was in school, everyone was optimistic." He said the student then was sure that, degree in hand, he would easily fit into the profession for which he was trained.

Service Important Today

Shotts said that service work was much more important today than it was then. He said that more and more people are going into jobs which require service to the people. He attributes this to automation and mechanization, same. All were based on the principle of religion as a lay movement in which one's thought and action go together. "Its philosophy is—What does life (God) require of me?"

The Secretary said that the future of the Y is the same as that of the University. "We must be ready to give help where help is needed. Because life is always changing, we must be ready and willing to live with it and still be ourselves."

Shotts' philosophy is in line with that of the YMCA he has long served. "The question is not the record we have made, but our ability to continue to make a

Castro Out As Agrarian President

HAVANA (UPI) — Communist leader Charles Rafael Rodriguez Wednesday replaced Premier Fidel Castro as president of the all-powerful Cuban Agrarian Reform Institute.

The significance of the change was not immediately apparent, but it created a sensation. It was announced without fanfare by the cabinet in a brief statement published in the official press.

Much of Castro's power has stemmed from the all-embracing authority vested in him as head of the institute.

Surprise

Institute employees appeared surprised, admitting that Rodriguez was "replacing Fidel" Castro drafted the legal machinery for the institute in 1959 while still campaigning as a mountain guerilla. He has been its president since.

The institute controls agriculture, the pillar of the Cuban economy. It is an autonomous government body with unlimited powers. Its decisions cannot be challenged. They are specifically exempted from legal appeal by constitutional proviso.

Political observers speculated whether the change represented an open government takeover by increasingly powerful Communists or, perhaps, official recognition of Rodriguez' work in transforming the Cuban economy from a capitalist to a socialist base.

Top Red

Rodriguez is one of the top five men in the Communist hierarchy in Cuba. He replaced Argentine Communist Erneste Che Guevara as economic czar last year. That was when he was appointed head of the Central Planning Commission and the integrated revolutionary organizations.

Since his designation as industries minister, Guevara has had little to do with Cuban economic planning. In the early days of the revolution, it was Guevara who directed the economy as president of the Cuban National Bank.

Seized Billions

As recently as Jan. 24, Castro's signature appeared on a land grant as institute president. In the three years he presided over the institute, he ordered and carried out the seizure of several billion dollars of Cuban and foreign private investment. United States losses in Cuba have been estimated in excess of $1.25-billion.

Rodriguez, in his late 40's, has been an openly avowed Communist since the middle 1930's. A veteran politician, he served as a minister without portfolio for three years under the ex-dictator Fulgencio Batista.

De Gaulle Warns, But Riots Follow

PARIS (UPI) — The De Gaulle government underscored reports that Algerian peace talks were at a critical phase Wednesday by warning it would crack down on "rebellious activities" such as last week's Paris riots. The announcement was followed by new violence.

In Algeria, the violence between Europeans and Algerians threatened to erupt into a racial bloodbath. A record number of 44 plastic bombs exploded in the Algerian quarters of Oran, and French police used hand grenades and tear gas to stop the rioting that followed.

Crackdown

The government crackdown was announced by spokesman Louis Terrenoire after a three-hour cabinet meeting. The meeting was devoted mainly to last Thursday's Bastille Square rioting, led by Communists and leftists. Eight civilians were killed in these riots.

Terrenoire said Interior Minister Roger Frey, in his internal security report to the cabinet, said street demonstrations opened the way to fascism in Italy and to civil war in Spain.

"The government had no need to draw these lessons from history to remain very firm in its resolution not to yield to others the exercise of its duties, particularly for the defense of the republic against rebellious activities," he said.

Talks Continue

Officials disclosed that Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe and two other officials were still engaged in talks with the Algerian rebel leadership in a secret meeting place.

Informed sources said the talks now are in their final, decisive phase. Some newspapers and the French government radio reported earlier Wednesday that the talks had broken down, but officials denied this.

The absence from the cabinet meeting of Joxe and his negotiating team, Public Works Minister Robert Buron and Jean de Groglie, secretary of state for Saharan affairs, was another indication that the talks were continuing.

Location

The location of the talks was believed in France, near the Swiss frontier. One report said they were being held in a remote mountain chalet, another said a railroad car.

The key issue was how France can grant Algeria self-determination. One point concerns the future of the 1,100,000 Europeans in Algeria.

Space Shot Reset For Thursday

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Astronaut John H. Glenn's orbital flight was reset late Wednesday for sometime after 7:30 a.m. EST, Thursday — but stormy Atlantic weather gave him less than a 50-50 chance of taking off on the round-the-world mission.

The space trip was threatened by bad weather in the recovery zones where Glenn would splash down after completing his flight.

Landing Area

It was particularly bad in the area where he would land after one orbit. The space agency said a new storm threatened to make it worse.

At a 5 p.m., EST, briefing, the National Aeronautics & Space Administration (NASA) said the weather situation would be reviewed before a final countdown was ordered begun for a Thursday flight. The review was scheduled to start about seven hours before the earliest possible take-off at 7:30 a.m. EST.

But a NASA official, reviewing the situation as dusk settled over Cape Canaveral, said the weather made chances of a launching "look worse than 50-50."

Unoptimistic

Walter C. Williams, Project Mercury operations director, also did not sound very optimistic. He said the weather outlook was "not really good enough to proceed" with great confidence but not bad enough to be the basis for a postponement decision" at 5 p.m.

Summit May Hinge On Arms Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy told Nikita Khrushchev Wednesday he is "quite ready" to confer at the summit if next month's disarmament talks make progress. But he rejected the Soviet premier's bid for an immediate heads - of - government meeting.

In a polite but firm letter coordinated with a similar reply from British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, Kennedy turned down Khrushchev's proposal that the March 14 Geneva conference open at the summit level.

"If we are moving ahead . . . and my presence at a meeting in Geneva would advance that cause, of course, I would go," he told a questioner. "Every head of state would want to go."

On their face, Kennedy's conditions seemed to make chances of a summit slim. He raised other possible obstacles reminding his news conference Red China would have to be a party to any effective arms control pact and by reiterating his insistence on inspections against cheating.

But a growing mood around the world appeared to be pushing the big two toward another meeting. It was considered possible that Kennedy might agree to meet Khrushchev even if there was only a slight movement toward a disarmament agreement.

Irish Prof Visits Dept. Of Geology

Alwyn Williams, professor of geology at Queen's University, Belfast, Ireland, is visiting the department of geology during the week February 12-16.

Professor Williams' trip is sponsored by the American Geological Institute. He will be visiting several United States universities. The University of North Carolina is the first stop on his itinerary.

While at UNC, Professor Williams will give a series of lectures to departmental students and staff. He is giving two lectures, which are open to the public, on Wednesday and on Friday. Both lectures will be held at 8 p.m. in room 112 New East.

The general topic on which he will speak concerns the manner in which fossils may be used to study layered rocks and rock structures, that is, in determining the age of specific rocks.

Professor Williams is a native of the coal town of Aberdare, South Wales. As a boy, he became interested in the earth. During his university years, he spent a great deal of time in Aberystwyth, Wales, a rich environment for the study of historical geology.

In 1948, Professor Williams was awarded a Harkness Fellowship to continue his studies in the United States National Museum under the direction of Dr. G. A. Cooper. Following this U. S. visit, he returned to a lectureship at Glasgow University where he studied the geology of the rocks around Girvan in southwest Ayrshire. These rocks were known to contain faunas resembling the eastern American ones, such as those of the southern Appalachians.

This corner of Scotland where Professor Williams was studying is prolific in fossils, Professor Williams completed his research in this area in 1959. His results and publications will apear as a memoir of the Geological Society of London in 1962.

Baltimore Hebrew Professor To Talk On War's Influence

Dr. Isaac M. Fein, professor of history at the Baltimore Hebrew College, will speak on "The Impact of the Civil War on the American Jewish Community" Friday, Feb. 23, at 8 p.m. in Howell Hall.

The lecture is sponsored by the Hillel Inter-Campus Faculty Committee, which includes UNC faculty members Bernard Greenberg, Norman Miller, Joseph Morrison and Lawrence Slifkin.

It has been estimated that there were at least 10,000 Jews serving in the Federal and Confederate armies. The total American Jewish population at the time is thought to have been about 250,000, and whole Jewish companies were raised in Chicago, Syracuse, Macon and West Point.

According to Hillel House, "For a religious community as historically cohesive as the Jewish, the Civil War proved to be agonizingly divisive. The same fragmentation that occurred in so many families of the nation occurred also in the Jewish community as a whole.

"Equally critical issues came to the fore: the question of chaplaincies and the infamous General Order No. 11 issued from General Grant's headquarters, which provided for the expulsion within 24 hours of 'the Jews, as a class,' without trial or hearing, from the Department of the Tennessee."

Dr. Fein is a Jewish historian and Curator of the recently created Jewish Historical Museum of Maryland.

The lecture is open to the public and is free of charge.

Cowden's Text Published In Asian Tongues

"Statistical Methods in Quality Control," an industrial text and reference book by UNC Economics Professor Dudley J. Cowden, has just been published in Asian languages by Kinokuniya Book-Store Co., Ltd., Tokyo, Japan.

It will appear in Burma, Cambodia, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Japan, Laos, Malaya, Okinawa, Pakistan, the Philippines, Singapore, South-Vietnam and Thailand.

The book emphasizes the statistical and economic aspects of quality control. It is the most extensive work on the subject at this time and contains an unusually large amount of tables and charts.

Prof. Cowden, a graduate of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, with his M.A. from the University of Chicago and a Ph.D. from Columbia University, has published several other books on business statistics, which have also been translated into foreign languages.

The 320th anniversary of tobacco, America's oldest industry, will be celebrated by the Jamestown, Va., Foundation this year.

Snakes Left Before Pat Made Scene

CHICAGO (UPI)—Take it from an Orangeman . . . it was a cold day in Ireland—and not St. Patrick—that saw the last of the snakes in the Emerald Isle.

Dr. Alfred E. Emerson — his family came from the Orange stronghold of Belfast—never did buy the story that St. Patrick chased the snakes out of Ireland. But he wasn't about to say so . . . not in Chicago, anyway, where the mayor's name is Daley and the town turns green come March 17.

He's An Expert

A zoogeographer at the Nniversity of Chicago, Emerson is an expert in the science of reconstructing where animals originated and how they came to be where they are today.

"And any old zoogeographer knows the snakes got out of Ireland during the Ice Age—at least 100,000 years before St. Patrick," he said.

The facts are, he said, that the Ice Age froze out Ireland's snakes and England's, too, "for that matter." Because England remained connected to the European mainland for a short time following th Ice Age, Emerson said, "The snakes managed to get back to England, but not to Ireland, which already was an islannd."

Emerson said he wasn't sure he'd gotten through to Mayor Richard J. Daley with his theory on St. Patrick and the snakes that weren't there.

Of Recent Origin

"I understand the mayor has not cancelled the St. Patrick's Day parade," he said.

The Irish consulate remained unimpressed, too.

G. O. O'Clerigh, acting counsel general, tossed off the matter as "common knowledge."

"The legend crediting St. Patrick with ridding Ireland of snakes did not arise till about 1700," he said. "As you can see, it is of comparatively recent origin."

O'Clerigh said the legend apparently grew out of too literal an interpretation of painting showing St. Patrick banishing the devil, symbolized by a snake.

Edge Writes Article On Jane Austen

An article has just been published by Assistant Professor of English Dr. Charles E. Edge in the December 1961 issue of Nineteenth Century Fiction entitled "Mansfield Park and Ordination."

It is an effort "to correct an error in the critical analyses of Jane Austen's "Mansfield Park."

Jane Austen, in a letter to a friend, said she was going to write about ordination. Critics have assumed from the letter that ordination was the intended theme of her book, said Dr. Edge.

He says in his article that Miss Austen was using that statement as a transition between paragraphs in the letter and not as the theme of her book. He documents this with other letters written by Miss Austen.

Dr. Edge, an authority on Jane Austen, wrote his doctor's thesis on Miss Austen.

He has taught undergraduate English composition and literature at UNC since 1958 and is chairman of the Freshman English Group of the South Atlantic Modern Languages Association.

Washington First Used Privilege Back In 1794

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy's use of executive privilege stems back to 1794 when George Washington first invoked it to withhold from the House information about a treaty with the British signed by his Secretary of State John Jay.

In ruling that Kennedy's claim was valid, chairman John C. Stennis of the Senate subcommittee investigating alleged military muzzling, listed a number of presidents who have used the privilege.

In 1957, Eisenhower invoked the privilege in almost identical circumstances as Kennedy. A House government information subcommittee asked for files of the Pentagon's office of security review to examine the censorship of a speech by Brig. Gen. Don R. Ostrander.

Then Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson notified the House group that on the President's instructions he was refusing the request as "incompatible with the public interest."

Similarly, former President Harry S. Truman cited executive privilege to deny congressional committees information, particularly security risk data sought by both House and Senate groups.

Individual interviews for the executive posts will be held Feb.

Wolfpack Topples Carolina, 85-57

Tar Heels Receive Fifth ACC Defeat

By ED DUPREE

State College is happy today. Their basketball team overpowered and humiliated Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels by a whopping score of 85-57 at Raleigh last night.

The State bunch jumped into an early lead and had no trouble rolling over Carolina. John Punger led the hot-handed Pack, which shot 45 per cent from the floor. Punger hit a phenomenal 9 of 10 field goals and added 2 foul shots for 20 points.

Jon Speaks scored 17, Ken Rohoff 15, and Pete Auksel added 14. Jim Hudock's 14 and Bryan McSweeney's 10 paced the Tar Heels. Four Carolina pilayers fouled out of the contest.

Punger started the Wolfpack on its way when he scored seven straight State points. While Punger went on his spree, the Tar Heels could manage only a foul shot by Jim Donohue.

Punger's bushel of points came after the score was knotted at 3-3, and pushed the Raleigh boys into a 10-4 lead. After Speaks and Donohue exchanged field goals, the home team went on another streak and pushed the lead to 17-6.

From then on Carolina's story was offered by 6-8 Hudock, who scored 10 points while the entire State team tallied nine. This made the Wolfpack lead 26-16, but once more Ev Case's team dominated the scoring.

Speaks, Punger, and Auksel threw in two-pointers and the white-shirted Wolfpack had the Tar Heels doubled, 32-16. Mike Cooke hit for Carolina to make the midpoint score 32-18.

State rolled to their huge halftime lead but Hundock was the toughest individual on the floor. He not only led both teams in scoring, but dominated the backboards with 11 rebounds.

Carolina narrowed State's lead to 12 momentarily, but that was as close as the score ever got in the second half. The Pack pushed its advantage to 45-26 at the 14:25 mark, on a jump shot by Punger. The Tar Heels rebounded and closed the gap to 47-33. At this point UNC went into a full court press, but State's fast moving offense was not hampered by the Tar Heels.

A foul shot by Russ Marvel gave the Wolfpack a 20-point lead at 61-41. After Cooke scored for Carolina, the Raleigh crew rolled up 12 straight points, capped by a two-pointer by flashy Rohloff, which gave State a mammoth 73-43 lead.

By that point three Tar Heels, Brown, Hudock and Cooke, had fouled out of the game.

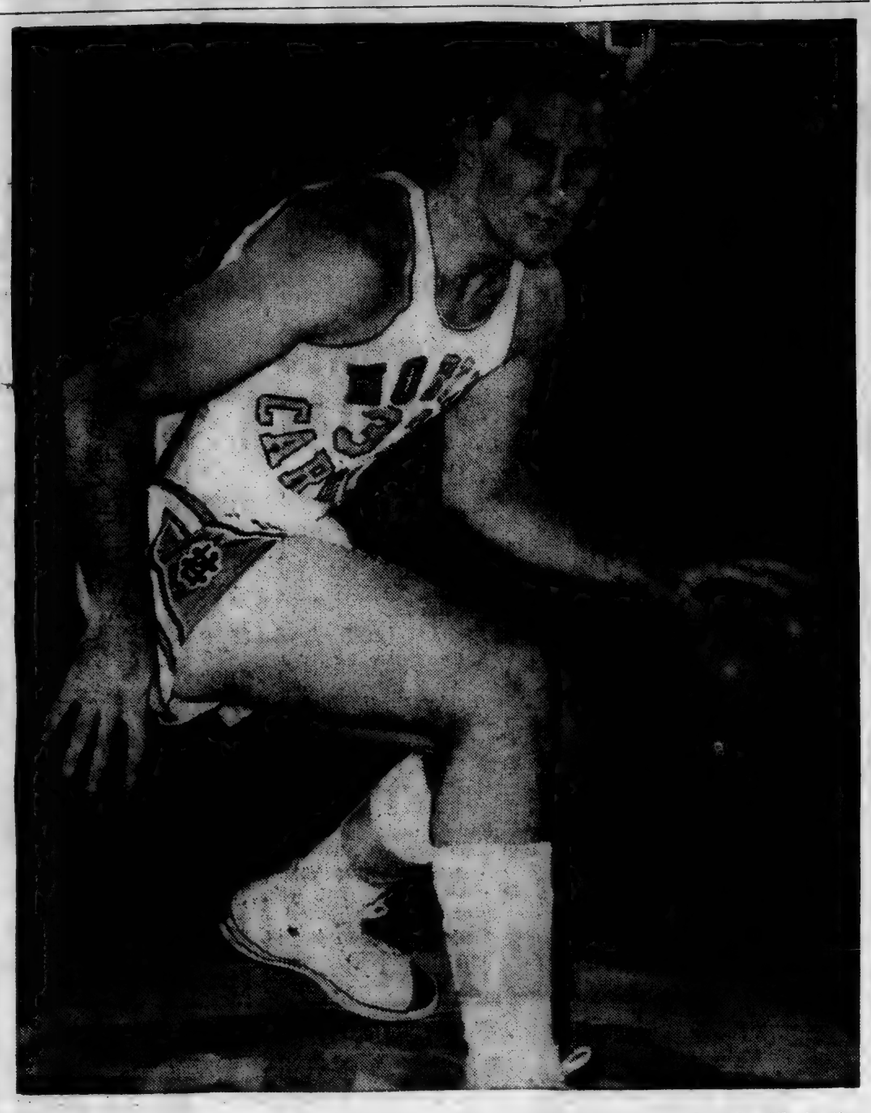
State Swimmers Defeat UNC For Second Place

UNC swimmers lost a 50-45 decision to N. C. State Wednesday at Raleigh in a battle for second place honors in the ACC regular season.

State's mermen set a new ACC record in the 400-yard freestyle, the last event of the day, and came from behind for the win.

John Wilcox, Smokey Ellis, Bill McGinty, and Ed Spencer broke their previous record, set in December, with a time of 3:23.0. State's all-American Pete Fogarasy and Spencer each won two events. Spencer anchored the winning relay team.



JIM HUDOCK, UNC center, sported a 16.6 average going into last night's game with N. C. State. The Tuckhannock, Pa., native had scored 183 points in 11 games and ranks 8th in the Atlantic Coast Conference in scoring.

Tar Babies Clobber Wolflets By 68-50

UNC's freshman basketball team rallied from a first half ten-point deficit last night and went on to clobber the State College frosh, 68-50.

State took the lead early with some dead-eye shooting and with 5:48 remaining in the opening period, led 27-17. Tar Baby Coach Ken Rosemond at this point inserted defensive star Pud Hassell into a high post, and the strategy seemed to work as Carolina scored 14 straight points. Hassell accounted for eight in the string and the Tar Babies left the court with a 33-29 halftime lead.

State, on the shooting of husky forward John Arganbright, pulled to within two at the 14:20 mark of the second period, but a minute later, when 6-8 Wolflet center Charlie Grob committed his fifth and disqualifying foul, the Carolina frosh went on another tear.

The Tar Babies hit for eleven straight markers this time to run the count to 51-38 and it was all over for Coach Lou Pucillo's red-clad State cagers.

Hassell, the Beaufort flash, hit a personal high of 20 to lead the Carolina scoring, while Jay Neary chimed in with 16. The Tar Babies, while hitting a phenomenal 32 of 36 free throws for 89 per cent, shot 39.2 per cent from the floor to State's 36.8.

HOW YOU CAN SURVIVE
A NUCLEAR WAR!
9 out of 10 people can live through a nuclear attack, says scientist Edward Teller. But there'll have to be plenty of warning — and plenty of shelter. In this week's Post, he maps out a 4-point plan for survival. Tells how you should stock the ideal shelter. And which people stand the best chance of survival.

Admission Requirements Up As Applicants' Abilities Grow

By Bill Dowell

Enrollment at UNC has increased at the rate of 500 students per year for the last four years, and Chancellor William B. Aycock yesterday predicted that this trend will continue for the next several years.

Admission requirements will continue to rise in proportion to the qualifications of the applicants.

Last semester the minimum combined college board score requirement was raised to 750. Qualification is determined chiefly by the use of a predicted grade average which is based on high school class standing and college board scores. Students who do not appear to be capable of doing work at UNC are advised to find a smaller college.

Transfer students must have at least a C average to be admitted. If a transfer student appears to be a borderline case he can be asked to take an entrance examination.

Qualified Students Admitted

Last year all qualified North Carolina men who applied to the University were admitted. All qualified North Carolina women who applied were admitted with the exception of 40 who applied too late to get space in the dormitories.

The Board of Trustees limits the number of out of state students to 15 per cent of the student body. Admittance was based on highest ability and quality among out of state applicants.

Money For Expansion

To meet the student enrollment increase the University has sunk $10,742,355 into capital improvements, new housing cafeterias and classrooms. Another $5,774,200 will be spent for buildings which are now in planning stages.

Expansion and development depends on the resources the University can get hold of. The General Assembly makes up the difference between the cost of operating the University and the amount of money supplied by tuitions and fees.

The Education bill now in Congress could benefit the University if it provides out-right grants in its finished form. As things stand the University cannot borrow money for the construction of any buildings which will not liquidate their mortgages; i.e., class rooms, laboratories, etc. These depend on gifts, grants and the General Assembly.

AFTER PRE-DAWN MARCH

Valkyries Tap 11 In Rites

Nine undergraduate women and two honorory members were tapped into Carolina's highest honorary organization for women, the Order of the Valkyries, in a secret predawn ceremony Friday morning.

Recognized were Miss Betty Doyle Challen, Memphis, Tennessee; Miss Judith G. Clark, Tuscumbia, Alabama; Miss Mary Jacquelyn Day, Laurens, South Carolina; Miss Elizabeth Suzan Hayes, Chapel Hill; Miss Jean Elizabeth MacDougall, Akron, Ohio; Miss Catherine Anne Mixon, Memphis, Tennessee; Miss Pamela Ann Parker, Sylvania, Georgia; Miss Fatma Ramazanoglu, Istanbul, Turkey; Miss Elizabeth Ann Reed, Poland, Ohio; Miss Jessie C. Rehder, Chapel Hill ;and Mrs. Mary Gutherie, Chapel Hill.

The Valkyries began their candlelight march at 11:29 a.m. in their customary black robes and hoods. As the march proceeded through the women's residence halls, the sound of the golden gong called forth those women who were recognized for the Valkyrie ideals of scholarship, leadership, character, and service.

Outstanding Women

The Order of the Valkyries was begun on the Carolina campus in 1942, so that outstanding women students might be given special recognition for their services. The name of the organization is taken from an ancient Norwegian legend centered around the warrior god Odin, who represents thought and memory and who was mankind's benefactor.

Odin had nine select maiden attendants, the Valkyries, who were daughters of the gods and yet were mortals as well. The chief task of these maidens was to go to the battlefield and decide at Odin's bidding who should win and who should die and then carry the brave dead to Valhalla, the hall of fame. It was considered a great honor to belong to this chosen group because they shared the glorious companionship of departed heroes.

Citations

The citations read to the tappees are as follows:

Miss Challen: ". . . one who through love of her fellow man has given untiringly of herself to students of all nations. Through her leadership in the Y.W.C.A. and her work with the Foreign Students Board and the Foreign Student Orientation Committee she has reflected a deep concern for the whole human community. Her gracious and quiet dignity reflects her depth of character and high ideals, and her concern for intellectual endeavor demonstrates her understanding of the true meaning of the University. Miss Challen's loss of self-concern in kindness toward others has rendered her a friend to all who know her."

Miss Clark . . . One whose sincere devotion to Carolina is expressed in her untiring contributions to the campus and more specifically to her fellow students. Her influential participation in both the Legislature and in her sorority have revealed Miss Clark as a responsible and dedicated individual. High ideals, perceptive insight, deep character and sincere concern are but a few of the traits which she constantly demonstrates. Miss Clark gives unceasingly of her time and efforts in all that she undertakes. Her inspiration to others makes her unquestionably worthy of this honor.

Miss Day . . . one whose enthusiastic and unselfish leadership has gained the respect and admiration of her associates. Displaying all of the necessary qualities which the position demands, she has worked tirelessly and efficiently as president of the YWCA. Miss Day, whose warm and vivacious personality reveals her sincere interest in others, has also expressed her concern for the university and its students through her service orientation counselor. And her energetic work with her sorority even further demonstrates her ability to lead and to serve. Always maintaining superior academic achievement, Miss Day has shown herself to be truly worthy of this recognition.

Miss Hayes . . . One who has quietly but with exceptional skill fulfilled the requirements of the many responsibilities which have been hers. Her sensitivity to the feeling of others and her ability to anticipate the underlying needs of every situation have gained for her the respect of all those with whom she comes in contact. Miss Hayes has shown her interest in Carolina through her efficient and untiring work as an Honor Council clerk and as a YWCA cabinet member. In addition to her outstanding work in extracurricular activities and her exceptional leadership in her sorority, she also excells in her academic endeavors. Her sincere interest in others, her high ideals which she persistently upholds, and her warm, friendly spirit make her truly worthy of this honor.

Miss MacDougall . . . One whose untiring efforts have been dedicated to the steadfast service of her University and her fellow students. She has exhibited a deep concern, a sensitive understanding, and a personal interest in all with whom she comes in contact. Her personal interest in each individual has endeared her to the hearts of many. She has used her abilities for constructive achievements in scholarship and leadership. Miss McDougall is one of unquestionable character directing her thoughts and actions persistently toward the highest purposes.

Miss Mixon . . . one who has given a major part of herself to

No Rides Seen For New Dorm Students

Transportation will not be provided by the administration for the 1,446 students who will live in the new Craig and Ehringhaus dorms next fall, Business Manager J. A. Branch said yesterday.

"The University is not in the transportaation business," Branch said when asked about a proposed shuttlebus plan. It was the student's responsibility, he said, to provide transportation.

Branch pointed out that students housed in Spencer Dorm had to walk nearly as far to the library as those who will live in either Craig or Ehringhaus. "Those students who live off campus because there is not enough space are not provided transportation by the University," Branch continued.

Student Solution

Dwight Wheless, presidential assistant and Student Party floor leader, said when asked about the possibility of a Student Government solution to the problem, said, "Whether the Administration pursues the problem or not, Student Government will do so."

Wheless said that while a bus system would be very expensive it was not beyond the realm of possibility. "Another solution might be car pools," Wheless continued.

Branch thought of an even more novel solution—walking.

Warning Made On Latin Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Teodore Moscose, President Kennedy's Latin American aid chief, warned Thursday that delay in implementing the Alliance for Progress could lose initiative to extremists of the left and the right.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the National Press Club, Moscose said, "the one error we cannot afford to make is that of waiting, of letting the initiative slip out of our grasp."

Infirmary

Those in the infirmary yesterday included: Mary Polk, Dorothy Hayes, Jane Haver, Mary Ruth Stephenson, Mary Jo Bender, Agnes Reberson Frank Weaver, Roger Davis, Kingman Brown, Josiah Bailey, Percy Jessup, Frank Russell Willis Johnson, Lowell Pearlman.

Openings & Interviews

The following companies will recruit on campus next week, the Placement Service announced yesday.

Monday: Bell Telephone Lab., G. C. Murphy Co., Genesco, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Wednesday: Burlington Industries, The Pepsi Cola Co., New York Life Insurance Co., General Electric Co., Citizens and Southern National Bank, MacMillan Co.

Students interested in obtaining counseling jobs in summer camps should register with the Placement Service. Several camp directors will be recruiting on campus this spring.

Cuban Charge Is Rejected

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (UPI) —The General Assembly's main political committee Thursday effectively rejected Cuba's charge that the United States is planning aggression against Fidel Castro's government.

With only the 10-nation Soviet bloc supporting Cuba, the 104-nation committee rejected, 50-11 with 39 abstentions, a Communist resolution calling on the United States to end "interference" in Cuba.

Czechoslovakia and Romania, was the only measure before the committee. With resolution offered directly supporting Cuba's charge, the rejection of the measure was tantamount to outright dismissal of the complaint.

Correction

UP Chairman Bill Criswell said yesterday that the announcement of the party's convention procedures was incorrect and should have read: Each dorm, fraternity, or sorority having a minimum of five UP members would be allowed a five-member delegation with each member possessing a vote. For every 10 additional UP members the institution would be alloted an extra delegate.

The story printed Tuesday concerning parking tickets and the town traffic budget is incorrect.

The income from the traffic tickets goes into the general fund of the town of Chapel Hill and not into the police or traffic budget.

The police budget is separate from the general budget of Chapel Hill and consequently the figure of ¼ of the police budget was incorrect.

THE CHAPEL OF THE CROSS

Where Did Chapel Hill Receive Its Name?

By Chuck Mooney

Where did Chapel Hill get its name?

From the Episcopal Church—the Chapel of the Cross—according to Dr. Archibald Henderson.

"Before the American Revolution there was a chapel connected with the Church of England, in St. Matthew's Parrish, Orange County," he said.

It stood beside the road that ran from Petersboro, Va., to Pittsboro, about where the Carolina Inn is today.

It was called New Hope Chapel and the hill it stood on was called New Hope Chapel Hill. When the village was laid out in 1793, it was called Chapel Hill.

Church Was Pioneer

The Episcopal Church was one of the pioneer forces in North Carolina, according to Dr. Kemp P. Battle in his "History of the University of North Carolina." James Hogg, a Scots Episcopalian who dealt in real estate, was one of the commissioners who decided on UNC's location. He is chiefly responsible for the choice of Chapel Hill, Dr. Henderson said.

The first parson of St. Matthew's Parrish was Rev. George Micklejohn—born in Scotland, a graduate of Cambridge and a chaplain under Frederick the Great.

He came to Orange County in 1767 and soon got mixed up in pre-revolution politics and the Revolution itself.

Tory Helped Rebel

Parson Micklejohn, a Tory, bailed Thomas Person—soon-to-be a Revolutionary general—out of jail after he was arrested during a small political disturbance. Governor Tryon was planning to search Person's home and Person heard about it.

Chapel Of The Cross

"Why, sir," Person told Micklejohn, "there is enough evidence among my papers to hang me a dozen times."

Person secretly borrowed a horse and rode to his home and back—60 miles—at night. When Gov. Tryon couldn't find any evidence, he asked Rev. Micklejohn if Person had gone anywhere the night before.

"I supped and breakfasted with him," the Reverend said.

Tory Exile

Rev. Micklejohn himself was captured by the Colonial forces at Moore's Creek and convicted as a Tory by the Halifax Congress in 1776. He spent the Revolutionary War exiled from Orange County near Albemarle.

After his parole at the War's end, he returned to Orange County and injected his adventurous personality into church work.

Parson Micklejohn recruited parishoners wherever he could.

"Why don't you come hear me preach?" he asked a farmer.

"Well, sir," the farmer replied, "I work so hard all week that I like to rest on Sunday."

"You ought to come to church. I'll give you a drink of whiskey if you'll come tomorrow," the Parson urged, getting out his personal bottle.

The farmer immediately joined the congregation.

Parson Micklejohn was later suggested for first President of UNC. He died in Virginia in 1818—more than 100 years old.

Reorganization in 1824

After its lively beginning St. Matthew's Parrish declined until Rev. William Mercer Green reorganized it in 1824. Under his guidance, the present church was built in 1848. The East wing was added in 1925.

It is located on East Franklin Street beside the Planetarium parking lot. Thomas U. Walter, a Philadelphia church builder, designed the Gothic building. The older part—next to the parking lot—is made of bricks fashioned in Chapel Hill in a kilm specially built by Rev. Green.

One of the first pipe organs in North Carolina was given to the Chapel by Miss Mary R. Smith in 1880. It is still working in the present church.

Present Activities

Today the Church is active in campus life, sponsoring the Canterbury Club, discussion groups in contemporary subjects, a study group on Aspects of the Christian Faith and conferences with other Episcopalian students.

During Exams it provided study rooms and coffee to students. A student library of both texts and fiction books is being built up.

The church choir is made up mostly of students. Students also work on money-making projects for foreign missions.

Reds Buzz U. S. Planes

BERLIN (UPI) — Harrassing Soviet jet fighters flew within 20 feet of a U. S. transport plane and shadowed others in the Berlin air corridors Thursday.

Authoritative sources said the Soviet MIGS created hazards "worse than buzzing" by performing acrobatics dangerously close to Western planes in the vital air corridors.

Surprise Contender

National political speculators are almost unanimous in their opinion that George Romney will be the next governor of Michigan. Many are saying that he will be John F. Kennedy's opponent in the 1964 presidential election. To those not aware of the beckground elements of the Michigan political scene, Romney has suddenly appeared as a genie in response to a Rebublican Aladin's call.

The American Motors president comes close to being a unique political figure. He has never been in an election, and yet he is favored to govern one of the largest industrial states in the country. He has rebuked the policies of both political parties, but he has a background and a personality that would make him an attractive member of either. He wasn't born in the United States, and his grandfather had four wives. However, he reflects a vigorous, all-American charm.

Not the least of Romney's contributions has been the revolution in the automobile industry that he started when he coined the term "compact" and built a car to fit it. When the state of Michigan fell into difficult financial straits because the legislature couldn't see eye-to-eye with liberal governer G. Mennen Williams, Romney took time out from his job at American to lead a citizen's committee that worked out a new tax program and got the state out of trouble.

Romney's party affiliation is Republican, but for no particular season. He has not been known to associate with the other well known Republicans in the country, but merely seemed to flip a coin to pick a party so that he could be on the bi-partisan citizen's group. Although as a leader of "big business," he might be expected to identify with the Republican party, he has shown an attitude that makes him a lot different from other industrialists. He signed a liberal contract with the Auto Workers that made him a darling of the unions, and has reportedly criticized the Republicans on occasions for identfying itself too much with big business. However, he has also been outspoken in his criticism of the pro-labor policy of the Democrats.

The 54 year old industrialist, who once went as a Mormon missionary to the British Isles, first made his presence felt on the national scene during World War II by serving as Managing Director for the Automobile Council for War Production. When he became president of American Motors in 1954, he faced the almost impossible task of pulling the merged product of Nash and Hudson out of the red. However, the farsighted entrepreneur bucked the prevalent industry ideal, became a success, and changed the entire industry.

Today, already, Romney has some enemies in the Republican camp. He has made an unnoticed entry into the ring where the Rockefeller-Goldwater forces scrambled, and has upstaged them both. Richard Nixon has "welcomed" his arrival on the political scene, but Dickie, with his own problem in California, can't have too much hope about '64 anyway.

It may take a man like Romney to take the gaudy tailfins—or the appearances of them—off the Republican party. Whether he can offer deep-dip rust proofing is a different matter.

—Harry W. Lloyd

Misinterpretation

Yesterday, in a column commenting on the unnecessary silence surrounding judicial procedure, we called attention to what had been described to us as a refusal of two Honor Council spokesmen to comment on judicial proceedings while a reporter was present.

Today, we were informed that the two spokesmen—Men's Honor Council Chairman George Campbell and ex-member Jey Diefell—had not declined to answer any question, or make any statement concerning the Council. The "refusal" to do so was made jokingly, according to Campbell, and in no way influenced comments.

The reporter who supplied the information misinterpreted the remark.

Reading In Gaol

The Panhellenic Council's drive to provide reading material for those currently enjoying the plush accommodations at N .C. State prison in Raligh is going well.

Some o fthe recent contributions include:

"Medical Care for the Aged"

"Compulsory Medical Care and the Welfare State"

"American Medicine," subtitled "Expert Testimony Outside Court"

"Prayers for Shut-ins"

Added to this list of medical information is "Medical Interpretation"—in four volumes.

The council, however, hasn't yet reached its goal of 7,000 books, which would represent one book from every student at UNC. Thus far, they have collected "about a thousand."

They have promised to accept anything—as can be shown by some of the above titles. "Better Citizens' 'is their aim, and if they can succeed with their book drive here, it will put the prison library, which now has only 1,000 books, some four years ahead of schedule.

Frontiersmen Toy With Race Issue

For years, New Frontersmen have been associating in private clubs without great fanfare (while simultaneously condemning the practice elsewhere). Now that they have chosen not to hold membership in such clubs, they feel that the world—especially the sensitive race blocs in the North—should hear of their pious conversions.

They have put private clubs under heavy pressure to integrate and NAACP leaders have, accordingly, taken note.

On another front, the President has recommended a new cabinet post and declares that he will appoint a Negro to head it. The President is sensitive tto Negro criticism and hopes Congress will be too. Whether Congress approves the post or not, the New Frontier is to win credit of Negro blocs for trying to put one of their boys at the top.

One of the President's most obvious maneuvers with the race issue is his recommendation that literacy tests as a voting requirement be practically abolished. His race antics have been causing the South to look for disfavor upon the New Frontier. The technicality of most Negroes having reached the sixth grade (the new requirement he seeks) would throw open new forests for New Frontier lumberjacks to exploit.

* * *

Aside from the fact that setting voting requirements is the prerogative of the states alone, it would seem that requirements should be raised, if anything. Else, why the New Frontier's insistence on more Federal aid to education if the benefits of education are to be compromised?

If our educational institutions are as bad as the New Frontier keeps telling us, what is the logic behind turning loose more of such an uneducated electorate?

The New Frontier, like preceding "liberal" administrations, is steeped in hypocrisy. We have grown weary of hearing about alledged Southern racism. But what is the reaction when racism is disseminated from the Potomac by these same liberals?

Liberals have long specialized in exploiting the race issue for political gain. When there was less of a race problem, they found it expedient to create one.

* * *

The South has been belabored with panaceas offered by ivy-covered hacks, and the New Frontier seems bent on insuring that this condition continues to prevail. Under the guise of promoting "civil rights," liberal bigots have made the white Southerner the only minority in the country that has no rights.

Though some of the administration's new racism will affect those other than Southerners, it is especially manufactured for the South. With the new votes of gullible blocs that can likely be marshalled, the Kennedy administration could offset the Republican gains being made in the South.

This type of political manipulation can cure many of the New Frontier's ills; it can also make a President of another Kennedy, and another.

Specter Of Europe Haunting Russians

Early this month, in a switch-about epigram, Garry Blanchard told me that the opposite was now come true. "A specter is haunting Communism—the specter of Europe," he said, with optimistic realism.

The comment was timely. Gazing over western Europe, with the Common Market exploding, Germany ascending, and Britain struggling to get in while there's still time, you can see the outlines of a European Combine which will soon enough be complete. Economic and industrial integration are moving ahead at a fast clip. If political integration follows, Russia will slink back involuntarily.

And there seems to be remarkably little doube that unity is just around the curve. Some observers forecast that a Franco-German merger will be effected by 1965 or '66; that the Benelux nations will follow (either one by one or as a single unit), and that Scandinavia will leap onto the bandwagon. Barring an almost impossible reverse, the general prospect of a unified European bloc is no longer a question of IF but WHEN.

So why isn't it happening overnight? Mainly because Germany is the leader of the movement, and Germany is still disliked and distrusted in the neighboring countries. It seems profoundly regrettable that Willy Brandt lost the 1961 election. Brandt, who fought in the Norwegian underground during World War II, could rally enough foreign support to overcome this bias.

Brandt personifies the rigid, courageous fiber which even the most stubborn Germanophobes recognize in the character of these resilient people. The Germans rejected a great man last year, but Europe is solidifying, regardless. Within the NATO powers, opposition to West German rearmament has evaporated. Our German ally is building up an Army, Navy, and Air Force; among the supervisors of the new U-boat construction project are veterans of the "Untersee" fortilla that might well have won the Atlantic campaign had Hitler seen their importance.

Next step, it seems, will be nuclear arms and atomic missile bases for Germany. Why not? France and England have atomic weapons; there can be no reason to hold out on the Bonn regime. Despite many denials, one feels that nuclear weapons will be given to free Germany this year or in 1963.

This thought is enough to leviate hair in Moscow. Russia has an intense, deep-seated fear of Germany, and probably views the European-unity movement and the German rearmament as a single danger viewed under two aspects. Without a flourishing Germany, Europe cannot merge for lack of leadership. And so, as Germany grows more and more powerful, European unity proceeds with increasing swiftness. The other countries may not be pleased with their leader, but fear of Communism and the natural trend of the Common Market leave them no choice. Plainly they are falling in line.

There is some opposition, of course. Russia's charges against NATO General Adolph Heusinger stirred a sharp debate, and a paperback book has recently appeared in this country, asking if Heusinger is "the new Adolph Eichmann." But these are ebb tides raising themselves against a flood.

It won't be long now.

Fess Green Questions Adkinson And Jones

Are Rightists Really Hurting Reds?

"America's anti-Communist movement is hurting the Reds . . . ," said Messrs. Adkinson and Jones in a letter to the Daily Tar Heel. Yet, just how effective is this supposedly spontaneous, unrelenting purge against the heretofore insignificant and sadly neglected American Communist Party?

For many years the Federal Bureau of Investigation and its associated law enforcement agencies had been keeping violent Communist activities to a minimum. But some people felt that the United States wasn't secure enough, that more had to be done. So in 1938 a house committee was formed to investigate un-American propaganda, the celebrated H.U.A.C. And before long, Senator Joseph McCarthy began making the front pages with his flamboyant investigations. The list grows longer; another inquisition committee was formed under Senator James Eastland, the Internal Security Subcommittee, and state committees modeled themselves after the national ones.

Political groups began to emerge, organizing, petitioning, protesting so much that the list seems endless. And what are they doing to reduce the Communist threat?

* * *

IN THE FIRST PLACE, the H.U.A.C. did investigate some Communists. That fact is certainly true, but what else has it done? By maliciously abusing its acquired right of inquisition and subpoena, the H.U.A.C. has ruined the lives and reputations of countless innocent people. Teachers, scientists, people of all walks of life answering or refusing to answer to the Committee's unconstitutional inquiries into their beliefs and associations have lost their jobs, their acquaintances, their social standing, and in some cases, several years of their lives.

More than forty American citizens have recently served prison terms, are now in prison, or are threatened with prison for no other reason than asserting First Amendment rights before the committee. Does an organization running roughshod over human rights, stifling social progress, creating an atmosphere of unfounded fear justify its existence on the basis of the fact that in some twenty odd years it has managed to rid our land of some Communists?

* * *

As far as McCarthy's witch hunts were concerned, nothing need be said about the undesirability of their existence. Perhaps the black list of the John Birch society will awaken everybody to the internal threat of Communish. A short while ago the Justice Department and the F.B.I. asked Robert Welch to turn over any evidence he had pertaining to his suspects. Welch never replied. Maybe we can rest our hopes on the newly-formed Anti-Communist Christian group which teaches about the evils of Communism in terms of Biblical prophesy.

The patriotic Young Americans for Freedom will perhaps save us from the menace of sinister subversion. Then too, there are those organizations preparing to meet the Communism. A short while ago the do units, such as the Minutemen and the American Nazis. Underlying these activities and organizations is a frantic, fearful hemmorage (sic) of insecurity and an insidious public acceptance of inevitable doom. So much harm has been done as a result of this fervor that any good which could possibly have come out of it has been dampened by a tragic wreckage of human lives and careers. If this movement is hurting the Reds, of what avail is it when it hurts democracy so much more?

Other Nations Must Match US Purchase

From The Washington Post

The talk in the Senate about matching the funds that other countries invest in United Nations bonds is not very helpful. Senator Javits has suggested that the United States limit its first purchase of U. N. bonds to $20 million. If this should be matched by other nations (how many other nations?), then ultimately the United States would increase its share up to $100 million. Without endorsing any specific plan Majority Leader Mansfield has also spoken favorable of some kind of matching formula. This cautious approach is a far cry from the leadership that President Kennedy is exerting on this issue.

Any matching formula seems to ignore the substantial advantages that the U. N. bond issue would give the free world. Sale of its bonds will provide the U. N. with operating funds that can be used for its peace-keeping activities, thus freeing it from dependence upon special assessments, which the Soviet Union and some other powers refuse to pay. All member nations will have to participate in repaying the bonds or lose their votes in the General Assembly, as provided in the Charter. Surely it is worth $100 million to the United States to get the financing of the U. N. on this more secure basis.

SUPPOSE the United States would follow the Javits proposal and other countries should fail to match the American pittance! The U. N. would soon be bankrupt, and the responsibility would fail in part on this country because of its timorous leadership. On the other hand, if the United States takes a vigorous lead, and the foot-draggers fail to follow, they will soon find themselves outside of the U. N., at least so far as voting in the General Assembley is concerned. Instead of facing bankruptcy, the U. N. will have an opportunity to carry out its peace-loving role with less obstruction from the powers losing their voting rights.

It is true that there are risks in both courses. But the chances of perpetuating the United Nations as an effective instrument of peace are much greater, in our opinion, with vigorous American support for the new financing policy. If it failed for want of American foresight or leadership in putting its finances on a sound footing.

Reflections

Radio Havana, blasting the OAS for its espulsion of Cuba, cites a number of reasons why "progressive Cuba" should not have been kicked out of the western hemisphere alliance. "After all, we wiped out all illiteracy in one year," they claim.

Before you know it, they will even start shaving in that new civilization.

Space Shot May Be Next Week

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., disappointed but patient, was told Thursday that bad weather over the Atlantic might force postponement of his orbital space flight until next week.

The Federal Space Agency scheduled the flight on a day-to-day basis, now pointing toward a launch sometime after 7:30 a.m., EST., Friday. But chances for a launching then were "not good" and a takeoff Saturday appeared to be "very much of a lost cause."

OAS Bombs Rock Paris

PARIS (UPI) Terrorist of the outlawed Secret Army Organization OAS Thursday set off seven plastic bombs in Paris, heavily damaging the homes of De Gaulle supporters.

The bomb attack was the worst in eight days although there were no casualties. It was launched in defiance of new French security precautions both at home and in Algeria.

the betterment of our university life. In her work with the Women's Athletic Association she has consistently shown the deepest interest in her fellow-students. Her sense of honor is daily demonstrated in her dealings with students and faculty; her cheerful philosophy has been a comfort and a guide to many of her friends. In her high academic standing, in her lack of concern for herself, and in her deep concern for others, Miss Mixon has proved herself worthy of the highest acclaim.

Miss Parker . . . "one who has given of herself extensively to her university through her work on the Women's Residence Council. With calmness and efficiency she has carried out her duties of leadership.

Her warm personality and sincere interest in others have endeared her to many both in her dormitory and on the campus. Someone has said that being a friend involves among many things "the power of going out of one's self and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another." Certainly this quality can be attributed to Miss Parker."

Miss Ramazanoglu: ". . . one whose philosophy is 'Every human being is worth being interested in.' Her deep concern for her friends, fellow students and university is reflected in her eyes. She has generously given of herself to those around her and has been a source of joy, patience and faith to others. Cosmopolitan Club will always remember Fatma and Cosmo together, along with her sincere desire to bring together people of different lands to a common understanding."

Miss Reed . . .One whose sincerity of purpose and strong sense of responsibility have been an inspiration to all who know her. She has shown depth, insight, and maturity during her service on the Women's Honor Council; and she has demonstrated diligent and effective leadership as her sorority president.

Miss Reed has proven her dedication to this University not only through her active participation in various campus organizations, but also by maintaining a commendable scholastic record in a challenging and difficult field of study. Possessing steadfast convictions of honor and integrity, she has strengthened and given meaning to the lives of her fellow students."

Miss Rehder . . . one who has exemplified for his students and the University the blend of instructor and friend so desired in a teacher. She has served the University as a superior teacher and has brought credit to its faculty. For her students, Miss Rehder is more than a teacher; she is a friend and an advisor. To those who are prospective writers she offers helpful advice not only about their work but also concerning their future careers. In addition to her scholastic triumphs, Miss Rehder has attained renown as a writer. She has given unselfly of herself to her students and has been a guiding inspiration to all who know her.

Mrs. Gutherie: . . . one who has combined devotion to family and community in a remarkable way, has given herself in a spirit of dedication to the university, to the state, and to national and international organizations; and has upheld the name of Carolina far beyond the state. These include service as Chairman of the Advisory board to YMCA-YWCA, Chairman of the Mid South Speaker's Service of the United Nations, and active membership in the American Association of University Women and the League of Women Voters. Mrs. Guthrie, who has exemplified the interpendence of an intelligent faith and political responsibility in a democracy, is a constant inspiration and challenge."

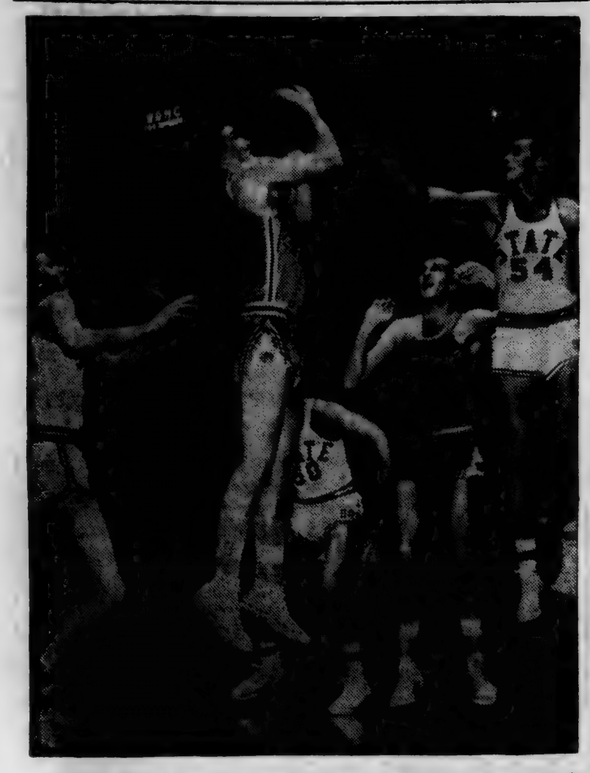
UNC, Clemson Clash Tonight



CAROLINA'S Jim Hudock connects on a first-half jump shot in Wednesday's loss to N. C. State. Hudock scored 10 of UNC's 18 in the first period and led the Tar Heels with 14 points.

Haul out the record books! Carolina's recent dive from second place in the ACC with a 5-1 mark to a tie for fourth with a 5-5 record has erased several school marks, in addition to putting the skids on UNC's jinx over N. C. State.

Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels will get a chance to redeem themselves tonight at Charlotte against Press Maravich's Clemson Tigers in the second half of the North-South doubleheader. N. C. State meets South Carolina in the opener at 7:30 and the UNC-Clemson affair takes place at 9.

Carolina's four straight losses set a new ACC record for the Chapel Hillians. The last time a Tar Heel team fell to four consecutive foes was back in the old Southern Conference when Wake Forest, State, Duke, and State again rolled over Frank McGuire's first team—in 1953. The season before, Tom Scott's team lost its final five games.

With Jim Hudock, Bryan McSweeney, Jim Donohue, Larry Brown, and Donnie Walsh in the starting lineup, Smith's men will be out to halt their streak at four against the Tigers, who fell to UNC 54-52 at Clemson early in the season.

N. C. State's 85-57 conquest of Carolina Wednesday before the largest Reynolds Coliseum crowd in two years—11,900—caused a lot of leafing through record books. Again, the answer to the state's sports writers' queries was found in Southern Conference records.

In the same season that UNC last lost four in a row, a State team coached by nine-years younger Everett Case walked to an 86-54 victory over Carolina in the Southern Conference playoffs. No State win over UNC in ACC action has ever been as one-sided as Wednesday's loss.

Th 28-point defeat was also the worst suffered by Carolina against all foes in the conference's nine-year tenure. It surpassed a Virginia 98-73 win over Carolina in 1955 to take its place at the top—or bottom—of the ladder.

SAE Romps By 119-17 'Score'

By John Montague

Records toppled right and left Wednestay afternoon as the SAE's suddenly had the satisfying realization that they "couldn't miss," and then went on to take advantage of this fact. In the process the Pi Lambs were buried by the rather lop-sided score of 119-17.

Keith Stoneman personally accounted for 38 points of this record-shattering total, his output also becoming this season's top individual mark in intramural cage action. Ned Martin didn't do badly either, netting 29.

Other scores: Phi Gams 40, Lambda Chi 28 (Ward Marshlender, 18), DKE 29, Chi Phi 28; Cobb 52, Aycock 37 (Clayton Burns, 26).

SOCCER

An all-campus team will play the UNC varsity soccer team on Fetzer Field this afternoon at 3.

UNC Bus Silent After State Win

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

It was a silent and downcast group that boarded the bus and made the long trek from Raleigh back to Chapel Hill Wednesday night.

The blue and white bus, with a big "University of North Carolina" painted on its side, carried the Tar Heel basketball team, which had just been humiliated by N. C. State 85-57, in a replica of the infamous Chicago Valentine's Day massacre of 1929.

State not only handed Carolina its fourth straight loss but also extended their own winning streak to 6 conference games, thus assuring the Wolfpack of no less than third place in the ACC's final standings.

The slaughter, witnessed by 11,900 fanatics started early with State's blonde Adonis, John Plunger leading the way. Punger scored 7 straight points in the opening minutes and Carolina never recovered.

As the State fans yelled, clapped, and stamped their feet wildly, coach Everett Case's mob had no mercy and continued to pour it on the helpless Tar Heels. Case, after the mayhem had subsided said with a sly grin that he was surprised but UNC coach Dean Smith put it a better way. Smith said, "It was no contest."

Military Ball To Be Held

L Company, 8th Regiment of Scabbard and Blade has announced that the annual Military Ball will be held on February 24, 1962 from 8:30-12:30 p.m. at the Elk's Lodge in Durham, North Carolina. Music will be provided by the Esquire Band with Joe Walker as leader.

At the Military Ball a Queen and queen's court will be selected from among six dates of Scabbard and Blade members. Also, nominations for the spring pledge class of Scabbard and Blade will be announced.

The Military Ball is an annual formal military social function at UNC. This activity is held jointly for NROTC Midshipmen and AFROTC Cadets. All cadets and Midshipmen are urged to attend this function is possible.

Germans To Rock Today

Four Groups To Stomp In Concert

The Isley Brothers will be the feature attraction at the first "rock-and-roll" Germans, which kicks off at 3 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The Isleys, who are famous for their hit "twist" record, "Shout," will bring their own band.

Ronald, Rudolph, and O'Kelly, the three brothers who comprise the group, have been singing in public since before they were old enough to go to school. They started in their home town of Cincinnati when Ronald, the lead singer, was only three. For this tender-age appearance, Ronald won a $25 war bond.

Ernie K. Doe

Ernie K. Doe, Lee Dorsey, and the Five Royales will make up the other three acts of the all rock-and-roll show which will last until five. Lee Dorsey, of "Ya, Ya" fame: Doe and the Five Royales will also bring their own bands.

The concert, sponsored by the German Club, will start a week-end of parties on fraternity row.

Publications Board To Ask For Handbook Allocation

The UNC Publications Board voted Friday to again submit a budget request for printing The Carolina Handbook to Student Legislature.

The decision was made despite administrative plans to publish an official Undergraduate Bulletin which would outline some information previously carried by the Carolina Handbook.

Necessary Aid

Publications Board Chairman Bill Townsend said the majority of the board members felt the Handbook was a necessary aid to the freshman orientation program.

In a previous Board meeting, Student Body President Bill Harriss told members he felt the Undergraduate Bulletin would not carry a sufficient amount of information concerning student government and the honor system.

Harriss said that the Bulletin would carry a brief outline covering these topics, but would lack the depth provided by the handbook.

Supplement

He said he felt the two publications would supplement each other, rather than conflict or overlap.

The Bulletin will emphasize academics, Harriss said, while the Handbook traditionally places emphasis on student government and student life at Carolina.

An editor will be chosen for the Handbook pending legislative action on the Board's budget request, according to Townsend.

He said the Board will probably combine the Carolina Handbook and the Carolina Women's Handbook, since no plans have been made to again print a separate handbook for women.

Women's Book

The Women's Handbook has previously been sponsored by the Carolina Women's Council, but will be discontinued this year due to the administrative decision to print the Bulletin.

Townsend said the Board will pass on the proposal to combine the two handbooks at its next meeting.

Tunnel Of Love Is Free Flick

"Tunnel of Love" starring Doris Day, Richard Widmark, and Gig Young will be tonight's free flick presentation. Directed by Gene Kelly and based on the Broadway play by Peter De Vries and Joseph Fields, "Tunnel of Love" is "a bedtime story for adults" dealing with marital and extramarital behavior in the New York suburb.

Showings will be at 7:30 and 9:30 in Carroll Hall and only students with ID cards will be admitted.

Purefoy Players Now Casting

The Purefoy Players are now casting for two one-act plays to be produced early in April at the Community Church.

The Players have chosen Lady Gregory's Hyacinth Halvey for the April production, with the other play yet to be decided.

The group is open to new members. No previous acting experience is required. Parts in both plays for men and women are still open. Anyone interested in trying out for either of these plays is invited to attend the next meeting of the Players on Wednesday at the Community Church, Purefoy Road, at 8:00 p.m., or may telephone Mrs. Henderson at 942-1127.

In addition, he said in a statement, "we will certainly take a good hard look at the school districts that got impacted areas money." The study was ordered by Chairman Adam Clayton Powell, D-N. Y., of the parent labor and education committee.

May Resume Picketing

Open Movies Group Votes To Ask For Full Integration

The Citizen's Committee for Open Movies voted Thursday night to ask Carolina theater officials for complete integration of the theater by March 1 and decided to resume picketing if the request was not honored.

The decision to resume picketing was not conveyed to the theater officials.

St. Joseph's

Meeting in St. Joseph's Church, the integration group voted separately to request integration in a letter to Carolina manager E. Carrington Smith and to picket the theater if the letter produced no results. Both decisions passed by large majorities.

The letter to Smith noted that the Carolina now admits Negroes who are UNC students, dates or guests of UNC students, elementary school children, or guests of white patrons. Members of the committee expressed the opinion that integration is virtually complete under these conditions and should now be made an official policy.

Smith, contacted yesterday afternoon, said he had not yet received the committee's letter but understood the nature of the request. He had "no comment" on the request.

"Good Experience"

The committee's letter said that the Varsity had had "good experience" since it adopted a policy of complete integration. The committee also said it felt the Carolina had had enough time for a gradual process of integration.

A spokesman for the Citizen's Committee's executive body said the group did not wish to use the decision to picket as a "threat" to the theater. The decision was passed at Thursday's meeting so that the committee would have an already established plan of action if the theater was not integrated by March 1.

YRC Head Addresses YAF Meet

"The way to work for conservative principles is through political action within the two-party system," UNC Young Republican Club President Earl Baker told a Young Americans for Freedom meeting Thursday night.

Baker told the group of about 30 campus conservatives that it must accept the existence of two parties that consist of coalitions and recalled that James Madison had predicted this alignment in the Federalist Papers.

He stated that the Republican Party was the conservative's real home and argued that one "cannot support a Democrat and ultimately support conservatism."

Go Goldwater

When asked how a conservative could support Rockefeller for president, Baker contended that the realistic approach was to work within the party to see that Goldwater is nominated.

YAF should technically remain a non-partisan group, he said, but in reality it should work with the GOP, and only support a conservative Democrat in cases where the sole alternative was a liberal Democrat.

"I was disappointed with the apparently unrealistic attitude toward politics manifested at this formative meeting of the local YAF," Baker said after the meeting.

"Idealism is fine, but in cases where it works against you—supporting a right-wing candidate against a moderate in a district where the right-winger cannot win an election—it does harm to the cause of conservatism.

Baker Agrees

"Philosophically, however, I agree with the main tenets of YAF."

After Baker's talk, the group voted to invite all members of YAF groups on campus to consolidate into one chapter chartered by the national organization.

It was also decided that all chapter meetings would be open to the public. This action was taken after a member stated he had been told that conservatives would not be welcome at meetings of the New Left club.

A-Bomb Pilot Would Repeat Act

PARIS (UPI)—Brig. Gen. Charles W. Sweeney, who dropped the atomic bomb on Nagasaki killing 73,884 Japanese said Friday:

"If it had to be done, I'd do it again with no doubts, but I hope it never happens."

Attorney General's Staff To Be Changed

Student Legislature met Thursday night and passed a bill to provide effective review of Presidential appointments and a bill which clarified succession to the office of Student Body President.

After having received a favorable recommendation from the Judicial Committee, a bill was passed to reorganize the Attorney General's staff. This bill would revamp the individual staff members' functions and add six to eight people to the staff.

150 Dollars

Legislature appropriated 150 dollars to the Honor Commission which would be used to make three copies of the Honor System film. Seventy-five dollars was also appropriated for transportation expenses on the 30 to 40 lecture visits planned by the Commission to North Carolina high schools in which the movie would be shown.

In other action, Tuesday March 26, was suggested as the most convenient date for the forthcoming spring elections. Definite action on this resolution was put off until next week.

To Condemn Testing

A controversial resolution condemning nuclear testing did not reach the floor for debate. The resolution condemns the Soviet Union's "unilateral repudiation" of the nuclear testing ban and urges the United States to refrain from resuming testing in the atmosphere. It is expected to be introduced for debate next week also.

Debate on a bill that would appropriate $600 for a scholarship for a Cuban refugee student was also postponed.

Hank Patterson, Vice-President of the Student Body and Speaker of the House, called a special meeting of the Legislature for next Monday at 6:45 for the purpose of considering a bill for reapportionment and re-districting of the voting districts of the student body. According to the Vice-President, the special session is necessary in order that a decision be reached on redistricting as soon as possible. "This way both parties will have ample time to make the necessary nominations and prepare a campaign before spring elections," said Patterson.

Tomlinson To Return

Bishop Tomlinson, temporal leader of the Theocratic party and spiritual leader of the Church of God will return to UNC on April 16.

Bishop Tomlinson ran for president on the Theocratic party ticket in 1960. When he was here last spring he crowned himself king of the University of North Carolina. He will return to re-enact the coronation of last year and bring a new message of peace. He will also introduce his plan for a "School for Kings" and explain his presidential platform.

UNC is one of a number of colleges and universities that he plans to visit this spring. He has visited several foreign countries as well as many of the most prominent American campuses, such as Harvard, Yale, and the University of the South.

He plans to be here all day and will be available to speak to any interested groups including government classes early in the day.

Playmakers To Present 3 One-Acts

Three one-act plays given by the Carolina Playmakers last night, will be again presented tonight at 7:30 in the Playmaker's Theater. Admission is free.

The first play, "Look Down from the Mountain" involves a young girl in a Colorado mountain town who wants to escape. The play was written by Wesley Van Tassel.

The second play, "The Hands of Ciascune" is by Wallace Johnston, who also directs the production of "Look Down from the Mountain."

The third play is "The Facade" by Larry Randolph.

Costumes by Rhoda

Costumes for all three productions are handled by Rhoda Blanton, Bobby Brunton and Hannah Bell. Fred Lubs and Rosemary McAfny handled lighting. Nell Star is property director. Ann Fitzgibbons is in charge of sound and Ray Smith is house manager. Sandy Moffet is the General Stage Manager.

Blackman Addresses New Left

By BILL DOWELL

Dr. James Blackman, professor of economics at UNC, outlined the meeting of the 22nd Party Congress of the Communist Party at the New Left Club Thursday evening.

According to Dr. Blackman the principal goal of the Congress was to revamp the "numbers game," i.e., the race to catch up with the United States in production and living standards. The Congress under the guiding hand of Khrushchev set down a twenty-year plan starting at 1960 and ending in 1980.

Increased 250 Per Cent

According to the plan, the national income would be increased to 250% of what it is now, by 1970. By 1980, it would be 500%. Industrial production would go up 260% by 1970 and 650% by 1980; heavy industry would go up to 700% by 1980. The congress scheduled the real income per worker to rise 350%. Agricultural production would go up 250% by 1970, and 350% by 1980.

Dr. Blackman stressed that this was a general statement and could not be taken wholly at face value. "It is neither wholly fabricated nor completely based on fact and valid."

Industry Best Chance

Industrial goals seem to give the best chances for success. To meet the goals set by the Congress, industry would have to increase 10 per cent per year. This increase is not too far off what the Soviet Union has been doing in past years.

Income would have to increase by 10% per year in the 60's and by at least 7% per year in the 70's. According to reports compiled by Abraham Birchson, pro-

YRC Named 'Outstanding'

At the North Carolina Young Republican Club Convention held in Greensboro, February 2-3, the UNC-YRC was named the outstanding Young Republican Club in the state. This includes college, city and county clubs. The UNC club has won the award once previously since the competition started in 1953, in 1959. Last year's award went to the Wake County club.

The award was announced by Marshall Bryant, state public relations chairman, at the state convention. The rotating plaque awarded to the Carolina club was presented at a special ceremony by Bill Patterson, Southeastern Region Director of college Young Republicans, to Earl Baker, president of the UNC-YRC.

In awarding the plaque, Patterson noted the fact that the club has one of the largest memberships in the state, and also the high calibre of the UNC club's programs. Baker, in response, mentioned his appreciation of the hard work done by the officers and the members of the club.

He said, "Rather than accept this award as the apex of our activity, we treat it as recognition of an ever-increasing trend which will continue to grow as North Carolinians see their principles embodied in the Republican Party."

Shouting Fire?

The answer to this question in relation to theater integration in Chapel Hill has yet to be answered. The answer that the Citizen's Committee for Open movies has come up with seems to be "only what we think they should."

At a meeting Thursday, the committee disclosed the fact that it planned to resume picketing operations at the Carolina Theater on March 1 if complete integration has not been affected by that time. A request was made that the information not be used by news media.

The request was not without a reasonable basis. Integration, like any sharp break from tradition, is often best carried out quietly, with a minimum of furor. The fanfare afforded by headlines and news broadcasts can create stresses out of proportion to the change.

At the same time, the problem of racial inequality is not one that can be confined to one group's protests against one theater. The right of the public to be informed, although that right is not absolute, is nonetheless an important one.

The only goal of the committee, as it seems to interpret it, at this point is the integration of the Carolina Theater. If it is necessary to operate privately, without regard to general opinion, without regard to broad issues, without regard to the right of the public to be informed, then, it seems, the committee is willing to do that.

While there are possibly some good reason for it, it is an issue we wonder if that approach is entirely wise. Integration is an issue of vital concern, not only to the committee or the theater involved, but to every person who stands on either side of the controversy—and that includes almost everyone.

This does not mean that the right of the public to be informed is inviolate, nor does it mean that news which will create unnecessary violence should be released indiscriminately.

The analogy of "shouting 'Fire' in a crowded theater is appropriate. But it should not be so broadly interpreted that the building is allowed to burn down.

Tempering Justice

Junius Scales, the scion of a socially and politically prominent North Carolina family, became a Communist when he was a student at the University of N. C. in 1940. He became an organizer in the Party's Southern wing. In 1957 he quit the Party in disgust over the invasion of Hungary and the Khrushchev revelations about Stalin. But prior to this he had been indicted and convicted under the Smith Act for "knowing membership" in a conspiracy to advocate the overthrow of the Government and sentenced to six years in prison, the longest sentence ever given under the Smith Act.

The Supreme Court divided five to four in sustaining this conviction last June, on the same day that it threw out the conviction of John Francis Noto, an admitted and continuing Party functionary, on the grounds that the Government had presented insufficient evidence of "illegal Party advocacy." Scales, the only person ever convicted under the membership clause of the Smith Act—that is, merely for belonging to the Communist Party, with no illegal activity of any sort charged against him—started to serve his term on October 2 of last year.

What a laugh this must give the Commies! The Government of the United States, leaving Communists comfortably at liberty, in effect joins hands with them to punish an ex-member whom they hate for his apostasy. Moreover, the absurdity of this paradox is heightened when one reflects that Scales is being punished for a political crime—the holding of bad beliefs and bad associations — which most Americans like to believe is punishable only in Communist countries. If President Kennedy were to pardon Scales, he would be tempering justice not alone with mercy but with equity and common sense as well.

How?

Periodically, the various campus "honoraries" that yearly stud the Yack with membership lists ritualistically act out secret rites collectively referred to as "tappings."

Each year, individuals are "tapped into the Old Well: swooped upon by the Beanbirds, the Valkyries and the Harpies; man-handled by the Giants of the Golden Fleece; poured into the Grail; applauded by the Society of Janus; drilled with the Scabbard and Blade, and chosen by the sundry Greek-letter honoraries that commend every kind of activity from scholarship to smiling.

With due consideration for democracy and realizing the dire effect this concentration of revering, loving and honoring might have on those unfortunates who somehow—God knows how—managed to avoid being "duly recognized," we would like to extend our congratulations.

We don't see how you did it.

Ford Rowan Explains NSA

Reflection Of Student Ideas

Explanatory Note: This is the second of a series of articles explaining the U. S. National Student Association. In following articles the Congress of NSA, the subcommittees and committees of NSA, and the policy declarations of NSA will be described.

NSA, constituted as a representative group of student governments, has certain major areas of activity. These are fields wherein one university's student government could not effectively operate. Through the NSA it is hoped that the feeling of the students on particular issues can be announced and appropriate action can be taken.

The first broad area in which NSA operates is in regard to the student and campus. NSA is interested in combining the knowledge of student leaders all over the country for the solution of basic problems. For this purpose numerous workshops are set up at every NSA regional assembly and at the National Student Congress to discuss such topics as student governments, campus political organizations, student affairs, student welfare, academic curriculum, extra-curricular activities student-faculty relations, honor systems, and campus communications, and newspapers. Through such studies and publicity of the findings NSA provides valuable help to member colleges. The Congress itself spells out policy on such controversial problems as college desegregation, human relations, academic freedom, and student self-government in practice.

Another broad area of NSA activity concerns the relation of the college campus to its community, state, and nation. Herein study and discussion work is done on public and private educational set ups, teacher shortage as a national problem, state and federal student aid program, governmental legislation affecting higher education, educational opportunity, and student awareness of national problems. These topics are often intricate problems, and NSA tries to represent student opinion on some of the more controversial aspects. In this way the NSA endeavors to present the student opinion on regional and national issues that directly affect students.

The final area of NSA activity is of an international scope. First, the NSA has negotiated numerous student exchanges with institutions in all parts of the world. Second, the NSA encourages American students to travel abroad, and foreign students to visit here. Low cost plans are offered. Third, the NSA maintains relations with the International Student Congress and studies the programs of other international student groups. The NSA aids in distributing information of International Student Relief organizations. Fourth, the U. S. NAS maintains liaison with individual student organizations in foreign countries. And fifth, the NSA works to increase American student awareness of international problems and situations.

These then in general are the areas within which NSA operates. Always kept in mind is NSA's goal to offer ideas, programs, and (especially) a voice for the students. Carolina, as a member of NSA, receives objective information on current problems within the scope of student activity, as well as the policy declarations the Congress has adopted and desires to publicize. Through a confederation of American student bodies, the NSA attempts to serve the educational community, fulfill the international role of the American student, provide a voice for the American student community, and assist in developing student self-government. In the next article we will show how the annual Congress tackles these tasks.

"— And His Father Lives Up There"

Pete Range: He Misses Y-Court

GOETTINGEN, GERMANY—The American undergraduate spending an exchange year at a German University suddenly finds himself transferred from the regulated and pressured methods of our college system to an academic world of self-reliance and unlimited freedom corresponding more closely to an American post-graduate school. Gone are Saturday afternoon football games, as intercollegiate sports are practically non-existent; gone are the hours in "Y-Court" over Coca-Cola, as the university plant is spread throughout the town; gone are the multitudes of tests, papers, exams, and the all-night cramming which accompanies them, for each student is expected to learn it all without being driven by tests and assignments.

Despite the seriousness, however, of the German student regarding his studies, life is constantly brightened by many of those same things which spice our undergraduate days in the United States. Saturday night finds few students looking at books as most of them turn to the various jazz taverns for an evening of beer and dancing (of Goettingen's 9,000 students, almost 3,000 are girls). Over forty fraternities, leading a life surprisingly similar to that of our American fraternities, do their due part in providing distractions on weekends and in-between, too. Practically every organization and student dorm (there are very few) of any size goes all-out with at least one full-scale ball each semester, especially at this time of year when Fasching (Shrovetide) is traditionally celebrated in costume balls all over Germany. (We just had 300 guests in the Fridtjof-Nansen-International-Haus for our Winter Ball.)

The German university offers basically two types of courses, lectures and seminars (besides science labs and pure language courses). In the lectures the professor simply reads his prepared lecture for forty-five minutes while the students take notes or simply listen to the speech. Discussion is out of the question as each lecture is attended by from 100 to 800 students. A reading list is always prescribed, especially in the literature courses, but no one is obliged to do any work or reading he does not want to. There are no tests or papers involved, the professor rarely has any contact with the student and does not worry about whether he learns anything or not—that is up to each individual student. Attendance, of course, is also a private affair. Many students, indeed, listen to the lectures only because a particular professor is very good and interesting (the kind who draw 800), not because they want to learn a great deal from it.

Seminars, on the other hand, correspond more directly to an undergraduate course in an American college. The seminars deal with more specialized areas within a field and try to dig deeply into the ideas, roots, and fundamentals of the subjects. The classes have generally no more than 50 students and each student is expected to write at least one specialized paper per semester. At least one conference with the professor is also usual.

Further, the seminars are broken down into three levels. The upper two levels generally set forth stiff pre-requisities for entrance into the seminar and are designed for students with at least 4 semesters behind them. A course on "French and German Middle Age Literature," for instance, calls for a reading knowledge of Middle French. While the lectures meet two to four times per week, an hour each time, the seminars meet only once a week for two hours. Most students attend four or five lectures and three seminars, carrying between twenty and thirty hours per week. There are no university requirements (except in some sciences) regarding hours and courses per semester.

Another interesting aspect of the lecture system and a basic part of the traditional high respect paid scholars by all Europeans is that the students always knock on their desks or stamp their feet as a token of approval when the professor enters the room and when he finishes the lecture—the better the lecture, the louder the knocking.

Certainly the greatest difference I find between our two systems centers on the complete freedom and independence given the German student, as opposed to the well-defined program the American has to follow. Pressures, texts, assignments, and tests hardly exisit here. Most students are faced with only one large exam, or possibly two at the end of their studies. He applies for the exam, which will last anywhere from four to twelve weeks and cover everything he has studied in his major field, whenever he feels he is ready for it.

German students who have spent a year in the States compare our tight system with their high schools, where the pupil stays generally until he is nineteen. Indeed, most first-year students here in Goettingen are better informed academically than the average college sophomore or junior in America. He has just passed the exteremely hard national exam which covered all his high school material and took three weeks long. He is expected to be fully capable of arranging his own study plan and discipling himself at the university.

There is, however, no doubt about the fact that most Germans more or less waste away their first semester trying to find their way around in a new, ivy-walled world and learning what it's all about. No one is expected to do great things that first semseter. The German student doesn't go blind over books all day, either, preferring instead to take part in some student activities, get together in a Ratskellar with friends sometimes, or even take a week off to go skiing once in a while. Until those last driving semesters he hardly studies six hours a day. Especially where the opera, theatre, and symphony are good, a student lets himself enjoy the cultural offerings during his youth. Completely lacking is that "rat race" feeling which beguiles many an industrious American student.

While approximately 30% of each American generation now enters college, only 6.7% of the Germans attend the universities, corresponding to the Americans in graduate school (German universities have no under—or post graduate schools—just the university). Most students are between 19 and 25 years old, and generally stay at the university between 9 and 14 semesters (only two semesters per year, totaling seven months together).

The American exchange student is truly aware of the different atmosphere he lives in at the German university. He feels he is associating with a group of very well prepared, mature, and academically serious students, well aware of their task at the university, but still a group which knows how to enjoy its extra-curriculars, its hiking in the woods, its good parties, its culture, its skiing, and its youth.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Ode To The DTH

"ODE TO THE DAILY TAR HEEL"
Hail to thee, our DAILY TAR HEEL,
The main organ of our enrichment,
To us the students you e're reveal
The broken twig, and tree thus bent.

Misrepresentation is your very frame,
You feed on biased views and such,
To you a misquote means the same
And hence creates a writer's crutch.

Tis like a sudden freshing shower,
That kuenches thirst of endless drought,
How you possess the Godly power
To see the inside from without.

But worry not, thy future grows,
Stupid words will be thy legs,
For only chuckles from thy prose
Can help digest our breakfast eggs!

Men's Honor Council

Editor's Note:

Hark the sound of TA RHEEL reader Airing his complaint:
Saying what he reads each morning
Isn't, wasn't, ain't!

When you breakfast, please remember, Before you harp and chide
That when somehow the news is scrambled The editor gets fried.

Honor Council Trials Should Be Publicized

I have been reading the articles in the DTH concerning the lack of information in regard to the trials being conducted by the Honor Council. This fall during orientation I was introduced to the Honor System. On learning that the "public" at a trial consisted only of DTH reporters I had serious misgivings. However, after becoming acquainted with the DTH I found that my fear of any biased report was unfounded. The Tar Heel presents a remarkably objective view of UNC's problems, if not through objective writing, through objective selection of articles. The Daily Tar Heel is well suited to the task of presenting the proceedings of the Honor Court to the student body.

However, in practice the trials are mentioned only in general and vague terms. The campus has little knowledge of the offenses that are being committed; nor do they know what methods are being used to punish the offenders. Nothing has been revealed that would allow the student to judge the quality of his Honor Council for himself.

Any case in which a man may be judged to lack honor deserves the consideration of the public. Therefore, I would suggest a more detailed report on the trials. Possibly, a form such as this could be followed:

Case No. 1—Student accused of—— (cheating on his final) by —— (another student).

The verdict.

Any comment that may be enlightening.

The whole campus is involved in the enforcement of the Honor system. Students will read all information concerning the trials with interest.

Reflections

North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin had quite a struggle with his doubts about the future usefulness of the United Nations, but concluded that he would vote for U.S. participation in the special $200 million bond issue.

We can understand the Senator's doubts. We had much the same struggle in deciding our endorsement of the bond issue as an alternative to bankruptcy of the U.N.

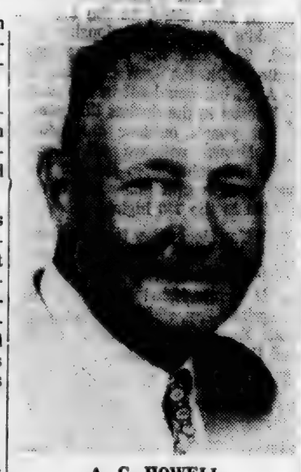
Sen. Ervin will have much distinguished company before the issue is closed, though some restrictions may be built into U.S. participation by the Congress.

Howell Is Named To Student Study

Professor A. C. Howell has been appointed to the Governor's Commission on Foreign Student Relations.

The Commission, headed by William Joslin of Raleigh, has been set up to bring about better relations between foreign students and the people of North Carolina.

Arrangements to have students visit in North Carolina homes during vacations, opportunities to visit industrial and governmental organizations in the state, and conferences especially devoted to international student problems and concerns—are some of the means by which the Commission intends to accomplish its objective.



A. C. HOWELL

Further Measure

A further measure which Dr. Howell hopes to bring about is better provision for summer jobs for foreign students.

Professor Howell has been UNC adviser to foreign students since 1957. He shares the post with Gen. F. C. Sheppard.

Dr. Howell joined the UNC faculty in 1920. He lived in Cuba until he was 12 years old. While he was getting his M.A. at Columbia University in New York he taught English as a foreign language to Spanish speaking New Yorkers.

Ph.D. At UNC

After getting his Ph.D. at UNC, Dr. Howell taught as associate professor at the University of San Carlos in Guatemala. In 1955 he taught as a visiting professor in Seoul, Korea under the Smith-Mundt Act. From 1941 to 1943 he was assistant director under Dr. S. E. Levitt of a program for Latin American Students at UNC.

Soviets Defy Allied Flights

BERLIN (UPI) — The Soviets Friday defied a Western Allied warning against trying to restrict Western flights to Berlin and demanded exclusive use of part of one of the vital air lanes. But they failed to send up any Soviet planes to harass Western aircraft.

A Soviet Embassy spokesman served notice, however, that harrassing Russian flights in the three air corridors to West Berlin would continue.

Cease-Fire Said Near In France

PARIS (UPI)—President Charles de Gaulle ordered drastic action Friday to crush a mounting wave of terrorism amid strong reports that an Algerian cease-fire agreement is imminent.

Sources close to the Algerian rebel government in Tunis said points at issue in secret peace talks near the France-Swiss border had been settled.

"Anticipation"

In Paris, however, a spokesman for the French Ministry of Algerian Affairs commented: "This is anticipation. I wish it were correct anticipation. The talks are continuing."

Sources in Tunis asserted that the rebel ministers taking part in the secret peace talks would fly directly to Tripoli this weekend to present the France-rebel protocol to the national council of the revolution—the rebel "parliament"—for ratification.

Formality

These sources reported ratification would be a formality and that a cease-fire might begin within a few days and certainly before the end of the month.

Government sources said De Gaulle called in Minister of Interior Rogery Frey and ordered him to take drastic action against terrorism of the outlawed Secret Army Organization OAS, which is determined to keep Algeria French.

Roadblocks

Flying patrols of police and Republican security guards set up roadblocks in various sections of Paris and searched cars for arms or explosives. It was announced that more than 10,000 cars and 22,000 individuals had been checked in the past 24 hours.

Press reports said the police soon will start similar checks in the Paris subway.

Free Flick Star

Voice Recital Is Set

"Hill Hall Presents," WUNC-TV's concert series, will feature a voice recital Wednesday at 9:30 p.m.

Students of Dr. Joel Carter of the Department of Music will be presented in recital.

Roselyn Langley, mezzo-soprano, will sing several French Begerettes. Miss Langley, a junior in the Department of Music, is from Selma, N. C. She will be accompanied by Henry Tysinger.

German Songs

Doss Phillips, baritone, will perform German Art Songs. Mr. Phillips is a senior music major from High Point. He will be accompanied by Betsy Blitch.

Also included in the program will be arias from 'Samson and Delilah" and "Faust."

Dr. Carter will also appear on the program, talking with the program moderator, Enid Katahn.

School Administration Plan Of Study Is Now Underway

By CHUCK MOONEY

Schoolboy's dreams have come true.

Some 29 of them enrolled in the UNC School of Education's special "School Administration" program.

Mature, Serious

"These are the most mature, serious students we've had at the University," said Arnold Perry, Dean of the School of Education.

"Some of them commute to Chapel Hill two days a month for about six hours of classes—three for over 100 miles.

"The rest go to night classes in either Charlotte or Winston-Salem, at Charlotte College or Dalton Jr. High School.

"This is the first time we've had superintendents and principals taking non-professional courses during a regular term," he said.

Two-Year Plan

This two-year graduate program leads to an advanced certificate for principals and superintendents only. The first part of it is for university classes; the second, for a field study.

The program teaches them to operate public schools by required classes on finance and budgets, leadership, buildings and equipment, supervising teachers and theories of administration.

They may take courses of their own choice in education and one related subject. The present group chose Contemporary International Relations of the U. S. under Dr. Shepard Jones, a Burton Craige professor in political science as their related subject. Last fall they took Legal Problems in Public Administration under Professor David G. Monroe.

Investigate

In the field study the superintendents and principals investigate a public school problem under university supervision, using their classroom knowledge. They make periodic reports and the final exam is a written report—equal to a master's thesis—on the entire field study.

Possession of this advanced certificate qualifies them for better positions and higher salaries.

Recognition

The program is recognized by the North Carolina State Board of Education, the American Association of School Administrators and the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

fessor of economics and Soviet specialist, the national income growth has been only 7% and will probably drop down to 6%. This would bring the Soviet Union far short of Khrushchev's target.

Safe To Be Pessimistic

As for agricultural targets, Dr. Blackman said that it would be easiest and safest to be pessimistic. The Soviet Union has neither the resources nor the climate to make the advances which she hopes to make.

The chances are fairly good that the Soviet Union will have difficulty in raising enough food to feed her own people much less raising enough to go into competition with the United States. The agricultural difficulties of the Soviet Union supply reason to believe that Khrushchev's targets for rises in the national income may not be reached.

USSR Half US

The Soviet Union's National Product is now approximately one-half that of the United States. If the United States were to grow at 2% per year, by 1970 the National product would be 25% larger than it is today. By 1980 it would be 50% higher. As it is the National Product of the United States is growing at 3% per year and may increase to 4% per year. If the Soviet Union's National Product were to grow at 6% per year (twice our rate of growth), it would reach the level which we have reached in 1960. By 1980 it would be half again as big as our present National Product; it would still fall behind our 1980 National Product.

US Delenda Est

According to Khrushchev only the date and not the inevitability of the economic defeat of the United States is changed.

Dr. Blackman said that it looks on many bases as if the Soviet Union might someday surpass the United States, but that that is vague and uncertain. It makes a great deal of difference whether the National Product is composed of guns or butter, as to how the country fares.

The implications of the party congress were many. Satellite countries played up the liberal aspects, i.e., relaxation of political control. The drive for increased affluence would seem to point towards a merging of classes. Khrushchev believes that only after the program is completed in 1980 can the world begin its march towards real communism. The amount of affluence that is needed to make a country ready for communism is dubious. Present indications seem to say that Khrushchev wants the Soviet Union to reach at least the present economic level of the United States.

To Strengthen Central Control

The program was unrevealing as to how the party intended to react towards decentralization.

Red Activities Asked Halted

LONDON (UPI)—Britain urged the Soviet Union Friday to restrain the North Vietnamese Communists from their "flagrant" attempts to overthrow by force the government of South Viet Nam.

A formal British memorandum urged the Kremlin to call off the North Vietnamese in Russia's role as co-chairman with Britain of the 1954 Geneva Conference that ended the Indochina War.

Britain bluntly rejected a Soviet charge that U. S. military assistance to South Viet Nam was aimed at turning that country into a strategic bridgehead in Southeast Asia.

Carolina's Tar Heels Meet South Carolina Tonight

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK
DTH Asst. Sports Editor

North Carolina's Tar Heels meet the University of South Carolina tonight at 9:15 in the windup game of the North-South doubleheader series at the Coliseum in Charlotte.

Coach Dean Smith's UNC cagers were deadlocked for fourth place in the ACC with the Columbia Gamecocks going into last night's games. Each had a 5-5 record before their tussles with Clemson and North Carolina State, respectively.

Carolina, which has won 36 of their 47 meetings with the Gamecocks over the years, beat South Carolina earlier this season at Chapel Hill 83-71, and tonight will try to make it two in a row.

But the Tar Heels will have to stop Art Whisnant to do it. The 6-4 senior from Hildebran, N. C., scored 29 points in the teams' first meeting and currently is the ACC's third leading pointmaker. Whisnant has piled up 445 points for a 22.3 per game average, to rank behind only Len Chappell of Wake Forest and Art Heyman of Duke in the ACC.

South Carolina Coach Bob Stevens, whose charges had a 12-9 mark before last night's N.C. State game, will probably start, with Whisnant, 6-3 Bud Cronin and 6-5 Jim Podell in forecourt and 6-3 Ronnie Collins and 6-1 Scottie Ward at the guards.

ART WHISNANT, high-scoring South Carolina forward leads the Gamecocks in today's battle at Charlotte. The North Carolinian from Hildebran carried a 22.3 average into this week's action and ranks third in the ACC behind Wake Forest's Len Chappell and Duke's Art Heyman. Whisnant is a top candidate for the ACC all-star team.

Track Team Hosts Big 5 Indoor Meet

By ED DUPREE

UNC's indoor track team hosts the annual Big Five meet in the Tin Can this afternoon at 1:30. Varsity and freshman teams participate in a warm-up for the ACC Indoor Games on March 10.

The defending champion in both the varsity and frosh divisions is North Carolina and this year's varsity edition could be the best Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton have come up with.

The Tar Heels boast three of last season's individual champions in Gerry Stuver, Rett Everett, and John O'Bannon.

Stuver, a junior from Berkeley Heights, N. J., was the ACC's top man in the 880-yard run last season with a time of 1:54.7. The lean distance man was third in the mile run in the ACC outdoor finals in 1961 and more recently finished second in the conference finals for Ranson's ACC cross country champions.

Everett, also a giant in cross country circles, won his title indoors for a 9:27.5 performance in the two-mile event. Two months later the Greenville, N. C. athlete took th outdoor track title in the same event with a time of 9:20.5. For his cross country efforts Everett was rewarded with a first place in 1960 and a third in 1961.

O'Bannon leaped 22⅛ feet in topping all competitors last year in the broad jump. Moving outdoors in the spring, O'Bannon, who hails from Marshall, Va., finished third in the league finals.

Jim Brown, now in his second full season after transferring from SMU in 1959, could be the key to an indoor season championship for UNC. The tall St. Louis senior hurdles with the best of them in the ACC, but could fill in the gaps for Ranson in the dashes this year. In last year's outdoor championships Brown polished off Maryland's Bill Johnson in the 220 low hurdles for a first place and came in third in the 120 highs.

Both Tar Heel relay teams placed first in the VMI relays two weeks ago. Brown, Stuver, Bob Hart, and Joe McLamb raced to victory in the sprint relay, while Hart, Stuver, Scott Brent, and Charlie Little aced the two-mile reilay.

The jumpingest Tar Heel is Tom Clark, a Greensboro sophomore who holds the school freshman high jump record of 6.6½. Clark tied for first in the VMI relays with a leap of 6-4.

Baseballers Prepare For Southern Trip In March

Pre-season baseball practice has been underway for two weeks at North Carolina with the Tar Heels prepping for their annual Florida tour March 21-24.

Coach Walter Rabb welcomed 26 candidates, five of whom were regulars on last year's outstanding club. Returning are nine lettermen and at least seven promising sophomores.

Prospects, according to Rabb, beginning his sixth season as head coach, are "fair." The evaluation could be better except for an untested pitching staff. When in an optimistic mood he proclaims that the team has "good potential."

The Tar Heels finished runners-up to Duke in 1961, losing a doubleheader to Virginia on the last day of the season after apparently having the Atlantic Coast Conference pennant locked up.

Gone from that team are its two aces, All-American centerfielder Jim Mooring and top ACC pitcher Nicky Warren. Warren never lost a college game.

Opening Carolina's attractive 27-game schedule will be a two-game series with Florida at Gainesville on March 21 and 22. Then the Tar Heels play Vanderbilt the next day, also in Gainesville. They complete their southern swing by meeting Georgia Southern at Statesboro, Ga., March 24 on the way home.

At two periods during the season Carolina plays six and then seven consecutive games at home. Featuring the Emerson Stadium slate are Ithaca (home opener on March 26), Yale, VPI, Delaware, Camp Lejeune, Georgia Southern, Florida State, and East Carolina. These, plus all seven league members, make up the 16-game home schedule.

Tentative starters in Rabb's plans include veterans Len Dellolio at first base, Paul Swing at second, Larry Neal at third, Russ Hollers in centerfield, and Heyward Hull in right.

Other first stringers currently are sophomores Bernie Isgett at catcher and Jim Speight at shortstop. Isgett missed all of his freshman year with a broken leg, but Rabb feels he or Dee Frady can handle the chores. Speight was the leading freshman batsman last year.

About that uncertain pitching staff, Rabb looks for definite improvement in returning lettermen Bob Wacker, 2-3 last year, and Larry Jenkins (1-1), a southpaw. Dave Murr (2-0) is a letterman lefty who, "if he gets started right," might solve the mound problem.

Two sophomores, Andy Billesdon and Spence Willard, have excellent potential and could be the key to the Tar Heels making good. Both are righthanders. A third sophomore tosser, southpaw Clayton Burns, is regarded by Rabb as a possible "sleeper."

UNC Swimmers Breeze Past Virginia Tech By 68-27

By HARRY TOLLE

Mann's record-breaking 2:01.2 timing in Carolina's 68-27 drubbing of Virginia Tech "is good indication that he may cover 200 yards in less than two minutes," according to UNC Coach Pat Earey.

Thursday night's clocking is the second fastest listed in United States history. Charlie Bittick of Southern California holds the record at 1:57.1.

"It was a tremendous performance," said VPI Coach H. R. Redding. "That boy is a great competitor."

Redding sighed, and said, "He's a Virginia (Hickory) boy, you know. We tried to get him to come to Tech."

Did Mann plan to set a record?

"Not at all," said Thompson. "While swimming, I didn't realize that I was anywhere near the record."

Those present in Bowman Gray Memorial Pool were quite aware of the situation.

"I don't know how fast I can go," said Mann. "It will be pretty tough to get any lower."

Before Mann's performance, diver Sandy Patterson was the brief star of Thursday's meet. His inward 1½ somersault, Tuck position, brought him a close 172-170 victory over teammate Doug Fambrough.

UNC, taking all events, was also led by Captain Bob Bilbro's two firsts in the 200-yard individual medley and the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Junior Howard Cone also had two firsts (50-yard freestyle and the 400-yard freestyle relay).

Things were not all bad for the visitors from Blacksburg, Va., however.

They set five VPI school records to help sooth some of the wounds inflicted by Carolina. They were: Medley relay (3:59) 200 individual medley (Captain Steve West—2:17.5) 200 butterfly (Tommy Tomlinson—2:10.7), 200 backstroke (Mike Stoner—2:14.5), and diving (Ron Phares—146 points).

The summary:

50-yard freestyle—(1) Cone, UNC; (2) Murray, UNC; (3) Orreck, VPI, 23:6.

200-yard individual medley—(1) Bilbro, UNC; (2) Briggs, UNC; (3) West, VPI, 2:13.0.

200-yard backstroke—(1) Mann, UNC; (2) King, UNC; (3) Stoner, VPI, 2:01.2 (new UNC, ACC, pool record).

440-yard freestyle — (1) Bissell, UNC; (2) Lea, UNC; (3) Woodruff, VPI, 4:54.5.

DICK BLACKMAN — The number two scorer on UNC's wrestling team with 25 points. Both Blackman and Pete Gilchrist should surpass the all-time UNC scoring record.

Wrestlers Meet Duke At 4 In Woollen Gym Match

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

North Carolina's wrestling team, coming on strong as the season wears into its latter stages, faces Duke University this afternoon in a big ACC match scheduled for 4:00 in Woollen Gym.

Coach Sam Barnes' grapplers, after dropping their first five matches of the season, have won three and tied one since then as they bid to round into top shape for the post-season ACC Championships.

The Tar Heels, who last wrestled on Feb. 6 in a rare doubleheader in which they defeated Pfeiffer 28-10 and deadlocked tough Appalachian 14-14, will be after their second ACC win. They are 3-5-1 overall.

Two UNC matmen will be shooting for the school individual scoring record today. Charlotte senior Pete Gilchrist, who wrestles in the 137-pound weight division and has pinned his last five opponents, has a total of 28 points—just two shy of the 1959 mark set by Perrin Henderson.

147-pounder Dick Blackman, a junior from Whiteville, N. C., has totaled 25 points so far and needs only a pin today to tie Henderson's record.

Duke Coach Carmen Falcone has only four lettermen back from last year's team which finished with a 1-4 mark. They are Frank Bernstein, Charles Grossman, James Johnson, and Rowland Lomer.

JOYNER BLAST

Joyner Dorm will give a Combo Party Saturday night from 9 to 12 p.m. in the basement of Cobb Dorm. The whole campus is invited. Harry McDowell's Combo will play.

Little Men Make Good In Big Man's World Of Sports

Jim Beatty (5-6) and Chuck McKinley (5'8) scored impressive victories in different sports last weekend for what might be a dandy lesson for slow-to-sprout youngsters who feel they'll never be big enough to star in major competition.

This is an age of the mobile monster in pro football and basketball but there's plenty of room for a small man in baseball, golf, tennis, college basketball, college football, track and field and, of course, horse-racing for the real peewees.

Beatty, a 27-year-old 128-pounder, raced the first indoor mile under four minutes at Los Angeles Saturday night ith a clocking of 3:58.9. McKinley, 21, won the U.S. indoor tennis championship. He's also co-holder of the grass courts doubles and is the chief hope of the U.S. Davis Cup team.

By Monday's physical standards both Beatty and McKinley are real shorties who don't figure to hold their own in big time competition.

Trains Diligently

But Beatty, a dedicated runner, trains diligently and plans carefully before he steps onto the track for a race. McKinley, dwarfed by most of his tennis opponents, compensated for his lack of size by perfecting a sizzling overhead shot and scored with 26 of 27 attempts in his winning indoor final against Whitney Reed.

Leading little men in other sports all under 5 feet 10, include golfers Gary Player, Jerry Barber, Gene Littler, and Billy Maxwell; baseballers Albie Pearson ElRoy Face, Harvey Haddix Bobby Richardson, Luis Aparicio and Nellie Fox; football star Galen Hall of Penn State and a flock of candidates for the "Small America" basketball team led by Larry Armstrong 5-9 of Arizona State U.

Player, Masters champion and pro golf's leading money winner last year, is only 5-7 and weighs 150. Still he's a husky compared to PGA champ Jerry Barber, who stands only 5-5 and weighs 137.

Little Golfers Listed

Littler, former Amateur champ now U.S. Open titleholder, is 5-9. Butch Baird, a comer, is 5-8 and weighs 150. Jackie Cupit, 1961 rookie of the year on the golf circuit is 5-9. Ted Kroll is 5-8 and so is veteran Billy Maxwell.

Arnold Palmer, the mostest on any golf course, isn't exactly a giant as athletes go—175 pounds on a 5-10½-inch frame.

The Pirates have baseball's mightiest pitching mites — Face 5-8, 155 pounds and Haddix, 5-9, 160—and the White Sox have the niftiest small-man second base combination in Fox 5-9, 162 and Aparicio 5-8, 155.

Pearson, who had a fine year with a .288 average for the new Los Angeles Angels last season is the smallest major leaguer at 5-5 and 141 pounds.

White Sox rookie outfielder Floyd Robinson, Yankee second baseman Bobby Richardson, Met infielders Don Zimmer and Elio Chacon and Bubba Phillips of the Indians are all 5-9. So is Penn State's ace quarterback, Galen Hall who was rated "too small" for the pros until he starred in two post-season games and was signed promptly by Washington.

HARASSMENT CEASES

East Germans Call Big 3 'Air Pirates'

BERLIN (UPI)—The East German Communists Saturday denounced the Big Three Western powers as "air pirates" but Russian planes made no attempt to harass allied traffic in the corridors linking Berlin to the West. Western officials said the failure of Soviet planes to show up in the airlines across Communist East Germany meant only a temporary respite in the harassment campaign. They said they had no reason to believe the Russians had called off attempts to restrict allied air traffic.

Six times in the past nine days the Russians have demanded that western planes be barred from flying at altitudes below 7,500 feet during certain specified hours. The Russian representative at the four-power Air Safety Control Center in Berlin demanded that the corridors be "reserved" for Soviet military flights.

The United States, Britain and France rejected the demand as a violation of four-power agreements and sent extra military flights through the 20-mile-wide corridors. Russian MIG jet fighters shadowed the western aircraft, both military and commercial, and performed acrobatics dangerously near them.

Western officials said the Russians did not renew the demand to monopolize the corridors Saturday. But they noted that flying conditions were bad—there were heavy clouds and high winds over Germany.

Communist East Germans, meantime, claimed the western allies had no rights under the four-power agreements to fly over East German territory to Berlin.

The attacks on the vital western air traffic which broke the back of the 1948-49 Soviet blockade of Berlin came in editorials in the East Berlin Berliner Zeitung and The Young World, publication of the Communist Youth Organization.

The western powers do not recognize Communist East Germany as a sovereign state and have refused any dealings with it. The attacks were centered on the flights by commercial air lines to West Berlin, 110 miles inside the Iron Curtain. The Communists contended that the four-power agreements made no provision for such traffic.

On the ground, three East German border police, in uniform and carrying their machine pistols, fled to West Berlin this morning. West Berlin police also reported that two youths swam to freedom across a border body of water and had to be treated in a West Berlin hospital for exhaustion.

YAF Marchers Stage Second Exhibition

Army Of Students Reaches 4,700

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A few student peace marchers let their tempers slip a bit Saturday and two were arrested for arguing with a policeman at a massive White House picket demonstration.

The two youths arrested refused to give their names, police said. They were jailed on charges of disorderly conduct for refusing a policeman's order to keep moving —a requirement for White House picketing.

The army of college students grew to 4,700 at mid-afternoon, one of the leaders said, just before a closing rally. About 2,000 were said to be on the White House picket operation at about noon before it broke up. It was said to be the biggest picket demonstration there in at least nine years.

The arrests marked the only incident during the two days of demonstrations by students advocating an end to all nuclear testing in the atmosphere—both by the United States and Russia. A "policy statement" by the students, calling themselves the council for a "Turn Toward Peace" TTP, also called for unilateral disarmament.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., who was among House-members and Senators visited by student delegations, said in a statement that the youths were "in reality fronting for powerful liberal and left wing organizations."

A rival youth group which favors nuclear testing and stiffer cold war policies by the United States counter-picketed the demonstrators. Members of the conservative "Young Americans for Freedom" YAF carried such signs as "A test today will keep the Commies away."

The student marchers encountered a cold shoulder at many congressional and government offices where they sought to put over their theme that the United States should begin disarming regardless of what Russia does.

A delegation headed by Peter Goldmark, a Harvard senior from New Canaan, Conn., gained an hour and a half audience Saturday with two top officials of the Soviet Embassy. Goldmark described the session as "extremely interesting."

A Soviet Embassy spokesman said later the students "were pretty critical of both sides." He also said they asked if a visit to the Soviet Union could be arranged by a two-man delegation of their movement to talk with Rusian youths.

Algerian Cease Fire Looms; Minister Delays Paris Trip

PARIS (UPI) — Last minute hitches were reported delaying an Algerian cease-fire Saturday night but the end of the war there was so near France began moving troops into key spots in Algeria to cope with an expected uprising by European extremists.

In Paris, armed police stopped motorists on the streets and pedestrians on the streets and subway in search of members of the outlawed Secret Army Organization (OAS) which opposes an independent Algeria.

But France's Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe, who was been locked all week in a final round of tough negotiations with rebel leaders at a secret hideout believed to be in the Jura Mountains near the Swiss border, delayed his return to Paris.

Fly to Tripoli

The rebel leaders who are negotiating with Joxe had been expected to fly soon to Tripoli, in Libya, where their National Council of the Algerian Revolution CNRA or parliament was to have met Sunday or Monday to approve the draft agreement.

But at the last moment, Rebel Premier Ben Youssef Ben Khedda and other top Algerian rebels who will take part in the parliament session postponed their departure from Tunis.

Earlier, officials here said President Charles de Gaulle left Paris for his country home at Solombey-Les-Deux - Eglises, Afterwards, they said this was not so. They said he presumably was remaining onhand for telephoned consultations with Joxe.

Government sources in Paris and rebel sources in Tunis said the last minute holdup was over the problem of guarantees for the 1,100,000 Europeans in Algeria after independence.

Balked at Demand

The rebels reportedly have balked at a French demand that the Europeans should be allowed dual nationality - Algerian nationality in Algeria and French nationality in France.

The accord would make Algeria, which France has governed for more than 140 years, an independent soverign state before the end of the year.

With agreement near, new tensions swept Algeria where the OAS has carried out a campaign of terror that has killed near 900 persons since Jan. 1. Strikes and violence were reported from Algeria Saturday.

67 Reported Killed In European Storm

LONDON (UPI)—The worst winter storm in 100 years cut a path of death and destruction across northern Europe Saturday from the British Isles to Russia's Baltic States. Floods and hurricane-force winds killed scores of persons and left thousands homeless in the freezing cold.

At least 67 persons were reported killed this side of the Iron Curtain. Hardest hit was West Germany where 50 persons died and 40,000 persons were forced to flee their homes. Property damage in Britain, Holland and West Germany ran into the millions of dollars.

One death was reported in East Germany. There was no report of casualties in Poland, Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia.

Snowstorms, rains, high tides, strong winds and avalanches plagued other parts of Europe, from Finland in the north to Switzerland in the south. Landslides also killed 15 workers in northern Iran since Thursday.

The storm, spawned in the North Atlantic off Scandinavia early Friday, battered cities in Britain, smashed dikes in Holland, sent rivers over their banks and whipped up abnormally high tides in the North and Baltic seas.

West Germany officially listed 50 dead Britain 11, Donkarm 3, France 2, and Sweden 1. Untold number of persons were injured.

The worst hit area was along the low lying North Sea coast, where German Army helicopters dropped food supplies to marooned survivors and plucked shivering hundreds from the rooftops of flooded homes.

The Defense Ministry in Bonn reported that 11,000 members of the armed forces, including engineer units, Air Force planes and Army helicopters, were taking part in the rescue and relief operations.

Hamburg, a city of 2 million was hit hard, with the suburb of Wilhelmsburg completely isolated by flood waters. An Army helicopter plucked men, women and children off roofs in Hamburg, Germany's largest port and second largest city, where the flooding Elbe River turned many streets into raging canals. Other helicopters rescued 600 marooned, freezing residents from rooftops in the isolated town of Papenburg. Others dropped milk and butter on Wangerooge Island, which lies off Bremerhaven in the North Sea.

Two Air Force planes flew sandbags from Cellette Wittmundshaven, while nine others carried 130,000 sandbags from Frankfurt to Bremen.

Rail, road and air traffic throughout most of Northern Europe was slowed to a crawl or completely halted. Snow blanketed Sweden, Finland and Denmark and two persons died in a snowslide on Devil's Peak in the French Alps near Grenoble.

Paul S. Hubbard Is Awarded Grant

Paul S. Hubbard Jr., assistant professor in the UNC Department of Physics, has been awarded an Alfred P. Sloan Foundation unrestricted research grant for two years, beginning in September, 1962.

As a recipient of this award, Dr. Hubbard is free to choose and direct his own pure, basic research. He is one of 83 young university scientists in the United States and Canada who have been awarded such grants. The total amount of awards comes to over $1.3 million.

All scientists considered for Sloan Research Fellowships are nominated by their department chairmen or other well-established colleagues. Scientists do not apply for the fellowships.

Male Superiority To Be Discussed By Di-Phi Senate

Are women inferior?

That's what the Di-Phi will be debating Tuesday night at 7:30 in Di Hall, third floor New West.

The first meeting of the Spring semester will feature a resolution by Di Senator Curtis Gans, of Haywood County, stating that men are infinitely superior to women.

"The truth of this resolution is self-evident," Di-Phi President Arthur Hays commented, "but we'll debate it just for the fun of it anyway."

Gans, in his resolution, states that women are only useful for decoration and reproduction, and that most of the decoration comes from drug stores and continued reproduction seriously threatens the economic future of civilization.

"Men," Gans commented, "are even partly responsible for the only claim that women have to creativity."

The Di-Phi, the oldest debating society in the country, has invited the public—especially the female public—to attend and participate in the debate.

"We know women can talk," Gans said, "now we'll see if they can argue intelligently."

For Valentine Day Bedroom Murder

Attache's Secretary Held

LEOPOLDVILLE, Congo (UPI) —Congolese authorities Saturday arrested blonde private secretary Elizabeth Thring, 22, on a charge of "suspicion" in the Valentine Day bedroom murder of Lt. Col. Hulen D. Stogner, the assistant U. S. military attache in the Congo.

Miss Thring, calm and composed, was taken to Makala Prison after three days of questioning by Congolese and United Nations police officials and two U. S. Army detectives who flew in Saturday morning from U. S. Army headquarters in Wiesbaden, Germany.

She would be tried by a Congolese court if the government prefers formal charges.

The arrest warrant was sworn out by Congolese public prosecutor Rene Rosy. She could be held on the warrant "for at least one week" but that it could be extended indefinitely.

Shot Wednesday Night

Stogner, 39-year-old father of six children who live with his wife in El Paso, Tex., was shot fatally Wednesday night in the bedroom of his swank Park Hembise villa. He was in bed when he was shot. Miss Thring said she was sitting in a chair in the bedroom at the time.

Miss Thring, who is two inches taller than the stocky, five-foot-eight-inch blonde crewcut ex-paratrooper, was wearing a full skirted dress, dark glasses and an upswept hairdo when she was arrested at the home of U. S. Air Attache Col. Edward Dannemiller where she had been staying since the shooting.

She was taken to a two-room cell in Makala Prison, guarded by Congolese matrons.

No formal charges were placed against Miss Thring who is not an employee of the U. S. Embassy but was reported to have come here from Washington as Stogner's private secretary.

Usual Life Imprisonment

Under Congolese law, which is derived from Belgian law, murder carries the death penalty. But by tradition the chief of state always commutes it to life imprisonment.

Miss Thring arrived last August, a month after Stogner, and reported for duty as his private secretary. She was with him when police said he was shot in the back of the neck by someone who apparently stood on a wall outside the villa and aimed through the bedroom window. Police said she told them she picked up Stogner's revolver after she saw he was shot. She said she saw a man who fled when he spotted the gun in her hand.

The two American detectives arriving Saturday were sent here by the Criminal Investigation Division from U. S. Army headquarters in Europe. They came to question her and two Congolese being held, Stogner's cook, Pierre Mgoyi, and his nightwatchman, Jacques Simba.

Cuban Expert To Talk Here On Takeover Of Communism

Dr. Jorge Castellanos of "The Truth About Cuba Committee, Inc." will give a public address on "Why Cuba Was Communized" in Howell Hall Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. His appearance here is under the auspices of the YM-YWCA's International Relations and C.C.U.N. committees, and Pi Sigma Alpha, Political Science honorary society.

The Truth About Cuba Committee is a non-profit organization incorporated in Florida and set up by a group of Cubans and North American residents of Cuba who, quoting from one of the Committee's pamphlets, "believe that the fight against Communism can be effectively advanced by giving people the facts about the enslavement of Cuba . . . and is dedicated to the cause of helping to eliminate Communism from the Western Hemisphere."

The committee was organized to obtain and divulge information regarding events in Cuba through the most effective media possible; to maintain a public relations office in Washington, D. C.; to organize a Bureau of statistics and information on Cuba and make its services available to writers, speakers, educators and all interested persons; to plan and promote conferences, debates and seminars related to events in Cuba and to the dangers of Communists, to publish bulletins and pamphlets on the situation in Cuba and the factual history of the communization of the country, to prepare and publicize through all available channels answers to opinions supporting the Castro regime, and to cooperate with other organizations working to oppose Communism."

Postgrad Medical Courses Planned

The University School of Medicine will sponsor postgraduate medical courses in North Wilkesboro-Elkin and in Lexington, in cooperation with local medical societies of those communities, and the UNC Extension Division.

The North Wilkesboro-Elkin course will begin on Tuesday, March 6. This series of lectures will be given alternately in North Wilkesboro and Elkin on each Tuesday.

The Lexington lectures will begin on Wednesday, March 7. Both courses will continue on the same days of the week for a six-week period.

'faith' Or Faith?

The plight of Methodist minister Rev. David Andrews, who was relieved of his position as Wesley Foundation director at Appalachian State Teachers College in Boone recently, calls to mind circumstances surrounding the resignation of Father Malcolm Boyd, Episcopal Chaplain at Colorado State nearly a year ago.

Father Boyd's resignation from Colorado was forced because he conducted services expressly aimed at attacting "beatniks." Rev. Andrews was relieved of his position at Appalachian because of controversy arising after he knelt in front of the White House to pray for executive clemency for Morton Sobel, a convicted spy. He was arrested after he refused to obey a police order to "move on." He was relieved of his duties because of "pressures . . . which developed after Mr. Andrews went to Washington,'" according the Methodist authority at Boone.

In both cases, men who acted according to their own interpretation of Christian faith were forced from positions because they acted in disaccord with popular thought. Rev. Boyd, because he dared associate Christian faith with "people who go around with matted hair, dirty bodies and black (leotards)," was condemned.

Rev. Andrews, in kneeling in prayer for a despised political offender, brought similar condemnation upon himself.

Rev. Boyd, we believe, acted not out of any particular affinity for black leotards or aversion to bathing, but because of his own personal dedication to Christian faith. Rev. Andrews, by the same token, advocates neither communism nor spying, but firmly believed that political offenders are not inherently outside Christian consideration.

Both men, for following Christian conscience wherever it led them found they were punished for it. It is ironic that the same unflinching dedication to belief that the Christian faith purports to applaud was the same one that it condemned.

Faith in the abstract, we take it, is not quite the same thing as faith in application. Mouthed piety, recitation of creeds, a good record of church attendance—these are what is meant by faith, according to the interpretation that caused Rev. Andrews and Rev. Boyd to be ousted.

The juncture that binds the two cases—one in Colorado and one here in North Carolina—is the flaccid, watery "faith" that won't allow for anything deemed unpopular.

Both cases are sad commentaries on present day Christian interpretation. And we don't mean Rev. Boyd's and Rev. Andrews' interpretation.

Walk Softly N. C....

North Carolina would do well to walk softly and cautiously with any plan to install college-credit general education courses in its industrial centers.

Such a recommendation came out of the meeting here recently of a committee of the Governor's Commission on Education beyond the High School. The aim of the move is laudable. The committee recognizes tat no one is being properly trained for a job and place in the society to today unless he is given an opportunity to obtain general education along with purely technical training.

But when the suggestion is made that such courses also be offered at the college-credit level in the industrial centers, the laudable move gets far afield.

In the first place, the industrial education centers weren't set up to take care of people seeking college training. They were set up to fill a very real need in this state, which is rapidly becoming industrialized and needs training sites for its citizens who will work in these industries.

Under the recommendation of last week, the centers would be allowed to bring in college teachers from nearby colleges to provide the desired general education courses. On the non-college credit level, this makes a lot of sense and should be done.

But on the college-level, it opens up more questions than it could possibly answer. It's doubtful, for instance, that many individuals in the industrial education centers have any immediate ambition for college work. If they do and even if they discover this only after a year in an industrial education center, then the place for them is in a college and not the center.

Presumably, this college-interested youth would discover the fact after a year in the center. If college courses had been available, he might then transfer with six to 12 hours of college credit.

But, he puts the senior college in the position of then having to decide if the college work completed is really adequate—if the student is indeed entitled to enter senior college with the credits earned.

The industrial education centers can play a big role in North Carolina higher education, and are doing so now. They are filling a big need. It is even possible a real solution to the problem is a combination of the center and the community college in areas where both are needed or are available.

But college-level courses in a center such as the one in Charlotte or Wilmington looks a lot like setting up technical community colleges where genuine community colleges already exisit. It looks wasteful and could be a bad waste of limited talent and resources.

Speak Softly, Uncle Tom Is Dying

Speak softly, for death is in our house. Uncle Tom is dying.

Remember how he bowed and scraped and held his hat in his hand, how he would laugh that high-pitched laugh of his when you told your jokes, how he would sing and say funny things?

Of course, he had his faults. Uncle Tom was lazy and superstitious, he smelled, and he would steal anything that wasn't tied down. You couldn't depend on him at all, but worst of all, there was his streak of amoral crime.

But Uncle Tom knew his place, and he was happy there.

Students maybe didn't know Uncle Tom. Well, he was the Negro image that most of us grew up with. His health never was the same after World War II, and he has really been sickly in recent years, with all this racial agitation.

For Uncle Tom would never allow himself to be called a "Freedom Rider." Uncle Tom never would have taken a few days off from college classes, to go and try to sit at a white man's lunch counter. He wouldn't have dared sit in the front end of a bus, or try to go to school with white kids.

Some leading citizens, all southern born, were asked to try to recall their personal Uncle Tom memories and to examine their current Negro image.

Some never had possessed a stereotyped vision of all Negroes. Some had, and here they speak:

"I GREW UP," SAID THE MINISTER, "with what we in the South called a Negro mammy, a kindly woman who ate and slept in our home. She reared me, cleaned and cooked for me, walked me to school. She was my substitute mother. I saw her as an individual.

"But other than her, my image of Negroes was an Uncle Remus proposition. I thought of them as separate people.

"Now, I'm becoming more and more conscious of this changed status of Negroes, and I am trying to agree with it in my heart as well as in my mind. It's caused us all to do some self examination that we would not have done otherwise.

"But you must remember that I am only three generations from the Civil War. I feel I'm being disloyal to my parents, and I don't want to make them unhappy by speaking publicly like this. I'm reluctant to do public battle for a cause that is wrong on their part. They are too "MY PREJUDICES AND CONCEPTS of Negroes," said the Banker, "were planted in me as a child by my environment. To me, then, they were an appealing people, like children in many ways.

"And — as Thurgood Marshall put it — I accepted them as individuals while rejecting them en masse. These young, aggressive Negroes I reject as individuals, although I am moving toward accepting them en masse . . . or at least being neutral.

"Onr attitudes change with changed understanding of a thing. The Negro has made rapid strides, and in many areas is a far different person than he was when I was a child."

"I DON'T THINK MY IDEA OF the Negro," said the Doctor, "was ever that which my father had . . . that they all would steal and lie.

"When I went to medical school in Chicago, I lived in International House, with students from everywhere. Russian, Chinese, Negroes. It was an education.

"I have a lot of respect for a Negro mammy and I have the same for an intelligent Negro who is willing to work for something better. And I think we have as many sorry whites as Negroes."

"MY GRANDFATHER FREED 150 SLAVES," said the Realtor, "and I've been with Negroes all my life. We were a big family and had a lot of help around, and they used to scrape and bow. I've studied a lot about the colored people, and we must recognize that there has been a change.

"In some ways it's going to put a lot of white people on their mettle, hose who haven't had the gumption to do anything for themselves, for the best man is going to win. They are going to be competitors now.

"I have some new feelings toward Negroes now, including the feeling of resentment. Some of them are too aggressive, too impatient. There's a lot of them smart and ambitious and due a lot of credit. They are doing a lot of thinking. When you consider the advancement they've made, it's something. Nobody in the world ever did it before."

"THERE WAS A TIME IN MY LIFE," said the Merchant. " when I had the idea that Negroes were not human, that they were little more than animals, without souls.

"That idea changed long ago, when I started working with them and being around them, and I was horribly shocked at myself for ever believing it.

"These young ones now, 25 and under, they are a mystery. I don't know what to expect from them; I don't know what they are thinking. They are different but it's impossible to tell how much. They are changed overnight.

"I have hopes for them, if they are not coddled, and if they do not follow extremists."

"OUR HOME WAS IN TEXAS," said the Businesswoman, "and my father was honest but about as bigoted a man as ever lived. He couldn't tolerate Mexicans, Catholics, Yankees and Negroes. As a child, you listen to remarks like 'damned niggers' and it corrupts your mind, it gives you an impression you aren't aware of.

"Then, a few years ago I began YWCA work and attended a meeting at Daytona Beach which was bi-racial. There was a talk about racial inequalities.

"At the banquet that evening I left the serving line and looked all around. The women had segregated themselves in little groups, but there was one young Negro woman sitting alone. I stood there arguing with myself: 'Will I be able to do this? Why are we here? Just to talk?' So I went and sat down across the table from her.

"I must have been carrying a stereotype with me when I sat down because I remember being surprised . . surprised that she didn't smell, that she was attractive and attractively dressed, that she was intelligent and didn't speak with a deep drawl. She was the legal secretary for a Jacksonville lawyer, I learned.

"So, when I left that table I carried a new picture, and the knowledge that a Negro does not necessarily have to follow the old stereotype."

"THERE IS ANOTHER SIDE OF THE COIN." said the Sociologist. "It deals with the 'concept of self.' A man once wrote. 'We see ourselves as we think others see us.'

"Negroes in the past have tended to see themselves as they thought they were seen by other Negroes and by the whites. They had two personalities. two concepts of self.

"Now, the white person's concept of the Negro is changing and this is reflected in the Negro change."

"THE ONLY WAY TO SURVIVE," said the Negro Doctor, "the only way to get things done, was to play this role of Uncle Tom. But the old expediency is gone.

"There is a new awareness among Negroes of their role and their responsibilities in the community.

"It started with World War II, when the young ones broke away from the old moid and went away and grew. Then they came back home and they were dissatisfied because the old mold no longer fit."

"KIDS WHO HAVE BEEN TAKING PART in the sit-ins," said the Negro Lawyer, "have grown up and look at life in a different way. Before, they were apathetic, they saw no reason to go to school, they had no hope. Now they have hope and ambition.

"Diplomats from the new African nations are helping break the Negro's stereotype of himself, for he sees them conducting their own national affars, taking part in United Nations deliberations. In the back of his mind he had always thought Africans were just primitive tribesmen.

"The Negro is coming of age now. For the white man it's a very frustrating and painful experience. They are bewildered, wondering what went wrong, with Negroes demanding their rights.

"There are many Negroes who think they really are inferior. They've been brain-washed."

"OUR PEOPLE," said the Negro Matriarch, "are standing up now."

"After All, It Doesn't Have To Be A One-Way Street"

Just The Plane Truth, Gov.

Not many days ago, Governor Sanford said he was against secrecy in government. And yesterday, Governor Sanford's No. 1 man, Administration Director Hugh Cannon imposed a secrecy rule on a public record, the record of who uses the Governor's airplane and what they use it for . . .

That is wrong. That airplane belongs to the people of North Carolina. It was paid for by those people. Its pilots are paid salaries by the people of North Carolina. The gasoline used to fly it is paid for with tax money. The people who own it and who pay for its operation have every right to know who uses it and why and when they use it.

Instead, Director Cannon says, his department will issue a quarterly report listing the users of the plane. He gives this explanation: "There is no reason the public shouldn't have the list, but it is getting to be an administrative burden. We have calls almost constantly to see the logs (of the plane)."

That is no explanation. It is no administrative burden at all for a taxpayer to be permitted to see the log of this plane. It is a perfectly simple matter. George Cherry, director of general services, has had custody of the log. The only administrative burden involved is for Mr. Cherry to hand the log over to the inquirer and let him read it.

This log is a matter of public record. The law states that public records shall be open to public inspection during reasonable office hours. By his edict putting this log into something resembling U2 secrecy, Director Cannon is overlooking this law protecting the public records.

This edict is not only wrong, it is politically stupid. One of the issues raised in street-corner talk during the bond issue campaign was Governor Sanford's airplane. A lot of people didn't like it, and they whispered about it, and the whispering undoubtedly had something to do with the bond issue defeat on November 7.

Now, Director Cannon's secrecy edict will simply add fuel to the fire of the whispering. They can say now that the flying is to be done in secret. To be sure, Director Cannon says his office will issue quarterly reports on who used the plane, but the whisperers can come right back and say that the lists will include only the names the Sanford administration wants to include.

The State owns another plane, the photo plane assigned to the Highway Commission. For some reason, its log is still available for public inspection.

Why? If it is an administrative burden to permit inspection of the Governor's very own plane log, why isn't it an administrative burden to permit inspection of the photo plane log?

And if this bit of secrecy isn't rescinded immediately, it will raise more questions than the Sanford administration can answer in a month of Sundays.

Letters

To The Editor:

Last year about this time, I wrote the Daily Tar Heel deploring the lack of interest in international service on the part of Carolina students. Specifically, I called attention to an opportunity to help with secondary education in East Africa, through the government-sponsored program, TEACHERS FOR EAST AFRICA. I had invited those interested to meet me and perhaps volunteer for this exciting adventure in international good-will.

I write now to report the results of the first year of operation of the program. Three students from Chapel Hill were accepted and are now in East Africa, either teaching or taking further training preparatory to teaching in the secondary schools. Twelve hundred people applied for the posts, through Teachers' College of Columbia University; 150 were accepted and are now in Africa. I am proud to note that we had such a noteworthy part in the initial program.

Now I want to issue an invitation for the second year's program. Dr. R. Freeman Butts, Director of the program in T. C., has written me that a second group of one hundred candidates is now being selected. The first group, he reports, after a trip to the field, is making a fine impression: "everywhere," he writes, "the response was the same: The American teachers are doing exceptionally well, . . . are giving vital educational aid . . . . "

Surely among our nine thousand students this year some must be interested in helping these struggling young African nations. Anyone who has a bachelor's degree is eligible to apply. The salary will be $3,200, and up, the assignment is for a minimum of two years and the instruction is all in English. Teachers for all the usual high school subjects are needed. No experience or special courses in education are essential.

If you, or any of your friends are interested in this exciting adventure in international relations, I shall be glad to tell you more about the program and help you prepare an application blank. My office is in Phillips Hall, 313.

To The Editor:

Mr. Robert Ballard expressed his concern about the failure of students to stand up in public and speak up in public and speak out in his letter to your paper on February 15. He mentioned the possibility of providing a time and place for students to get together and discuss various beliefs.

Likewise, the debate team would like very much for more students to acquire the experience and training that comes from speaking before others. Consequently, a program has been inaugurated whereby students meet for supper in Lenoir Hall at 5:15 on Tuesday evenings, and then, after supper, make brief talks on interesting, lively subjects. Each speaker answers questions and defends his ideas during the ensuing discussion.

Mr. Ballard and anyone else will be welcomed at these informal meetings.

To the Editor:

Some time ago I wrote an article concerning the Peace Corps in Colombia. From that article, I quote: "As many Colombians have said, the greatest contribution a Peace Corpsman could make to their country is himself, through matrimony of course."

In reference to this, I quote a recent headline in Bogota's only evening paper: "Next Saturday Will Be Married the First Volunteer of the Peace Corps." On February 17 Mathew Mark de Forest will be married to a young girl from Bogota. Young de Forest is a district leader for the Peace Corps in the Bogota area.

Further news on this score brings information about a similar situation with another Peace Corpsman. Sixty-two young volunteers came to Colombia just five months ago, and already two are taking the long, and fatal, step toward matrimony. Who knows what will happen in the remaining 16 months?

Sincerely,
Swag Grimsley

Senate Schedules Hearings On High Costs Of Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI—The Senate Investigations Subcommittee has scheduled public hearings next month into reports of "grossly excessive profits" in the nation's multi-billion-dollar missile program.

Subcommittee sources said the investigation would cover alleged profiteering in various types of missile production—from giant Air Force intercontinental ballistic missiles ICBM's to the Army's Nike-Hercules and Nike-Ajax anti-aircraft missiles.

The inquiry also may touch on reported management inefficiency in the $3 billion ICBM base construction program, the sources said.

Subcommittee Chairman John L. McClellan, D-Ark., said the hearings would focus in part on accounting practices that he believes permit the "pyramiding" of contractors' earnings.

Additional Profit

He charged that some negotiated contracts enable missile-makers to earn an additional profit on the profits of subcontracts.

In cost-plus contracts, manufacturers are guaranteed costs of production plus a percentage of profit based on the cost. The profit pyramiding allegedly allows a contractor to figure his subcontractor's profits as a basic cost on which he is entitled to a percentage profit.

McClellan said in an interview that the hearings would start about March 15. His chief investigator, Jerome S. Alderman, is on a two-week tour of West Coast missile plants. Other investigators have visited Army missile installations in the East. Sen. Karl E. Mundt, Republican on the subcommittee, said the hearings would develop testimony about what he described as "deep and unjustifiable" dipping into the Treasury by some contractors.

WIVES WILL MEET

The Student Wives Club will meet at 8 p.m. this Tuesday at the Victory Village Day Care Center. A program of songs will be given by Al Wright, UNC student and folk-singer. Wives of all UNC students are invited.

College Roundup

The Young Democrats Club of the University of Oregon has sent a telegram to Gus Hall, ex-general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, offering to sponsor his speaking on the campus.

The invitation was extended, subject to a decision by the office of university president, Arthur Fleming.

At the same time the Young Democrats issued a statement saying that the invitation was given on the condition that Hall would allow a question and answer period to follow the speech, and that a visit to the Oregon campus by Gus Hall constitutes in no way an endorsement of either Gus Hall or the Communist party.

The year before the Young Democrats sponsored a talk by Leslie Fleming, Oregon state co-ordinator of the John Birch Society.

In a vital and burning attack on the idea of prohibition being installed in South Carolina, Bruce Floyd of the University of South Carolina "Gamecock' slashed through the "puritanical ways of the past" and the general lethargy of the state.

Floyd called the move for prohibition assinine, and the sponsors of the move, "hypocrytical do-gooders and charlatans." He said that if successful a monstrous fiasco would result. Floyd called for the intellectuals of the state to throw the cloak of apathy and to lead the state out of its self-imposed stone age views.

The move, he said, would do no good whatsoever. The only result would be to lead to the corruption of police officials, the rise in crime in South Carolina which already has a high crime rate and the loss of revenues which the state desperately needs to advance.

Lightning struck an air force plane carrying the University of California drill team to Arizona for the Sunshine State Drill Competition, Tuesday.

The first bolt struck the plane in the tail section, putting a hole in the rear radar beacon. Nearly five square feet of material was ripped from the rudder.

No one was killed, but a rumor ran through the plane that everyone would have to bail out. The cadets strapped themselves into parachutes near the nose of the plane and traveled back through the body, hurting no one but adding to the tenseness of the situation.

Several more near misses followed. Three of the circuit breakers in the electrical system were blown out. Seconds after the lightning had stopped, the plane plunged 250 feet in a sudden down draft.

The pilot headed for Tucson, but realizing that there was not enough fuel he decided to land at Miramar Naval Air Station outside of San Diego.

Glenn Given 50-50 Chance To Take Off

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The Federal Space Agency said Saturday weather conditions over the Atlantic this time of year give Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., a 50-50 chance of taking off next week on his orbital flight. Meanwhile, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said Glenn's Atlas rocket and Friendship-7 spacecraft are ready for a launch attempt some time after 7:30 a.m., EST, Tuesday.

The schedule calls for the first half of the spacecraft's pre-flight countdown to start Monday. In the meantime, engineers were "baby sitting" the vehicle designed to take Glenn on a one, two, or three orbit flight around the planet. Lt Col. John A. Powers, Project Mercury spokesman, said chances of favorable weather conditions on Tuesday and the following four or five days were only 50-50. The Space Agency said it will issue Sunday a weather forecast specifically for Tuesday. NASA weathermen said previously that only one day in three during February offers favorable launch conditions. In the western Atlantic, February is the poorest weather month of the year and March is not much better. Glenn, whose latest orbital attempt was canceled Friday morning, spent most of Saturday relaxing. But the 40-year-old astronaut also worked out in a space flight simulater, practicing launches and the emergency procedures he would take if something went wrong shortly after launch.

Powers said a much reduced crew was keeping a careful watch over the Mercury-Atlas combination at Launch Pad 14 on Cape Canaveral.

Project Mercury officials planned to fuel the Atlas booster Sunday afternoon in preparation for a possible Tuesday launch.

Flick Flock To Spy On Venice

A new experimental film on Venice, in color and not yet released in this country, will be premiered by the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society on its special shorts program Monday night, Maggie Dent announced yesterday.

"Venice Etude," was made in Venice last summer and fall by Ian Hugo, a Wall Street international banker who also is a painter and experimental film maker. It was released recently in art movie houses in France, Sweden and England and acclaimed by crtics as "advancing experimental film techniques by at least twenty-five years."

Hugo screened his new film to Miss Dent when she was in New York this winter while the sound track was being completed. She feels it is the most original single film by any avant-garde film maker since the early days of Hans Richter, Len Lye, Dali, Bunuel and others working in Paris and Berlin during the 1920s.

Other shorts to be shown Monday night are "Coming Shortly," "Sunlight," "Symphony in No B Flat," "Go Slow on the Brighton," "Hallucinations," "Mother's Day," and "Private Life of a Cat," representing work of artists in England, Sweden, Argentina and the U. S.

Memberships to the Society are available for $3.50 for the remaining seven programs.

Elimination Of U.S. Reds Being Sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government officials are hopeful a federal grand jury investigation now under way here will lead to elimination of the Communist Party of the United States as a major propaganda voice of Moscow.

The grand jury is considering the failure of party officials to register with the Justice Department as agents of Russia as ordered by the Subversive Activities Control Board SACB and the party's failure to label its literature.

It also has broadened its inquiry to cover certain New York city groups ostensibly operating as non-partisan political organizations. The investigation began Jan 24 and is expected to run for some time with a long list of witnesses from both within and outside the party.

Y Nominates Donna Bailey, Judy Bryant

Two UNC juniors, Donna Bailey of Coffeeville, Miss. and Judy Bryant of Leaksville, have been nominated by the YWCA Executive Board for the presidency of next year's YWCA Cabinet.

Judy Alexander of Coral Gables, Fla. and Judy Brown of Monroe, Ga., were selected to run for the vice-president's post.

Alice Ann Ainslie of Huntington, W. Va., and Stuart Austin of Raleigh have been nominated by the Board for treasurer, while Judy Blyth of Charlotte and Susie Mintener of Washington, D. C. were selected candidates for membership chairman.

June Todd of Winston-Salem was nominated for program chairman and Sara Cullen of Coral Gables, Fla. was selected for Religious Emphasis.

An open meeting scheduled for March 1 at 5 p.m. in the Cabinet Room of the "Y" will be held for further student nominations for the executive positions. The complete slate of executive and student nominated officers will be presented to the women students for election on Thursday, March 8.

Dr. Sheps Tells Health Group That Change Is Taking Place

"There has never been a time in the history of man when there was more interest that there is at present in health," former UNC Professor Dr. Cecil Sheps told the School of Public Health Student-Faculty Seminar here this week. Dr. Cecil Sheps said health is now a major element in the foreign policy of this nation.

While at UNC in the early 1950's Dr. Sheps was director of program planning for the UNC Division of Health Affairs, which is composed of the Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy, Public Health and N. C. Memorial Hospital. He is now professor of medical and hospital administration of the Graduate School of Public Health of the University of Pittsburgh.

"The provision of medical care services to individuals in the type and quantity that each person needs when he needs it is one of the leading crucial determinants of the health of our community. This is because of the progress that we have made in the control of communicable disease resulting in an aging population with an increasing predominance of chronic illness," Dr. Sheps said.

The rapid accumulation of scientific information has resulted in a situation in which we have a great deal of useful information which is not being put widely or effectively to use in protecting and restoring the health of our population. The former UNC professor said this is largely because, while we can aim high, our methods for reaching our objective in health services are inadequate and very much out of date.

"A profound transformation is taking place in the role of the physician as an individual practitioner and his relationship to organized programs of patient care," the physician explained.

Comprehensive personalized medical care can no longer be provided by the physician alone; a team effort is required—a team whose members are increasing in number and diversity of role, responsibility and training, according to Dr. Sheps.

Much attention is being focused nowadays on removing the economic barrier which so often stands between the patient and the care which he needs. There is no doubt that this barrier will be lowered even further than it is now, said the visiting speaker.

Prof Writes Book On Snake-Handling

A visiting clinical professor at the University Medical School and professor of anthropology at Duke University is the author of a new book dealing with the cult and psychology of poisonous snake handling to be published soon by the University of Minnesota Press.

March 16 is the publication date of the Weston La Barre title, "They Shall Take Up Serpents: Psychology of the Southern Snake-Handling Cult."

The book reports on the cult founded in Tennessee in 1909 as a part of the religious ritual. Dr. La Barre describes its leaders, customs and beliefs and traces the background of the snake-handling cult in this country as well as the history of similar practices and symbolism in ancient Greece, Africa, Mexico, and other cultures in world history.

Phillips Gives Recital Today

Doss Phillips, baritone, will present a senior recital Sunday at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall. Phillips, since coming to the University in 1958, has taken part in choral and operatic production of the Music Department.

He has appeared in a junior recital and in the operas La Traviata as Marquis D'Obigny, and Tales of Hoffman as Crespel. The latter role will again be played by Phillips when a portion of the opera is presented by members of the opera workshop on April 13.

Before coming to UNC Phillips was a hornist in a U.S. Army Band stationed in Germany. Presently he is a student of Joel Carter and in a regular capacity, the baritone soloist for the Presbyterian Church here.

His recital program will consist of works by Alessandro Scarlatti, Robert Schumann, Francis Poulenc and Charles Griffes. The public is invited. Admission is free.

Matmen Win As Gilchrist Sets New UNC Scoring Mark

By Ed Dupree

Pete Gilchrist set a new UNC scoring record Saturday as the Tar Heel wrestlers flattened Duke, 22-8. Gilchrist's streak of five consecutive pins was broken, but the Charlotte senior decisioned his opponent in the 130-pound division for three points and a season's total of 31.

The old record of 30 was set in 1959 by Perrin Henderson.

Minutes after Gilchrist won his match, Dick Blackman, the early season scoring leader in the 147-class, pinned his man for five points. Blackman, who sat out points. Blackman, who set out the West Virginia match early this year, after leading the team's scoring in the first six matches, had little trouble in pasting his opponent to the mat.

Both Blackman, a Whiteville, N. C. junior, and Gilchrist have excellent opportunities to set a new record in their next match against Virginia Tech. The Tar Heel grapplers also travel to Maryland later this month in what could be the closest match between the two schools in history.

added three points in the 130, Willis Johnson decisioned Duke's Johnson in the 137, Blackman walked all over his foe, and Tom Grant added three more points in

Gene Record gained a pin in the 177 match for Carolina's final five points. Duke's wrestlers picked up points in the 167-class and the heavyweight match.

The Barnesmen have picked up steam considerably since the early part of the season when they lost five straight matches. They fell to Washington & Lee, 20-6, Virginia, 20-8, The Citadel, 22-6, Davidson, 23-3, and Virginia Military, 19-11.

Rebounding viciously the grapplers tore into N. C. State for a 28-5 win on Jan. 6 and have been hard to deal with since. They pounded West Virginia, 21.11, Pfeiffer, 28-10, and tied a tough Appalachian team, 14-14.

Thus, the Tar Heels now hold a 4-5-1 record with matches against Maryland and VPI remaining before the ACC championships.

Major League Baseball Seeks To Stay No 1

By Leo H. Petersen

TAMPA —(UPI)— Major league baseball goes into spring training this year banking on a home run barrage and national league expansion to keep it the Nation's No. 1 spectator sport.

It admittedly has lost ground to professional football in the fight for fan appeal, but believes when the cry of "play ball" rings out on April 9, it again will be sitting on top of the sports world.

It hopes to overcome the sagging gate attendance of 1961 with new teams in New York and Houston, another assault on the home run record of Babe Ruth's or Roger Maris' and what shapes up to be a tight National League pennant race.

Before a ball was thrown in spring training or the first injury reported, the experts picked the New York Yankees to win the American League pennant again and favored the Los Angeles Dodgers for the National League title.

Because the eight established National League clubs had to thin out their pitching and wreck their reserve strength to stock two new clubs—just as the American League did the year before—the race in that league is regarded as wide open. The Dodgers, however, are favored, for they appeared to be hurt less than the other teams and they have more talent on the way from their minor league farm clubs.

Although the Yankees' star shortstop, Tony Kubek, is in the Army and may not get out until after the season starts, they still are rated heavy favorites in the American League. Their chief opposition is expected from the Detroit Tigers, who finished a surprising second last year; the Baltimore Orioles, the Cleveland Indians and the Chicago White Sox.

* * *

The betting is that Maris will not duplicate his feat of last year when he hit 61 home runs, the most ever hit during a major league season. But his record is apart from Ruth's because he hit his 61 homers in 162 games. Ruth hit his 60 in 154.

This year the National League also will play a 162-game schedule . If a new home run king is to be named in 1962 it may well come to that circuit.

Not only will 1962 see new players, but new managers as well. There will be two who will be managing major league clubs for the first time—Billy Hitchcock at Baltimore and Mel McGaha at Cleveland. Two others are back in the managing ranks—Casey Stengel, who helped build the present New York Yankee dynasty, will guide the Mets and Harry Craft, a former manager who served as one of the Cubs' coaching board of strategy in 1962, will pilot the new Colts.

There are four others who took over during the season last year—Hank Bauer of the Kansas City Athletics, Sam Mele of the Minnesota Twins, Johnny Keane of the St. Louis Cardinals and Birdie Tebbetts of the Braves.

UNC Drops Clemson Tigers By 69-59

By JIM WALLACE

The Tar Heels broke a four-game losing streak to beat the Clemson Tigers 69-59 in the second game of Friday's North-South basketball doubleheader in Charlotte.

High scorer for the Tar Heels was 6-3 soph Charlie Shaffer. Shaffer sunk 10 for 12 from the floor and 5 for 8 from the foul line in his first starting role to total 25 points. Don Walsh was the only other Tar Heel to break into double figures. Walsh hit 6 from the floor and 4 from the foul line for 16 points.

High scorer for the Tigers was soph Jim Brennan who tallied 24 points. Also in double figures for Clemson was Nick Milasnovich who got 15 points.

Carolina made 27 of 52 snots for 51.9 per cent. The Tigers sank 22 of 55 attempts for 40 per cent.

Carolina pulled down 35 rebounds while the Tigers got 36. Jim Hudock was high in rebounding for the Tar Heels, grabbing 10.

Three men left the game with five fouls. Carolina's Jim Hudock left with 3:28 still on the clock, and Clemson's Jim Brennan was forced to the bench with 5:10 remaining. Don Mahaffey left early in the second half.

Other Tar Heels scorers were Brown 9 points, McSweeney 5, Hudock 8, Donohue 4, and Cooke 2.

This game left the Tar Heels with an ACC record of 6-5 and an overall record of 7-6. Clemson had an ACC record of 2-8 and an overall record of 8-12 going into Saturday's doubleheader.

UNC Basketball Team Hosts Maryland Monday Night

UNC's basketball team returns to Chapel Hill Monday night in a revenge battle with Maryland's Terrapins. The Tar Heels lost to the Terps in a College Park contest on Feb. 6 by the surprising score of 79-62. That loss was the second of four straight for Coach Dean Smith's boys.

Millikan's mightiest men are Bruce Kelleher, 15.2 average, Jerry Greenspan, 14.9, and Bob Eicher, 12.2. Missing from the Terp lineup since the second half of the season began is Bill Stasiulatis

North Carolina Wins Big Five Track Meet In Breeze

By HARRY TOCCE

The weather outside the Tin Can was beautiful Saturday afternoon, but things looked even better inside to UNC Coach Dale Ranson.

His charges literally swept the boards clean in winning the Big Five track meet with 94¾ points to their closest rival Duke's 24½.

The Tar Heels captured 11 of the 13 events.

Carmine Lunetta, Rett Everett, and Mike Folk finished one, two, three in the two-mile run. Lunetta's time, 9:28:6, was his fastest time ever in the Tin Can.

Duke's cross-country star, Jerry Norse, took the mile in 4:14:5. Charley Little finished second in 4:24:3.

Jerry Stuver took the 880 (1:56:0) and anchored the winning UNC 8-lap relay team which finished in 2:33:1.

Tom Clark continued the winning parade for the Tar Heels with a first in the high jump — 6'4". Bill Croom (UNC) was second.

Another one, two three finish was recorded by the Tar Heels in the 70-high hurdles. Jim Brown took first in 8.9 seconds. Wilfred Turner second and John Lindley third followed.

The same trio captured the 70-yard low hurdles with Brown first, Lindley second, and Turner third. The winning time was eight seconds.

The Tar Heels gained an early lead in points Friday night when Barry Tiedemann and Heath Whittle tied for first in the pole vault at a height of 14 feet. John O'Bannon added five first place points with a leap of 22 ft. 6¼ in. in the broad jump.

Bob Bennett gave Carolina a 15-yard lead in the 2-mile relay with a time of 1:58:3 for the first half mile, and Scotty Brent anchored the winning time of 8:14.

Wake Forest, failing to capture a first, finished with 11¾ points, N. C. State 10 and Davidson was scoreless.

The Blue Imps captured the final event of the evening—the 8-lap relay in 2:41:2 to win.

Dean Brunson turned in a 2:10 half-mile on the third leg of the 2-mile relay to lead UNC to a first place time of 8:49:2.

Duke freshman John Weisiger took the mile in 4:35:5. Other Results in Freshman competition:

70-yard low hurdles—(1) Hubbard, Duke; (2) Williams, Davidson; (3) McGuire, WF; 8.1.

High jump—(1) Bell, WF and Corn, State (tie); (2) Lacey, Carolina; (3) Bauguess, Carolina; 6 feet.

Tar Babies Meet Wilmington Mon.

By Curry Kirkpatrick

UNC's freshman five, a 68-50 victor over North Carolina State in their last outing, meet the Sea Hawks of Wilmington Junior College here tomorrow night at 6 in a preliminary to the UNC-Maryland game.

Coach Ken Rosemond's Tar Babies, who will be after win number 13, have lost but two games this year, and in the Sea Hawks, will be facing the team that gave them their biggest scare in the first semester.

Back on Jan. 5, the then Billy Cunningham-led frosh eked out a 70-68 overtime victory at Wilmington as Cunningham netted 26 points and pulled down 27 rebounds.

Tomorrow night's contest may be just as close as the Tar Babies try to prove they can do it again without Cunningham. Rosemond's crew which wiped out a ten-point first half deficit at Raleigh last Wednesday and went on to down State by 18, will have Jay Neary and Bill Taylor at the guard positions, Bill Brown and Pud Hassell at the forwards and Ray Respess at center.

Hassell, the ex-Beaufort High School star who is Carolina's top defensive man, was the hero of the State game as he made his presence felt offensively by canning 14 of 14 free throws, while scoring a personal high of 20 points.

PROFESSORS WILL MEET

The UNC chapter of the American Association of University Professors ill meet at 8 o'clock this evening in the faculty lounge of the Morehead Planetarium. The main part of the program will be a report from the Committee on Fringe Benefits.

GNANADESIKAN TO SPEAK

R. Gnanadesikan will speak on "Graphic Methods Now Used in Aanalysis of Variance" at a UNC statistics colloquium at 4 o'clock this afternoon in 265 Phillips Hall.

The lifetime quota of water usage for the average person in the U. S. is 3,500,000 gallons.

Bare-Backed Beachbomb
LESSON 2 - What about standards?
Advanced students of girl watching never waste eyeball effort watching girls who are not beautiful. Standards must be kept high.
But how do we judge whether a girl is worth watching? Although many strict academicians will shudder at our aesthetics, we must insist that a girl is beautiful if she is beautiful to you. (That's the beauty of girl watching. Every girl is beautiful to someone!) For example, many observers have pointed out that the Bare-Backed Beachbomb (see above) has a weak chin.
Yet none of these keen-eyed experts would deny that she is indeed an attractive specimen. And, speaking of standards, don't forget to keep your smoking standards high. Smoke Pall Mall!

De Gaulle Plans 4-Power Summit On Disarmament

French President Replies To Nikita

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle has proposed to the Soviet Union a four-power conference on nuclear disarmament, it was announced Monday.

The proposal was contained in DeGaulle's reply to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's note of Feb. 10 outlining proposals for disarmament talks. The reply was published Monday night by the French Foreign Office.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said President Kennedy was aware of De Gaulle's proposal, but that there would be no comment from the Chief Executive until it had been studied further.

In his reply, De Gaulle stressed France's desire "to take part in all negotiation which could offer the hope of progress even if only modest, in the direction of disarmament, that is to say, first of all and essentialy in the nuclear department."

But he stressed that any such negotiations should be restricted to the four nuclear powers — the Soviet Union, United States, Britain and France, and "should take as its immediate objective the destruction, banning and control of all the means of launching nuclear projectiles."

"To have a chance of succeeding," De Gaulle's note said, "it is as I see it, necessary that the negotiation should take place between the powers which dispose of nuclear arms or will dispose of them shortly.

Campus Briefs

Formal Spring Rush will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week from 7-9 p.m. each night, IFC Rush Chairman John Sherrill announced yesterday.

Any students interested in going through rush who have not filled out a fraternity interest card or received an invitation from a fraternity are invited to visit any house on their own accord.

Interviews for senior class committees will be held in the student government offices in Graham Memorial from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday and 3:30—6 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday.

The student chapter of the NAACP will meet Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in 203 Alumni.

Zeta Beta Tau social fraternity has elected the following new officers for 1962-63: Larry Fine, president; Mark Schnitzer, vice-president; Pete Myers, treasurer; Chuck Oberdorfer, secretary.

The Beanbirds will meet tonight at 9 in Roland Parker III.

Alpha Epilson Delta will hold a formal rush meeting Thursday at 8 p.m. in 324 med school building. Dr. James W. Woods will speak and show slides on medical practices in Brazil. All pre-medical and pre-dental students are invited.

Dr. Jorge Castellanos will speak tonight on "Why Cuba Was Communized" at 8 in 104 Howell Hall.

The Campus Chest Carnival Committee will meet tonight at 7 in the Y.

Graduation invitations will be on sale for the last time Thursday and Friday from 9-12 a.m. in Y-Court.

There will be an urgent Junior Class Cabinet meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the TV room at Graham Memorial. Anyone unable to attend has been asked to contact one of the class officers.

All former Freshman Camp members have been urged by ex-Director Tam Lefler to attend the kickoff meeting of the 1962 Freshman Camp tonight at 7 in the Y-building.

"The foundations will be layed tonight for next year's camp," Lefler stated, "and interview times will be set up for Director applicants. There will also be a discussion of a group dynamics leadership training course now available.

Lefler emphasized that this will probably be the most important meeting of the year for the 1962 Freshman Camp.

U.S. Life Appeals To Mexican Student

By CHUCK MOONEY

"The best way to win Latin American friends is to bring them to the U. S. — not as tourists but to live a while," said Senor Filomon Lopez Avendano, the first exchange student from a Mexican college to UNC's School of Education.

Lopez, who arrived from Escuela Normal Superior, the top Mexican teacher's college, on February 1, is teaching prospective Spanish teachers and taking English and education courses. He has taught in Mexico for 14 years.

"America is very different from what I expected. I think U. S. education methods are different from Mexican ones because the peoples are different.

Same Principles

"It would not be wise to apply your courses to our schools or our courses to your schools. But the principles are the same, so I am learning a lot that will help me in Mexico," he said.

Lopez is taking part in a program started in 1957 by the U.S. Information Agency (USIA) and the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education (AACTE). The UNC School of Education is one of 20 schools chosen from about 450 members of the AACTE for the program.

Lopez says it is hard for him to understand "American English"—"much different than what I heard in classes"—but he speaks English with hardly any accent.

He was selected for study at Carolina in a scholarship competition. He holds two degrees in Mexico — one from Nacional de Maestros in 1947 and one from Escuela Normal Superior in 1961.

He thinks this exchange is a "very good idea". "It is the only way for poor students to learn about American methods and schools."

Economical Good Will

Costing about $200 a year, the program is one of the most economical ways to build international good will and understanding, said School of Education Dean Arnold Perry.

A UNC graduate student will go to Mexico City this summer to teach English, and study Spanish and Mexican education methods.

Dean Perry and his wife visited Escuela Normal Superior, other Mexican schools, museums and libraries last July (the middle of the Mexican school year — from February to November).

He then arranged the present exchange of students and met his Mexican counterpart. He also spoke at a number of conferences and made a collection of Spanish language teaching materials.

Education Materials Swap

Education materials have also been exchanged. UNC has sent a student-made Spanish language TV film, 70 color slides with a tape-recorded Spanish narration, 1,000 copies of a special issue of the Daily Tar Heel, a taped radio program, an exhibit of children's paintings, textbooks, magazines and letters from the faculty and student body.

Escuela Normal Superior, which enrolls about 900 students, has sent photographic exhibits, albums of Mexican music, copies of the Mexico City daily newspaper "Excelsior," several publications in both Spanish and English, and letters from their faculty and students.

All of this material is about the teaching methods and operations of both colleges.

The UNC-Escuela Normal Superior exchange is one of the most active and varied of the 20 exchange programs, according to the USIA.

Its ultimate aim is the promotion of international understanding, good will, and better use of foreign languages by teachers.

Liz Taylor Returns

ROME (UPI) — Elizabeth Taylor, apparently recovered from a case of food poisoning, left a Rome hospital Monday on the arm of her unsmiling husband Eddie Fisher, while her leading man denied "uncontrolled rumors" of a romance.

The 29-year-old film star was rushed by ambulance to the Salvator Mundi Hospital Saturday evening and given emergency treatment.

Byerly Writes Top Article On Newspaper Circulation

Prof. Kenneth R. Byerly of the UNC School of Journalism has written the lead article in the current issue of Editor and Publisher, national trade magazine of the journalistic profession, on a research project he has completed in relation to building up newspaper circulation.

Byerly, former newspaper publisher and editor in Montana and Wyoming and now instructor in basic news writing and features at UNC, investigated circulation promotion activities and results among 31 small-city dalies that are "leaders in attracting and keeping readers." Newspapers in 21 states were included in the study.

He stated: "Building and holding newspaper circulation is based on the age-old principle of making a better mouse trap, but then going out to sell it instead of waiting for the world to beat a path to your door."

Two UNC Students Learn At Swarthmore Conference

World May Not Be Ready For Disarmament

Two Carolina students, Dave Wegerok and Robert Brown learned this last weekend at Swarthmore College, when they attended a disarmament conference with students from 80 colleges and universities.

The reason?

"What we need is peace research, especially in the colleges and universities across the country," said Harold Taylor at the First Intercollegiate Conference on Disarmament and Arms Control.

"War Is Unthinkable"

The former president of Sarah Williams College said, "Nuclear War is unthinkable. We have to prevent it. Students should take part in this research by examining and discussing the dilemma."

The students were urged to study the problem while keeping in mind the entire range of social, political and economic complexities facing the world.

Telegrams to the conference included:

PRESIDENT KENNEDY — "Over the years, our efforts at disarmament have met with little success. However, we look to the future. We will be well prepared for the March 18 Geneva Conference on disarmament."

SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN RUSK—"A workable solution to the problem must be coupled with a realistic understanding of the obstacles involved."

Reflections Editor

Robert Brown is a graduate student and editor of the magazine, Reflections. The other Carolina student, Dave Wegerek, is a political science major. They heard these arguments at the three days of seminars and lectures:

1. All out nuclear war is obsolete as a rational instrument of policy.

2. There must be some sort of reduction of arms.

3. The nations involved in disarmament discussions must take a more responsible attitude toward the problem. They must not use the talks for proaganda purposes.

4. Communist China must eventually be brought into any discussion. Therefore, a first step would be its recognition in the United Nations.

5. "Mutual deterrence" may be acceptable for the short run, but in the long haul, the only sane policy is one which reduces arms rather than builds them.

"Pacifists"

A number of "pacifists called for unilateral moves by the United States. They suggested certain reductions of arms which are not vital to the nation's defense, reduction of travel restrictions so that a large number of Communist peoples might see the benefits this country has to offer, and refusal to make further atmospheric nuclear tests.

Truce Agreement Reached Between France, Algeria

New Terror Begun In Algiers By OAS

PARIS (UPI) — The French government announced Monday that France and the Algerian rebels had reached a cease-fire agreement in Algeria. But the rebels later jolted French officials by saying the peace talks were not completed.

Despite the confusion, the outlawed Secret Army Organization (OAS) launched a new campaign of terror in Algeria to support its demand that Algeria remain French. In Algiers, a jeering European mob burned a car ambushed by OAS commandos. There were more bombings, kidnapings and murders.

A statement released in Paris by the French government and attributed to "authorized French quarters," said Algerian Affairs Minister Luis Joxe ended the peace talks Sunday night at a secret rendezvous in France near the Swiss border, bringing near an end the seven-year -old war in Algeria.

Covered Cease Fire

A government spokesman said later the agreement covered the draft of a cease-fire pact and a political settlement under which Algeria is expected to become an independent republic this year despite the violent OAS opposition.

The rebel leaders returned to their headquarters in Tunis and said the talks are not over although they are progressing well.

Officials both here and in Tunis recalled that any draft agreement must be approved not only by the rebel government-in-exile in Tunis but also by the Algerian rebel parliament, or National Council or National Council of the Algerian Revolution CNRA.

It was announced in Tunis that the exile government will meet there Tuesday and that the national council will meet in the Libyan capital of Tripoli on Wednesday.

French officials said the Algerian delegation apparently felt unable to announce full agreement until the draft has been approved by the national council. They recalled that from the outset a final, public meeting of the two sides has been planned for the signing.

Changes Could Be Made

"It is conceivable that minor changes required by the CNRA could be made at the meeting," a French spokesman said. "But it is not conceivable that there could be any basic changes then."

The new outburst of violence in Algeria by the OAS exploded soon after French newspapers appeared with banner headlines reporting an agreement on a cease-fire. Officials feared it might be an ominous pointer to even graver trouble when the cease-fire is official.

Allies Increase Flights In Berlin Air Corridors

BERLIN (UPI) — The Western Allies increased military flights in the Berlin air corridors Monday in defiance of Russian MIG jet fighters zooming nearby and a new official Soviet warning of "unpleasant" things that could happen.

Regular commercial flights also continued although the Russians demanded sole use of the Berlin-Hamburg "onrth" corridor for three hours Monday. Passengers aboard a Pan American flight from Hamburg said they saw two MIGs flying about 500 yards away.

British Will Not Object To US Nuclear Testing

U.S. Detonates Two Underground Blasts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States Monday detonated two more small nuclear explosions underground at the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada test area.

The shots, described as of "low yield," were the 15th and 16th anounced blasts since the United States resumed atomic testing last September. All U. S. shots have been underground where radiation largely is confined.

Monday's tests were announced by the AEC in a two-sentence statement. While it did not elaborate, low yield means a blast equal to 20,000 tons of TNT, or less.

The United States resumed testing underground two weeks after Russia broke a three-year test moraterium with a series of atmospheric, underground and underwater shots. The series was climaxed by a huge 0-60 megaton explosion.

President Kennedy is nearing a decision on whether Russian weapons progress requires this country to resume tests in the atmosphere.

Open House For Carolina Men

CU Student Council Holds Dance At Woman's College

Open house in the girls' dorms and a combo party featuring the Catalinas are two attractions of the Consolidated University Day program to be held at Woman's College this Saturday night. The event is sponsored by the Consolidated University Student Council composed of representatives from Carolina, Woman's College and N. C. State.

Each school in the Consolidated University plays host to the other two members sometime during the year. Carolina provided the entertainment this fall for CU Day in Chapel Hill following the State-Carolina football game during which a CU Queen was crowned at half-time. State plans a CU Day in Raleigh later on in the spring.

The IDC and the Communications Committee of Student Government are helping the CUSC promote the event. The two groups have planned a series of parties with dormitories at WC featuring a program very similar to the one followed on CU Day.

Robin Britt Chairman of the Communications Committee, said yesterday. The dormitory parties with WC planned by the Communications Committee and the IDC are very similar to the CU Day activities. Both feature an open house in a girls' dorm followed by a combo party in Eliott Hall. We hope the CU week end will prove a great success and will provide a source of interest for a permanent program of dorm parties with Woman's College."

Two buses have been chartered and will leave Y Court for Greensboro Saturday at 5:45. The round trip charge for the bus trip will be $1.00 per student for the first sixty students. Since attendance by a large number of Carolina students is anticipated other buses will probably be chartered later.

As these buses are more expensive to charter, however, the round trip fee will be $1.50. Students wishing to make reservations should pay their money to their dorm or fraternity president.

'Weaker Sex' Is Topic Of Di-Phi Talks

Women's abilities or the lack thereof will be the debate topic at the Di-Phi meeting at 7:30 on the third floor of New West.

John Randall, a Di-Phi Senator, promised to support the resolution calling women "infinitely inferior to men" with documents from legal history.

"The whole tradition of the Muslin world shows the superiority of men to women," Randall asserted. "Some Arabian kings have up to 100 wives, which shows clearly the true worth of the weaker sex."

The resolution charges that men have made all the significant contributions to society, and that women are useful only in decoration and reproduction.

It further asserts that most of women's decorative values come from beauty salons and drug stores, and that women's usefulness in reproduction seriously threatens the economic future of the world.

Di-Phi President Arthur Hays has invided the public—especially the female public to attend and debate.

"Take any side," Hays commented, "if there is more than one."

DR. DOUGALD MACMILLAN

Dr. MacMillan Co-Editor Of Dryden Book

Kenan Professor Dougald MacMillan, former chairman of the UNC English Department, is co-editor—along with the late John Harrington Smith and Vinson A. Dearing, both professors of English at UCLA—of Volume VIII of the monumental California edition of "The Works of John Dryden."

Sponsored by the University of California and under the general editorship of Professor H .T. Swedenberg Jr., a UNC graduate, this edition of "The Works of John Dryden" has been widely heralded as one of the major editorial undertakings of our generation in the field of English literature.

Up until now only one volume, "Poems, 1649-1680," had been published. The new volume, therefore, which contains three of Dryden's plays with full commentary and detailed notes by Professors MacMillan, Smith and Dearing, has been eagerly awaited b ythe scholarly world.

Professor MacMillan, who in addition to being a professor of English at UNC is editor of "Studies in Philology," did much of the work toward the preparation of this volume while being the holder of a John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship.

Attorney General's Office To Remain Open For Semester

The Attorney General's office will be open regularly for the rest of the semester so that violations of the Honor Code may be reported immediately.

Attorney General Al Cronenberg announced yesterday that the Council Room on the second floor of Graham Memorial will be open on Monday through Thursday from 2-5 p.m.

This plan was tested during the Fall semester exam period and was "much more efficient than the old system of reporting cases," Cronenberg stated.

"This method," he said, "allows us to asisgn cases as soon as they are reported, and enables us to speedup the entire process of investigation."

Gaitskell And Kennedy Meet For Discussion

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Kennedy, nearing a decision on resumption of atmospheric nuclear tests, was told Monday the British public would not object if convinced it was necessary for Western defense.

The statement came from Hugh Gaitskell, leader of the British Labor Party, who conferred with the Chief Executive Monday at a lengthy White House lunch meeting.

Newsmen asked Gaitskell later how British public opinion would react to U. S. resumption of atmospheric tests. He replied that the British would accept such a decision of a good case is made for resumption.

Gaitskell said the President has not yet made up his mind. He added that if the decision is to resume tests, the reasons should be made clear.

The British leader's reaction seemed to fall short of the strong objections he was expected to raise. He told reporters the Labor party believes the west should have an effective nuclear deterrent against Soviet threats. But if atmospheric tests are to be resumed, he said, it must be shown that testing is necessary to maintain an effective deterrent and not for purposes of Western prestige or a "tit-for-tat" response to Russia's own tests.

Gaitskell said his party hoped tests could be delayed in a "last chance" attempt to reach a nuclear agreement with the Soviet Union. He also said there should be fallout safeguards if the U. S. resumes tests.

The British official did not say whether he had given Kennedy such suggestions. He said his talk with the President mainly involved a discussion of possible testing over the British controlled Christmas Island in the Pacific, as well as the European common market and the Berlin problem.

Urban Affairs Vote Postponed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Monday postponed a Senate vote on President Kennedy's urban affairs plan then quickly reversed himself when Republicans moved to force a showdown in the House first.

In the complicated parliamentary maneuvering with heavy political evertones, Mansfield first announced that plans to bring up Kennedy's proposed new department of urban affairs for a Senate vote by Tuesday had been put off.

An attempt to force a House vote Wednesday was immediately launched by Republicans. The House was expected to kill the proposed new department, for which Kennedy has said he would name a Negro secretary. If the House acted first, Senate Republicans might not have to stand up and be counted on the politically sensitive issue.

In The Future

The Student Stake

Several thousand students from all over the nation braved icy Washington weather this weekend to take part in an all day and night "peace vigil" in front of the White House, protesting against nuclear testing by buttonholing Congressmen and hoisting picket signs.

Meanwhile, two Carolina students journeyed to Swarthmore to take part in a weekend disarmament conference attended by college students and representatives from schools around the country.

* * *

The groups agreed on one thing: disarmament is vital to world safety and every avenue should be explored to achieve it. The concensus at Swarthmore, however, seemed to be that disarmament, and particularly unilateral disarmament by the U. S., cannot be effected immediately. The 4,700 students who demonstrated at the White House, on the other hand, seemed motivated by a strong pacifist sentiment, advocating what was described as a "basic shift in U. S. foreign policy"—a shift, as they saw it, toward disarmament and an end to the cold war.

* * *

Swarthmore's answer was perhaps more realistic and arrived at by a more thorough inquiry into what is unquestionably a complex issue. The students at Washington came up with the solution that everyone would like to believe can be effected—immediately and completely. But in the cold and undeniable harsh light of reality, the answer, the goal, of the Washington demonstrators is one that has defied implementation.

* * *

Unilateral disarmament, on the one hand, hardly seems the best road to peace. Mutual disarmament on the other has not certainly proved altogether the easiest solution to achieve.

* * *

But students, at any rate, realize that they are faced with the problem; it is their inheritance from the nuclear age. The future belongs to students and it is altogether proper that they should demand that this future be preserved for them.

* * *

Here on campus, too far removed, perhaps from the demonstration at the Capitol and the discussion at Harvard, there is what seems to be a growing feeling that such problems as nuclear disarmament and other national and international affairs are not for the consideration of students.

* * *

A resolution concerning nuclear disarmament which was introduced on the floor of the Student Legislature has been alternately scoffed at and condemned by a large percentage of the campus. Such matters, representatives to the Legislature have been told by their constituents, take too much time from "important" items.

* * *

Carolina students, it seems, are out of step with the national student temper. The same issue that drew thousands of students to Washington for a long and chilly vigil in front of the White House; the same issue that was thoroughly dissected by students at Swarthmore, is considered by students here to be "outside the working area" of the Legislature. It's "too time-consuming," too "trivial." The students "can do nothing about it anyway." These arguments come thick and fast each time the Legisture tries to consider such a resolution.

* * *

These arguments, whether they are brought up in connection with nuclear testing resolution, integration resolutions, or any one of a hundred others, sap part of the vitality and interest from the Student Legislature. If the Legislature refuses to consider such topics, they will be considered elsewhere, probably outside student government.

* * *

The net result over a period of time will be that the Legislature will become nothing more than a financial committee, doing nothing more than regulating budgetary matters. It will lose much of the claim that it has as a truly representative body at Carolina, while much of its capable leadership is drawn away into political student government. This is not the path that student government, and the Legislature in particular, should be forced to follow.

* * *

Nuclear disarmament, race relations, foreign policy, internal affairs—these are, or should be, considerations that are vital to students. The student's stake in them is high, higher perhaps than that of any other one segment of society.

Students symbolize the future; it is only right that they should take an interest in it.

Learning For Its Own Sake

Somewhere in the welter of meetings occurrring tonight, including The University Party, a number of initiations, the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, and The Truth About Cuba, to name a few, a little remembered but once much-known organization is meeting. Its name is the Di-Phi.

On the top floor of New West — circa 1859 — in one of the most beautiful and stately rooms on this campus, nine young men have been fighting to preserve a very old and very glorious tradition from the curmudgeons of progress and practicality.

Call the tradition learning for its own sake, and it's partly that. For men have gathered here for nearly 170 years to voluntarily give and gain knowledge, and most emerged richer for the experience.

Call it the ancient tradition of the dialogue inherited from the Greeks who seemed to know that knowledge and personal truths could come through ordered discussion. So men have come to the Di-Phi to discuss and to learn.

Call it a tradition of freedom, of the forum, of the open marketplace, — a belief that no subject whatsoever is sacrosanct from the scrutiny of mind or mouth or pen. Call it a belief that the conditions of learning must be free if it is to take place at all. And men have come to use their freedom responsibly in the halls of the two societies.

The tradition is all of these and more. And it started a long time ago.

* * *

The Dialectic Senate emerged in 1795 out of something called "The Debating Society" and with it began at one and the same time the longest tradition in student self-government and in intra-mural debate in the history of these United States.

Shortly afterwards The Philanthropic Literary Society was formed and not unlike other bodies in American society members of the older society were called senators and the younger, representatives.

They debated topics from Resolved: God does not exist; tonight's subject, Resolved: Men are infinitely superior to women;, and many in between.

They dealt with the pressing issues of the day, and with issues that have pressed man for an answer for all his days on earth.

And somehow what emerged was more than debate or talk or heat or fun. Boys emerged men, men became leaders, and leaders became statesmen.

* * *

But it wasn't all serious.

Perhaps the tersest comment on academic judiciaries came from the pen of Missouri Senator Thomas Hart Benton, whom the Phi had very early in its history expelled from school and whom they were writing, years later, in a vain attempt to have him return to speak.

He wrote in reply:

"Gentlemen: I am sitting in my favorite position. Your letter that was before me is now behind me."

* * *

Oh yes, you had and have to wear a coat and tie to debate, but, you see, the societies were created before it was a compromise of personal and religious principles to emerge on the streets in something other than blue jeans and bermuda shorts.

And for years they have gone along with those silly Roberts' Rules of Order. But then they believed it wasn't necessarily the man who shouted loudest that had the best case.

* * *

Even when student government took over the legislative and executive functions of the Di and Phi in 1900, the tradtion prospered.

It used to be a tradition for the political party out of power in student government to turn toward the societies to sharpen up their thinking and oratory, to raise the issues that needed raising, and to come out to fight for supremacy another day.

* * *

There may be some who say it isn't pratical, but they see time as the second hand on their watch, and not in the decades, eras, and centuries in which real worth is created. And if you take their concept, they're right.

But if one peruses the archives of the Di and Phi, there are letters from such unimportant people as George Washington, Mad Anthony Wayne, James Knox Polk, Edgar Allen Poe, and Jefferson Davis—to name a few.

In its first 50 years the Phi alone produced: 109 members of state legislatures, 14 state attorney generals, 19 high court judges, 5 governors, 7 senators, 4 U.S. Cabinet ministers, 7 foreign diplomats, 1 Vice-president, 4 college presidents, 8 generals, 3 authors, and two bishops.

To this you could add a U. S. President, several noted authors, and perhaps, as great as any, a Frank Porter Graham.

The history is a long and beautiful one, of how from Davie Poplar and a handful of men came greatness, a way of life, and a set of values that have excited the minds and hearts of men from time immemorial..

* * *

There is a story that would better be unwritten if it were not true.

It is the story of the decay of the societies until, tottering as they are now, they face total collapse.

It began in the middle 1950's with a new generation of students no longer the serious minded war veterans and no longer really eager to learn.

They came, as someone said, for the best of reasons, to get higher pay, because the family had gone to school, to find a mate, because everybody does it now, for these and a host of other reasons all somewhat less than central to the purpose of education.

The membership dwindled until, three years ago, the two societies merged in a desperation effort to salvage something of what was still left from their valuable heritage.

For two years it worked out. People came, debated, and Di Hall was alive again with the sound of voices, but it didn't last.

Now there are nine, nine battling to preserve that which all should have thought sacred. And the battle is a losing one.

* * *

And you ask why?

In search of the answer you go to Harry's and accost a former Phi member and ask . . . why? Why aren't you participating? Why is this thing dying?

He tells you: "I won't participate because it's useless, because you need a whole revolution in student thought before the Di and the Phi will come back."

You persist . . . why?

"They're against organizations." he says, meaning the students.

You point out that student government never had more participants, the Yack is booming and blooming, and the bridge club is packed to the gills every Monday night.

"But they just doing to keep themselves occupied," he explains, "anything to keep their minds off themselves . . . and thought."

* * *

Perhaps this is the key. Perhaps we've lost the ability to abstract ourselves from the hurly-burly of the world, and perhaps we're afraid that if we did we wouldn't like what we saw.

Perhaps we've substituted activity for activity's sake, for learning for learning's sake. Perhaps we want instead of the dialogue, isolation and alienation, or alternatively a belonging to something—it doesn't matter what—just something. Perhaps we've taken our freedom and translated into freedom to get, rather than freedom to think and feel.

And perhaps we've been short-changed in the process.

And perhaps we don't realize that we're the losers, because no one else will care.

* * *

Di Hall is silent today.

Faces of the past peer out from gold trimmed frames to remind us of the greatness and near-greatness of the past.

And if one listens closely the mind may record from the light blue walls the echoing voices of once lively and heated debates.

Perhaps this year or next, President Arthur Hays or his successor from the moth-eaten blue chair at the head of the hall will gavel down the last meeting of the Di-Phi and the voices will be heard no more.

* * *

But before it dies, before this tradition—one so central to the real Carolina way of life—of thought and teaching, of learning and discussion, of freedom and order—before this is lost, I want to lend my hands to the efforts of the nine in this last effort to save but a little of this past.

I'll be there tonight.

How about you?

"Boss, Are You Out Of Your Ever-Lovin' Mind?"

Neill Clark Reviews One-Acts

Playmakers Make Exploration

By NEILL CLARK

Perhaps it's the passing of an era. The Playmakers have presented a program of original students plays from which whiskey stills and revenuers, toothless grannies and wild-eyed preachers are conspicuously absent. After many years of exploitation maybe Maw and Paw and Zeke and Penny Mae have finally returned to the land of the slop-jar and the south forty, a little the worse for wear.

Though quite dissimilar in many ways, the three plays, have something in common. If I were to title the program I think I would call it something like "An Exploration of Time and the Moment." The moments are like seeds which time throws out behind him each growing into an eternity of its own. In LOOK DOWN FROM A MOUNTAIN it is a moment of happiness, in THE HANDS OF CIASCUNO a moment of recognition and in THE FACADE it is a moment of resignation. A shimmer, a shadow, and a perpetual haze.

In Look Down From the Mountain, by Wesley Van Tassel an LMW (lonely middle-aged woman) meets an SYB (sensitive young boy) and SC (spontaneous communication) takes place yielding EH (experience of happiness) but C (circumstance) prevents continuation. This could be written as a formula (granted rather unscientific) LMW and SYB and SC equals EH-CC. I don't make this pretentious and obviously oversimplified formula to disparge the play. This is the work of "peedants" (who share more than phonic resemblance with the communal insects which live in intricate underground burrows). I do this merely to point out that if we look at the play strictly in traditional dramatic terms such as what is the protagonist, antagonist, conflict, resolution, etc., we are apt to miss the point of the play. The important point of the play is a meeting in which two people share something almost incommunicable and then through the momentum of circumstances pass on. Unless we believe something important happened between those two people the play is insignificant. Well, if what happened is almost incommunicable, how does an author make an audience understand? Mr. Van Tassel didn't satisfactorily answer that question, nor was he aided by Wallace Johnson's direction. The relationship between the two main characters and especially the woman's reaction to it was made neither clear nor emphatic enough. Action is the basis of drama. It's not so much what we hear the characters SAY but what we see them DO or try to do which gives us an understanding of the play.

In the main roles Leilani Thornburg and Frank MacDonald both gave pleasing performances, she as the wistfully ironic teacher on vacation and he as the shy and simple boy. But both seemed to play a quality-of-being rather than an action-of-necessity. Both portrayals were pleasing in texture, but to understand them we must be able to at least infer the weave of the cloth.

The setting by John Crockett evoked a feeling of a small out-of-the-way town, but because of the arrangement and size of the set-pieces much of the action seemed to bear no relation to the set and sometimes gave a vague feeling of imbalance.

* * *

THE HANDS OF CIASCUNO, by Wallace Johnson is an interesting discussion of a man confronting his agedness and the difference between the probability and the actuality of death. Ciascuno is a master violinmaker who upon reaching old age must finally recognize that he is old and soon must die. He has a helper who is visible only to him—his spirit, his creative self—A stranger, death, his old age the fact that he will not live forever etc., come into the store to "collect." After considerable argument Ciascuno submits to his fate and decides to leave the shop with Pietro, his helper, asking him to help the next master who comes to the shop. Pietro refuses and Ciascuno finally agrees to let Pietro accompany him, in fact, he is glad of it. Tho quite engaging the allegory is not at all times clear. Is Pietro the spirit of Ciascuno's work only, or the spirit of all creative people? If so it seems that the spirit of art dies with the artist and has no transcendental quality but is a constant re-creation. It is also interesting to know how an artist can get the "spirit of his work" or a "figment of his imagination," at any rate something non-physical, to do manual labor such as sweep, dust, and hand him his coat and hat. Despite its inconsistencies, however this is a rewarding dramatization of the oft-heard statement that "until he dies no one really believes that HE is going to die.

Gail Place did an admirable job in giving form to what is essentially a "talky" play. There was constant movement that finally wound down like a clock, with the crumpled Ciascuno in the center.

Randolph Umberger as Ciascuno was a little disappointing. His fine, clear voice seemed too fine and clear for a man about to die, and his walk and posture seemed more affectation than infirmity. Kermit Ewing was enjoyable as the sprightly, impish Pietro and manged to convey genuine feeling with movements rather than words.

As the Stranger Larry Warner had a calculated clarity and an air of impersonal malovolence with a touch of weariness that was excellent.

Dan Proctor's settings were also very good, lending a mood of warmth by the rich browns yet introducing a feeling of conflict by the sharp, angular set-pieces.

This is the kind of play that seems to fit into an Eric Bentley "eternal collection of the theatre" series. It is also interesting to note the influence of the recent Beggar's Opera over almost every aspect of the production.

The Facade, by Larry Randolph reminds one of the experimental plays of the Provincetown Players, such as Undertones, for it uses a theatrical device to show what is going on in the minds of the characters. But its conclusion is that of T. S. Eliot in the Cocktail Party as they decide to "make the best of a bad job."

Victoria is a climber who has married Warren for his money. As she dances with her husband a phrase about the "last ten years" like Proust's little cakes evokes a whole chain of events. The "truth" of those ten years is told, and everybody but Warren comes out the worse for it. By having a strong white spot in the center of the stage each person takes his turn having all hell thrown at him by the others. Victoria is a grasping, heartless social climber, Inez is the woman all the eligible bachelors pass over, and Kent is the man who makes passes at all the eligible bachelors. After a violent session of flying accusations the light changes and life goes on as before. As they leave Warren hesitates as if to wonder if it really happened. Believe me. It did.

The Proprietor who introduces the play is effective in setting a rather strange mood, but it seems almost unnecessary, or as if there should be a better way of preparing the audience for what is to follow.

The direction by Violet Galvin was exciting and did much to clarify the plays intentions. Debbie Bloodworth was lovely and very effective as the grasping Victoria. Susie Cordon as Inez seemed too warm to live the cold, career-woman type life she was supposed to, and Allen Josephs was like a bantam-rooster as the vehement "persecuted" Kent.

Although this treatment is necessarily superficial I think it should indicate that despite the constant gripes about the death of the Playmakers, there is some new, interesting, worthwhile experimentation being done in the department, and I believe that it is a sign of health. Perhaps folk drama has passed away for a while, but its spirit is still around. I think "Prof" Koch would have smiled.

Communists Said Halting Attacks On Laos Province

VIENTIANE, Laos, (UPI)—Pro-Communist rebel forces apparrently have suspended attacks on Nam Tha pending the outcome of renewed efforts by the rival Laotian princes to reach agreement on a colition government of "national unity" for this Southeast Asian kingdom, observers said Monday.

Reliable sources said there had been no fighting around the northwestern Laotian provincial capital since Friday, the day before "neutralist" Prince Souvanna Phouma arrived in the royal capital of Luang Prabang for audiences with King Savang Vathana and talks with right-wing Laotian leaders.

On his departure Sunday for the rebel headquarters in the Plain of Jars he shares with his half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, Souvanna expressed confidence that a government would be formed shortly "if everyone acts with good will."

Pam Parker Is Runnerup In Contest

Pam Parker, a UNC senior English major, has been selected as "alternate State Princess' for 1962 in the third Georgia State Dairy Princess contest held at the annual meeting of the American Dairy Association of Georgia on February 13 in Atlanta.

Pam, a native of Sylvania, Ga., is the daughter of Representative and Mrs. H. Walstein Parker. She was sponsored in the contest by the Screven County Farm Bureau.

Contestants were judged in street clothes and in formal evening gowns. Each of the eight contestants had personal interviews and made tape recordings for the judges to review. The girls are judged on personality, speaking ability, and knowledge of the dairy industry as well as beauty.

Before entering UNC, Pam attended Wesleyan College where she received two honor scholarships and where she was tapped in to the freshman honor society. She was also chosen "Miss Freshman Class," served a treasurer of the Student Government Association and as delegate to the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments.

At UNC, Pam has served as president of the women's legislative body of the student government. She has also served as a member of Women's Residence Council and House Council, a member of the Canadian Exchange Program to visit the University of Toronto, and as a writer for the Daily Tar Heel.

Weather For Orbit Improves

Long Delays May Be Over For Glenn

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Forecasters Monday blessed astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. with much improved weather conditions, raising "cautiously optimistic" hopes that he finally would take off Tuesday on his long-delayed orbital flight around the earth.

The federal space agency said fate shifted in favor of the persevering spaceman when storms abated in the Atlantic recovery area where he was scheduled to return to earth after a one-, two-, or three-orbit flight.

The only apparent dark spot was a prediction of broken cloudiness for the Cape Canaveral launch area during at least part of the five hours between 7:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., EST in which Glenn's 10-story space vehicle can be launched.

Roughly 24 hours before the scheduled take-off, Lt. Col. John A. (Shorty) Powers, astronaut spokesman, said the odds "appeared to be 60-40 in our favor."

Forecaster Optimistic

He quoted Ernest Amman, weather forecaster for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA, as being "a little more optimistic." Amman usually is pretty cautions, Powers said, and when he grows optimistic, "I can't help but tilt the scales in our favor."

The preflight schedule called for a final midnight check of the weather, after which Project Mercury officials would give the 40-year-old astronaut a "go" or "no-go" order.

Glenn spent a quiet day checking the countdown of his spacecraft, with time out in mid-morning for a visit to Pat's barbershop near the Cape for another hair trim. He has to get one every three days to retain the proper fit of his space helmet. It was fashioned for him at a time when he had a three-day-old haircut.

Balked Ten Times

Ten times since last December the red-haired Marine officer has been thwarted in his effort to become the first American in orbit. Weather was the culprit most of the time, but there also was some trouble with his bell-shaped space capsule and Atlas rocket booster.

Glenn's spacecraft checked out perfectly during last week's launching attempts that were blocked by Atlantic storms. The latest countdown got underway at 2:30 a.m., EST Monday.

Sunday, technicians poured 120 tons of high grade kerosene into the huge Atlas rocket. It is mixed with substantially less liquid oxygen to form the fuel that powers the astronaut's capsule to orbital speed of about 17,500 miles an hour.

Leisurely Dining Is Spencer Hall Mark

By CHUCK MOONEY

"The girls would much rather eat with the boys, but their mothers want them to eat here," said Mrs. Norwood Bizzell, manager of the Spencer Dorm Dining Hall.

"I try to make it like home but it doesn't do much to change their minds."

The dining hall located just off the parlor on the east side, has green walls decorated with oil paintings, subdued red curtains and mahogany colored tables-for-four.

"They come to breakfast and lunch when they please," Mrs. Bizzell said, "but we have so many we have to schedule them in two shifts for supper.

"If we didn't we'd never get through at night."

Half of Spencer's 148 girls eat supper at 5:15; the others, at about 6:30.

Operating the dining hall alone, Mrs. Bizzell makes up all the menus, selects the food and supervises its preparation. Since it is considered a part of Lenoir Hall, she gets the food through Lenoir's supply room.

The dining hall has its own kitchen, employing nine permanent cooks. Student waiters work during the noon and evening meals. Breakfast is a "help-yourself" affair.

Spencer, the first UNC girl's dorm, was built in 1924. Its 63 rooms and downstairs parlor are styled in Georgian architecture.

Named after Mrs. Cornelia Phillips Spencer, is located on East Franklin Street, next to the Episcopal Church.

Ft. Lauderdale Makes Plans For Next Student Invasion

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The bustling lower Atlantic coast resort city, now the training home of the world champion New York Yankees, is making ready for the 1962 visitation of college students in March and April.

Citizens are working with municipal officials to offer vacationing undergraduates a new recreation and entertainment program. Even the Yankees will assist by playing 15 exhibition games in the new Fort Lauderdale baseball stadium between March 10 and April 7.

With few exceptions, all other day and night activities will center on Fort Lauderdale's beach. A single special area east of Bahia Mar yachting center will be the focal point for live music and dancing during the peak periods. Also bonfires will be permitted under the supervision of the fire department.

Pedestrian and vehicular traffic congestion at the beach is expected to be lessened by the concentration of activity in an area several blocks removed from the intersection of Atlantic and Las Olas boulevards.

The city's recreation department will construct a large stage-bandstand, which during the day will be utilized for bathing beauty contests and other forms of entertainment, including the popular twist and limbo.

Competitive events will include beach basketball, volleyball, ocean swimming and "mailman carry". Other activities will be added as requested.

On arrival students will be greeted at 'Hello Booths" in three beach locations, where "hospitality" passes will be issued and housing information distributed. Here also bulletin boards will be maintained for lost and found information together with schedules of daily and special events.

The "hospitality" passes, issued on the presentation of college identification or current registration cards, will entitle students to all of the recreation and entertainment events. A fee of 15 cents will be charged for the passes.

The hospitality booths will be manned by volunteers enlisted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Panhellenic Association. It is estimated they will work 7,000 "man" hours.

Joining students here this spring will be the presidents and deans of several universities and colleges. The educators will be guests of the city's leading hotels.

John Tower Speaks At Lincoln Dinner

Sen. John Towers will be the featured speaker at the Lincoln Day Dinner at the Jack Tar Hotel in Durham Saturday, March 3. The dinner, sponsored by the N. C. Young Republicans Club, will conclude the Republican convention being held at the Durham Armory that afternoon.

National Chairman William Miller will be the keynote speaker at the convention.

Tickets for the dinner can be purchased for $5 from Bill Patterson at 116 Joyner. The dinner will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Tar Heels Edge Maryland's Terrapins By 70-67

Brown Scores 26 As Heels Win 7th

By ED DUPREE
DTH Sports Editor

North Carolina's basketball team survived a last mimute effort by Maryland's Terrapins and eked out a 70-67 victory in Woollen Gym to gain revenge for an earlier setback at the hands of Bud Millikan's crew.

The home team grabbed a 38-37 lead in the opening minute of the second half and was never headed as it captured its seventh Atlantic Coast Conference win against six losses.

It took Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels better than three minutes to score their first field goal and another two minutes to connect on a second two-pointer. By then the visiting turtles had taken a 12-7 lead.

Charlie Shaffer, who continued to play steady ball for Carolina, scored and Donnie Walsh tallied on a fast break pass from Larry Brown to close the margin to 12-11. Maryland's Carpenter scored on a layup and Jim Donohue hit on a dazzling hook shot to make it 14-13. Seconds later Walsh threw in a free throw to knot the score.

The Terps' Jerry Greenspan then reeled off seven points in a row and Carpenter added two more to give the College Park boys a 23-14 lead. Shaffer hit a pair of free throws and Joe Barton scored two for the northerners to set the stage for 12 consecutive Tar Heel points, in a three minute span Mike Cooke connected, Brown hit for two foul line points and Jim Hudock popped one in for the first six. Walsh's two free throws narrowed the Terp lead to 24-25. Then Shaffer, the Chapel Hill boy who has scored 50 points in three starting assignments, chalked up four points to give Smith's men a 28-25 advantage.

Brown, on a driving layup and four foul shots, accounted for six of the final eight points for UNC in the opening period as the blue and white took a 36-35 halftime lead.

A two-pointer by tow-headed Bruce Kelleher gave Maryland a short-lived 37-36 lead. Brown hit again on one of many sparkling layups to give UNC a 38-37 lead which it never lost. A series of beautiful assists, resulting in field goals for Hudock twice and Shaffer, folowed by another Brown layup pushed the Tar Heel lead to 46-40.

The Carolina lead hovered around the six-to-ten point mark for the final 15 minutes of the contest. A jump shot by Walsh at the 6-minute mark made it 65-55, but the Terps livened up again and made it a tight ball game.

Eicher hit a foul shot, Greenspan a field goal, and Brown countered with a foul shot to make it 66-57. Mike Nofsinger, at 5-9 one of the smallest men in the ACC, scored four points and Jelus tallied the same, while Shaffer and Brown were scoring a pair each. Eicher scored at 0:25 to make it 70-67, but that was as close as Maryland came.

NIT, NCAA Begin Tournament Picks

By JOHN GRIFFIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Invitation Basketball Tournament got off to a flying start toward rounding up its field Monday by naming defending champion Providence, Duquesne, and Loyola of Chicago, while the NCAA tournament added Villanova to its field.

Each of the big major post-season court carnivals now has three teams signed up-border conference champion Arizona State and Mid-American champion Bowling Green having previously received automatic NCAA berths by their league titles.

The NIT to be held at Madison Square Garden for the 25th straight year, March 15-24, will have a 12-team field.

The NCAA, with its system of regional tournaments starting March 12 leading to the national title game on March 24 at Louisville, Ky., will include 15 major conference champions and 10 "members at large."

Wildcats Receive Bid

Villanova, with a 16-6 won-lost record so far in its first season under coach Jack Kraft, is the first team to receive an "at large" berth. By agreement, Monday was the first day either the NCAA or NIT would sign up independent teams.

The Villanova Wildcats, building around high-scoring forward Hubie White, will be competing in the NCAA carnival for the fifth time, but for the first time since 1955.

Providence 15-5 will be out to become the second team in history to win the NIT two straight years. The Friars have most of last year's team, including 6-10 center Jim Hadnot and guard Vinnie Ernst, who was the "most valuable player" in the tourney last year.

Loyola of Chicago boasts the best record of the four teams named Monday—16 wins and only two defeats — and currently is tied for the No. 10 national UPI ranking.

Duquesne 16-5 won the NIT in 1955 and will be appearing in the tournament for the 10th time. The Iron Dukes have lost their last three games to Villanova, Westminster Pa., and Dayton.

Eyeing Same Schools

The NIT announcements were made by Ken Norton, coach of Manhattan College and chairman of the NIT Selection Committee, and the NCAA announcement by Robert Red Brown, athletic director of the University of West Virginia, chairman of the NCAA's Eastern District Selection Committee.

Villanova will compete in the NCAA Eastern regionals, site and opponent to be named later.

Both major tournaments are eyeing the same group of schools for bids, in many cases. Locally, St. John's and New York U. are believed more likely to wind up in the NIT than the NCAA. Other top prospects among the independents include Houston, Holy Cross, Dayton, Butler, Detroit, Memphis State, Temple, St. Joseph's, St. Bonaventure, and Westminster.

The NIT also is expected to include the runner-up teams from the Missouri Valley and Skyline conferences. Most other major conferences bar tournament participation except by the champion team, which is bound to go to the NCAA tournament.

ACC Trio Makes Top 20; Ohio State Remains First

By JOE SARGIS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State rolling along toward its second straight perfect - record Big Ten season, topped the United Press International major college basketball ratings for the 12th straight week Monday with a perfect score of 350 points.

All 35 coaches on the UPI rating board named the unbeaten Buckeyes, whose only loss last season was to Cincinnati in the NCAA championship game, the No. 1 team in the nation.

Cincinnati, second to Ohio State every week of the current season, held its customary spot again this week while Kentucky's grip on third place was reduced to a single point over Kansas State following the Wildcats' loss last week to Southeastern Conference leader Mississippi State.

Mississippi State, eighth a week ago, advanced to fifth; Bradley added two more victories to its total but slipped to sixth; Duke remained seventh; Oregon State, a major West Coast power which was sixth last week, was eighth this time; St. John's N. Y. advanced from a 12th place tie to ninth, and Bowling Green, Loyola Ill. and Southern California were tied for 10th.

The second 10 this week was made up of Colorado, the Big Eight leader; National Invitation Tournament bound Duquesne; Skyline Conference - leader Utah; Southern Conference leader West Virginia; Utah State, tied with Utah in the Skyline; Big Five leader UCLA; Atlantic Coast conference leader Wake Forest; NCAA tournament bound Arizona State U. and North Carolina State.

Ohio State has rolled over 20 straight opponents and only needs victories over Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana to complete its second straight perfect season in the Big Ten.

Cincinnati 21-2 was given its strongest support of the season this week, drawing a total of 301 points which included 27 votes for the runnerup spot. Kentucky 17-2 had 218 points, Kansas State 18-2 had 217 and Mississippi State 20-1 had 194. Points are awarded on a basis of 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1 for votes from first to 10th with the coaches basing their ratings this week on games played through Saturday night, Feb. 17.

The United Press International major college basketball ratings with first place votes and won-lost records in parentheses:

Team	Points
1. Ohio State (35) (20-0)	350
2. Cincinnati (21-2)	301
3. Kentucky (17-2)	218
4. Kansas State (18-2)	217
5. Mississippi St. (20-1)	194
6. Bradley (18-3)	162
7. Duke (17-4)	93
8. Oregon State (17-3)	87
9. St. John NY (15-4)	40
10. Tie—Bowling Green (18-2)	32
Loyola Ill. (16-2)	32
Southern Calif. (14-6)	32

Second 10 — 13 Colorado 31, 14 tie, Duquesne and Utah, 19 each; 16. West Virginia 14; 17, Utah State 13; 18. UCLA 11; 19. Wake Forest 8; 20 tie, Arizona State U. and North Carolina State 7 each.

Others — Stanford and Villanova 5 each; New York U. and Washington 4 each; Auburn, Colorado State, Seattle and Wichita 3 each; Butler, Loyola Calif. and Texas Tech 2 each; St. Louis 1.

South Carolina Raps UNC In Saturday Contest

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

UNC went down to its seventh defeat in 14 starts last Saturday night as South Carolina put on a dazzling display of shooting to down the Tar Heels 97-82 in the windup game of the North-South doubleheader series at the Charlotte Coliseum.

The Gamecocks, who had been beaten by Dean Smith's cagers earlier this season at Chapel Hill, 83-71, were never behind in this one and were only threatened once.

When Carolina's Donnie Walsh hit two free throws with eight minutes remaining in the first half, the score was knotted at 33 apiece. But the Gamecocks quickly settled things as they went on a 15-point spree, interrupted only by Larry Brown's jumper, to give them an imposing 48-35 halftime lead. Carolina never recovered.

Coach Bob Stevens' men, whose victory tied them with UNC for fourth place in the ACC standings, shot a phenomenal 52.2 from the floor to Carolina's credible 44.8. 6-8 forward Ronnie Collins was high for South Carolina with 23 points.

Brown pumped in 26 for the Tar Heels, while Jim Hudock added 20 to go with his 15 rebounds. Soph Charlie Shaffer, who had netted 25 points against Clemson on Friday, continued his fine play. The 6-3 Chapel Hill native dropped in 4 of 4 field goal tries and 5 of 5 free throws before fouling out with 4 minutes left in the game.

Aquaholics Meet Tomorrow Night

UNC's skindiving club, the Aquaholics, will hold its weekly meeting Wednesday night at 7:30. Boys will meet in the locker room of Woollen Gym—all interested girls are asked to be at poolside at 7:45.

Jerry Pilarski, advisor and instructor, will be on hand to welcome back all old members and greet anyone interested in joining the organization. Basic equipment is not necessary to join, it can be obtained through the club.

Respess Hits For 24, Neary 21, As Sea Hawks Down Frosh 85-75

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The Sea Hawks of Wilmington Junior College pulled away from a 35-33 halftime lead last night and went on to down UNC's Tar Babies 85-75 in a preliminary to the Carolina-Maryland clash.

Coach Ken Rosemond's Tar Babies, who had beaten Wilmington 70-68 in overtime earlier in the season, fell behind early in the contest and did not catch the Sea Hawks until, with 6:51 remaining in the first half, Ray Respess canned a one-hander to knot the score at 21. Carolina outscored Wilmington 12-6 in the next four minutes, but at this point, coach Bill Brooks' Sea Hawks went on an 8-point tear while holding the Tar Babies scoreless.

6-6 Al Thiry began the spurt. The Charleroi, Pa., native, who led the Sea Hawks with 24 points, sunk two free throws to pull Wilmington to within 4 points at 33-29. Consecutive jump shots by Gary Hedrick, Walter Jones and Larry Edens earned the Sea Hawks their 35-33 halftime lead.

Wilmington maintained their margin as the second half got under way on the shooting of Thiry, Edens and 6-5 Jim McCurdy. With 10:50 left, Thiry hit a layup and the Tar Babies found themselves on the short end of a 57-50 count.

The Chapel Hillians then went on a spurt of their own. Jay Neary's two jumpers, sandwiched around Bill Brown's free throw, left the Tar Babies down by two, and when Pud Hassell returned from the bench and slammed home a rebound, Carolina was all even.

But the junior college boys from the coastal regions of North Carolina were not to be denied. Down by one at 65-64 with 5:19 remaining on the clock, the Sea Hawks rolled up 11 points while Carolina was only able to manage Respess' jump shot. This put Wilmington up by 75-67 and it was all over for the Tar Babies.

Attempting a full-court press, Rosemond's cagers repeatedly fouled in the last few minutes and Wilmington was able to take advantage with many easy layups.

The Sea Hawks, who shot a blistering 65.6 per cent in the second period, ended with a 51.6 mark from the field. Thiry netted nine of 15 from the floor and added six of seven foul shots. McCurdy canned seven of his 11 field goal attempts to go along with a free throw and finished with 15 points. Edens, the Sea Hawks 6-1 floor leader, chipped in 13.

Carolina made 28 of 64 tries from the floor and finished with 43.8 per cent. Respess dropped in 11 of 19 field goals and added two free throws to tie Wilmington's Thiry for game honors with 24. Neary was eight for 20 from the floor and five for eight from the charity stripe as he finished with 21. Hassel, who fouled out with 3:44 left in the game, added 12 while Bill Taylor had nine and Brown, who tied the Sea Hawks' Edens for the rebound high with ten, had seven. Fred Hobson in a relief role, hit his only field goal attempt for the Tar Babies' other basket.

Glenn Successfully Completes Three Orbits

By CHARLES W. CORDDRY

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — John H. Glenn Jr. blazed a three-orbit American spaceway around the earth Tuesday, splashed triumphantly down in the Atlantic near recovery forces and popped from his space capsule declaring he was in excellent condition.

To the acclaim of his elated countrymen, the 40-year-old-astronaut was plucked from the sea by a crane on the destroyer Noa, one of the recovery ships waiting to rescue him. He landed only six miles from the vessel.

"My condition is excellent," the freckle-faced Marine reported even before he climbed from his cramped capsule on the destroyer's deck. That was the message he had sent back repeatedly all during his 4 hour and 56 minute record smashing free world flight.

With a near perfect flight marked only by minor difficulties, Glenn pushed the U. S. space program ahead with a mighty leap that will see perhaps a manned orbital flight every two months the rest of this year preparatory to longer orbital flights and flights to the moon and planets.

Kennedy Expresses Thanks

Scarcely had Glenn emerged from his capsule than President Kennedy expressed the nation's "great happiness and thanksgiving" at the red-haired pilot's successful orbital flight. Speaking from the White House lawn, the President said:

"This is the new ocean space and I believe the United States must sail on it and be in a position second to none."

No one was more elated than Glenn — a perservering spaceman who sweated out two months of delays before finally embarking on his mission.

So happy was he that, on the final leg of his 81,000-mile journey, he joked by radio with astronaut Leroy Cooper about military flight pay. "Have four hours flight time," he jibed. "Request flight chit."

Shortly after that he turned all his attention to bringing the capsule down in the recovery area. He controlled the spacecraft semi-manualy during most of the historic flight and was still handling manual controls as he approached the recovery area.

Eighteen minutes after he plunged into the Atlantic, the waiting destroyer had scooped up his capsule and deposited it on the deck.

The crew of the destroyer, certain it would beat helicopters to the rescue, was waiting with a painted welcome sign for the Marine hero and already had voted to make him the ship's "sailor of the month."

A few moments after the spacecraft was lowered to the deck, Glenn climbed through the hatch and stood on the Noa's deck.

The 40-year-old veteran test pilot was undaunted by "some minor difficulties" in his ton-and-a-half Friendship 7 space capsule, insisting at the end of his second orbit—lest anyone have other ideas—that he "go for the third orbit." He went.

Traveling nearly 18,000 miles an hour at an altitude of 100 to 160 miles above the globe, the doughty Marine lieutenant colonel made a trip around the earth once every 88.29 minutes.

From the moment he rose into space at 9:47 a.m., EST, atop a flaming rocket from Cape Canaveral until he plummeted into the ocean at 2:43 p.m., EST, the astronaut gave glowing accounts of his journey that made it plain he was having the time of his life.

Repeatedly he radioed back that "I feel fine . . . . the view is tremendous . . the capsule is in good shape." And when he zipped through the atmosphere upon landing he commented: "Boy, that was a real fireball."

In the space of five minutes, the speed of the bell-shaped capsule was cut from its top speed to about 270 miles an hour. The fireball he saw was caused by air friction heating the capsule on re-entry.

Eighteen minutes after splash down, recovery forces reached the elated pilot, still in his capsule. His landing was in the "prime recovery area" which had been selected about 800 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral for a three-orbit flight.

In each of his orbits, Glenn passed through the seasons of his planet and from daylight to darkness as he soared from the Florida tourist haven over such troubled regions as the Congo and back again to "home waters."

Spacemen, from the elated astronaut to the lowest technician at Cape Canveral, were jubilant that the United States finally had hurtled the globe in successful orbital flight.

Beginning Of Era

"This," said project director Walter Williams a few weeks ago, referring to the Glenn orbital flight in relation to the whole U. S. space program, "is the end of the beginning."

He meant that, with a successful manned orbital flight finally achieved after years of planning and preparation, the U. S. space program now has broken through to such plans as manned flights to the moon, longer orbital flights by one or more astronauts, and all of the other space feats which, until now, have been for the future instead of the present.

Chest Announces Drive Schedule

The Campus Chest yesterday announced the schedule for its drive that will run from March 8-15, Chairmen Jeannie MacDougall and Charlie Shelton announced yesterday.

The Campus Chest is the only charity drive permitted on the campus of UNC and thus prevents students from being constantly approached by both worthy and unworthy causes.

The purpose of the drive is two-fold: to raise money for worthy causes, and to teach the Carolina student to accept the responsibilities of adulthood, among which giving is an important one.

Three Phases

This year's campaign will consist of three major phases. First is the Auction to be held March 8, in Gerrard Hall. Chairmen Kitty Motsinger and Tommy Cummings have announced that the auctioneers, Bob Cox and Kemp Battle Nye have many useful and unique things on the block this year.

Second, under the leadership of Van Oatts and Grant Wheeler, this year's Solicitations Committee is dedicated to improving the response of the Carolina students to their obligations.

These chairmen wish to stress that college, being training for life, should make the student realize that he will be approached in his community by health drives, Community Chest, and his respective church organizations for help. College is no different.

Again this year, the Campus Chest Carnival, phase three, will be held on the Intramural Field, Saturday, March 17. Chairmen Jane Tarlton and Walter Ratchford are counting on the wholehearted support of the IFC, (during their Greek program) the IDS and the other campus organizations to make the Carnival more successful and enjoyable for all.

They report that the festivities will include more rides, a ferris wheel, tilt-a-whirl, and Octopus, and an intermission program put on by Fort Bragg Military base. The crowd expected will be over five thousand strong.

WORLD UNIVERSITY SERVICE —an organization stressing student-to-student aid by which any educational group can receive help with text books, laboratory equipment, etc.

MENTAL HEALTH AT BUTNER, N. C.—because of the loss of the bond issue, children at Butner ranging from infancy to adolescence, are in need of toys, books and playground equipment.

HEART RESEARCH AT MEMORIAL HOSPITAL — the funds would go to Dr. Gibson to farther his research with an improved electro-cardiogram for hospital and space-astronaut use.

Boy, That Was A Real Fire Ball: Glenn

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Here are excerpts from what John Glenn said Tuesday in his flights around the earth.

The astronaut also counted down and just before launch his words came: "5-4-3-2-1-0. Liftoff. The clock is operating. We are underway."

"It is a little bumpy along about here."

"All systems are go. The flight path is smooth."

"I feel fine."

"The view is tremendous."

The Atlas rocket separated from the capsule and Glenn reported "I can see the booster 100 yards behind me and it looks beautiful." "Scope periscope is retracting. Light is out."

As he passed over the Canary Islands, Glenn reported he had "a beautiful view" of the African Coast and could distinguish the Canaries.

The horizon is "a brilliant blue." here. I am having no problems."

Glenn reported seeing "bright lights" below presumably the city of Perth, Australia.

"Thank everybody for turning them on."

"No ill effects at all . . . no nausea or discomforts at all."

Over the southwestern United States at Sunrise, Glenn said he saw "thousands" of particles near his capsule, moving in the same direction and glowing in the sun's rays.

He reported "some minor difficulties" with his attitude control system just before completing the first orbit.

Over Africa again Glenn reported he was "a little warm" and the sun was shining through a window of his space capsule.

On his first pass over Australia he reported a "haze layer up some 7 or 8 degrees above the horizon on the night side . . . the stars I can see through it as they go down toward the real horizon, but it is a very visible single band or layer . . . there is a lot of moonlight here that reflects off what clouds there are."

"That was sure a short day. That was about the shortest day I have ever run into."

As Glenn's capsule re-entered the earth's atmosphere and began its homeward plunge toward the ocean, he said:

"Boy, that was a real fireball."

He Studied At Morehead

Training Gained Here Aids Glenn

By BILL WUAMETT

Astronaut John H. Glenn probably made extensive use yesterday of training he has received at the Morehead Planetarium during the last two years.

"Glenn's flight showed that his training here was useful," Director A. F. Jenzano said after Glenn had successively completed his three orbits, "but we don't know how important it was until he comments about his flight.

"He did refer, however, to the material he learned here and did bring it into operation during his flight."

Star Knowledge

During his training here in Feb. of 1960, Glenn stated, "We are learning to control the attitude of the capsule if all the instruments go out and we have to control it manually. Then we need to know the stars and constellations to have the capability of controlling it manually."

Yesterday he was forced to switch to the "flyby wire" manual control system in order to keep the capsule in the proper position in relation to the earth.

He mentioned during his flight that he had recognized several stars and one of his fellow astronauts commented during the third orbit that Glenn would have to "orient himself to the stars."

Seven Trained Here

"The Morehead Planetarium was selected for this phase of the training program," Glenn stated in 1960 as the spokesman for the group, "because it had the highest qualifications of any available, and we could not get the information elsewhere."

To simulate the space craft and its orbit, the planetarium's technical staff modified a Link trainer and installed a special viewing apparatus through which the astronauts studied the stars and constellations as they were projected on the stainless steel dome by the Zeiss instrument. In later sessions they employed another special sky viewing device.

Same Perspective

"We have the same perspective of the heavens and the celestial sphere from the trainer here as we would have in the Capsule," Glenn said. "And we can move it as we would the ship."

Jenzano explained that the training offered Glenn and the other astronauts was "foreign to the Morehead Planetarium. It combined increments of certain motions of the instrument to simulate the orbits to be followed," Jenzano said. "And the success of the training program here exceeded both their and our expectations.

UNC Legislature To Reapportion Voting Districts

In a firey two and one-half hour session Monday night, the Student Legislature approved a bill which provided for reapportionment of campus voting districts.

The climax of the lengthy session occurred when an amendment was passed 25-7 after a floor debate between Rep. John Randall (SP) and Rep. Bill Imes (UP). After the amendment's passage, the bill sailed smoothly through

The Pan-Hellenic Book Drive will last through Friday of this week. Books should be taken to Y-Court.

Miss Nancy Bond, representing Anderson Tours of Berkeley, Calif., will be at the Tri Delt House at 4:00 on Friday to talk to anyone interested in student tours of Europe. All students are invited.

Sophomore class officers, committee members and other interested persons are requested to attend a meeting at 5 p.m. in Roland Parker Lounges II and III of Graham Memorial.

Applications for French Exchange Scholarships with Tours are available in the Y office, in GM, and the Reserve Reading Room 66 the library. Deadline for their return is March 9.

Carolina Women's Council will meet at 6:30 Wednesday in the Grail Room.

The A.S.P.A will meet tonight at 7:30 at the already specified location.

Interviews for senior class committees will be held in the student government offices in Graham Memorial from 3:30-6:00 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday.

Graduation invitations will be on sale for the last time Thursday and Friday from 9-12 a.m. in Y-Court.

There will be an urgent Junior Class Cabinet meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the TV room at Graham Memorial. Anyone unable to attend is asked to contact one of the class officers.

UMOC Lobdell Did Town On Free Date With Lindsay

By Chuck Mooney

Dave and Lindsay did the town Monday night.

They had steaks at the Rathskeller, saw Carolina whip Maryland and had a beer at the Rat after the game.

Their date was part of last fall's Ugly Man contest, sponsored by the Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity.

When David Lobdell, a bearded junior from Brevard, won the contest, he won not only a trophy but a date with Lindsay Raiford, a cute blond sophomore from Henderson.

Smile For Dave

Lobdell called for her at 6 and she greeted him with a bright smile.

Their APO-provided chauffeur, Doug Pearson, drove them to the Rat where they were seated in the Train Room, a small facsimile of the inside of a train.

"Two Blue Ribbon Specials, please," Lobdell told the waiter. "We'd also like an apertif. What wines do you have?" He selected a red wine, which they sipped until their one-and-a-half-inch steaks were ready.

"This steak is delicious," Miss Raiford said, as "Besame Mucho," "Theme for Lovers" and "Lisbon Antiqua" played on the juke box.

"It's a fairly nice dry wine," said Lobdell.

"The wine is a lovely color," she added.

On To The Game

Discussing motor scooters and the "pretty" moon, they drove to the game.

"This is a very good game," said Miss Raiford from her front row seat.

"I wish the seats had backs," Lobdell said.

At the half, David Parlier, APO master of ceremonies, presented the Ugly Man trophy and an engraved "key" to Lobdell.

"I don't think you're the ugliest man on campus," Parlier told Lobdell. "Isn't there anybody here who will date him?" Parlier shouted.

An unidentified person, believed to have been an APO man dressed as a woman, came running down from the bleachers screaming, "I will! I will!"

The person, wearing a white sweater that boasted a 50-inch bust, and a black and white kilt, got to the middle of the gym floor and swooned.

To Lobdell's relief, two ushers, also believed to have been APO members, carried the person off the floor.

"Is there anybody else?" asked Parlier.

"I will," shouted Miss Raiford, going forward. Lobdell, overcome with joy, surprised everybody and kissed her.

"His beard is soft and fuzzy. It tickles!" she said.

"To the Arboretum," Lobdell yelled as he picked her up and carried her off the floor. The crowd cheered madly.

By the time Carolina had finished off Maryland, 70-67, they were very good friends.

They discussed psychology in the Rat over a beer after the game. They were interested so much that they forgot the time. At five till eleven, they ran from the Rat and raced to the dorm.

"I'd love to date her again," Lobdell said the next day.

"I had a real good time. It was quite an experience," said Miss Raiford.

NSA Veep Explains Policies

By CHUCK MOONEY

"The National Student Association is not a social action group," said Tim Zagat, NSA program vice-president for the eastern U. S. here Sunday afternoon.

"We believe in social reforms but our main purpose is to aid member colleges with student programs, if they ask us to."

Zagat met with Bill Harriss, student body president, and Bill Straughn, NSA campus representative, for three hours.

He explained NSA's point of view on several topics on which NSA has been charged with taking an "un-American" position.

Here are some of his comments:

ON THE RECENT JAPANESE STUDENT RIOTS — "Any student group has the right to demonstrate for their views. NSA supports the right of the Japanese students to peacefully assemble and demonstrate," said Zagat.

"We object to the violence they used. There was also a good deal of police brutality. This may have influenced the students, but this does not change the violence. NSA objects to the violence on both sides.

ON CASTRO—"NSA agrees with the desires of the Cuban people for literacy and advancement. We think they have a right to work for this.

"NSA deplores the recent conduct of the Castro government, however, in preventing their reaching these goals.

"NSA also condemns both the Russian arms shipments to Cuba and the U. S. intervention there," Zagat continued.

ON CHINESE COMMUNIST U. N. MEMBERSHIP — "Several NSA student officers, myself included, sent a UNESCO card (a U. N. Christmas card) to the officers of the Chinese Communist youth organization last year.

"Their reply indicated they were extremely insulted that we should send them a U. N. card.

"Otherwise, I don't know of a single time that this has been discussed by NSA. The question of Chinese Communist U. N. membership has not been mentioned at the four NSA national congresses that I've been to.

ON DISARMAMENT — "NSA favors disarmament by inspection, the same system that the U. S. has been trying to negotiate with the USSR. We are against complete disarmament after the Russian system.

"We condemn the USSR for starting atomic tests. We also hope the U. S. will not test in the atmosphere unless the President feels it necessary for U. S. security.

"I think last weekend's picketing for disarmament in Washington is a good sign. I'm glad that people are thinking about the problem and trying to do something," Zagat said.

ON NSA REPRESENTATION—"Right now, NSA only represents those people and schools who are participating in it. Two popular assumptions are that NSA represents either all the students in its member schools or all American students.

"These are not true. We hope to represent all students in the member schools in the future.

"We can only do this if students will take an interest and participate. They have to listen to their own delegates and support them. They have to take an interest in what NSA is trying to do.

"NSA is bound to be unrepresentative in some areas though no matter what is done. The delegates should be above-average people because they will be able to do more. But this is unrepresentative," he said.

"Also the kind of person who

SP Might Split

UP Keeping Quiet

With spring elections little more than a month distant, both campus political parties seem to be playing a waiting game.

Nobody seems quite ready to start lining up the blocs, cajoling the politicians, wheeling for nominations and otherwise being as obsequious—and obnoxious—as possible.

The Student Party seems content to take advantage of token opposition in pushing through the last few pieces of legislation before the election, while the University Party just seems content—what about, we are not quite sure. It's possible that UP leaders are betting that the party's slate of candidates—which will almost surely be led by GMAB Chairman Inman Allen—can waltz into office over a split SP vote.

This is a situation which, at this time, has about an even chance of developing. At least one and possibly two dormitory factions are considering the possibility of supporting an independent candidate for presidency of the student body. If that happens, the resulting split of the dormitory vote quite likely would put the UP at an advantage.

When party nominations come up shortly, chances are good that one or both of these dormitory blocs will start throwing some weight around to get their candidate nominated.

* * *

If the SP refuses to cooperate with these blocs, they will quite probably sponsor an independent. The UP, on the other hand, has at least its presidential candidate virtually already nominated and has little to worry about other than how to pull away a few dormitory votes for what will probably be an all-fraternity slate.

The UP, apparently, needs to do little more for the moment than keep quiet and not make anyone mad.

The Ends Hang Loose

Why Two Systems?

Student government executives are currently looking into the financial procedures of the summer session. It seems that all funds appropriated during the summer session—which is controlled by the administration—are doled out with the stipulation that unused balances are to revert to the surplus of the regular sessions of the Student Legislature.

* * *

The catch is that none ever revert anywhere. They stay in the budgets of the organizations that receive them during the summer. All this is quite proper in the broad sense, of course, since the money is all used for the benefit of students. The major problem is that it is not always used by the organizations, or in the manner, that the regular session Legislature might like. The regular session, in fact, doesn't know where the funds are, or even if there is any surplus to be returned.

This is but one of the hazards of operating what amounts to two almost entirely separate systems. The summer session officials rarely know what the regular session officials have done, and vice versa.

The summer school newspaper, for instance, somehow manages to leave accounts for the DTH to settle. The DTH, conversely, usually leaves some accounts still open. The result is general confusion for a few weeks—or months—until someone figures out who did what, why, and for what amount of money.

* * *

Often, changes that are effected in some part of student government during the summer go unnoticed by the regular session officials until things are so knotted that it takes weeks to untangle the threads.

Much of this confusion could be neatly eliminated by setting up the systems so that the summer session operates from the same budget as the regular sessions. This, of course, would mean that the summer school activities budget would no longer be handled by the administration, but by the Legislature before it ends its final session in the spring.

* * *

This procedure would keep most of the ends tied together neatly, and bookkeeping would be a simpler matter for everyone. It would also coordinate the summer session with the regular session more closely so that the transition between terms would be smoother. Long-range projects could function through the summer session and be picked up again in the fall.

With things as they are now, the right hand not only doesn't know what the left one is doing, but usually ends up working against it.

Good morning to Bill Gluyas, whoever you are.

Adkinson And Jones Strike Back

Prejudice Is Not Always Bad

Sifting our way through the non-sequiturs and frantic irrationalities of reader Fess Green's reply to our recent article on Anti-Communism, we feel that the Liberals might want to get a better spokesman in their drive to discredit Anti-Communistic activity in America.

Although Mr. Green's article does not address itself to our polemics about the role of the Anti-Communist movement in America today, we might take a deeper lock at some of the shallow statements contained in his article.

One of Mr. Green's contentions is that "the H.U.A.C. has ruined the lives and reputation of countless innocent people." We doubt this. We have yet to hear of a case in which an "innocent" person has suffered pointlessly at the hands of the HUAC. Granted, there is a certain stigma which falls upon those who espouse the Communist cause, just as there is on anyone who promotes an unpopular cause.

Now Liberals would have us believe not only that our society accepts alien philosophies with open arms, but also that prejudice against other philosophies of government is a denial of the rights of individual expression. But a person must be held responsible for his beliefs, especially when he attempts to influence the opinions of others. Although anyone has a right to advocate Communist theories of government, he must suffer the social consequences of his beliefs. And this may include being subjected to public ostracism. But we maintain that this is not inherently bad.

Prejudice is not always a bad thing. Some prejudices are necessary to maintain social order and to stabilize the esential beliefs of a political entity. Unless we can maintain in the United States a climate which is unfavorable to the development and growth of alien philosophies such as communism, we cannot hope to perpetuate the American ideal. Democracy rightly forbids legislation against free determination of thought. But we can and must cultivate an atmosphere conducive to bias TOWARD the fundamental ideals of America's economic and political foundations. This is what we do when we require the study of United States History in our public schools, or pledge allegiance to the flag, or sing our national anthem. Likewise, we must also create a climate which stimulates bias AGAINST philosophies inimical to the American way of life. This is what the anti-Communist movement is seeking to do in America today.

But just how does this apply to the HUAC question. Just as we cannot remove by a judicial decision inherent prejudice against integration which exists in the South, we likewise cannot expect to remove the popular distaste for Communism by destroying those agencies which serve to bring the evils of the Communist movement to light (e.g., the HUAC). Nor, as we have pointed out, would we wish to.

Liberals have yet to come to grips with the reality of this fact: people who speak out against the existing social order must assume the consequences of their heresy.

Entire World Waits For UNC's Decision

The entire civilized world awaits with great anxiety this week to see whether the University of North Carolina student legislature will pass a resolution to ban U. S. nuclear testing. At least, this seems to be what many students who support the resolution think.

But the real question concerning this resolution is not whether it should be passed or not, but whether it should even be considered at all by the student legislature. There are members in both parties of the legislature who feel that the resolution is definitely unconstitutional, and that in no way could their vote be interpreted as representing the student body.

It is hoped that these representatives are not in the minority, for the resolution has a great deal of force behind it. Both President Harriss and Vice President Patterson are backing the resolution and they have been able to persuade a majority of the Student party representatives to go along with them.

In content, the resolution is not what can be called "controversial," but it has vast implications concerning the nature and role of the student legislature. To begin with, the students of this university did not elect members of the legislature to represent them on national and world problems. No member of the current legislature based his campaign or made known his views on national and international issues. So quite naturally (and quite correctly) the student body was led to believe that the legislature dealt only with affairs concerning this campus. Therefore, for the student legislature to vote on a resolution banning nuclear testing, an issue that is far out of the range of their authority, would be in a sense betraying the trust of the student body. This trust at all cost should be cherished and protected by the legislature, for it is the only link (and a very thin link because of student disinterest) that student government has with a democratic form of government.

Campus elections come in the latter part of March. It is at this time and only at this time that the issue on whether the legislature should be allowed to speak out on national and world problems should be decided. At least then the student body will have an opportunity to find out what the various candidates stand for on these issues and then can vote accordingly. This would be democracy. Right now if the legislature passes the nuclear test ban resolution, our student government would reduce itself to an oligarchy.

Corridor Seems Impenetrable

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

At this time of year, when the fog comes rolling in from the North Sea, it seems that more often than not the air corridor linking Frankfurt and Berlin is covered with an impenetrable blanket.

As the air transport lifts from Frankfurt airport's wet, glistening runway, there will be no further sight of the ground until some 45 minutes later when suddenly the wingtips seem almost to brush Berlin apartment houses and moments later it pulls up under the passenger canopy at Tempelhof.

Even with the fog, it is not a particularly hazardous flight so long as men and machines are allowed to function without interference.

Tempelhof is located in the American sector of West Berlin.

Also located there is the Allied air control center which is one of the last vestiges of the old four-power control authority under which the Soviet Union cooperated with the three victorious Western powers in the administration of the whole of Berlin.

The other remnant of cooperation with the Soviets is the administration of Spandau Prison for war criminals.

At the air control center, the concern is air safety rather than control, and generally the exchange of information is a silent one in notes passed back and forth.

The chief Russian is named A. P. Stromov.

In the last two weeks Stromov has been extraordinarily busy as the Russians sought to establish authority over the corridors, the one link not subject to Communist checkpoints.

This was done in a series of notices that in specified periods the Soviet air force would require exclusive use of the corridors for maneuvers.

The notices were summarily rejected, and President Kennedy's personal representative, Gen. Lucius Clay, made himself a conspicuous passenger in one of the air transports defying the Soviet ban.

Allied commanders are agreed that the greatest chance for armed conflict over Berlin lies in the corridors, whether it be by interference from Communist fighter planes or from Communist jamming of the radio beams which guide Allied craft through fog to their destination.

So far, Soviet tactics on the railroads, the highways and the corridors leading to Berlin seem more designed to create annoyance rather than war-making incidents.

As such, they are a continuing test of Allied determination. They may be part of a Khrushchev campaign to force President Kennedy and other Western leaders into agreeing to a new meeting at the summit.

Japanese Parliament Expected To Be Calm

By TONY KASE

TOKYO (UPI) — The current diet parliament session which opened last month, is shaping up as a relatively quiet one for Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda's pro-Western government.

There is no major issue that invites violent opposition from leftist groups in the Diet or on the streets, as in 1960 when the government passed the Japan-U. S. security treaty or early last year when it failed to obtain approval for an anti-political violence bill aimed at banning leftist demonstrations in the Diet area.

The major leftist parliamentary group, the Japan Socialist party, has been searching for an issue to harass the government with or even topple it as they brought down Ikeda's predecessor, Nobusuke Kishi over the Japan-U. S. defense pact two years ago.

The Socialists at the last Diet session opposed the government's 10-year-old negotiations with South Korea to normalize the relations between the two countries.

The leftists pledged to organize a nation-wide movement to block the talks, charging that negotiations were a "plot" to "delay" unification of Korea and a preparation for a "Korea-Japan war alliance."

But when their opposition failed to flare up a national controversy over the talks, the "movement" fizzled.

This year, after a Socialist party mission returned from a visit to Peiping. The Socialists announced that they were switching their target from the Korea-Japan talks to Japan's relations with Red China.

But this move is also not likely to win large-scale sympathy from the public.

Japan's deteriorating foreign currency reserves and the "overheated" economy were two subjects harped on by the opposition as the Diet opened interpellations. But it will be difficult to secure public support for attacks against the government's economic policies since the nation is enjoying an unprecedented prosperity.

Ikeda's position within the ruling party is secure. He is facing re-election as the party president in the summer, but all his rivals have promised to support him. As the party controls an absolute majority in the Diet, its president almost automamtically assumes the premiership.

German's Flop Shows Lack Of Music Interest

To The Editor:

What happened last Saturday afternoon at the Germans concert is proof that there is lack of good music interest among students. No one would deny that Rock-and-Roll is just the thing to twist to, but to sit in an auditorium and listen to it for three hours is a different matter. Most forms of music are well represented on this campus. Classical music listeners throng to the Tuesday Night Series and the recent National Symphony concert, while folk singers have their field day with Josh White, Odetta, and occasional group meetings. But where is the expression of music known as progressive jazz?

Although one of America's important heritages, progressive jazz is not represented on this campus. Some schools which are unable to finance the great names of progressive jazz manage to compensate by having small Saturday afternoon sessions by local artists in a cooperative tavern. But UNC is not a small school. One may only hope that an organized group interested in progressive jazz will materialize on campus in the near future.

Campus Affairs To Meet

The Campus Affairs Committee will hold an open meeting today so that students may make suggestions in any area concerning student government activities, administration, or faculty procedures. Chairman ony Harrington announced yesterday.

"We are doing this to provide an opportunity that has not been available before," Harrington said, they will be abue to complain about things or to suggest topics for investigation, to their student government."

The meeting will be at 4:30 in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial.

Charter Plan To Be Shown

There will be a metting Thursday, February 22, at 7:30 p.m. in Roland Parker Lounges 1 and 2 for those students who wish to participate or learn more about the European Charter being sponsored by Graham Memorial this summer.

The meeting will open with a film by Alitalia on travel in Europe and Howard Henry, Director of Graham Memorial, will be available to answer questions which students might have concerning any aspect of the charter.

The DC-8 jet charter will depart from New York for London, June 5, and will return to New York, August 1. The round trip fare will be $300. To be eligible, participants must be regularly enrolled, full time students at UNC, and enrolled in the first semester of this academic year.

Deadline for making reservations will be March 1. A deposit of $150 will be required on that date. After March 1, when the flight will be definitely confirmed or cancelled (depending on the number of students signing up) deposits will not be refundable. The balance of the payment will be due on or before March 31. Reservations may be made now at Graham Memorial Information Desk.

Kennedy Congratulates Glenn By Phone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy told astronaut John H. Glenn by telephone Tuesday "we are really proud of you" and arranged to fly to Cape Canaveral, Fla., Friday for a public ceremony honoring the Marine's space flight.

The White House also announced that Glenn will visit Kennedy at the executive mansion here next Monday or Tuesday. The astronaut then will be honored by a parade to the Capitol where he will be guest at a congressional reception.

Kennedy also telephoned Mrs. Glenn and the astronaut's two children at their home in nearby Arlington, Va., and offered his congratulations.

After following the historic shot by television since 7:15 a.m., EST Kennedy stepped out on the lawn behind his office when Glenn was plucked from the sea and expressed the nation's "great happiness and thanksgiving."

Legislature Okays Apportionment Bill

although there yet remains the possibility of presidential veto.

Rep. Randall, introducing the bill, explained that reapportionment was necessary due to the shift in population caused by the opening of two new dormitories next fall while the town student's population remains relatively static.

Three Seat Transfer

The bill transfers three seats from men's town districts to dorm districts. These seats will come from Town's Men IV.

One Seat would also be transferred from Town Men's IV to Town Men's II which will be enlarged to include Carrboro.

The amended clause was one giving Dorm Men's I seven legislators. That district would be composed solely of Cobb Dorm until next fall when it would shift to Craig and Earinghaus while Cobb becomes a Dorm Women's district.

Britt Amendment

The controversial amendment introduced by Rep. Robin Britt (SP) will limit Dorm Men's I to its present three legislative seats.

Odetta Here February 27

Odetta is coming to Chapel Hill! She will present a concert in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 27. Her folk music and the reputation of her individual style are widely acclaimed. She will be sponsored by Graham Memorial.

A true artist, Odetta is a perfectionist and her own severest critic. She may work as long as a year on one song. Few other folk singers ever attempt her songs, refusing to challenge her supremacy.

All UNC students will be admitted free with ID cards. Student wives will be admitted for one dollar.

DUPREE'S

Sportscope

The well-known adage that sports records are deceiving has been used so extensively that one wonders why statisticians even bother to keep records of athletic events.

These sports loving mathematicians spend countless hours computing batting averages, game-by-game accomplishments of home run kings, pass completion percentages, rushing averages, scoring feats of All-American basketballers, and numerous other facts for the fans.

But then some killjoy enters the picture and informs the sports world that Roger Maris couldn't have hit 30 home runs in Babe Ruth's day and that the Bambino would have slammed at least 75 out of the park if he had played in the lively ball era.

This fellow will also tell you that the 6-10 or 7-foot basketball player who roams the hardwoods today, tossing old records over his shoulder every time he scores a point, is a sports freak — an athlete that doesn't compare with the court stars of twenty years ago.

Complaining bitterly he will sneer at John Uelses pole vaulting feats with the fiberglass pole. The glass pole, according to our friend, is solely responsible for Cpl. Uelses 16-foot leap.

Still on the track and field scene, it might take this new record hater a while to dream up plausible excuses for other performances such as Gary Gubner's new world mark for the shot put, Jim Beatty's record for the indoor mile, and Peter Snell's record time for the outdoor mile.

Bigger and better athletes, keener competition, better equipment, and the desire to set new records have all altered the face of sports and paved the way for new marks to be entered into the record books.

Not only are records made to be broken, they are broken to be recognized for what they are—the best performances. It's time some of the doubting Thomases of the sports world give the new record holders a break and join the rest of us in 1962.

UNC Athletes Set Records

On the UNC scene records are in danger in every sport. Despite the so so won-loss record, the basketball team will alter the books slightly. Dean Smith's shuffle offense has laid the carpet for a nifty .473 shooting percentage for the Tar Heels. The best previous field goal percentage for UNC was last season when All-Americans Doug Moe and York Larese led the team to a 19-4 record and a .444 mark. Only a complete letdown in Carolina's remaining games would keep this season's team from chalking up a new accuracy standard.

Jim Hudock made his presence felt in 1961 by canning exactly half of his shots from the floor for a new individual accuracy mark, but Donnie Walsh is threatening that mark. While Hudock is hitting .474 of his shots, his smaller team mate holds a lofty .556. Walsh has made good on 75 of 135 shots and is well on the way to a bettering of Hudock's .500.

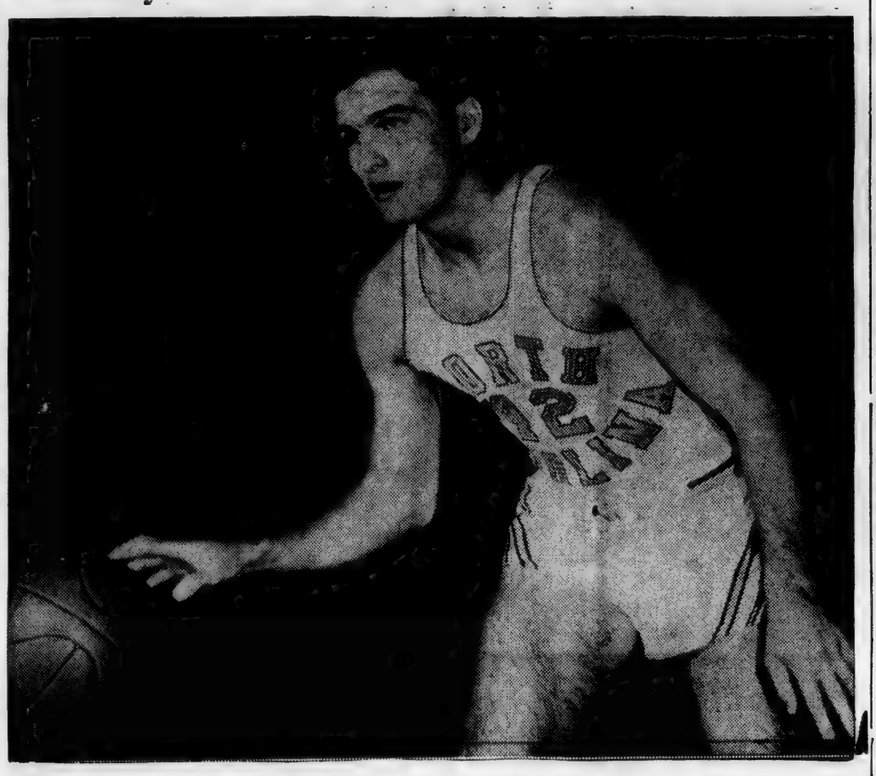
With only seven games under his belt Charlie Shaffer should finish the season with an even loftier percentage. After sitting out the first semester Shaffer has hit 22 of 35 attempts for a sizzling .629 shooting exhibition. His 9.3 average for seven outings and three starting roles is now the fourth best on the team.

Meanwhile on the mats, Pete Gilchrist and Dick Blackman are waging a tight race for UNC scoring records. Gilchrist, who wrestles in the 130-division, ran his total to 31 against Duke last week, and Blackman, a 147-pounder, pinned his Blue Devil foe to give him 30 points. The Tar Heel duo has matches against Maryland and Virginia Tech remaining on the schedule. If either Gilchrist or Blackman registers two pins, the record will be pushed to at least 40. The old record was 30, set by Perrin Henderson in 1959.

It hasn't been a dry run for the swimmers, either. Thompson Mann has lived up to all expectations as the sophomore star of Pat Earey's Blue Dolphins. Mann's most recent accomplishment was a 2:01.2 timing in the 200-yard backstroke, a new ACC record. Thompson is one of the individual favorites in the ACC championships which begin Thursday.

Freshman star Harrison Merrill opened up and cracked three National Collegiate freshman records Monday. He set new national frosh records in the 220 freestyle and 440 freestyle, bettering the records set by the Australian swimmer Murray Rose, and also knocked a minute off the old mark in the 1500-meter freestyle. Merrill and Mann should give Earey one of the top swimming duos in the nation next season.

Daily Tar Heel Athlete Of The Week



CHARLIE SHAFFER

By ED DUPREE

Shades of Lee Shaffer!

The name was the same and the scoring was in true Lee Shaffer fashion, but last week it was Charlie Shaffer who kept the statisticians busy, just as All-American Lee did during the 1959-60 season.

A 6-3, 190-pound sophomore—no relation to Lee who now plays for Syracuse in the NBA—Charlie was the man of the hour in Carolina's 69-59 win over Clemson at Charlotte Friday night. After scoring only 15 points in four games, the Tar Heel husky erupted for 25 markers and singlehandedly accounted for Carolina's 23rd consecutive basketball victory over Clemson.

Tiger taming Charlie missed only two of 12 shots from the floor in his first starting assignment for Coach Dean Smith and proved it was no fluke performance Saturday against South Carolina when he hit every shot he tried.

UNC fell to South Carolina, 97-82, but Shaffer poured in 13 points, hitting four for four from the floor and all five of his foul shot tries.

For this sparkling Mecklenburg County performance the Chapel Hill native has been selected as the second Daily Tar Heel Athlete of the Week.

His two game totals show 38 points, 16 rebounds, and a cloud-reaching .875 field goal percentage. For the season Shaffer has hit on 18 of 27 field goal tries for a .667 mark and is 17 for 23 on the foul line for .739.

Shaffer came to Carolina in 1960 after a phenomenal prep school career at Woodberry Forest in Virginia. A Morehead Scholar and the son of the Consolidated University's Director of Development, he had starred in no less than three sports — football, basketball, and tennis.

But the opening minutes of a freshman football game with Clemson took its toll on the Tar Baby quarterback—Shaffer. He injured his knee severely and after five days in traction, had a knee operation on October 12. Charlie spent eight weeks in the hospital off-and-on and was destined to forget sports for the remainder of his frosh year.

He finessed football and turned out for varsity basketball practice in November of 1961. With a heavily-bandaged knee, he scrimmaged with the team, but was held out by Smith until this semester.

The knee is still heavily-bandaged, a la Jerry Lucas, but it shouldn't hamper Charlie's basketball talent. He could have the best shooting eye in Carolina history. Marshal Dillon never had it so good.

UNC Takes Part In Bridge Tournament

The University of North Carolina will be one of the more than 200 colleges, universities, and junior colleges throughout the country which will participate in the 1962 National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament, sponsored by the Association of College Unions.

Raymond A. Wiesen will serve as tournament director for UNC for the competition, which will be held Sunday, February 25 on the UNC campus. All play will be by mail and will be conducted in a single session.

Traveling trophies and plaques will be given the college participants winning the national titles. There will be one cup for the college of the team scoring highest on the East-West hands and one cup for the college of the North-South hand winners. Campus winners will be given a certificate.

William Root, contract bridge authority, will judge the hands and, along with Charles Goren, the noted bridge expert, will determine campus, regional, and national honors.

Teams representing Harvard University and Stanford University won the national championship titles last year. More than 100 other students won regional and campus honors.

Freshmen To Hold Dance And Contest

Carolina students will get a chance to "twist it out" Friday night in the twist contest that will highlight the Freshman Dance at the Naval Armory.

The dance is the first in a series to be sponsored by the freshman class in collaboration with Woman's College.

The best twister, best couple, wildest twister, and most original twister will be named at the dance.

The dance is open to all students at 8 p.m. and after the game.

Harrison Merrill Breaks Three NCAA Swim Marks

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

UNC freshman freestyler Harrison Merrill established three new NCAA freshman records Monday night in the eighth annual freshman invitational swimming meet held in Bowman Gray Memorial Pool.

Merrill, a product of Atlanta, Ga. and brother of Carolina's varsity freestyler Arthur Merrill, set his marks in the 1500 meter, 220 yard and 440-yard freestyle events. His time of 18:20.1 in the 1500 cracked the 1951 national record of 19:22.3 held by the University of Washington's Herb Portelance.

Merrill's 220 and 440 clockings erased the old standards set in 1958 by Australia's gift to the University of Southern California — Murray Rose. Rose's freshman marks went tumbling as Merrill thrashed through the water in 2:04.3 in the 220 and 4:31 in the 440.

The meet, in which no team scores are kept, is held every year here under the auspices of UNC and this year involved VPI, Appalachian State, East Carolina College, and William and Mary, in addition to all ACC schools.

The summary:

1500-Freestyle: 1. Merrill (UNC) 2. Romeo (Md.) 3. Madley (VPI). 18:29.1 (New Meet and NCAA Freshman Record).

50-Yard Freestyle: 1. Good (W&M) 2. Woodrow (UNC) 3. Marten (Duke) 22.9.

200-Yard Breastroke: 1. Gray (VPI) 2. Thompson (Md.) 3. Behr (ECC) 2:35.6.

200-Yard Backstroke: 1. Poalitte (NCS) 2. Redding (UNC) 3. Smiley (UNC) 2:12.9.

220-Yard Freestyle: 1. Merrill (UNC) 2. Geary (Md.) 3. Madley (VPI) 2:04.3 (New Meet and NCAA Freshman Record).

Diving: 1. Oare (UNC) 2. Hibbard (Md.) 3. Schreck (Va.) 170.2 points.

440-Yard Freestyle: 1. Merrill (UNC) 2. Rebillard (Md.) 3. Romeo (Md.) 4:31 (New Meet and NCAA Freshman Record).

200-Yard Individual Medley: 1. Dunphey (Md.) 2. Poalitte (NCS) 3. Ingles (Duke) 2:15.6 (New Meet Record).

Brown Regains UNC Scoring Lead

By ED DUPREE

North Carolina's 51 per cent field goal shooting performance against Maryland Monday kept Coach Dean Smith's team at the top of the ACC in that department—the Heels are now shooting .473 for the season.

Charlie Shaffer in seven games, and Donnie Walsh in 15 contests are leading the team in shooting. Shaffer has a .629 percentage on 22 of 35 attempts and Walsh has a .556 mark on 75 of 135. Other field goal means for Carolina are Jim Hudock, .474 (91-192); Bryan McSweeney, .467 (42-90); Jim Donohue, .459 (28-61); Larry Brown, .444 (76-171); and Mike Cooke, .385 (37-96). Dieter Krause, who is scholastically ineligible this semester, finished the season with a .571 mark on 16 of 28.

Brown Has High Average

Brown's 52 points in the last two contests made him the top scorer on the team, edging past Hudock. His average is now 16.3 after two straight 26-point efforts. Hudock dropped to second with 15.8. Walsh's average is 13.4 and Shaffer is closing in on the double figure mark with a 9.3 average. Other averages are McSweeney's 8.3, on the foul stripe with .750 and McSweeney is third at .678. Shaffer has missed only seven of 28 charity heaves, McSweeney is 40-59. Hudock, .640, Cooke, .630, Walsh, .607, and Donohue .600 round out the foul shooting. Cooke's 6.1, Donohue's 5.4, and Krause's 4.1.

In the foul shooting category, Brown also holds the lead with a lofty .793 mark. The Long Beach, N. Y., guard has hit 92 of 116 foul tries. Shaffer follows Brown

Hudock is a one man show in the rebounding department. The 6-8 forward-center from Tuckhannock, Pa., has pulled down 157 in 15 games for a 10.5 rebound mark. Only McSweeney, at 82, is near the century mark. Shaffer has hauled down 34 in seven games with most of them coming in his three starting roles.

NCAA Tourney Adds Seattle, NYU, Butler, And Air Force

NEW YORK (UPI)—The NCAA rapidly puts its major conference basketball tournament in order Tuesday, adding NYU, Seattle, the Air Force Academy, and Butler to the field and announcing the first-round pairings.

The National Invitational Tournament, on the other hand, made no announcements during the day but it was learned St. John's was to be added to that field very shortly.

All four teams picked by the NCAA Tuesday received "member at large" bids. They join four teams already selected the same way and three teams which have qualified by winning conference titles to make a total of 11 teams already set for the 25-team competition.

St. John's (15-4) will be the fifth team picked for the 12-team NIT, which will be held at Madison Square Garden, March 15-24. The Long Island Redmen are the only school to have won the NIT two straight years, in 1943 and '44.

Bernie Shively, athletic director of the University of Kentucky and chairman of the NCAA's tournament committee, announced the following first round pairings:

East regionals, at the Palestra, Philadelphia, March 12: Atlantic Coast Conference champions vs. member-at-large probably Ivy League; NYU, 13-3, vs. Yankee Conference champions, Villanova 16-6 vs. Southern Conference champion.

Winners qualify for regional at College Park, Md., March 16-17, where the ACC-Ivy winner meets the Middle Atlantic Conference champion and other Philadelphia winners meet each other.

Thus only two member-at-large berths remain empty—the one against Creighton and the other at Philadelphia. That one eastern spot always is offered to the Ivy League champion. The Ivy winner is not committed by rule to accept, as are champions of several other conferences, but almost always does.

Skindivers Hold Meeting Tonight

Want to be an Aquaholic? UNC's skindiving club, better known as the Aquaholics, will hold its weekly meeting tonight. Boys are asked to meet in the Woollen Gym locker room at 7:30, while all interested coeds should be at poolside at 7:45.

Jerry Pilarski is advisor and instructor. The club plans a full semester of activities, including several trips to the coast and local quarries. Instruction will be given in the basic use of free and scuba diving equipment

Dominicans Call For Deportation Of Left Leaders

Government Decrees State Of Emergency

SANTO DOMINGO, D.R. (UPI) — The government decreed a state of emergency Wednesday and rounded up political agitators charged with trying to block general elections.

At least five leftist leaders were arrested and police were seeking others. The government authorized deportation of politically undesirable elements.

The decree was issued by the Council of State, of which Rafael L. Bonnelly is president. The council, comprising civilian and military members, is a provisional regime pending general election.

A state of emergency is equivalent to modified martial law. The government called on security forces to enforce strictly "existing statutes . . . . to maintain public order."

The decree charged members of the former Trujillo dynasty, using treasury funds smuggled from the country, "have joined efforts with international communism to create a climate propitious to the abuse of democracy and the unleashing of a wave of terrorism."

It said agitators "of the extreme left or the extreme right" have been attempting to impede action on nationl economic and political problems, as well as block progress toward scheduled December elections.

The decree, which came as a surprise, was the first outward sign of internal political upheaval since January when a short-lived palace coup d'etat was defeated and civilian government installed.

It coincided with a roundup of known leftist agitators and the arrest, on undisclosed charges, of an air force general, Jose M. Alcantara. Because of the announcement that he was being held for civil trial, it was presumed his alleged crime was one directed against the stability of the government.

Allies May Not Support Embargo

PARIS (UPI) — Authoritative sources Wednesday said the United States will find little support among NATO allies for any complete trade embargo against Cuba.

Walter Rostown, U. S. State Department planning chief, was reported to have urged the Western Alliance Tuesday to restrict trade with the government of Premier Fidel Castro. The United States ended commercial dealings with Castro after Cuba was ousted from the Organization of American State (OAS) last month.

French Government Okays Agreement

PARIS (UPI) — The government of President Charles de Gaulle Wednesday approved a draft cease-fire agreenment with draft cease-fire agreement with more than seven years of warfare in Algeria by March 5 at the latest.

An official communique issued after a cabinet meeting said the government approved the terms reached in recently concluded cease-fire negotiations held secretly with Algerian rebel leaders. It said this included:

—Terms for a cease-fire in the key north African territory.

—Conditions for a self-determination vote that could lead to independence for Algeria.

The agreement still must be approved by the rebel National Council of the Algerian Revolution CNRA, which is the parliament and supreme authority of the Algerian nationalist movement. The rebel council will meet in the Libyan capital of Tripoli Thursday to study the agreement.

If the rebel council also approves the accord, French officials hoped a cease-fire would be signed and proclaimed by March 1.

Di-Phi Kills Male Superiority Claim

By BILL DOWELL

The resolution that women are inherently inferior to men was defeated by a four to three vote at the Di-Phi debate Tuesday night.

A vote taken including both members and visitors defeated the resolution again, this time by 18 to 12.

The debating was mostly on the pro-masculine side. None of the three women present spoke.

After speeches by Curtis Gans, who introduced the resolution, and several others, who stressed the complete dearth of achievements by women in the history of the world, Norwood Pratt assumed the offensive.

Pratt said that the question was impossible to answer. Superiority is a matter of independence and both men and women are dependent. Because women could carry on the race without men, he argued, they are superior. He then attempted to refute all of Gans' and the previous speakers' arguments.

The fact that no women have been great military leaders or mountain climbers, he continued, "does not make them inferior to men, but tends to make them superior. Why do men climb mountains? To get money! Yet women control over half the wealth in the United States. The fact that a woman does not go out to kill herself in a war or that she does not make a fool of herself by becoming a bullfighter does not make her inferior."

Pratt then suggested that perhaps there was a conspiracy underfoot. "Not that I want to suggest there are any Communists here, but just that there might be something fishy going on." He went on to say that there might be a plot by "those who have no need of women, or who are opposed to women."

He stressed the fact that if the Di-Phi passed the resolution it would find itself unable to get dates in the following year. Pratt quoted the passage from the Bible which says that if any member become offensive to one's body, it should be removed. "Mr. Gans is such a member," he said.

Debating ended with a vote, which rejected the resolution.

Besides the quasi-comic discussion of masculine superiority the society discussed future topics ranging from disarmament, to the existence of God, to the future of the University.

The society meets every Tuesday night at 7:30 on the third floor of New West. To join a new member has to fill out an application blank and deliver one speech before the society. Anyone may visit meetings.

Campus Briefs

Both graduate and undergraduate students are invited to participate in the national Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament which will be held in Roland Parker Lounges 2 and 3 at Graham Memorial Sunday, February 25, at 2:00 p.m. Partnership reservations must be made in advance by signing up at the GM Information Desk or calling Ray Wiesen at 968-6163.

Graduation invitations will be on sale for the last time Thursday and Friday from 9-12 a.m. in Y-Court.

There will be an urgent Junior Class Cabinet meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the TV room at GM. Anyone unable to attend is asked to contact one of the class officers.

The Pan4Hellenic Book Drive will last through Friday of this week. Books should be taken to Y-Court.

Interviews for senior class committees will be held in the student government offices in GM from 3:30-6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Alpha Epsilon Delta will hold the first of three formal rush meetings in Room 324 of the UNC School of Medicine on Thursday, February 22, at 8 p.m. The speaker, Dr. James Woods, will show slides and lecture on medical practices in Brazil. All premedical and predental students are cordially invited to attend.

UP Chairman Bill Criswell announced that anyone interested in joining the University Party may do so between the hours of 2 and 6 p.m., Saturday, February 24, and Sunday, February 25, at the UP headquarters in the Yack office, GM. The UP will hold a convention Monday at 7 in Memorial Hall.

The bridge lessons offered by GM are FREE, not $2.00.

A bus driver will be needed for Saturday, 5:45 to one a.m. There will be pay. Call 968-9055 and ask for Owen Bishop or Ralph Mosely.

The UNC Collegiate 4-H Club will meet today at 7 p.m. in room 211, Graham Memorial.

The UNC Concert Band recently elected officers for the Spring Semester. The officers are: Bob Greeson, pres.; Ed. Nicholson, vice-pres.; Jack Whisnant, sec-tres.; and Andy Beale, publicity director.

All items that are to appear in Campus Briefs must be presented at the DTH office by 5 p.m. on the day previous to publication.

The State Student Legislature will not meet today. Committees must have bills completed by Saturday and turned to Dwight Wheless.

Glenn Is Found In Fine Physical Shape By Medics

No 'Space Sickness' Results From Orbit

GRAND TURK ISLAND, Bahamas (UPI) — His doctors said Wednesday that Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., suffered none of the ill effects of space flight which afflicted Soviet Cosmonaut Gherman Titov.

"John is in excellent condition," Lt. Col. John A. Shorty Powers, the astronaut's spokesman, reported after a conference with Glenn's physicians. "A preliminary physical did not reveal any sign of physiological change."

Glenn soared around the earth three times Tuesday in 4 hours and 56 minutes to become the free world's first man in orbit. After his recovery at sea he was brought here to a special astronaut's hospital built-for-one to undergo rigorous "medical debriefing."

Unlike Titiv, who flew around the world 17 times in 25 hours and 18 minutes last August 6-7, Glenn suffered none of the discomforts which have given the language a new word—"space-sickness."

After 48 hours here, Glenn will return to Cape Canaveral, the starting point of his epochal triple circumnavigation of the earth in space, to receive the first of many tributes to his heroism.

In Washington, President Kennedy did the nicest thing anybody could—he arranged to bring Glenn's wife and children, his father and mother, and Mrs. Glenn's parents to Florida to greet their now famous relative.

Kennedy and the astronaut's kin will fly Thursday to Palm Beach, Fla. There the family will change to another White House plane and fly to the cape.

Kennedy To Meet Him

The President will join them on Friday to greet America's first spaceman and present him the Distinguished Service medal of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA. On Monday Glenn will fly to Palm Beach and from there fly back with the President to Washington to receive the plaudits of the capital.

Before putting him through his preliminary post-flight examinations, an ordeal at least comparable to any he underwent during Tuesday's mission, the doctors let Glenn have 7½ hours of sleep.

The 40-year-old Marine, his freckled face crinkled with laughter, had told them Tuesday night that "I feel fine, just wonderful. I couldn't feel better."

But the scientists weren't taking his word for it. Dr. Ashton Graybiel, a Navy captain from the Pensacola, Fla., Naval Base, made the sandy-haired astronaut "walk the rails." This is an ingenious way of testing a person's balance.

You walk along rails which narrow from two inches at the start to three-fourths of an inch at the end. Then you stand on a rail, one foot in front of the other, with eyes alternately open and shut.

After the rite of the rails, Graybiel poured warm water into the astronaut's inner ear. This is the site of a delicate balance mechanism which apparently was upset in the case of Titov.

Baker, Odom Collide On NC Parties

Earl Baker, president of the UNC-YRC, yesterday accused North Carolina Democrats of ". . . purposely restricting government by the people of our state."

T. L. Odum, UNC-YDC president, replied to Baker's statement, "It's high time that the Republican Party justified its existence in North Carolina, when the Democratic Party has provided such good government for decades."

Baker noted that Democrats and Republicans would meet in a debate on the topic, "RESOLVED, that the one party system in North Carolina has been detrimental to the best interests of the citizens and the state." This debate will take place on the night of Wednesday, February 28th, in the law school courtroom, 210 Manning Hall, at 7:30.

Probable debaters will be: For the YRC, Earl Baker and Mack Armstrong, and for the YDC, Johnny Killian and Joe Roberts. All have served on the UNC debating team. All interested students are invited.

Kennedy, Khrushchev Exchange Space Offers

Notice Seniors

Invitations to graduation will be on sale for the final time Thursday and Friday from 9-12 a.m. in Y-Court, the Order of the Grail has announced. The order reminds all seniors that the sale will be the last opportunity to order invitations.

Full payment will be due when orders are placed.

Seniors in the schools of medicine, pharmacy, and law will have invitations available at a later date.

Seniors who are practice-teaching have been requested to have someone place their order.

White House Sends Wishes To UNC Band

The White House has sent "best wishes" for the success of the Navy Band Concert here on March 6. In a letter of reply to the fraternity sponsoring the concert, Special Assistant Ralph Dungan told of the President's interest in "the cultural and creative activity in our nation" and his appreciation concerning the work Phi Mu Alpha is doing for the James Michael Barham Scholarship Fund."

The letter was a reply to Ken Mayhew, secretary of the music fraternity, which is sponsoring the Navy Band on campus. Proceeds of the concert will go towards a music scholarship honoring James Michael Barham, the vice-president of the fraternity who died this past October.

The Band will give two performances. The afternoon concert will be aimed mainly towards local high schools and grade schools. The Morehead Planetarium will give special shows in conjunction with this event.

For the evening concert, UNC student tickets are $1.00 and general admission is $1.50. Tickets can be obtained at the door or in Hill Hall, at Danziger's, and Kemp's.

Nikita Makes US Offer Of Joint Work

MOSCOW (UPI) — Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Wednesday suggested to President Kennedy that the Soviet Union and the United States join in the exploration of space for the benefit of all mankind.

Khrushchev's suggestion was made in a cable extending "hearty congratulations and best wishes" to America's first cosmonaught, Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., on his three-orbit flight Tuesday. Russia's two cosmonauts, Majs. Yuri Gagarin and Gherman Titov, also wired their congratulations to the U. S. Marine officer.

Informed Western observers here said the Khrushchev message on future joint space ventures appeared to be "strictly a propaganda gesture." They said there was no indication that it was a specific proposal.

Officials in Washington said Kennedy could be expected to welcome the suggestion. Both Kennedy and former President Eisenhower have made similiar suggestions without evoking any response from the Russians in the past.

While expressing gratification at the Khrushchev proposal, the officials warned of the difficulties that could arise when it came to specific implementation.

The United States and Russia cooperated on scientific studies during the 1957-58 international geophysical year and some cooperation is still continuing in research in the Antarctic. But despite the overtures in the space field, first advanced by the United States, the Russians did nothing.

U. S. space officials, in addition, have repeatedly accused the Soviets of witholding information on the flights by Gagarin and Titov in spite of earlier promises not to do so.

Campus NSA To Use National Unit Aid

By CHUCK MOONEY

"We are planning a program to help the individual Carolina student," said Bill Straughn, coordinator of the NSA campus committee yesterday.

"We can use the NSA national facilities and get more done than if we only work from Carolina."

Straughn and Student Body President Bill Harriss met to discuss NSA campus plans. Here are some of their ideas:

European Tours

"NSA issues student identification cards which will save up to 30 percent on a trip to Europe," Straughn said. "They will admit students to foreign restaurants, trains, museums, student hotels and places like that at discount rates.

"We'll be able to order them from the national office. We can probably get them in time for this summer," he said. Students who are interested should contact Straughn, 326 Teague.

"NSA will help us make arrangements for tours—chartering planes, setting up routes, making reservations and getting information. They sponsor several European and Mid-Eastern tours that UNC students may join. I'm expecting information now on spring vacation trips to Bermuda.

Foreign Summer Jobs

"NSA has a program which places students in overseas jobs for a summer," Straughn continued.

"Colleges submit a list of students who want to go with their job qualifications. They also line up jobs in their area for foreign students. "Then at an international conference NSA delegates meet foreign student delegates and match jobs with students.

"The students go and work for a summer, living on the local economy," Straughn said. "It's certainly worthwhile and some have even made a profit on the deal.

"It's too late to get UNC in this year, but we're working on 1963.

Delegate Elections

"We don't have anything definite on that yet," said Bill Harriss. "We've thought about electing them either from the campus-at-large or by parties this spring.

"There will probably be a list of candidates from several organizations at the polls. We'll elect four national delegates from Carolina."

In the past the student body president has appointed the national NSA delegates.

Campus Projects

"We are trying to bring the 1963 national congress to Carolina," said Straughn. "It'll be at Ohio State this summer and Mayor Wagner wants it in New York for the World's Fair in 1964.

"We're planning a regional seminar on Civil Rights. Members of student governments from all the North Carolina schools have been invited," he continued.

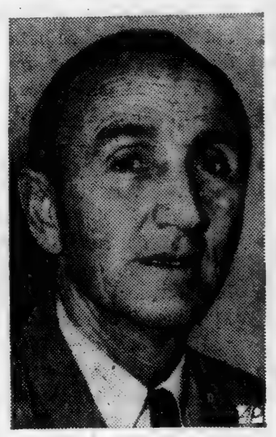
"We've drafted an atomic test resolution to send to Washington," Harriss said.

The resolution supports the U. S. attempt to achieve a test ban and expresses hope that U. S. testing will not resume unless it becomes necessary for national security. It condemns the unilateral USSR tests of last year, said Harriss.

"Our committee will survey pressure groups and their effects on American colleges." Straughn said. "We're doing it for Neal Johnston on the NSA national Academic Freedom desk.

"We'll also study the Umstead Act."

Carolina sent a delegation to the founding convention of NSA in Chicago in 1947 and became a charter member. It has been active in NSA since that time.



MIKE MANSFIELD

House Kills Bill For Department Of Urban Affairs

Mansfield Loses Bid To Halt Vote

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Kennedy's proposed Department of Urban Affairs was killed by the House Wednesday but administration forces hoped to salvage some political advantage from the defeat.

The vote against the plan was 264 to 150.

The action vetoed Kennedy's plan to set up the new cabinet-level department and name housing Administrator Robert C. Weaver, a Negro, as secretary.

The defeat climaxed days of complicated parliamentary maneuvering in which administration forces were beaten in an attempt to force a Senate vote before the expected House rejection.

Administration backers wanted to force all Senate and House Republicans to go on record on the issue, which could be a potential political factor in urban and Negro areas where the GOP is trying to increase its strength.

Republicans discounted the political aspects of the fight. Some GOP members took the position that whatever vote-getting power the issue might have had originally now has evaporated.

Some of the new department's backers voiced mild complaints about the way their leaders handled the issue.

The private complaints were directed partly at Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who suffered a 58 to 42 beating Tuesday in his effort to force a Senate vote before the House showdown.

JFK Notifies USSR Of Plan To Cooperate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy said Wednesday he has notified Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that the United States stands ready to cooperate with Russia "to assure that space is peaceful and can be used for the benefit of everyone."

Kennedy told a news conference that was his reply to a cable from Khrushchev proposing that the two powers pool their resources to explore space.

The President made clear, however, that it will take deeds as well as words to convince him that Russia means business about peaceful cooperation in space exploration. When reporters asked about the possibility of a joint U. S.-Soviet mission to the moon, Kennedy said:

"All we have so far is an indication of interest and we know from long experience that it is more difficult to transform these general expressions into specific agreements.

"We are spending billions of dollars in space and if it is possible to assure that space is peaceful and that it can be used for the benefit of everyone, then the United States must respond to any opportunity we have to insure that it is peaceful," Kennedy said. "But I cannot give you an answer until we see whether the rain follows the warm wind in this case."

Praises Space Flight

The President called Tuesday's dramatic space journey by U. S. astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. a "magnificent achievement." He said it was increasingly clear that the flight of the capsule carrying an American into orbit for the first time would affect life on this planet for many years to come.

"It has been said that peace has her victories as well as war, and I think all of us can take pride and satisfaction in this victory of technology and the human spirit," the President said.

As for Khrushchev's "let's cooperate" proposal, Kennedy pointed out that he has been issuing similar invitations to Russia since he took office last year.

He said the United States has long taken the position that "when men reach beyond this planet" they should leave their national differences behind them."

Therefore, he said, this country is ready to discuss the matter of space cooperation with Russia. "bilaterally, in the United Nations or in any other form."

Kennedy was asked whether, in any cooperative space program, the United States would expect to have observers at Soviet launchings, as Russia had observers at Cape Canaveral, Fla., Tuesday to see Glenn lift off in the Friendship 7.

Drop-Outs

Plans are already well underway for next year's orientation program—a program which will carry much of the weight, in the short space of one to two weeks, or preparing entering freshmen for the grueling first year of college.

As always, the program will be helpful. It will provide a few entering students with information that will help them avoid becoming another drop-out statistic. Next year's program, as part of a campus-wide emphasis on the academic side of Carolina life, will be aimed at explaining how to keep pace in the classroom.

After this rather intensive orientation program, the new student is left to fend for himself. Inadequately prepared, often poorly motivated and disinterested, the new student will find himself pretty much alone with his problems. Many will drop out.

And most of them will drop out, according to most studies, not because of academic difficulty, but because of "lack of interest in colge," "lack of interest in studies," "emotional problems," "financial difficulties," and so forth.

Over-participation in extra-curricular activities will also take its toll, although most experts contend statistics do not show this to be a major problem.

Ironically, drop-out rates for students regarded as having high academic potential compare with that of those regarded as having less potential.

These facts would seem to indicate that academic inability takes a back seat to psychological, sociological and economic considerations in determining drop-out. Unfortunately, no one has been able to predict exactly what factors clearly indicate which students will fail and which will succeed.

This means that most problems which cause drop-out cannot be detected before the student enters. Then, at least at Carolina, it's too late to do anything about them. The average "student with a problem" either learns to live with it by himself, or drops out of school.

His "advisor"—probably the most flagrant misnomer at Carolina—will certainly give him no more aid than would a cursory examination of the class catalogue. Other trained personnel who might be able to assist are either too busy or in too short supply to be of much help.

Why? Simply because not enough attention is given to problems that fall outside the strict area of academics. Individual attention to personal problems is virtually impossible here, and is becoming increasing more so as enrollment rises.

The emphasis on academics that the University has is good. It's an emphasis that perhaps has been too long lacking in the orientation programs. But without some sort of increased attention to problems other than those of the classroom, the emphasis will be wasted.

No student, no matter how well-oriented in academics can achieve very much if other problems force him out of school.

Urban Affairs

Rep. George Meader, R-Mich., who led the House opposition which defeated the administration's proposal to establish a Cabinet-level Department of Urban Affairs yesterday said the need for such a department has not been established.

This argument, added to Conservative opposition to federal "intervention into local affairs," defeated the proposal by a 264 to 150 vote. Southern opposition to the appointment of Negro Robert C. Weaver perhaps also played a part—although possibly a lesser one than Negro voters will be led to believe.

Apparently discounted in the fight is the fact that 7 out of ten Americans now live in urban areas, many of which are struggling unsuccessfully against choked streets, festering slums and overcrowded housing and schools.

Already the success of federal improvements in slum clearance has been demonstrated through Urban Renewal projects and government housing. Federal assistance in city planning projects has proven valuable in avoiding paralysis of city streets and placing schools strategically; in helping to draw zoning lines and in providing data.

At the same time, local and state governments have been unable to meet the problems of bursting cities. Local legislation to meet these problems has been stifled by powerful real estate lobbies which capitalize on slum rentals in overpopulated rural areas. City management on the local level has been unable to keep up with the multiplicity of problems that accompany the lightning-like growth of some medium-size cities which blossom almost overnight into metropolises.

Bringing the federal projects already in exisitence under one department would unite and intensify their efforts.

No need for it?

The need is there. The bugaboo that defeated the Urban Affairs bill was not a lack of need for the department. It was a belief that the problems are local ones.

In the strict sense, perhaps this is true. But when urban problems have reached such huge proportions that individual city governments, with some state assistance, are unable to cope with them, a unified approach seems necessary.

"I Think You're In The Wrong Broadcast Booth, Ma'am"

All-Campus Blast

The feasibility for a Carolina all campus weekend, similiar to Joe College and Shoe and Slipper at Duke, has sporadically been discussed by campus leaders and other students, but no concerted effort toward this end has ever been made. Even the campus politicians have been know to occasionly toy with the idea, although evidently the obstacles have always deterred any action.

The exclusive character of the Germans Club prevents more widespread participation, and even recent Germans concerts have been adjudged failures because of poor selection of entertainers. The drop in popularity of the German dance, of course, resulted in its demise. The most recent attempt at all campus entertainment culminated in the Four Aces fiasco with the loss of a few thousand dollars, mainly because the group selected did not represent what the campus wanted.

The all campus weekends at Duke, Joe College in the fall and Shoe and Slipper in the spring, are enthusiastically participated in by a large segment of the campus population. They typically consist of a large dance with a name band on Friday night, an da concert on Saturday afternoon with popular entertainment. Recently the dance music was provided by Count Basie and Lionel Hampton, and the entertainment at the concert by the Brothers Four. Following the concert, the fraternities and other campus spots, such as Rendezvous and Ram Room, would be open for dancing.

When I served on the finance committee of the student legislature, money was appropriated for acoustical equipment to make the gym suitable for programs such as this, but this equipment was never bought. Although the gym is not the ideal place, until a student union, perhaps, provides a better location, the gym would probably be the best building on the campus. In the spring, the concert could be held outdoors.

These are a few suggestions which I think could be used as the basis for a successful all-campus weekend, which would not only provide a big weekend for all Carolina students, but would serve to bring the whole campus together in having a good time.

Bookseller Discusses Plan

Textbook Co-op? Not Much Chance

To the Editor:

May I use a little of your space to reply to Jim Clotfelter's columns about the need for a text-book co-operative?

First of all, I'd like to say that we understand very well that the student is in an uncomfortable spot in regard to text purchases. What I doubt is that Mr. Clotfelter understands that we at the Intimate are in an equally bad spot, and that, surprising though it may be to him, the management of what he refers to as a monopoly is also on the hot-seat in so far as text business is concerned.

Let me explain why. If Jim should come into my bookshop and ask for a book on Chess, I could show him three or four books, one of which might sell for $4.00, another for $2.50 and yet another for $1.00. I could tell him "to the best of my knowledge the $1.00 book is just as good as the $4.00 book". He could then choose whichever book was best for him—and he would be profiting by competition at the only level that is really meaningful—that is that of the producer. On the other hand, if he came in and asked for a copy of the text for English 934, I would have no choice in what I offered him, and he would have no choice in what he bought. Although his money would be used to pay for the book, in actual fact the purchase of the book would be made by a member of the faculty. The text publishers, who have never been known to leave a penny lying on the floor for a measurable length of time, know this very well, and act accordingly. It might be interesting if Jim, and any other students who are interested would make a guess as to just how much profit there is in a ten dollar text book. Make your guess before you read the next paragraph.

In the ten dollar text, there is approximately $1.80 profit, (the cost is $8.00 plus shipping charges from wherever the text might happen to be printed). What is more, this "profit" is a gross profit, not a net profit. Out of the $1.80 must come the wages of a man who spends about a month trying to find the text lists from the various departments, the wages of the chaps who unpack and distribute the text, the wages of the people who work in the text department on the actual day when the sales are heavy, plus the rent on the area occupied by the text department, not only on the eight days of the year when the text sells heavily, but for all the other days when the total text sales for the day amount to five or six dollars. What's more, if a text is dropped in the interval between, say, September and February, all the remaining stock of that text in the shop drops in value to somewhere between ten and fifteen per cent of its original price. In other words dealing in new texts is very much like playing in a poker game where you lose the full amount of your bet, but the house takes 80 per cent of your winnings.

Those are the facts — and because the text business is essentially a monopoly, not at the retail level, but at the publishers level on any given campus, they apply just as much to my competitor as they do to me. There just is not room for very much price wiggling in the text field.

Now, if what I have said is true, it stands to reason that there is something very fishy about someone who offers an appreciable discount on texts. It might be that they are selling used texts as new texts "discounted". It might be that a high percentage of the sales fall into the souvenir merchandise category, where mark-ups are very high, or it may be — as in the case of a co-operative operated on campus property — that a volunteer worker has done someone else out of a paid job, or that rent has been removed from the cost problem, thus reducing the amount of overhead which has to be paid out of that little 18% gross profit. At any event, a discount on texts of as much as ten per cent should be a red flag to any thinking student.

Used text books are another story. While obviously no one can take the losses involved in dropped texts, faulty books, and just plain overhead for storage ,there is clearly room for the price to range up and down on these books. The trouble is, from the point of view of the bookseller, that the chap who has the books to sell thinks the prices should be pushed up to increase his take while the chap who has to buy used texts thinks the prices should be pushed down in order to cut his expenses. Not infrequently we have chaps who show up here and manage to maintain both sides of the argument at the same time. In that case, we balance off the factors of what a chap gets back, what he has to pay, and how much insurance we need against dropping of the texts and come out with the best answer that we can. It may be the wrong answer, but I can assure you that we do our best to make it a fair one. I believe that this is also true of our competition.

Now having outlined the narrow limits in which any text shop must operate, let me turn to Mr. Clotfelter's painful statement that it is "tacitly unrealistic" to hope that the Intimate Bookshop will compete with the Book-Ex. It has been our relief, and it continues to be our belief, that we do compete with the University store, and that across the board this competition works out for the good of the student body. If we did not believe that, we would long since have dropped a department which is productive of the most drudgery and the least profit of any department in our shop. Our competition has taken the form of trying to furnish texts more quickly and more amiably than our competitors, of making a very genuine effort to find places to dispose of dropped texts so as to guard the student body against at least a portion of the severe losses they sustain when a text is dropped, and of making special prices on texts which were bought under the impression that they would not be used again but which actually are used an additional term. These things Mr. Clotfelter could have checked if he had looked in our window during the text rush this Spring.

Finally, may I say that we at the Intimate would be happy to do anything possible to help a cooperative text movement. Based on years of experience, I can not say that our hopes for the movement are very high, but if it should take root, it would leave us free to devote more attention to our basic problem of supplying good books to the literate members of the student body.

A Joke and A Kind Word...

I have been informed by certain members of the Tar Heel staff that it is customary for a new columnist to begin his tenure with a kind word about the University, and a joke.

While it is challenging to attempt both without being repetitious, I have decided to take a shot at it.

Last fall I went to the State game alone and sat next to a boisterous group of assorted clods and phonies. During the excitement (?) of the fray one of the clods spilled some beer on a couple of the phonies who in turn spilled beer on a group of dateless coeds. After a torried exchange of "I can't even believe you" and various regional and nationl oaths, the clods, phonies, and coeds became fast friends and two of them are now happily married. It struck me then, as it does now, that it's certainly a boon from the heavens that such relationships can flower among, between, and under the massive pines of our College community.

So much for the kind words.

Some weeks after this the North Carolina String Quartet gave a concert in Hill Hall. Approximately three hundred people attended the concert. The attendance at the State game was over thirty thousand.

So much for the joke.

Robinson's Ramblings

It is really silly the way otherwise sensible married couples bicker and quarrel over trifles that could easily be settled by compromise. Let me tell you of a few situations my wife and I disposed of in this highly civilized manner.

My wife wanted a new dress and I needed a new suit. Our budget that month could only provide for one of these items so we compromised. My wife bought a new suit.

One day last fall I had made plans to play golf but my wife felt I should do some yard work. This one was easy. I puttered around the garden.

My wife wanted to go out to dinner. I preferred to eat at home. So we went to a restaurant that advertised home cooking.

Then there was one time I wanted to stay at home and watch the fights on television, while my wife was all set to take in a movie. We settled this very simply. First we had a fight and then went to a movie.

This one situation in which no compromise is possible is when my wife says she wants the car for the day. That's when I put my foot down and start walking.

One Too Many

A butcher had sold all of his poultry except one hen. In walked a woman who said she was entertaining at dinner and wanted a nice-sized chicken. The butcher reached into the ice barrel and brought forth his only bird, flipped it on the scales and said, "This one will be $1.35."

"Well," she said, "I really wanted a larger one."

The butcher, thinking fast, returned the hen to the ice barrel and stirred it around for awhile, then brought it forth again and flopped it on the scales. "This one," he said, "is $1.95."

The woman considered a moment and said, "I know what. I'll take both of them."

Heated Hint

And then there was the bride-to-be who said to a friend: "It was Valentine's day before I realized that Tom was getting serious. He gave me an electric blanket with dual controls."

—MIKE ROBINSON

Reflections

Dave Lobdell, an original member of the house of David, may or may not have begun a new trend with his bearded successes of sweeping the campus by winning the Ugly Man contest. Easy-going Dave, who everyone knows can't really be ugly or else wouldn't have won, admitted that his honor might be "dubious," but he was proud of it just the same. Wait and see if any more full beards start popping up.

If they do, Lobdell will probably shave.

Katangese Gendarmes Near Capital

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI) — Katangese gendarmes were reported Wednesday to have advanced toward the north Katanga capital of Albertville where the U.N. Indian garrison was braced to resist any attack on the town.

Radio reports from the area said the gendarmes, who last week captured the railway center of Kongolo from mutinous Congolese troops, were within 13 miles of Albertville.

Informed sources in Elisabethville said the Katangese forces have halted their advance to try to find out how the U.N. troops react to an attack on Albertville, on the shores of Lake Tanganyika.

A senior U.N. official in Elisabethville told UPI Tuesday the Indian troops are ready to resist any attack and have 'quite a welcome" prepared for the Katangese force.

Albertville, biggest city in northeast Katanga, is capital of Luaiaba province, a territory loyal to the central Congolese government. It is a stronghold of Baluba tribesmen who are opposed to Katanga President Moise Tshombe.

The province was created after Congolese troops occupied Albertville last November.

A U.N. official, meanwhile, said he expects Tshombe and central Congolese Premier Cyrille Adoula to meet "very quickly" to discuss the agreement they signed at Kitona last December to end Katanga's secession.

U. N. legal counselor Constantin Stavropoulous said before his departure for Leopoldville that the only dispute issue is a site for the meeting.

"But I think that problem will be solved in one or two days and that the meeting will take place soon afterward," Stavropoulos said.

Reports in Leopoldville said Adoula has rejected an offer to go to Elisabethville to confer with Tshombe and has appealed to the Katanga leader to travel to Leopoldville for the talks.

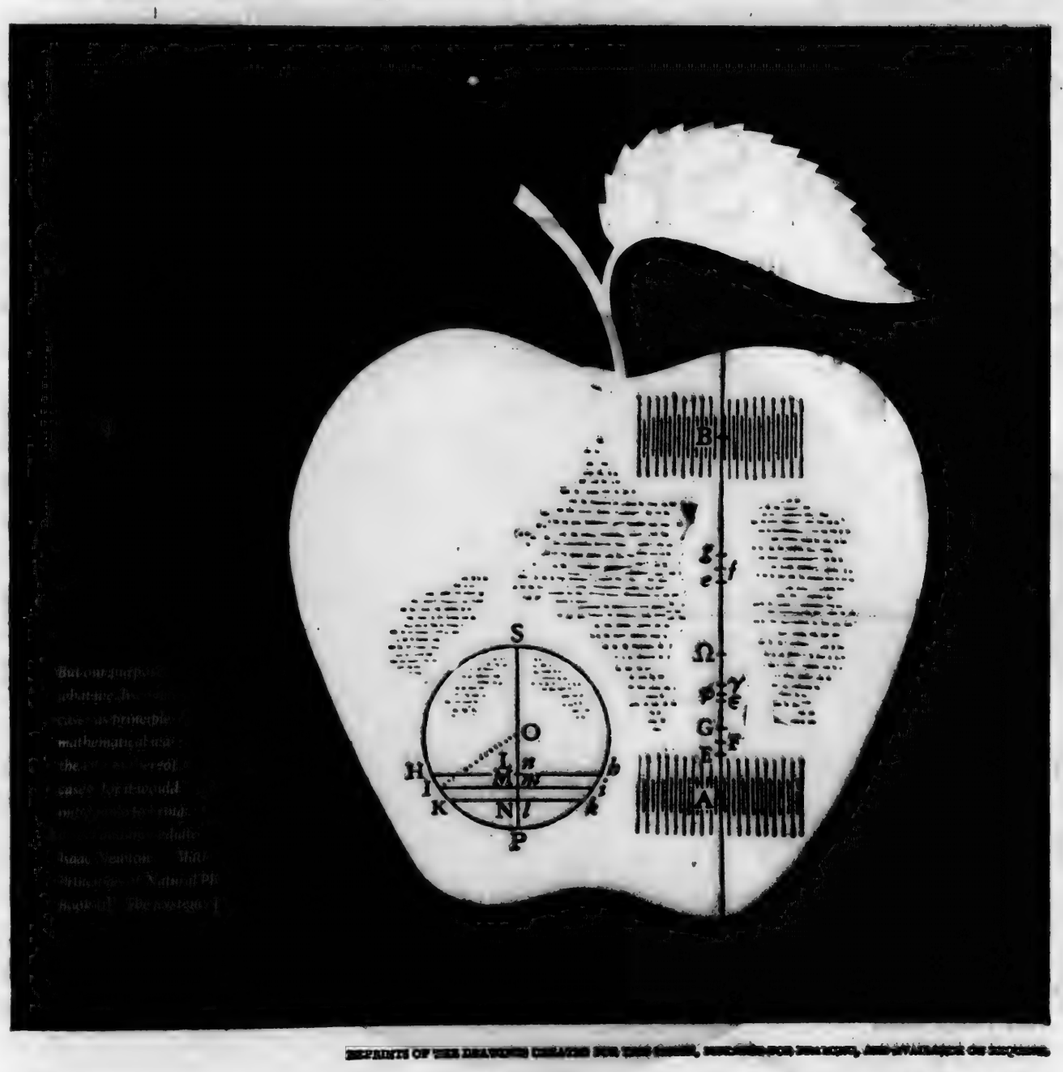
Mathematicians for Space Technology Leadership



In disciplines that follow the tradition of Newton, Mathematicians at Space Technology Laboratories, Inc. seek "principles" for the analysis and evaluation of complex data as a means of accelerating man's conquest of space. At STL, those responsible for Space Technology Leadership look to the Computation and Data Reduction Center to identify and evaluate applied mathematical principles from diverse observations. In so doing, STL Mathematicians may employ advanced digital processing techniques in solving problems and analyzing data acquired from ballistic missile and space vehicle programs. Mathematicians who seek greater stimulus and responsibility are invited to communicate with Dr. R. C. Potter, Manager of Professional Placement and Development, at STL, an equal opportunity employer.

ACC Swimming Finals Start Today At Raleigh

By ED DUPREE

A new method of determining the conference team champion adds more color to this year's ACC swimming championships in the new N. C. State pool in Raleigh.

While the spotlight focuses on the top individual swimmers such as UNC's Thompson Mann, N. C. State's Pete Fogarasy, Ed Spencer, and Bill McGinty, and Maryland's Hugh Roddin and Dave Fleming, the Terps, Wolfpack, and Tar Heels will be fighting for the ACC team championship.

In the past the team champion was determined by the dual meet records. In 1961, the perennial big, three tied for first. But now the dual meets count half, while the championship meet results count half.

Maryland's unbeaten dual meet record gives them eight points going into the water finale. State has seven points for their second place finish, and UNC has six for its third place. Thus, if Maryland finishes second in the championship meet Coach Bill Campbell's team will clinch a tie for the overall championship. Likewise, if N. C. State wins the three day affair they will clinch a tie for first.

The only way Coach Pat Earey's Tar Heels can grab a tie is to take a first place, while State finishes second and Maryland third. This would give all three teams a total of 14 points for the season.

The deciding factor in the team championship battle could be Maryland's depth.

Sigmon's 27 Paces Murals

By JOHN MONTAGUE

Gene Sigmon dumped in 27 points for the Phi Kappa Sig's Tuesday afternoon, but his team still fell short of a victory total, bowing to DU, 50-46. The winners countered with three big scorers in Jobe with 15, Jenkins with 13 and Harper with 12.

Dick Hendrickson scored more than half of his team's points, netting 20 as the Phi Delt Squirrels humbled the Chi Psi Psyches, 37-15. The DKE Straf lost to the DU Hawks, 54-31, but it was not the fault of Jim Holderness, who bagged 22 in the losing effort. Ron McArthur led the Hawks with 17. McArthur led the Hawks with 17.

Dorm Newspapers To Be Given Aid By Committee

The Communications Committee has begun a drive to assist dormitories with efforts to provide their residents with dorm newspapers. Several dorms which previously had not published dorm papers now have editors and plan to publish within a few weeks.

The committee is helping existing dorm newspapers to publish more frequently and to improve their papers. A file of old dorm newspapers is being prepared and numerous source materials such as joke books and cartoons are being furnished.

According to Chairman Robin Britt, the committee hopes to establish a headquarters for the dorm papers where some of the more complicated Stylus work involved in mineographing can be done. The headquarters will also furnish a central location for the files of the old newspapers and source materials.

The committee is working through the IDC and with dorm presidents. Britt presented the idea to the IDC in December and proceeded with the program on the basis of the interest shown at that meeting.

Originally the plan called for subsidization of the newspapers by Student Government, and $150 was ear-marked for this purpose in a bill introduced in Legislature. However, the allocation for this subsidization was cut from the appropriation.

An Editors' Roundtable, composed of the editors of all dorm newspapers, has been established. The purpose of the Roundtable is to allow free exchange of ideas and articles between the dorm editors and to establish a central coordinating body for the papers.

Campus organizations wishing to publicize their activities can submit copies of an article concerning the activity to the Roundtable. It may then be printed in the various papers at the discretion of the editor. The Roundtable may also solicit advertising collectively for the dorm newspapers.

Jerry Hancock, editor of the Winston paper, announced its first publication on Friday of this week. The Committee worked with Tony Smithson, president of Winston, Hancock, George Carson, and Paul Quintus in reviving the Winstonian, which was last published in 1960 by Tom Williams.

Scabbard & Blade To Sponsor Dance

The Scabbard and Blade at UNC has announced contestants for Queen of the Military Ball to be held at the Elk's Club in Durham, on February 24, 1962.

The contestants are Miss Linda Kathie Law of Leonia, N. J. to be escorted by Cadet Capt. Michael J. Rooney, AFROTC; Miss Judy Anne Johnson of Burlington, N. C. to be escorted by Cadet Captain Rudolph O. Oates, AFROTC; Mrs. Anthony Davenport of Chapel Hill, N. C. to be escorted by her husband Cadet S/Sgt. Anthony Davenport, AFROTC; Miss Thora Belle Worly of Marshall, N. C. to be escorted by Midshipman Lt. Pender R. McElroy, NROTC;

Miss Brenda Jean Bumgarner of North Wilkesboro, N. C. to be escorted by Midshipman John eKerbaugh, NROTC; and Miss Judy Chostner of Greensboro, N. C. to be escorted by Midshipman Lt. James D. Strictland, NROTC.

The Military Ball is an annual joint NROTC, AFROTC social function sponsored by Scabbard and Blade, a national military society composed of outstanding NROTC and AFROTC advanced cadets. At this Ball, the spring pledge class for Scabbard and Blade will be announced.

Notice Seniors

Invitations to graduation will be on sale for the final time Thursday and Friday from 9-12 a.m. in Y-Court, the Order of the Grail has announced. The order reminds all seniors that the sale will be the last opportunity to order invitations.

Full payment will be due when orders are placed.

Seniors in the schools of medicine, pharmacy, and law will have invitations available at a later date.

Seniors who are practice-teaching have been requested to have someone place their order.

Internal Mike To Broadcast Data On Heart

A pocket-sized transmitter which broadcasts data about the heart while the patient moves about freely is nearing perfection at N. C. Memorial Hospital. Support for continuing this work will come from the 1962 Campus Chest, which is contributing to heart research for the second year.

Conducting the project is Dr. Thomas C. Gibson, Assistant Professor of Medicine and William B. Thornton, Consultant in Engineering for the Medical School.

The Campus Chest grant will be used to perfect the new technique in two directions: to enable the patient to tape his heart record at home and to develop a better computing system for the information broadcast by the transmitter. At present, a person trained in reading electrocardiograms must spend a large amount of time scanning many feet of record tape to translate the information recorded. The researchers are working now on a method of decoding this information mechanically and providing answers in a simpler form.

Dr. Gibson is a native of England and received his medical degree in 1946 from Cambridge. He trained at the London Hospital and engaged in private practice in London before he came to the UNC Medical School in 1957. His associate, Bill Thornton, is a native of Goldsboro and has a B.S. in Physics from UNC (1953). He spent two years as chief of the photo-optics instrumentation lab for the U. S. Air Force, a year as consultant to Air Proving Grounds on instrumentation systems, and two years as chief electronic engineer at Del Mar Engineering Labs in Los Angeles. He holds the Legion of Merit award for instrumentation development in the Air Force.

Troops Guard Domincan Cane Fields

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Troops and planes guarded Dominican cane fields against further sabotage Thursday under a state of emergency proclamation.

Nearly a score of incendiary blazes have caused an estimated $1 million in sugar crop damage in recent weeks. The coalition provisional government under President Rafael L. Bonnelly started a roundup of agitators Wednesday and authorized their deportation to cope with what officials claimed was an unholy conspiracy of former members of the Trujille dynasty with "international communism."

Bonnelly in a radio speech Wednesday night said the proclamation of a state of emergency was aimed at halting not only growing sabotage but increasingly frequent riots and leftist-sparked disorders.

Five leftist leaders detained for questioning Wednesday still were held. Police refused to release any information on their statements, or to permit the local or foreign press to interview them. It was denied, however, that they were held incommunicado.

The police hunt for Maximo Lopez Molina, leader of the pro-Castro Dominican popular movement, continued. He was believed to have gone underground. Lopez returned to Santo Domingo recently from years in exile.

Reds Agree To Discuss Test Ban

Soviets Now Accept Separate Talks

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviets reversed themselves again Thursday and said they were "reluctantly forced to accept" discussions of the question of a nuclear test ban at the forthcoming 18-nation disarmament talks here.

When the test ban talks bogged down last year Russia said a test ban must be discussed at a general disarmament meeting. The United States and Britain accepted that idea, but on Jan. 26 Russia reversed itself and said test ban talks must be held separately.

Chief Soviet negotiator Semyon K. Tsarapkin announced the Soviet double shuffle when he met for an hour with the deputy chiefs of the British and American nuclear delegations here, Derek Brinson and David Mark.

Tsarapkin made it clear the negotiations at the general disarmament talks will be just as tough as they were during the three-year nuclear test ban conferences which ended last Jan. 29.

He said the Soviets stand firmly on their Nov. 28 suggestion for an uncontrolled moratorium on nuclear tests. The West has rejected this and is certain to reject it once more when and if the nuclear test question goes before the 18-nation conference.

In announcing Thursday's shift, Tsarapkin said the Soviets meeting "since it is clear that the West has no interest in continuing the nuclear discussions either officially or unofficially."

Tsarapkin told a news conference in his villa overlooking Lake Geneva that the latest decision had been taken because "there is nothing more to be gained, officially or unofficially" from the test ban talks.

24 Killed As Pair Of Trains Collide

CALI, Colombia (UPI) — At least 24 persons were killed Thursday and 36 others injured, including five California Merchant Marine cadets, in a head-on collision between a passenger train and a locomotive 30 miles from Cali.

The cadets, on a 48-hour shore leave to Cali from their training ship, the Golden Bear, anchored at Buenaventura, were not identified immediately. Two of them were hurt seriously.

In Vallejo, Calif., the California Maritime Academy listed only four midshipmen injured on the basis of reports from the American Embassy in Bogota. Seriously injured were Paul Murphy, of San Pedro, a broken leg and arm, and Dennis Allison, of Placerville, a broken leg and possible back injuries. The other two injured were identified as Daniel Clifford, of Coronado, a broken leg, and Terence Purdom, of Richmond, a broken arm.

Kremlin Admits Abel Worked As Spy For Soviets

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Kremlin publicly acknowledged for the first time Thursday the existence of Col. Rudolf Abel, the convicted Soviet spy who was exchanged for U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers nearly two weeks ago.

The government newspaper Izvestia printed a letter revealing to the Russian public that Abel had been released and returned to Soviet authorities on Feb. 10.

The letter, from Abel's wife Helen and daughter, Lydia, publicly thanked Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev for arranging the release of the colonel.

It ended years of official Soviet silence on the case of Abel, who had been sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment in the United States following his conviction on charges of sending American nuclear and other defense secrets to Moscow while posing as a Brooklyn photographer.

Publication of the letter was seen here as a Soviet attempt to offset criticism abroad and news leaking through to the Russian people that their government had concealed details of the exchange.

Abel's wife and daughter, in their letter to Khrushchev, said Abel had been "innocently arrested" and "unlawfully committed."

The letter did not specify that Abel had been exchanged for Powers. Nor did it mention the simultaneous release of American student Frederick Pryor, who had been held in East Germany.

Powers had been sentenced to 10 years in prison for spying after his high-flying plane crashed deep inside the Soviet Union on May 1, 1960.

At the time of his release, the government said it acted with the aim of improving Soviet-American relations. But no mention was made of the exchange for Abel at that time nor was his name mentioned in the press until Thursday.

The letter from Abel's wife and daughter, dated Feb. 19, gave no clue to Abel's present whereabouts. There was no indication from where the letter was written. It gave the impression that Abel's liberation was strictly a Soviet initiative.

ROBERT F. KENNEDY

RFK Pledges Full Defense Of W. Berlin

BERLIN (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy arrived Thursday with a new presidential pledge to defend West Berlin against the Russians. He received a tumultuous welcome from West Berliners while Communists reacted with a decisive barrage of red flags and rockets.

Kennedy, in one of four speeches delivered Thursday, told a cheering throng of 150,000 to 160,000 in freezing, snow-covered city hall square that the United States would regard an attack on West Berlin as an attack on New York, Chicago, London or Paris.

The Communists tried to disrupt the rally by sending up four rockets which looked like balloons. They exploded overhead and unfurled four-foot-square red flags which drifted down by parachute. The crowd booed and Kennedy taunted: "The Communists send out balloons but they will not let their people out."

Veteran observers said Thursday's welcome was one of the warmest ever given a visitor here. Police estimated another 150,000 to 160,000 lined the road from the airport to the square. There were cries of "welcome" and shouts of "Bob" nd "Ethel" for Kennedy and his wife.

The attorney general read a message from his brother, the President, that promised American solidarity with Berlin and peace and freedom for the world.

Members Free To Join Any Campus Unit

Sorority girls no longer can be required to join either or any campus political party by their sororities.

This resolution was made public yesterday by the Panhellenic Council. The resolution also stated that no sorority could place party membership dues on a sorority bill and that it could not place a fine for non-attendance at any political party function. It said also that there will be no promising of votes prior to the balloting process. "Our members will vote as individuals," the resolution stated, "and we will do all in our power to discourage the practice of block voting among other groups."

The Council recommended that both political parties put more emphasis on pre-nomination meetings. The resolution suggested that sorority pledges be required to attend both the Student Party's and University Party's preliminary meetings, and afterwards be allowed to make their own choice.

"I am in complete agreement with the Panhellenic resolution," UP Chairman Bill Criswell said yesterday. "I think this will help clear up the political apathy on this campus."

"I also believe this resolution will help to end the misconception that the University Party belongs to the fraternities and sororities."

He said he thought the clause suggesting that pledges be required to attend one meeting of each party would be an incentive to the parties to improve their platforms. "Bloc voting can no longer be counted on to provide party members," he stated. "The parties must now work to attract their members."

SP Chairman Jimmy Weeks also expressed complete agreement with the resolution. "I do not think however, that this resolution will affect Spring elections a great deal because of the lack of time before elections."

Criswell said, however that this resolution will definitely help the UP this spring despite the time element. "I think the candidates will be able to emphasize the new convention system in their individual campaigns," he stated.

Council President Janice Haley emphasized the suggestion that sorority pledges be required to attend meetings of both parties because she believes that "pledges may become interested in campus politics if they have a chance to find out what politics is like."

ASTRONAUT WAS NERVOUS

Glenn, Happy Family Meet With President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John H. Glenn's wife and two excited teenage children flew to Florida with President Kennedy aboard his jet plane Thursday for an eagerly awaited reunion Friday with the hero astronaut.

Also invited along by the President were Glenn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Glenn Sr., New Concord, Ohio; Mrs. Glenn's parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Caston, New Concord; and Mrs. Glenn's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Hosey, Pittsburgh, and the astronaut's long-time friend, Marine Lt. Col. Thomas B. Miller.

At the airport, Glenn's wife Anna said: "Isn't this an exciting day. I'm really looking forward to this day and to tomorrow morning."

From Grand Turk Island, where he was being "de-briefed" after his earth-orbiting trip Tuesday, Glenn was reported "living from moment to moment" for the meeting at Cape Canveral Friday with his wife, their children, and other relatives.

He also was reported a little nervous about ceremonies at the spaceport where the President was scheduled to present him with the Distinguished Service Medal of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Still more honors are in store for Glenn, the nation's biggest peacetime hero since Charles A. Lindbergh's Atlantic flight, when the astronaut returns to Washington Monday with the President.

After a White House chat between Glenn and Kennedy, the spaceman will ride in triumph to Capitol Hill where he will be honored at a joint meeting of Congress. Joining in the parade to the Capitol will be as many of Glenn's fellow astronauts as can be brought to Washington.

On Thursday Glenn and other astronauts will be treated to a New York ticker tape parade that promised to equal the most memorable receptions ever tendered by the metropolis.

Riding in the New York parade with Glenn will be Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Capt. Virgil I. Grissom, the men who broke the space trail by riding rockets down the Atlantic Missile range.

Glenn will return to his home town of New Concord, Ohio, late Thursday. The mayor, James K. Taylor, said Thursday a big parade and day-long celebration were planned for the astronaut on Saturday.

The President flew to Palm Beach, Fla., to see his father, Joseph P. Kennedy, who is convalescing from a stroke.

'TWIST' REGULATED

HARLOW, England (UPI) — With Britons caught up by a twist craze that has resulted in marathon competition, local officials Thursday set up a board of control to lay down ground rules for twist championships to avoid injury to dancers.

Andy Griffith Donates $100 To Barham Scholarship Fund

Andy Griffith, stage, screen and television star, has donated $100 to the new James Michael Barham Music Scholarship for freshman music students which is now being established at UNC by the Alpha Rho chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia national music fraternity.

The UNC chapter of the fraternity is sponsoring two special U. S. Navy Band concerts to be held at the University's Memorial Hall March 6. Proceeds of the concert will go to the new scholarship.

Griffith, UNC graduate from the Department of Music, said, "I am sorry I will be unable to attend the concert given by the United States Navy Band in Memorial Hall on March 6, but I am pleased to help out in this worthwhile endeavor of Alpha Rho chapter in establishing a scholarship fund." Griffith was a member of the music fraternity while studying at UNC.

James Michael Barham was vice president of the campus chapter of the fraternity at the time of his death in October, 1961. The scholarship in his honor will be administered by the faculty of the music department. Its size will be determined by the success of the chapter's fund raising campaign.

The Navy Band will present two concerts, one at 2:15 p.m. on Tuesday afternoon, March 6, and the other at 8:30 p.m. that evening. Tickets for either concert are still available. General admission is $1.50.

ANDY GRIFFITH

Campus Briefs

"Is There a Christian Philosophy of History?" will be the topic of a talk by Father John A. Weidinger, Ph.D., to the Newman Club Sunday night. The meeting begins with supper at 5:30.

Graham Memorial will present Odeta at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Memorial Hall. The concert will be free to all UNC students upon presentation of ID cards. Spouses will be admitted for $1.

All Carolina students interested in forming a coed Caving-Climbing Club are invited to attend a dinner meeting at 5:30 p.m. Monday, in the middle upstairs room in Lenoir Hall. Persons unable to attend this meeting may contact David Dantzler at 406 Mangum.

The Student Party will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Howell Hall. A program is planned and several legislative seats will be filled.

"The Impact of the Civil War on the American Jewish Community" will be the topic of a lecture tonight by Dr. Issac M. Fein in Howell Hall at 8. The public is invited.

Miss Nancy Bond, a representative of Anderson Tours of Berkeley, Calif., will be at the Tri-Delt house today at 4 p.m. to talk to students interested in student tours to Europe this summer.

Graham Memorial will sponsor a seven week course in bridge starting March 1. Anyone interested may sign up at the information desk in Graham Memorial. There will be no charge for the lessons.

The Pan-Hellenic Book Drive will last through Friday of this week. Books should be taken to Y-Court.

A bus driver will be needed for Saturday, 5:45 to one a.m. There will be pay. Call 968-9055 and ask for Owen Bishop or Ralph Mosely.

UP Chairman Bill Criswell announced that anyone interested in joining the University Party may do so between the hours of 2 and 6 p.m., Saturday, February 24, and Sunday, February 25, at the UP headquarters in the Yack office, GM. The UP will hold a convention Monday at 7 in Memorial Hall.

Both graduate and undergraduate students are invited to participate in the national Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament which will be held in Roland Parker Lounges 2 and 3 at Graham Memorial Sunday, February 25, at 2:00 p.m. Partnership reservations must be made in advance by signing up at the GM Information Desk or calling Ray Wiesen at 968-9156.

Italian President Installs Leftist Premier And Cabinet

ROME (UPI) — President Gronchi Thursday swore in Premier Amintore Fanfani and a left-of-center cabinet which will rule with support from the Socialists in a political era of high hopes — and possible dangers — for the West.

Fanfani, the Christian Democratic "Little Professor," ended a 20-day-old government crisis by heading a coalition cabinet that includes three Social Democrats and two Republicans. To survive, it must have parliamentary support of the Socialists.

The pro-Western government Italy's 23rd since World War II, virtually is certain to receive a strong parliamentary vote of confidence before March 3. Pietro Nonni's left-wing Socialists, who have been in the opposition group with the Communists for 15 years, have pledged to support the new government.

The naturalist Socialists have not broken all links with the powerful Italian Communist party, thus causing strong right-wing doubts about Italy's future relations with its NATO allies.

Fanfani, in announcing the "center-left" program, declared Italy will continue its firm anti-Communist foreign policy and its loyalty to NATO and the European integration movement.

Former Stalin "peace prize" holder Nenni did not demand or receive any basic foreign policy concessions in return for the vital support from his socialists in parliament. But he and his top aides have declared their conviction that the "center-left" formula is the first step on the road to democratic socialism for Italy.

Eventually, the Socialists want at least a British-type "flexibility" for Italy within NATO. They are not happy about U.S. missile bases on Italian territory. The strong pro-Communist wing of the Socialists seeks an even more pronounced "lean to the left."

Does It Make A Difference?

UP Or SP?

For the umteeth time since the organization of the University and Student Parties as the two major political factions at Carolina, the UP is trying to tear down its image as the "fraternity party."

This same attempt at re-orientation has been carried on, at varying intervals, since as far back as 1937 —possibly before. Whether this most recent attempt will be either successful or enduring remains a doubtful question. Despite a sincere and imaginative approach by UP Chairman Bill Criswell, chances seem good that his party will again be saddled with the fraternity label —a label that is becoming increasingly undesirable as the dorm vote gets stronger.

It doesn't exactly take Divine insight to predict that the UP big four slate will be heavy with individuals generally regarded as "fraternity candidates," while the SP appeal to the dormitory voter will again be strong.

* * *

Most of the reason for this is tradition, a tradition so strong that it will take more than a shuffle of UP nominating procedure to overcome it. Despite the UP's commendable attempt to guarantee a minimum number of votes to each dorm, putting a dorm candidate across in a UP convention will be a tough job. Too many factors are working against it.

First, and most important, is the question of available candidates. Because of UP's traditional fraternity/sorority affiliation, outstanding dormitory candidates are simply not available within the existing UP organization. And the fraternity and sorority blocs don't seem likely to go wholeheartedly for a newcomer.

Ironically, the fraternity albatross hanging around the UP neck is its own tightly-knit, well-organized machinery. Its rigidity makes it difficult for a dark-horse—particularly one from a dorm—to break into the UP. The SP, on the other hand, is now, and has been traditionally, a somewhat raggle-taggle outfit that flings wide its arms—and incidentally, its nominating convention—to any wild-eyed firebrand who can either out-debate or out-politic the other contenders. Candidates pop up seemingly out of nowhere to buck—and often unseat —the hacks.

While the UP is regarded as a party for the greeks, the SP is not generally seen as a dorm party, although it usually draws most of its support from dorms. This tends to make the SP less stable, naturally, but at the same time doesn't label it categorically as "dormitory." The dorm candidate — and we mean the dorm-oriented candidate, rather than the stricter designation of dorm resident—is hesitant to try to break into the UP machinery. The SP forum is less discriminating. Anyone can speak — and usually does. He might be beaten in his bid for a nomination, but he's heard. This, of course, doesn't always work in the SP's favor. The party can usually come up with some pretty novel — not to say radical — ideas. Some of them go over, others create considerable unpopularity — and defeats. Others are found acceptable and some are carried out.

The UP is not so receptive to "reform" ideas, with the natural result that they usually come up with "safe" candidates.

* * *

All of this naturally makes for a fairly solid, predictable party. Whether the campus will go for this orientation or for the less predictable SP is a question that won't be answered for more than a month.

At any rate, the outlook for any real change in the UP's image — whether real or imagined — is painfully dim.

UNC Student Describes Life At Cal

Editors Note: Carolina student Henry Mayer is currently spending his junior year of study at the University of California, at Berkely, under an Inter-State Scholarship. The following article, the first of a two-parts, outlines life at that thriving coastal university, and offers interesting points of comparison and contrast with Carolina.

* * *

Along Berkeley's Piedmont Avenue, about halfway up the first of the Berkeley hills and at the "top" of the sloping University of California campus, stands a row of houses ranging in architectural styles from "early Scarsdale" to "ramshackle Charles Addams." Once private residences, the buildings now bear imposing titles indicative of the work being carried on within: Center for International Studies, Survey Research Center, Institute for Personality Assessment and Research, and the Center for Human Learning for example. At the hill's summit, commanding an incredibly beautiful view of the campus and the entire San Francisco Bay area, stands Lawrence Radiation Laboratory, home of Dr. Edward Teller & Co. It is symbolic that these two clusters occupy positions of geographic superiority, for they hold intellectual priorities as well.

The University of California, in less than 100 years, has risen to the top of the academic ranks—largely on the strength of its research endeavors and its roster of internationally respected professors, lured to the Golden West by Berkeley's superior climate (both for research and asthmatics) and abundant fiscal resources. To maintain this hard-won reputation, University professors have to continue to make important contributions to the scholarship of their respective disciplines, and one can easily see here ample evidence of the so-called "publish or perish" mania which has become a hackneyed expression in academic circles.

It is not difficult to imagine the depressing effect such emphasis has upon the educational opportunities afforded the 15,000 undergraduate and 7,000 graduate students who inhabit the campus. Graduates, who are theoretically learning to be researchers in their own right, are not sneered upon quite as often as are undergraduates, who for all practical purposes, are the university's stepchildren. When translated into terms of everyday campus life, the primacy of research means that out of the 41 course listings in the upper division American History Department, only 17 are being offered this year (including the basic junior survey course); it means that three-fourths of the sociology faculty are only teaching on a part-time basis, in order to be able to carry on their independent projects; it means that those faculty members who are in Berkeley because they want to teach have short office hours and long lines outside, with the result that student-faculty contact is virtually impossible to establish. Yet, despite this basically unfavorable atmosphere (from the student's point of view) the University of California indeed affords rich intellectual stimulation and educational breadth, although the classroom experience is decidedly second-rate.

Education at Berkeley, then, is a frustrating paradox. The campus abounds with renowned professors, although many remain quite removed from the student community; political controversy and excitement thrive in the face of an authoritarian administration and, consequently, an impotent student government and a flaccid student press; the atmosphere is charged with intellectual excitement — an abundance of lecture series, concerts, films, debates and rallies crowd the calendar, although the formal aspects of the educational process are often limited and unrewarding. In short, the campus is (as its orientation booklet proudly boasts) "a good place to think."

"Cal" is a good place to think, in part, because education here presents a formidable personal challenge, not a challenge in terms of demanding assignments, (although they do exist) but a challenge to scale the barriers posed by the rigid bureaucratic means needed to control so large an enterprise and the large enrollment which severely restricts classroom dialogue.

The campus is controlled by its IBM machine, and no aspect of the business of education, from registration to course changes to the payment of library fines, escapes the ubiquitous punch card. The cold, impersonal nature of the process and the complex tangle of regulations and procedures (a system which would shame even the Pentagon) serve to reduce the freedom of movement one likes to associate with a college campus, although admittedly, IBM life does have its humorous aspects. One never feels quite as funny as he does when, after a twenty minute wait, his IBM library call card zips out of the pneumatic tube with "cannot locate" stamped brightly upon it. Absolutely hysterical. A regular riot.

The difficulties involved in the utilization of the library are important to bear in mind, because most courses at Cal are reading courses and demand a good deal of library work. An average class may have 75 to 100 members, although mass lecture courses taught by such worthies as Mark Schorer and Dr. Edward Teller attract 800 to 1,000 students. In this situation there can be no student-professor exchange of ideas; the professor lectures and the student scribbles as much as he can remember into his notebook. He has no opportunity to formulate ideas, have them criticized and slashed to ribbons by his classmates and instructor, and then reshaped in the light of the new perspective the classroom dialogue has afforded him.

'Peace Mongers' In Future

Time: The near future

Place: In front of the White House

The student picketers did not carry signs with clever slogans. They carried white flags and chanted, "We want peace at any price."

The reporter was young and at first just a little timid about interviewing a picketer. They looked fanatical and belligerent. But he slowly gathered his nerve and approached their leader.

"I beg your pardon," said the reporter, "but I wonder if you could make a comment on what the picketing is for."

"Certainly", said the bright young college student. "As college students we believe we represent the intellectual elite of this nation. Therefore we believe we should make known our beliefs on the world situation. We are for peace no matter what the price. We believe the United States should disarm immediately!"

"But Russia has not agreed to disarm," the reporter challenged.

"Russia!" cried the student. "Why should Russia have to show her good faith to us? It is our duty to show our good faith to Russia. I would rather crawl on my belly to Moscow than die under an atom bomb!"

"Do you have any support for this movement?" the reporter questioned.

"Yes sir, we certainly do," the student boasted. "We have the support of none other than Senator Lefty A. Peasement."

The reporter was shocked for a moment. He knew Senator Peasement was the liberal darling of Washington, but he had not realized just how far left old Lefty would go.

The reporter thanked the picketer and took a cab to the Senate. On the steps of the Senate the reporter found a hundred ministers kneeling in prayer. One of the ministers, being finished with his prayer, came over to where the reporter was standing and spoke with a voice trembling in emotion. "The communists are the children of God. We should treat them as our Brothers. Their god is our God!"

"But reverend the communists have no god save possibly Lenin," the reporter blurted out.

"Young man, I know nothing about the communist doctrine. But I do know they are the children of God and deserve God's mercy. Let us join hands with them in peace," proclaimed the minister as he looked towards the street where Senator Lefty A. Peasement was getting out of a cab.

"There is a man of God and a man of peace," the minister said motioning toward the senator.

The reporter excused himself from the minister and hurried over to the senator.

"Don't have much time for an interview, son," the senator said in a voice that seem to boom like a cannon. "I suppose you want to know how I stand on the picketers and these prostrated holy men. Well, I'M all for them, because they want peace. I want peace and by God I know the nation wants peace, and if I can only push through my bill on giving aid to Red China, I believe we will get a hell of a lot of peace. You know my slogan, 'give aid to the reds and they will love us to death'. There are still some backward conservatives that don't go along with my ideas. But I have the faith in the American people. They'll come around and see things my way just like they did when we gave away Berlin. The American people want peace and by God they're getting it! Well, son, I've got to hurry on. Got a committee meeting. We are reviewing a bill to change the words on coins from 'In God we trust' to 'In A. Peasement we trust'. Don't look so solemn son. That is a joke." And with that the senator made his way up the rest of the senate steps laughing all the way. It sounded like thunder.

The reporter got into a cab and ordered the cab driver to take him to the Washington Monument and he added, "I'm going to jump off." The cab drive laughed and so did the reporter. He laughed so hard that he found himself crying.

Super-Patriots Must Re-Direct Inquiry

In language that would become a Mississippi legislator, Messrs. Adkinson and Jones have again come out in favor of the national anthem, the pledge of allegiance, and prejudice. Not only have they announced that the South's racial prejudice is immortal before the Supreme Court, but that a promising prejudice against political beliefs can become as eternal if we support H.U.A.C.

Their stand in favor of prejudice is at least a refreshing change from the conservatives who seek to cloak their bigotry in more respectable terms. However, the basic ignorance of the belief is still manifest. Those who fight the hardest to prevent the federal government from "interfering" in the lives of the starving and aged are the first to support its witch-hunting tactics against the intellectual freedom and reform movements of our society.

If the two gentlemen have never, as they claim, heard of a case in which an innocent person has been "ruined" by H.U.A.C., they would do well to find out more about the institution of which they are such vociferous advocates. Recently at Mount Olive College in this state and at the University of California, college professors have been incriminated, harassed, and fired. What was their crime? Preaching subversion to students? Threatening the President? No. They had done nothing more than to allow their intellectual curiosity to wander beyond the arbitrary H.U.A.C. boundary. The F.B.I. had no record or evidence that any attempt had been made by these men to subvert the government, but they were still put to the mercy of 9 of their intellectual inferiors who act as a committee for inquisitions.

In Webster's definition of "prejudice," he calls it an opinion against something "without sufficient knowledge." To say that one should merely be against Communism without bothering to understand its concepts and ideals is an attitude which reflects the most reactionary and apathetic intellect. This position is particularly flagrant when any person who disagrees with H.U.A.C. may be labeled a Communist.

The most depressing aspect of the Adkinson-Jones article is their idea that anyone who does not go along with "the existing social order" should expect any consequence which society may choose to impose. It is probable that the possibility of punishment occurred to such social and political dissenters as Patrick Henry, Mahatma Gandhi, and Jesus Christ, but they were willing to fight the existing order to make known their convictions. If the United States is so unstable that it cannot allow radicals and nonconformists to express themselves, it will take more than H.U.A.C. to correct the situation.

The two writers state that "a certain stigma falls upon those who espouse the Communist cause, just as there is on anyone who promotes an unpopular cause." This statement is giving the Soviet system an alarming amount of prestige since almost every accepted institution in American society was at one time "unpopular."

Hopefully, the "super-patriots" will soon realize that they should stop being so optimistic about the future of Communism and cast some attention towards the progress of our own form of economy and government.

Smith Act: Guilt By Association

The Supreme Court's decision upholding the membership clause of the Smith Act is a logical extension of the doctrines and attitudes which have produced a general decline of our civil liberties during the past fifteen years, but it marks a further stage in that decline. The principle of guilt by association has become painfully familiar in loyalty-security proceedings and Congressional investigations, but it is carrying matters a long step further to make it the basis of severe criminal penalties. Yet that is what we do when we permit a person to be sent to prison, not for any acts or statements of his own, but solely for his membership in an organization. Specifying "knowing" membership does not make the matter any different, since such "knowledge" is merely an inference which the jury is permitted to draw from the fact of association.

Katanga Breakthrough

In what looks like a decisive breakthrough toward peace and unity in the Congo, the Katanga Assembly has accepted the Kitona agreement between Premier Adoula and President Tshombe as a basis of discussion to settle the Congo conflict. The acceptance is still tied to several conditions which imply further bargaining before the final ratification on which Mr. Tshombe insists. But the conditions now are not unreasonable.

The principal Katangan condition deals with the main issue that split the Congo apart — namely, centralism versus federalism. The Katanga Assembly demands a new Federal constitution to replace the present centralist fundamental law. A Constitutional Commission is now at work on that problem, and since Premier Adoula agreed to its creation it must be assumed that he will not object to a modification of the present law.

* * *

Much work remains to be done to put the Congo on its feet as a going concern. But the removal of most foreign mercenaries from Katanga, the rapprochement between the Congo and Belgium and the changing policies of the European mining interests in Katanga all point to a brighter future for that strife-torn country, which no reckless adventurism can be permitted to impair.

Reflections

The UNC legislature has voted itself into the position of having to reapportion the voting districts on campus. Like most state legislatures, they are faced with the problem of which area will get what number of representatives. The reason for the need to reapportion is the newly developing "rural" districts, comprised of the uncompleted Craige and Ehringhaus dormitories. We are wondering if these rural areas will incorporate, so that they can be overrepresented just as others in the country are.

Holman Writes Hemingway Ode For Magazine

Kenan Professor C. Hugh Holman, chairman of the English Department at UNC, is the author of an essay "Ernest Hemingway: A Tribute" which appears in the current issue of "Books Abroad," a periodical published at the University of Oklahoma.

Of Hemingway's contribution Holman writes: "Basically the service which Hemingway has rendered for our world is not in suggesting solutions to our problems but in defining our problems in terms of emotional states . . . The great thing he did for his world was to give it a vision of itself, lost in the wilderness without order or essential meaning . . . . Hemingway, like his protagonists, seems to stand in a modern world, the shattered fragments of older orders and systems about his feet, sensing in the drab staleness nothing but the ashes of memory and an artificial light."

"Books Abroad" was edited until recently by Dr. Wolfgang Bernard Fleischman, a UNC graduate, who is now Assistant Professor of Comparative Literature at Emory University.

Dr. Holman has made modern literature his specialty and is a critic of note.

Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Joan Fontaine, Norma Shearer, Paulette Goddard, and Ruth Hussey star in the all-female cast of tonight's Free Flick "The Women." Based on the play by Claire Boothe, "The Women" interprets the vitriolic play about mischief among the idle, rich, and spoiled matrons of New York.

This staire comedy won raves and approvals when first released and just as the title implies, the story is concerned mainly with women. In fact, no male actors are in the movie at all.

Charles Returns

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Charles went home to Buckingham Palace Thursday from the Hospital for Sick Children where he underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis 10 days ago.

Palace sources said the 13-year-old heir to the throne has been ordered by the doctors to spend two weeks resting before returning to Cheam School.

H-Bomb's Father Urges More Tests

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. Edward Teller, the "father" of the hydrogen bomb, Thursday strongly urged the United States to intensify its testing of nuclear weapons.

Teller, in his book "The Legacy of Hiroshima" published Thursday, said the important aim is to produce a "second strike force' which would be prepared for "limited warfare — limited in scope, limited in area, limited in objectives, but not limited in weapons."

Charging that the Soviet Union held secret nuclear experiments during the nuclear moratorium, Teller said a "localized, limited nuclear war will be the answer whenever the Russian method of ambiguous aggression degenerates to an outright attack against our allies.

"It will be the alternative to a disastrous, all-out, worldwide nuclear war.

"To prepare for a limited war, we must develop new kinds of international diplomacy, new theories of battle tactics, new varieties of nuclear weapons, new kinds of fighting men," Teller said.

All this is necessary, he warned, because any test ban signed between the nuclear powers, would be no more than a "gentlemen's agreement" which could be broken at any time. He also said disarmament was an uncertain means of keeping peace.

Teller said that the United States should share its nuclear secrets with its allies. He said that "secrecy has forced the United States to assume the ridiculous posture of denying to our friends facts that are known to our enemies."

He said that while the United States might have been ahead of Russia in nuclear weaponry in 1958 when the voluntary moratorium began, the American lead had vanished by the time the Soviets tested their super bombs last year.

Calls Bombing "Wrong"

Teller also deplored the U. S. atomic attack on Japan in 1945, calling the bombing of Hiroshima "unnecessary and wrong."

Bald Eagles Disappearing

CONCORD, N. H. (UPI) — The American eagle is facing extinction and you can thank the "hired guns" in Texas.

In a gloomy report on Washington's Birthday, state fish & game director Ralph G. Carpenter said bounty-happy hunters in the Lone Star state are killing off the national bird.

He said the Texas hunters, hired to protect sheep, can't tell the difference between the American, or bald eagle and the golden eagle.

The other day Carpenter was called to Lake Winnipesaukee, N. J., to identify two huge eagles soaring over an island. They were American eagles, he said, but they are becoming increasingly rare.

He said bills were pending in Congress to prohibit the killing of golden eagles as well as bald eagles.

And Carpenter added a note for the layman who might be watching his own hairline anxiously: the bald eagle is not bald. The term describes white plumage on his head and back.

Freshmen Meet Blue Imps Tonight In Rubber Match

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Carolina freshmen square off with the Blue Imps of Duke tonight at 8:00 in the rubber match of their three game series which will determine the 1962 unofficial ACC freshman champion.

The Tar Babies, 6-1 in conference play and 13-3 on the season, have split their two contests with the Imps this season. On Jan. 11 at Chapel Hill, coach Ken Rosemond's cagers throttled Duke, 74-62 to halt the Imps 22-game streak. Three weeks later, the boys from Durham struck back with vengeance by bombing the Billy Cunningham-minus Tar Babies, 81-60.

Tonight, it is Carolina's turn and the freshmen will be out to get this one, not only for its league-leading significance but also to prove that their Cunningham-led first victory was no fluke.

mington Junior College 85-75, in its last outing, will go with the same starters it has used since Cunningham left. At center will be 6-4 Ray Respess. The Pantego flash takes a 15.5 scoring average into the Tar Babies' final game. He also boasts a 51.4 percentage from the floor.

Ex-Durham ace Bill Brown, who leads the team in field goal accuracy with 51.9 per cent while contributing 12 points a game, and Beaufort's Pud Hassell, Rosemond's top defender, will be at the forwards.

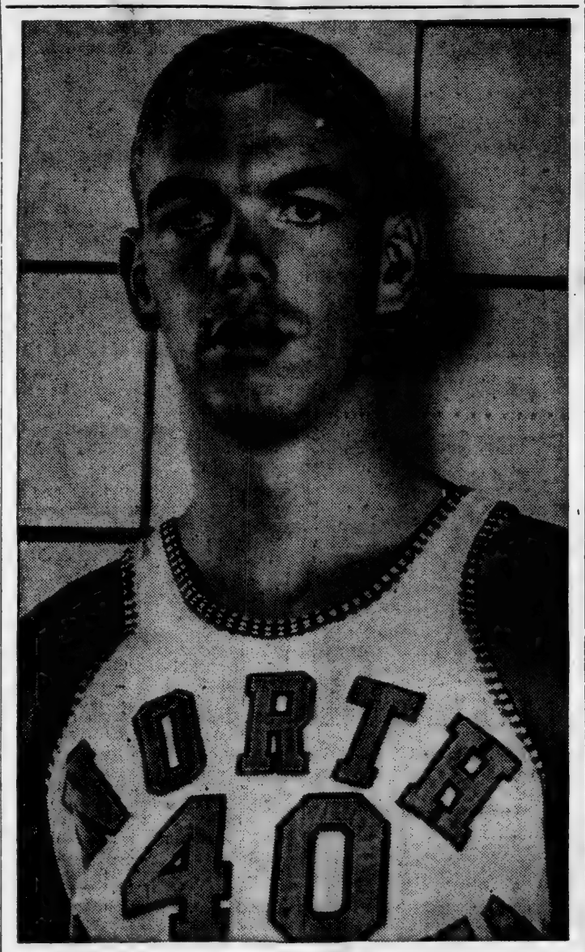
In backcourt, Rosemond will start Jay Neary and Bill Taylor. Neary, the 6-2 speedster from Cambria Heights, N. Y., has accounted for 18.1 points per game this season while hitting 50.2 per cent of his shots. Taylor, the 5-11 Cary product, has done an admirable job in a playmaking capacity while filling in for the departed Cunningham.

Blue Imp coach Bucky Waters, whose loss in January was his first to a Big Four team in two years will have his charges primed and ready for the title test tonight.

The Imps, who were beaten 80-63 by Davidson earlier this week in their only loss since the Chapel Hill trimming, will start a forward line which averages 6-7—undoubtedly one of the tallest freshman forecourt brigades in the country.

Seven-foot center Hack Tison, 6-7 forward Brent Kitching and 6-5 forward Ted Mann are all taller than any Carolina regular and this height differential could be a big factor in tonight's battle. Guards Ron Herbster and Elliot McBride round out the Duke starting lineup.

Carolina, which bowed to Wil-



PUD HASSELL, 6-3 Tar Baby forward from Beaufort, N. C., is averaging only 8.9 points a game for freshman coach Ken Rosemond, but his defensive talent and rebounding against larger basketballers have made him a valuable team member. Tonight in the rubber match of a three game series Hassell will probably be given the task of guarding Duke's 7-foot center Hack Tison. Hassell held Tison to 7 points in the last Duke-UNC frosh contest.

Len Chappell's 30.7 Mark Paces ACC Scoring Race

By ED DUPREE

With All-ACC and All-American selection times rapidly drawing near, Wake Forest's Lennie Chappell is making as much or more noise on the basketball courts as any player in the nation.

The Demon Deacon tower of strength scored 32 points or better in eight consecutive games through Feb. 17 and raised his average to 30.7 for the season, almost five points a game more than that of his nearest competitor, Art Heyman's 25.8.

This late season surge, characteristic of the 6-8 mountain's scoring trend of the previous two seasons, puts him in position to be the number two scorer in the nation—only Utah's Billy McGill has a commanding lead on the Portage, Pa., product.

As a heralded sophomore the big boy averaged only 17.6 a game, but that was second in the conference to UNC's All-American Lee Shaffer. Then as a junior Lennie upped his average to 26.6 a game. A 29.8 average for eight February games and a 30.8 mark for five games in March was responsible for this league leading mark.

Scored 25 Wednesday

In a game not included in the weekly ACC averages Chappell scored 25 Wednesday night in Wake's 69-62 win over N. C. State at Raleigh. This was the first time in nine games that Lennie dropped below the 32-point mark.

Chappell has scored 644 points in 21 games for his lofty average while Duke's Heyman has scored 515 for his 25.8.

Art Whisnant of South Carolina is third with a 21.8 average, while Jeff Mullins of Duke is the fourth 20-point or better man with a 20.9 standard.

ten scorers are: Tony Laquintano, Virginia, 19.1; Jon Speaks, N. C. State, 18.6; Jim Brennan, Clemson, 17.3; Jim Hudock, UNC, 16.1; Larry Brown, UNC, 15.6, and Hunter Conner, Virginia, 15.2.

Duke Leads Team Scoring

Duke's Blue Devils paced by the Heyman-Mullins scoring duo, lead the ACC in team scoring. The Durham lads have poured in points at an 82.3 clip in 21 games. Wake is second with an 80.7 mark.

Maryland, usually the top defensive squad in the league, is only third in that category going into the final week. N. C. State's dangerous Wolfpack has allowed only 66.6 points a game to hold down the top defensive spot. Duke follows closely with a 67.5 mark.

Tar Heels Lead Shooting

UNC's Tar Heels have the top field goal shooting percentage, but the top five is so tight that the last week and the tournament team that shoots the best in the should finish on top. Carolina held a .470 mark through Saturday's games, but Duke followed closely with a .467. Other top shooting teams are Wake Forest, .465, South Carolina, .461, and N. C. State, .459.

Maryland is all alone in foul shooting dominance. The Terps have connected on a sparkling .749 of their foul shots. Only Wake Forest at .696 is near the .700 mark. South Carolina's .687 puts the Gamecocks third on the free toss line.

Top rebounding team is Duke — 51.3 rebounds a game. Clemson's sophomores are second with 47.5 and Wake is third with a 46.8 mark.

WUNC Radio Station Will Return Soon

WUNC-FM has been off the air since January 19, because of the installation of new equipment, Manager Reno Baily said yesterday.

A new monitor system is being installed in the station. Due to mechanical difficulties, the station has not been able to resume broadcasting.

The faults in the new system are expected to be corrected within a few weeks, at which time WUNC-FM will resume broadcasting.

Delta Sigs Roll Over ATO In Limited Mural Action

By John Montague

Frank Potter and George Oldham combined their scoring talents Wednesday afternoon to produce 36 of Delta Sig's 43 points, as the Rogues whipped the ATO Rinky-dinks, 43-27. Potter was the big gun with 21, while Oldham managed 15.

The contest was one of four games played on Wednesday's limited intramural basketball schedule. Here is a quick re-cap of the other games:

Phi D. Loads 48, Sig. Nu Losers 19

The Phi Delta boys rolled with the greatest of ease in this one. Joe Webb hit for 16 and Tom Rogers chipped in with 13 to lead the offensive attack.

Sigma Nu Mavericks 32, Chi Phi Snorts 21

The Mavericks found the going a little easier than did their brother team, moving to an 11-point decision over the Snorts. Joe Moye pumped in 16 markers to lead the Mavs, while Rudy Mansfield bucketed an even dozen for the losers.

Sigma C. Frogs 25, Phi D. Nads 23

Joe Brantley's 10 points paced the Frogs in this tight, low-scoring contest.

Two forfeits completed the day's slate. The Chi Psi Styes took a technical win over the SAE Eaters and the Phi Kap Phantoms forfeited to the Phi Delt Joints.

Four games are scheduled for this afternoon, rounding out the week's activity. At four o'clock the DKE Dimes will take on the Chi Psi Styes on court 5, while the DKE White and the ATO Drills will tangle on court 5 and the Beta Szbticks go aginst the Sigma Nu Losers on court 6.

ROSENBLUTH'S RECORDS

Lennie Rosenbluth holds no less than eight UNC basketball records. The star of UNC's national championship team in 1957 holds the school record for the most points scored (47), most field goals scored (20), and the most rebounds (25) in one game. In addition, fabulous Len holds the mark for most points scored in a season (895), Best scoring average (27.9), most field goals in a season (305), most free throws in a season (285) and most points scored during career (2045).

Swim Championships Enter Second Day At Raleigh

By Ed Dupree

The Atlantic Coast Conference swimming championships move into their second day this afternoon with preliminaries slated for 1 p.m. and finals at 7:30 tonight at N. C. State's new swimming stadium.

On tap today are the 200-butterfly, 50-freestyle, 220-freestyle, 200-backstroke, low board diving, 400-freestyle relay and 200-breastroke events.

UNC students can attend each of today's activities for half price by showing an ID card. Regular prices are $1 for the finals and fifty cents for the prelims.

The water contests began Thursday night at 7. The events which started the three-day program were the 200-individual medley and the 1500-meter freestyle races.

The Thursday and Friday finals will be taped for showing on WRAL-TV, Raleigh. Saturday afternoon's finals will be televised live.

The annual meet concludes Saturday with the 100-butterfly, 100-freestyle, 100 - breaststroke, 100-backstroke, 440-freestyle, high dive and 400-medley relay.

UNC's Thompson and State's Bill McGinty, Pete Fogarsay, and Ed Spencer are all lauded by Coaches Pat Earey of UNC, Willis Casey of State, and Bill Campbell of Maryland as probable record breakers in the swimming championships.

BROTHERS HOLD RECORDS

Willie Bloom, UNC junior, and Harry Bloom, his older brother who graduated in 1961, hold or share four ACC swimming records. Harry has the best conference time in both the 100 freestyle and 200 individual medley events. Willie took the individual championship in last year's 200 freestyle and set a new ACC mark doing it. He also swam on the 400 freestyle relay team which set an ACC mark last year.

Algerian Terror Hits New Height With 27 Killings

Daylight Curfew Is Placed On Suburbs

ALGIERS (UPI) — A mob of hundreds of Algerians threw up a road block in an Oran suburb Friday, ambushing and killing occupants of European cars. Thousands of police and soldiers clamped a daylight curfew on Arab suburbs to halt the outburst of violence.

The ambushing caused a wave of fury among Europeans in the west Algerian port city where terror attacks have been running at the rate of about one every 20 minutes in recent days.

The Oran violence capped a day of terrorism in which at least 27 persons were killed and 37 were wounded throughout Algeria. It brought the total casualties since Jan. 1 to 1,043 killed and 1,786 wounded.

The highway leading from Oran to the city airport was the main trouble spot.

Most of the ambushed drivers abandoned their cars and fled for their lives. But the mob chased three Europeans and a Moslem to a vacant lot and slit their throats.

Troops and mobile gendarmes rushed to the scene, quickly dispersed the mob and cleared away the barricade. But the Arab bands roamed the area for several hours and authorities finally imposed a curfew to impose calm.

Earlier in the day, a group of more than 100 Algerians broke the pre-dawn curfew and shot up a government office in the same suburb of Oran.

At nearby Sidi Bel Abbes, headquarters of the French Foreign Legion, several hundred Arabs ran riot after a bomb went off in front of a Moslem-owned store.

Indian Governors Hit Menon Group

BOMBAY, India (UPI) — Local leaders of India's governing Congress Party charged Friday the Communists have taken over the election campaign of Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon.

The party leaders sent a message to their central organization and to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru complaining the Communists had moved in and elbowed aside local campaign workers.

Krishna Menon, the Congress Party candidate, faces a hard fight to retain his seat in parliament in the Bombay area balloting. He is opposed by independent candidate Acharya J. B. Kripalani.

Some 17,000 "Vote for Menon" posters were dispatched to Bombay by air from New Delhi Thursday night to give Krishna Menon a boost Sunday—the last polling day in India's 10-day general elections.

ASKS $1 MILLION

Labor Dept. Seeks Farm Job Openings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department asked Congress Friday for more than $1 million to help find farm jobs for unemployed city workers particularly these living in depressed areas.

Robert C. Goodwin, administrater of the bureau of employment security, said his agency planned to recruit the workers in labor surplus areas and in Louisiana and Mississippi. He said large numbers of farm workers are unemployed in these states.

In a statement to a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, Goodwin said he hoped the farm placement drive and expanded information gathering activities by the federal bureau and state agencies would reduce employer dependence on Mexican labor.

Rapid mechanization on the farm and shifts in the kinds of crops being produced have produced longer time gaps between jobs for migrant workers, Goodwin said.

The use of farm machinery has upset traditional movements of migratory labor, he said.

"We plan to reschedule the movements of migrant workers to take advantage of the additional unemployment opportunities in crops where the yield and labor requirements are expanding," Goodwin said.

Goodwin indicated the low wages and poor working conditions were the principal barriers to employment of more domestic workers in farm jobs.

Gungus Ho will be twisting to the music of the Catalinas tonight at the CU Day Dance at Woman's College.

Woman's College Plays Host For CU Celebration

The Catalinas will entertain for the CU Day Dance tonight when 3,000 girls at Woman's College play host for Carolina men. The dance will be preceded by an open house in Mendenhall Dorm at 7 p.m.

The IDC and the Communications Committee have been promoting the event in the hopes of establishing a permanent program of dorm parties with WC. The two groups have been cooperating with the Consolidated University Student Council, composed of representatives from Carolina, N. C. State and Woman's College, which sponsors the CU Day activities.

Two buses have been chartered and will leave Y Court for Greensboro at 5:45. The round trip charge for the bus trip will be $1.00 per student. Those students making reservations with their dorm presidents for the bus trip will have preference in seating.

The admissions fee for the dance is $1.00.

Student Party To Survey All Candidates

Monday night at 7:30 the Student Party will hold its regular weekly meeting in Howell Hall. Legislative seats will be filled for the remainder of the present term in the districts of DW II, consisting of Nurses' Dorm, Whitehead, Smith, Carr; DM III, Joyner, Alexander, Conner, Winston; DM IV, Upper Quad; TM III; and TM IV.

The Convention and election information will also be announced Monday. All persons seeking SP endorsement for Spring elections have been asked to be present. Furthermore, prospective candidates have been asked to keep in mind the SP policy of no double-endorsements.

The Nominating Convention will be held next Monday and Tuesday nights, March 5 and 6, at Howell Hall. Candidates for President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer of the Student Body will be nominated with part of the legislative candidates Monday. The rest of the 50 legislative candidates will be nominated Tuesday. The 1962-63 platform will also be adopted.

All interested students have been invited to place their names before the party for nomination on March 5 and 6 by SP Chairman Jimmy Weeks.

Turkish Forces Stop Teenage Rebellion

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Calm returned to Turkey Friday after loyal armed forces snuffed out a vest-pocket rebellion by teen-age military cadets. Premier Ismet Inonu told the nation his government was "in full control."

A government announcement said some 8,000 cadets returned to the war school after regular army troops surrounded them and arrested the school commandant, Col. Talat Aydemir and other alleged revolt leaders.

Student Solons Pass Resolution Against N-Tests

Legislature Amends Election Laws

The Student Legislature heard a speech by President Bill Harriss, passed an atomic testing resolution, amended election district apportionment and revised election laws, bought a duplicating machine and passed several other bills Thursday night.

Student Body President Harriss spoke on the election laws, the "Carolina Handbook," dorm social life, and campus improvements.

The first business was Rep. Robin Britt's atomic testing resolution to condemn Russia's last tests, support a U. S. move for a test ban and ask that the U. S. move for a test ban and ask that the U. S. not test unless necessary for national security.

The resolution was hotly debated for over an hour. Arguing both sides, representatives from both parties fought about whether the legislature had the authority to sponsor a resolution or should sponsor one.

The resolution finally passed in a roll call vote—18 for, 15 against, one abstention.

Rep. Bill Criswell's bill to provide a $600 scholarship for a Cuban refugee was debated and then sent back to committee for further examination.

A reapportionment-bill amendment, introduced by Rep. John Randall, to even up district representatives was passed. (Dorm Men's 5, which has about 300 residents, had been given as many representatives as Dorm Men's 2, which has 690 residents.)

Electing NSA delegates in the spring elections instead of appointing them was adopted in a bill sponsored by Rep. Randall.

Appointing the Yack Editor instead of electing him was also passed. Rep. Randall said that since the Yack editors needed technical qualifications, appointment would better assure competent editors.

Rep. Wheless' bill requiring a finance committee report at every legislative session was passed. He said the Legislature needed to know exactly how much money they had.

The Legislature bought the Student Government a duplicating machine. Rep. Hays sponsored the bill, saying the machine would save time, money and effort. Since the machine prints in several colors, it was named "The Exotic Machine" by Vice-President Hank Patterson.

The Representatives elected by acclamation Rep. Richard Akers as their Sergeant-at-Arms and two delegates to the Publications Board—Rep. Dick Stapleton and Rep. Kippy Carter.

In his "State of the Campus" speech, Pres. Harriss asked the Legislature to correct the reapportionment bill (which they did) to give equal representation.

He announced the new "Carolina Handbook," explaining that it was a combination of several previous publications. He expressed the hope that the new book would make fall orientation easier and give incoming freshmen a truer picture of Carolina.

Urging the Legislature to improve social facilities for dorm men, he said that this is one of the "areas that needs improving and, sadly enough, is hardest to improve."

He outlined the University's improvement plan and urged continued work for a new student union. He said that the student government is working with Chancellor Aycock and the Administration on a building plan that stretched through 1970.

Several new bills were postponed till the next session. Several committee reports were heard.

Caine Mutiny Shows Tonight

Humphrey Bogart, Jose Ferrer, Van Johnson, Fred MacMurray, Robert Francis and May Wynn star in tonight's Free Flick, "The Caine Mutiny." Produced by Stanley Kramer, "The Caine Mutiny" is based on Herman Wouk's Pulitzer Prize novel and enacts the raw emotions and drama seething beneath the decks of the combat vessel Caine in the Pacific during World War II. Here is the age-old story of men against the sea and man against himself, told with power, with understanding and by superb actors.

Showings will be in Carroll Hall at 7:30 and 9:30 and only students with ID Cards will be admitted.

JFK, Macmillan Agree Not To Climb Summit

Glenn Labels Space Travel Habit Forming

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — U. S. spaceman John H. Glenn Jr. said Friday that whirling in orbit around the earth was "a very pleasant sensation that one could become addicted to" and could become addicted to" and predicted that future space flights will depend more heavily on the man aboard.

"It was quite a day," the suntanned 40-year-old Marine lieutenant colonel said of the voyage that took him 157 miles into space and 81,000 miles around the globe last Tuesday.

Glenn, newly decorated by President Kennedy and the center of attention from thousands who welcomed him back to the country Friday, painted a dramatic picture of glowing sunsets, sparkling blue oceans and mysterious "space fireflies" — a few of the scores of views he had from his space capsule.

The spaceman also reflected briefly on a fearful moment toward the end of his four hour, 56 minute trip in which it seemed at the time he faced a possibility of flaming death on a blazing reentry through earth's atmosphere.

A signal from the capsuple he named Friendship 7 indicated its heat shield — a curved piece of metal and plastic designed to protect the spacecraft from the heat of atmospheric friction — had separted from the craft. The signal later proved to be false.

"It could have been a bad day all the way around," Glenn commented.

Enthusiastically Described Flight

The astronaut was enthusiastic in describing most of the three-orbit flight. "I don't know what you can say about four beautiful sunsets in the same day," he said about his favorite view of the trip.

Glenn said that after the spaceship had soared more than 100 miles above the earth and entered a state of apparent weightlessness at 17,000 miles an hour, "it was very peleasant. I enjoyed it very much. In fact, it's the sort of thing you could become addicted to."

Glenn said he felt "no ill efects at all" during weightlessness.

He said he tried several head movements very violently but that these too caused no ill effects.

Soviet cosmonaut Gherman Titov, who orbited the earth 17 times last August, reported later he became ill at about the sixth orbit. Glenn speculated that "probably over an extended period there might be some nausea."

Weightlessness led to some curiosities inside Friendship 7. The astronaut said that at one point he was using a hand camera to make pictures through his viewing window when he had to make a switch change on the instrument panel. He let the camera go and it hovered in the air. "It seemed just like the natural thing to do," he said with a smile. "We all adapt very rapidly to a situation, I suppose." But here gravity also has its problems.

Lost Can Of Film

Glenn recalled that a little can of film fell out of his fingers. "and when I tried to grab it I batted it and it fell behind the instrument panel. That's the last I saw of it."

Glenn had no problem eating from a tube of food which he squirted into his mouth but had to forego one attempt at eating in the orbital flight fhen he became involved with keeping Friendship 7 from wobbling because of difficulty with its automatic control system.

NASSER LEARNS LESSON

CAIRO (UPI) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser told a mass rally Thursday night that the lesson learned from the breakup of the United Arab Republic was "never to compromise with reactionaries." The rally was held to commemorate the union of Egypt and Syria four years ago.

Folk, Powell Win Goettingen Bids

Michael James Folk and Robert Duane Powell have been selected as Goettingen Scholars for 1962-63, the Goettingen Selections Committee announced yesterday.

The two juniors were selected mainly on the committee's judgment on "how much they can contribute to Goettingen University and to UNC upon their return," committee spokesman John Clinard stated.

"Both showed keen interest in and good knowledge of the Goettingen exchange program," Clinard said. "The two also presented excellent academic records."

Folk has been a member of the track and cross-country teams here for three years and placed fourth in the ACC cross-country standings as a sophomore.

He earns all of his college expenses by working as a computer programmer at the Computation Center. He also holds a student aid scholarship. He held an NROTC scholarship during his freshman year but was disqualified by poor eyesight.

Powell, a physics major from Wilson, is a Morehead Scholar and has qualified for Dean's list three semesters. He is a member of Phi Eta Sigma honorary fraternity and Sigma Nu social fraternity.

He has served as chairman of the Carolina Forum and as a counselor with the Foreign Student Orientation program. He is chairman of the Carolina Council for the United Nations and has attended the last two YMCA Mock UN Assemblies.

The Goettingen Exchange program was started at UNC in 1955 after a number of Goettingen students and faculty members visited the Carolina campus. Since that time the two institutions have exchanged two students each year.

The only requirements for Goettingen scholars is that they have at least sophomore standing and agree to spend at least one year at UNC after their return. Some knowledge of German is also required.

GOP Leader Hits Odum Statement

Earl Baker, UNC-YRC president yesterday stated that T. L. Odum's statement regarding justification of the Republican Party's existence in the state is "ridiculous on its face."

"Since the Democratic Party has been entrenched in power in the state for decades," he added, "the state has consistently been at the bottom of the pile in education, teacher benefits and standard of living. High-Tax-Terry's belated program for the highly touted New Day is a tacit admission of this."

Baker noted that the up-coming debate between the YRC and YDC will probably touch on these issues. The debate is on Wednesday, Feb. 28, at 7:30 in the Law School Courtroom, 210 Manning.

Probable debaters for the YRC will be Earl Baker and Mack Armstrong; for the YDC, Johnny Killian and Joe Roberts.

Odum said Baker's statement "typified the usual gripe, gripe, gripe of Republicans in this state." He added, "When Republicans in this state can show us that they could have done a better job, I will eat a pair of donkey's ears."

The debate topic will be, "Resolved: That the one party system in North Carolina has been detrimental to the best interests of the citizens and the state."

Khrush Makes New Bid For March Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan were preparing Friday to tell Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that no amount of propaganda would force them into a summit conference at the opening of next month's Geneva disarmament talks.

Officials here and in London said the Western leaders would reply within the next day or two to a lengthy and somewhat truculent note which they received from Khrushchev Thursday.

In the 2,500-word note, Khrushchev renewed his bid for a March summit meeting, and questioned Kennedy's sincerity in going ahead with disarmament conference plans at a time when, according to press reports, the United States was preparing to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

Officials made clear that the U. S. and British governments will reject the new Soviet demand for a top-level meeting, and will stand firm on their previous assertion that the 18-nation disarmament talks in Geneva should begin March 14 on the foreign ministers level, with a summit gathering possible later if progress warrants.

U. S. officials said Khrushchev may be maneuvering to sabotage the entire disarmament conference if President Kennedy, as expected, announces early in March his decision to resume nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

At the minimum, they said, Khrushchev is trying to build up world pressure against resumption of U. S. testing, and to extract as much propaganda advantage as possible from the expected Kennedy decision.

Kennedy has said that nothing will influence his decision on renewed testing except the results of a study which U. S. experts are now completing of the Soviet nuclear tests last autumn.

Campus Briefs

"Is There A Christian Philosophy of History?" will be the topic of a talk by Father John A. Weidinger, Ph.D., to the Newman Club Sunday night. The meeting begins with supper at 5:30.

Graham Memorial will present Odetta at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Memorial Hall. The concert will be free to all UNC students upon the presentation of ID cards. Spouses will be admitted for $1.

All Carolina students interested in forming a coed Caving-Climbing Club are invited to attend a dinner meeting at 5:30 p.m. Monday in the middle upstairs room of Lenoir Hall. Persons unable to attend this meeting may contact David Danzler at 406 Mangum.

The Student Party will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Howell Hall. A program is planned and several legislative seats will be filled.

Graham Memorial will sponsor a 7 week course in bridge starting March 1. Anyone interested may sign up at the information desk in GM. There will be no charge for the lessons.

A bus driver is needed today from 5:45 to 1 a.m. There will be pay. Call 968-9055 and ask for Owen Bishop or Ralph Mosely.

UP Chairman Bill Criswell announces that anyone interested in joining the University Party may do so between the hours of 2 and 6 p.m., today and Sunday at the UP headquarters in the Yack office, GM. The UP will hold a convention Monday at 7 in Memorial Hall.

Both graduated and undergraduate students are invited to participate in the National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament which will be held in Roland Parker Lounges 2 and 3 at GM Sunday, February 25 at 2 p.m. Partnership reservations must be made in advance by signing up at the GM Information Desk or calling Ray Weisen at 968-61163.

The International Students Board present Mr. G. Serebriakov, Second Secretary, Embassy of the USSR, speaking on "Recent Soviet Foreign Policy", in Carroll Hall Wednesday, February 28, at 8:00 p.m.

The Solicitations Committee of the Campus Chest will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Y.

The IFC will hold rush February 27-March 1. Those who have not signed up are welcome to come through on their own.

Applications for the French Exchange Scholarship with Tours are available in the Y office, GM, and the Reserve Reading Room of the library. Deadline for their return to the Y office is March 9.

All men students interested in joining the Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity are invited to attend the two rush meetings being held Monday, Feb. 26, in the TV room of GM and Thursday, March 1, in Roland Parker 3. Both meetings are scheduled for 7 p.m.

"The House Un-American Activities Committee and Civil Liberties" will be the topic discussed at the Binkley Baptist Student Union Supper Seminar this Sunday at the Church House. Dr. Wayne Bowers will lead the discussion. Supper begins at 5:45.

There will be a meeting of the Petite Dramatique Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial. The meeting is open to prospective members. Anyone unable to attend may contact Don Curtis at the Graham Memorial Activities Board.

For Far Right

Super-Salesman

Dr. Fred Swartz, possibly the best known salesman for super-patriotism offers a refreshing change from the steady diet of frothy-mouthed rantings currently being spewed from the fever swamps of the far right.

Swartz, who heads the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade, eschews such phrases as "impeach Earl Warren," "Lynch Eleanor Roosevelt," "Investigate the Boy Scouts," and so forth. The pitch Swartz uses in setting up and conducting his program of "anti-Communist education" is strictly cerebral—with only a touch of the journey-man preacher thrown in. "In order to fight communism," the peripatetic Australian begins his argument, "you must be informed about it."

Good.

After making this hardly disputable point, the ersatz defender goes on to point out that by grasping four or five basic points about the "insidious threat," you, too, can be a crusader agains+ the triple threat of communism, atheism and ignorance.

Also good.

Then, after this oversimplified, but unassuming build-up, Friendly Fred outlines his "facts" about communism—they infiltrate, undermine, win over, and finally, enslave. Here again, the analysis is grossly oversimplified and overdrawn, but not unduly offensive. Swartz usually wraps up his act, like a true Chaucerian Pardoner by hawking his wares—in this case, books on communism.

A one-time fundamentalist preacher, Swartz has a dynamic, if somewhat ludicrous appeal. Large, owlish-looking glasses straddle his slightly hooked nose and are held to his head by distractingly large ears. His delivery is rapid, high-pitched and spiced with a heavy cockney accent. Usually dapper in an appropriately conservative suit, he is articulate and entertaining, underscoring his points with violent gestures and hell-fire-and-brimstone intonation.

Taken alone, out of the feverish atmosphere of the extreme right, Swartz is no more disturbing than any other True Believer who ascends a podium to win friends and con people. What puts Swartz in another category altogether removed from the humorous, is his actual role as a salesman for the radical Right. After Swartz softens up his listeners, they are primed for action—action which usually takes the now-standard ultra-Rightist pattern for "fighting Communism": smears, witch-hunting, slander and so forth.

And in his own entertaining, dynamic and ingratiating way, Swartz is probably more to be reckoned with than a thousand men cast from the mold of Robert Welch.

This is possibly the most frightening thing about the super-patriotic attitude. Swartz, and other demagogic super-salesmen can put it across to the frightened, the gullible and the uninformed.

Probable Candidates

Although the University Party Big Four slate for spring elections is virtually already chosen, just who will come up with the Student Party nominations remains a clouded question.

There is little doubt that present GMAB Chairman Inman Allen will fill the top spot on the UP slate—and has already started preliminary campaigning. Who will be the vice-presidential candidate is doubtful, but UP Chairman Bill Criswell and State Affairs committee Co-Chairman Larry McDevitt appear the most likely contenders. Bob Reardon, now treasurer of the junior class, is the most likely UP candidate for treasurer. The UP nomination for secretary will probably go to Judy Clark, who now serves as Clerk of Student Legislature.

The SP slate is still very much in doubt. Presidential Assistant Dwight Wheless, a shoo-in for the nomination a few weeks ago, is now not so assured. Former legislator Buddy Broome will possibly fight for the nomination and it appears that he will run as an independent if he fails. The SP at present probably will not bet on him.

The party probably will also not be receptive to another possible contender, Honor Council member Mike Lawler. Wheless ,it appears, will receive the party blessings, but not without a fight within the party.

Legislator Scott Summers might receive the SP nod for the vice-presidential candidacy, but also has possibilities as a candidate for treasurer.

Who will be the SP secretarial candidate is anyone's guess.

Most of the SP's headaches will come from the fight for the presidential nomination. If both Broome and Lawler are defeated in their bid, either or both might announce as indendendents, tearing away posible dorm votes which would otherwise go to the SP. The UP's Allen already has most of the farternity support lined up.

This means that the SP, which is betting heavily on the dorm vote, is faced with a decision of whether to cater to Broome's influence there or try to shut him out completely and run the risk of his independent candidacy. If Lawler also chooses to run independently, the chances for a SP win will be cut drastically.

Ford Rowan Explains NSA

Discussions Spawn NSA Policy

By FORD ROWAN

This third article in our series explaining the National Student Association is designed to present a a picture of how the main organ of N.S.A., the Congress, operates. The purpose of the Congress is to provide an opportunity for student leaders from all over the country to meet and discuss mutual problems and programs in the workshops and subworkshops and to allow for the establishment of the policies and programs of the U.S.N.S.A., through democratic processes on the plenary floor.

The National Student Congress is held each year during the summer at a convenient member school. Each member school sends a delegation ranging from one to eight persons depending on the size of the school. These delegates are either appointed by the respective student legislature or by popular election at each member school. At the present time Carolina's student legislature is considering revising its present method of legislative appointment to include direct election of four of our six delegates. The other two will be the president and vice president of the student body.

The dozen days of the Congress are divided into three fairly equal parts. The first of these parts is the pre-congress, the orientation sessions, workshops, and subworkshops. The pre-congress consists of conferences of student residents, editors, and N.S.A. coordinators. The forty-eight stimulating and informative workshop groups discuss the more important questions concerning the student's role in the modern world and provide concrete programs which can be implemented on campus. Each delegate selects two workshops and two subworkshops to attend.

The second one-third of the Congress's time is devoted to legislative committees and subcommittees. These twenty-five-man subcommittees represent the first step in the legislative process; from subcommittee to committee to the floor of the Congress; proposals discussed by these subcommittees meet further discussion and revision in the committee meetings before they might finally be brought before the plenary session. There are five legislative committees (every delegate is on one), each committee having numerous subcommittees (every delegate is on one). These committees last fall were (1) The Student and the Educational Process, (2) Human Rights and Academic Freedom, (3) Student Self-Government, (4) The Campus and the Greater Community, (5) International Affairs.

The third major part of the Congress is the actual sessions of the whole Congress. The resolutions, policy declarations, and mandates passed by this plenary become the official U.S.N.S.A. policy and are the core of N.S.A. programs for the coming year. Because of the great amount of legislation considered during the congress (over 100 pieces), the plenary is usually only able to act on about fifteen. The remainder of these may be referred to the National Executive Committee (N.E.C.) for final action after the Congress. The legislation acted on by the plenary is priorized by the N.E.C. so that the most important issues are considered and debated by the main body of the Congress. Thus most of the legislation considered by the N.E.C. is of a less important and perfunctory nature.

The National Executive Committee acts as a steering committee and draws up a tentative agenda for the next congress. Its actions on the "leftover" resolutions referred to it are in force only for one year until the next Congress can take them up again.

The National Student Congress is the only nationwide meeting of student leaders of a non-partisan political nature which endeavors to represent student opinion. Through the valuable leadership workshops and through the legislative plenary sessions, the N.S.A. and its Congress offers a great potential for the American student.

ATTITUDES by Clotfelter

Pledges Buy Into Slavery

UNC's 24 social fraternities will pledge another group of men next week—men who will have to live under the University's Administration and faculty-imposed restrictions.

Restrictions on social activity, relationships within the fraternity, and the academic status of individual members are some of the aspects of fraternity life which the administration and faculty feel called upon to regulate.

Fraternities, on the whole, have accepted these regulations without open opposition, probably fearing Administration action in additional fields, such as deferred rush. (It was an encouraging sign that the Interfraternity Council, not the Administration or the faculty, adopted the deferred rush plan.)

* * *

80 PER CENT

The "80 per cent" rule is probably the most controversial restriction on fraternity freedom.

It requires that 80 per cent of all active members of each fraternity make a "C" average during each semester. If the fraternity fails to meet the requirement for one semester, it is placed on probation. If it fails for two semesters, it is deprived of its pledging privileges.

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities instituted the scholarship regulations in 1960. It also required that all pledges had to have a "C" average and have passed 12 academic hours per semester to be initiated into a fraternity. Failure to make a "C" average for two semesters means a pledge must go inactive until he makes his average.

(The Interfraternity Council also requires that any active member who drops below a "C" average for two consecutive semesters, must be deactivated from the house until he makes his average again.)

The faculty-ordered "80 per cent" rule cannot be modified or eliminated by either the Administration or the fraternities. It rules supreme and untouchable.

The rule is capable of financially ruining a fraternity by taking away its source or revenue—new pledges—or even driving a fraternity off campus, bankrupt. The four fraternities which were deprived of rushing privileges this fall apparently made it through somehow, but all suffered financially.

* * *

COED VISITING

The dean of women, the dean of student affairs, and representatives of the IFC meet every year to negotiate a visiting agreement covering UNC coeds and "imports."

This year's agreement sets hours in which women can be in fraternity houses; instructs the IFC and individual fraternities to force compliance with the Campus Code and the University drinking rule; calls for a chaperone to be present at all social functions; and forbids coeds to go in houses which have less than ten resident members.

Before coeds are allowed officially to enter a fraternity house the IFC must agree to these restrictions.

* * *

AUTHORITY FOR IFC

The coed visiting and "80 per cent" rules constitute restrictions which should be made—if they are to be made at all—by the Interfraternity Council. If the IFC fails to impose the restrictions, then its decision should stand and there should be no academic rules or coed visiting regulations.

Fraternity men are not special cases who require more attention than the average student. Just because they are participants in a social group they do not need increased protection from the evils of not-studying, women, and liquor . . . .

No other group is required to meet a certain academic average.

No other off-campus residents are subject to the whims of the dean of women's office, concerning women's hours, visiting hours, chaperones, drinking, etc. Other students living in apartments and private houses are allowed complete freedom in these areas.

Individual members of fraternities deserve the same freedom allowed to other male off-campus residents: the right to be left alone to regulate their own lives outside the classroom.

Future pledges will have to live under these restrictions, along with the older fraternity members, as long as the Administration and faculty insist upon forcing its own standards on the Greeks.

Part II

Crowded Classes Hamper Student

Editors Note: Carolina student Henry Mayer is currently spending his junior year of study at the University of California, at Berkeley, under an Inter-State Scholarship. The following article, the second of two-parts, outlines life at that thriving coastal university, and offers interesting points of comparison and contrast with Carolina.

Not only does the crowded classroom prevent active student participation, but it also reduces the opportunity to demonstrate proficiency and understanding. Most courses have only one or two quizzes and a final, with term papers being the exception rather than the rule. Written work is examined by a grader, and the professor only sees the papers of his graduate students, unless the class is small enough for him to peruse the work of his undergraduates as well. A "small" class, however, means one with less than 40 people. This system is at best unsatisfactory, and no matter how conscientious the grader might be, he is confined to a narrow band of answers and has little room for evaluation.

What is even more restrictive is the caliber of questions asked. With few exceptions professors are content to ask expository and descriptive questions with little room for demonstrated critical thinking on the part of the student, and few opportunities for creative expression of ideas. Such standardized answers are probably easier to grade, but results in widespread mediocrity. In general, the undergraduate sitting high in the lecture hall, is made to feel insignificant and unworthy in the presence of knowledge, and many professors do not appear to be at all concerned with what their students think of the material; they only want to be sure that they amass the information he dispenses, in order to satisfy the grader. It is a savage and unrewarding system, made even more frustrating by the difficulty of procuring the books, both required and recommended, necessary for the completion of this task. Thus, Cal's system indeed presents a strong challenge to the industrious student—one which forces him to strike out for himself, do the reading he wants to do, draw heavily upon the resources of the community, and in the face of this repressive classroom situation, nevertheless be stimulated and enriched. Being a large university Cal can afford an extensive series of concerts and name lecturers. (Incidentally, tickets and programming are all handled through one agency, a system which Carolina would do well to adopt.) Even more important, Berkeley abounds in art movies, galleries, lecture halls and other delights, and to cap it all off, San Francisco is only thirty-five minutes away. "The City" has three legitimate theaters, the nationally-known Actors Workshop, a professional opera company and resident symphony, a continuous procession of artists of the first rank and all the other advantages of cosmopolitan city life. With these goodies at the student's command, it is not surprising to find a virbrant intellectual attitude dominating the campus. All activities are sell-outs; if one arrives five minutes early for a lecture he is twenty minutes too late.

A large portion of the student body commutes from the neighboring areas, and most students in residence also spend their entire day on campus since housing is spread throughout the city. Thus there are noon lectures, concerts and political rallies left and right, and it is common practice for students to bring bag and box lunches to these gatherings, thus satisfying intellectual and physical hunger pangs at the same time.

Size also indicates diversity, the student body is by and large a tolerant one. Beards and motorcycle boots are seen mixed among the madras and weejuns, and no one seems to care very much one way or the other. Fraternities and sororities comprise only a small portion of the student body, but are in general control of the campus political machinery. This state of affairs isn't particularly bothersome to the non-affiliated majority, since the adminisration takes a dim view of student government and the term "sandbox government" is reasonably appropriate. The student union (a palatial, four-story, six million dollar job) offers a wide variety of games and goodies, but is not the center of activity, since Cal (as outlined above) is a city campus and does not need a central dispensary of culture, as GM tries to be at Carolina.

Athletics, too, have their place at "Cal," and although de-emphasis has resulted in winless seasons, attendance is spirited. Here again, athletics are not central; if you are interested, you go, otherwise you don't. There is a strong "rah rah" spirited group, but the campus is just too large and too difficult to respond.

These considerations aside, Cal isn't entirely different from UNC. People here worry about the budget from the legislature, are trying to decide the merits of the honor system (no, there isn't one now, and there probably won't be, although after having lived under both, I think the Carolina system is preferrable), go to the flicks, worry about grades, and goof off—but here they don't do it in the library.

Pharmacy School Gives Honor List

Dean E. A. Brecht of the UNC School of Pharmacy has announced the names of pharmacy students making the Honor Roll (average of 92.5 or better) and the Dean's List (average of 90 or better) for the fall semester, which ended in January. This list does not include prepharmacy freshmen who are students in the General College.

The Honor Roll included: George Walker Bender, Fayetteville; Daniel Guilford Bracey, Red Springs; Benjamin William Brown, High Point; Malcolm Winston Burroughs, Wadesboro; Emil Lewis Cekada, Durham; William Gerald Coln, Rockingham; Briggs Edward Cook, Stokesdale; Robert Lee Deal, Liberty; Larry Edward Denning, Coats; Charles Norvell Gross, Pfafftown and William Fred Harriss, High Point.

Hubert Theodore Huggins Jr., Dallas; Mary Lou Johnson, Clayton; William David Medlin, Durham; Margaret Jane McCann, Mount Airy; John Agrippa Mitchener III, Edenton; Ellen Louise Pike, Concord; Roy Patton Rabb II, Marion; Danny Lee Randall, Asheville; Bill Mac Smyre, Newton; Gary Martin Stamey, Asheville; Beverly Carol Thompson, Chapel Hill and John David Wilson, Lowell.

The Dean's List also included: Jack Lewis Alexander, Brevard; Alexander Fernando Belmont, Lima, Peru; Irving Vestal Boyles

Mexican Students Visit Next Month

Three National University of Mexico political science students will visit UNC next month as part of a tour sponsored by the National Social Welfare Assembly and the U. S. State Department.

The students: Francisco Del Prado Betancourt, 34; Roberto Ducoing Espinosa, 23 and Eduardo Reinhart Thoame Dominguez, 22 will be visiting the U. S. to familiarize themselves with American political structure, the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

They will be here from March 27, to April 2 and will visit the Institute of Latin American Studies and the Institute of International Relations. They will also observe the faculty, student body and student organizations.

A committee of Student Government President Bill Harriss, Dean Arnold Perry of the School of Education, Professor Frederico Gil, Dean of Student Affairs George Strong and members of the Institute of Government has been formed to plan the visit.

While in this country the Mexicans will also tour Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York and Washington. They are accompanied by State Department interpreter Francisco Lanza.

While at UNC they will be housed as guests of dormitory advisors.

Applications For CQ Test Available

Applications for the April 17, 1962 administration of the College Qualification Test are now available at Selective Service System local boards throughout the country.

Eligible students who intend to take this test should apply at once to the nearest Selective Service local board for an application and a bulletin of information.

Following instructions in the bulletin, the student should fill out his application and mail it immediately in the envelope provided to SELECTIVE SERVICE EXAMINING SECTION, Educational Testing Service, P. O. Box 586, Princeton, New Jersey. Applications for the April 17 test must be postmarked no later than midnight, March 27, 1962.

According to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the College Qualification Test for the Selective Service System, it will be greatly to the student's advantage to file his application at once. Test results will be reported to the student's Selective Service local board of jurisdiction for use in considering his deferment as a student.

Anderson Goes To Institute At Argentina

Donald B. Anderson, UNC vice president, is one of twenty-five educators in North and South America taking part in an Institute of International Education at Rio de Janiero from February 25 to March 3.

Dr. Anderson is the representative of the National Science Foundation. He is vice president for graduate studies and research in the three branches of the Consolidated University.

Four purposes of the institute are: (1) To find out the scientific and technical needs of South American universities, (2) To determine the role of secondary schools and the universities in the training of school teachers, (3) To examine communication among scholars, especially relating to libraries and other academic agencies of institutions, (4) To investigate potentialities of development of regional university programs.

Criswell And Harriss Speak To Dorm Meets

Student Body President Bill Harriss and UP Chairman Bill Criswell have spoken on successive evenings at dorm meetings in Avery and Parker dormitories. Both Wednesday and Thursday nights the topics of these two campus political leaders were identical.

President Harriss discussed the role of Student Government at Carolina and encouraged his audience to take a more active part in campus politics.

He summarized the Student Party's actions during his administration and outlined programs which he had planned in the future.

Chairman Criswell reiterated the invitation to take a more active role in campus politics and explained the goals of the University Party in the coming months.

He also explained the new convention procedure to be installed in the UP convention next Monday and reminded the students that two political avenues were open to the individual on the UNC campus. "Interested persons," said Criswell, "should take advantage of the parties in regard to their views, not where they live."

Ed Bacon Weekend At Planning Dept.

This will be the "Ed Bacon weekend" at the City and Regional Planning Department of the University. Edmund N. Bacon, Executive Director of the Philadelphia City Planning Department, has an international reputation based on his work in urban aesthetics and his leadership in the post-war development of Philadelphia. He will present a series of illustrated public lectures and discussions between Friday afternoon and Sunday on the general theme of Urban Design.

Feb. 23, 3 p.m. Ackland 115. "An Approach to Urban Design." 8 p.m., Ackland 115. "The History of Urban Design."

Feb. 24, 2 p.m., Morehead Faculty Lounge. "Social, Political, and Governmental Procedures Affecting Urban Design". 8 p.m., Ackland 115. "Urban Design as Applied to Philadelphia."

Feb. 25, 2 p.m. Morehead Faculty Lounge. Informal Discussion.

Med Students May Register For MCA Test

The Association of American Medical Colleges urges students who will be seeking admission to a medical school in September, 1963 to register now for the Medical College Admission Test, which wil be given Saturday morning, May 5, in Chapel Hill.

Information booklets, which include sample questions and application form, are available at the University Testing Service, Room 019 Peabody Hall and in the Dean's Office of the Medical School, Room 126 MacNider Building.

This test, required by almost every medical school in the United States, consists of (1) tests of general scholastic ability; (2) a test on understanding of modern society; and (3) an achievement test in science. No special preparation is necessary, but a review of basic science courses would be helpful. A fee of $15 must accompany the application to take the test. Applications for the May test should be sent directly to the Psychological Corporation in New York City before April 20.

The MCAT will be given also on October 20; however, candidates taking the test in May will be able to furnish scores to institutions in the early fall of 1962, when most medical colleges begin selecting their 1963 class.

UNITED WE STAND

The entire academic world is agog over the success of the Associated Colleges Plan—ACP, for short. I mean, you go to any campus in the country these days and you will see students and faculty dancing on the green, blowing penny whistles, grabbing each other by the elbows and yelling, "About that ACP, Charley—like wow!"

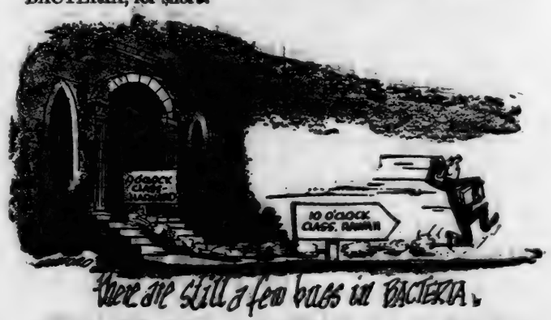
And who can blame them? The ACP is a plan not only simply brilliant, but also brilliantly simple. All it is, is a loose regional federation of small colleges. Let's say, for example, that in a given region we have a group of small colleges, each with its own academic specialty. Small College No. 1, let's say, has a fine language department; Small College No. 2, let's say, has a fine science department; No. 3 has a fine music department; etc., etc.

Well sir, under the ACP these various colleges federate. A student in any one of the colleges can take courses in the specialty of any of the other colleges and—here's the beauty part!—he will receive credit for the course at his home college. Thus he enjoys all the advantages of a big university without losing the comfy coziness of a small college!

Well sir, you can see what a good idea the ACP is. I respectfully submit, however, that just because a thing is good is no reason not to try to make it better. Like, for instance, Marlboro Cigarettes. Marlboros were good from the very beginning, and people found out quickly and sales zoomed. But did the makers of Marlboro say, "Okay, we've got it made. Let's relax"? Well sir, if that's what you think, you don't know the makers! They did not relax. They took their good Marlboros and kept improving them. They improved the filter, improved the blend, improved the pack. They researched and developed tirelessly, until today Marlboro is just about the most admirable cigarette you can put a match to. There are, in fact, some people who find Marlboros so admirable they can't bear to put a match to them. They just sit with a single Marlboro in hand and admire it for ten, twelve years on end. The makers of Marlboro are of course deeply touched by this—except for E. Rennie Sigafoos, the sales manager.

But I digress. The ACP, I say, is good but it can be better. Why should the plan be confined to small colleges? Why should it be confined to a limited region? Why not include all colleges and universities, big and small, wherever they are?

Let's start such a federation. Let's call it the "Bigger Associated Colleges To Encourage Richer Intellectual Activity"—BACTERIA, for short!



There are still a few bugs in BACTERIA.

What a bright new world BACTERIA opens up. Take, for example, a typical college student—Hunrath Sigafoos (son, incidentally, of the Marlboro sales manager). Hunrath, a bright lad, is currently majoring in burley at the University of Kentucky. Under the BACTERIA plan, Hunrath could stay at Kentucky, where he has made many friends, but at the same time broaden his vistas by taking a course in constitutional law at Harvard, a course in physics at Caltech, a course in frostbite at Minnesota and a course in poi at Hawaii!

I admit there are still a few bugs in BACTERIA. How, for instance, could Hunrath attend a 9 o'clock class at Harvard, a 10 o'clock class at Hawaii, an 11 o'clock class at Minnesota, and still keep his lunch date at Kentucky? It would be idle to deny that this is a tricky problem, but I have no doubt American ingenuity will carry the day. Always remember how they laughed at Edison and Fulton—and particularly at Walter Clavicle who invented the collarbone.

• • •

Three cheers for American ingenuity, which gave us the ACP, the collarbone and MGM . . . that's the Mighty Good Makin's you get in Marlboro, the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste. Settle back and enjoy one. You got a lot to like.

Carolina Hosts 7th-Ranked Duke Today At 2

Heels Seek Revenge For 79-57 Defeat

By ED DUPREE

Can Carolina's Tar Heels tame Duke's two-pronged scoring punch of Art Heyman and Jeff Mullins?

With nothing at stake except prestige in this bitter neighborhood rivalry, the contest shapes up only as a warm-up for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament next week. But it could turn out to be the hottest warm-up the ACC has ever witnessed.

Coach Dean Smith will throw his shuffle offense against the wide open Duke attack in what could be the freest scoring hardwood encounter of the season.

While Vic Bubas relies on his deadly scoring duo along with 6-10 Jay Buckley's height and Jack Mullen's defensive talents, Smith will counter with his offense which provides better scoring balance and plenty of speed.

In the first 1962 engagement between the Dukes of Durham County and the then high-riding Tar Heels, the Blue Devils were merciless hosts and stomped UNC, 79-57. Adding insult to injury, Bubas's boys did the trick without Heyman at full capacity.

Heyman's over-emphasized ankle injury has healed and the Rockville Centre, N. Y., junior should be ready for the Chapel Hill half of the blood rivalry series. The fifth Duke starter, in addition to Heyman, Mullins, Mullen, and Buckley, should be either Buzz Mewhort, a 6-4 senior, or Buzzy Harrison a 6-3 bespectacled sophomore. Heyman stands 6-5, Mullins 6-4, and floor leader Mullen is 5-11.

Larry Brown at 5-11 is the top Tar Heel scorer. The Long Beach, N. Y., junior boasts a 16.3 average for 15 games. Big Jim Hudock, 6-8, is the number two man with a 15.8 mark, while Donnie Walsh rounds out the double figure scorers with 13.4. Other UNC starters should be Charlie Shaffer (9.3) and Jim Donohue (5.4), while Bryan McSweeney (8.3) and Mike Cooke (6.1) should see a lot of action.

Both teams own excellent field goal shooting marks. UNC carried a .470 mark into Monday's game with Maryland and raised it to .473 agianst the Terps. Duke was second in the ACC through last Saturday's games with a .467 mark.

If UNC wins and South Carolina loses to Wake Forest, then the Tar Heels would take fourth in the ACC. But if South Carolina wins and Duke tops the Heels, the Smithmen would be shoved to fifth place. Since both UNC and South Carolina have 7-6 marks they will play each other in the opening round of the tournament regardless.

Wrestlers Meet Perennially Strong Terps At Maryland

By ED DUPREE

Entertaining hopes of giving Maryland's perennial ACC wrestling champions a run for their money, Coach Sam Barnes grapplers tangle with the Terps this afternoon at College Park.

The Tar Heel matmen have come on strong after losing their opening five matches and with Pete Gilchrist and Dick Blackman leading the way could give the defending champs a close contest.

Gilchrist, with 31 points and five pins, has set a new UNC scoring record, but Blackman, with 30 points, is right behind. Gilchrist wrestles in the 137-division, while Blackman goes in the 147-class.

Glenn Glaser and Gene Record will switch positions against the Terps. Glaser moves from the 167 to 177-division, and Record drops back a notch to the 167-class.

Other Tar Heel wrestlers should be Mickey Nelson, 123-pound class; Willis Johnson, 137; Tom Grant, 157; and Jerry Cabe, heavyweight.

After falling to Washington & Lee, Virginia, The Citadel, Davidson, and VMI, the Tar Heels rebounded with victories over N. C. lar season at Woollen Gym Monday against Virginia Tech and then compete in the ACC championships at Raleigh next Friday and Saturday between the basketball tournament games.

Lea And Bilbro Pace UNC In Thursday's Swimming

By ED DUPREE

Frank Lea took a second in the 1,500 meter free style race and Bob Bilbro finished third in the 200-yard individual medley to pace North Carolina's swimmers in the opening night day of the ACC swimming championships Thursday.

Arthur Merrill finished fourth in the free style race and Barry King came in fourth in the medley to give Coach Pat Earey's forces 17 points for the first night. Only Maryland, with 18, led the Tar Heels in team scoring.

Hugh Lupien of Maryland took the top spot in the free style with a 19:27 timing, while N. C. State's Pete Fogarasy led the Pack in the medley event.

Events swam Friday were the 200-butterfly, 50-free style, 220-freestyle, 200-backstroke, 400-freestyle relay and 200-breaststroke. Low board diving competition took place yesterday also.

Today's events will be the 100-butterfly, 100-freestyle, 100-breaststroke, 100-backstroke, 440-freestyle, 400-medley relay, and the high dive. Preliminaries are scheduled for 10:30 this morning with finals slated for 4 p. m. The finals are to be televised live over WRAL-TV, Raleigh.

Thursday's summary:

1500-meter freestyle—1. Hugh Lupien, Maryland. 2. Frank Lea, UNC. 3. Jerry Greenberg, Maryland. 4. Arthur Merrill, UNC. 5. Leon Thomas, Wake Forest. 19:27.0.

200-yard individual medley—1. Pete Fogarasy, N. C. State. 2. Hugh Roddin, Maryland. 3. Bob Bilbro, UNC. 4. Barry King, UNC. 5. Ted Lupien, Maryland. 2:08.1.

First Place Demon Deacons Host South Carolina Tonight

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. — Already assured of the top seeded spot in next week's ACC tournament at Raleigh, the Wake Forest Deacons bid to wrap up their first regular-season league championship when they play host to South Carolina here in Memorial Coliseum Saturday night.

The varsity tap-off is slated for 8 o'clock following a freshman game between Wake Forest and N. C. State. The preliminary is scheduled to start at 6 o'clock. Plenty of tickets remain for the contest.

A victory for Coach Bones McKinney's crew will give it a final 12-2 mark in the standings, and its first undisputed regular-season crown. The 1960 Deacons also finished with a final 12-2 record, but had to share the No. 1 spot with North Carolina.

The Deacs finished second last season, but went on to win the tournament and pocket their first ACC championship. In previous seasons they have finished third on two occasions, twice they have finished fourth, once in sixth place, and once in seventh.

The 69-62 victory over N. C. State Wednesday night assured the Deacs of the top seeded spot, but a loss to South Carolina coupled with a Duke win over North Carolina Saturday afternoon would force Wake Forest to share the regular-season honors with the Blue Devils.

"We don't want any ties," McKinney told his boys following the win over State, "and we know we are in for a tough game with South Carolina. It's still a long way to where we want to go, and I'm referring to the ACC championship next week."

South Carolina with a 7-6 league record and assured of finishing either fourth or fifth in the final standings, gave the Deacs a lot of anxious moments in their first meeting at Columbia on Feb. 2. Sparked by Art Whisnant, the Gamecocks jumped into a 50-38 halftime lead, and later held a 17-point advantage before Wake rallied to pull out a 78-74 decision.

The Gamecocks dropped a one-point decision to N. C. State last Friday night, but whipped North Carolina on Saturday and turned back Clemson on Tuesday.

Whisnant scored 26 points in the first meeting with the Deacs and the other four starters all scored in double figures. Scotti Ward had 12 points, Bob Robinson 12, Ronnie Collins 11, and Bud Cronin 10.

Thompson Mann Improves Rapidly At Carolina After Little Experience

By HARRY TOCCE

Thompson Mann, a Virginia boy who had little high school swimming experience, has found the waters of North Carolina much to his liking.

THOMPSON MANN

The Sophomore from Hickory, Va., who recently broke the ACC 200-yard backstroke record by five seconds, appears just beginning to reach his full potential.

His fast-improving style is the product of much practice and some fine coaching.

"I began competitive swimming in Richmond," said Mann. "When we moved to Hickory, I, on occasion, commuted to swim.

While in Hickory, he had no coaching and practiced by swimming at the YMCA and the beach with his brother.

"Despite his lack of coaching," said Earey. "He was still a good swimmer when he came to Carolina."

Mann credits Earey with his rapid improvement and mentions a new bent-arm stroke which has reduced his time greatly.

The stroke, which replaces a pulling motion with a pushing motion, can be difficult to master, according to Earey.

"Thompson has picked it up very easily," said the UNC Coach.

How did Mann come to choose Carolina?

East Carolina, Virginia Tech, and the University of Oklahoma were all interested in Mann.

"I knew of the fine medical school here and I always wanted to come here," Mann said. "Also my father graduated from Carolina."

The mention of school brings to mind a little thing called grades.

"Some people may think of Thompson as living in the pool all day," says Earey. "But this is far from the truth."

"He strikes a good balance between his studies and swimming and is a good student. This pleases me very much."

Mann has no special training or dietary habits. He just trys to get a little work in each day."

"I have no problem in coaching him," says Earey. "He is very dedicated."

Mann's potential eventually leads to the inevitable question of record-breaking.

"I don't like to make predictions of the future," says a modest, but frank, Mann.

His coach is a little more free to talk.

"Of course the Olympics are the big thing," Earey said. "We would like very much for him to go, and it is very possible."

He would probably have to better the existing AAU outdoor 100-meter backstroke record (1:01) to qualify.

"Thompson has a good chance of doing it," says Earey. "He is well adapted to the outdoor pools with their fewer turns."

After the present ACC conference meet has ended, Mann will be plenty busy.

He will compete in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships (March 16-17) at Yale and then later that month he will journey to Ohio State University for the NCAA Championships on the 30th and 31st.

He has "a very good possibility" against the best in the nation, according to Earey.

In the indoor meet at Los Angeles, he finished fifth in the 100-meter backstroke in an AAU record-breaking of 1:02.9

He also swam the backstroke leg of the medley relay team which finished first.

At Yale, indoors, he finished fifth in the 100 backstroke.

"He has been listed among the 10 best swimmers in the world, which is not bad company," said Coach Earey with a smile.

Not many people would disagree.

Burke And Steele Pace Peacock Win

By JOHN MONTAGUE

The Peacocks showed off their big guns in fine style Thursday afternoon, burying the Chem Grads, 66-24, in intramural cage action. Eddie Burke connected for 25 points and Jerry Steele contributed 21 to lead the offensive onslaught. Herb Hawks chipped in with 12, while Southard led the losers with 12.

Here is a look at the other games played Thursday:

Avery Axes 38, Joyner Sardines 31

Ken Willard's 15 points gave the Axes the thrust they needed in this battle for second place. For the Sardines, Charlie Smith hit for a dozen and Dave Wilson bagged 11.

Parker Pack 37, Manly Alleycats 24

The Pack, in winning this playoff for second place, was led by Fred Hollingsworth's 14 point output coupled with Bost's 12. The big scorer of the night, however, was the Alleycats' Pete Poindexter, who hit for 18.

Pika 40, Pi Lamb 21

The PiKA's romp to an easy victory here, with Thomas getting 15 and Dickson netting 11.

Sigma Nu Riflemen 45 Beta Quail 9

The Riflemen gunned down the Quail rather handily. Turner's 13 and Strause's 12 were more than enough.

ATO 49, Chi Psi 29

Roger Penland paced ATO with 13 and Clark and Simpson contributed 11 and 10 respectively in another one-sided contest.

DKE 38, Lambda Chi 31

John Seago's 12 points lifted the DKE's to a 7-point margin in this one. J. Killian of Lamba Chi bucketed 13 to pace all the scorers.

Sigma Nu 61, Kappa Psi 17

Bob Wacker burned the nets for 18 as the Sigma Nu's rolled. Jerry Rucker and Dick Bean each had 10 points in the rout.

Dental Burrs 52, Law Shysters 32

Hundley's 16 and Smith's 11 did the damage here. Everett and McIver hit for 10 apiece for the losing Shysters.

Dental Darts 42, Law Colts 14

A good night for the Dental School, not-so-good for the Law School. High was the high man with 10 points in the evenly-balanced Dart attack.

Pharmacy 32, Med Scalpels 26

In handball action Thursday evening, SAE's number one White unit blanked Kappa Psi in a semi-finals contest, 3-0.

Uelses Out Of AAU Track Meet

By JOHN GRIFFIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National AAU indoor track championships, already shorn of Ron Delany and Parry O'Brien, lost still another star attraction Friday when 16-foot pole vaulter John Uelses withdrew because he is not fully recovered from a bout with flu.

Marine Cpl. Uelses is "still physically unable to compete at his best," a Marine spokesman said.

Delany, who had been scheduled to duel with Jim Beatty in the mile run, withdrew from the meet Thursday because of an injured Achilles tendon. O'Brien cancelled out a clash with new shot put record holder Gary Gubner of NYU because of a hand injury.

A spokesman at the Marine base in Quantico, Va., said the decision on whether Uelses would compete was not made until Thursday night. The world's first 16-foot pole vaulter was not hospitalized, but he did not accompany other Marines entered in the meet when they left for New York Friday morning.

Delany, who holds the recognized indoor record of 4:01.4, had been expected to stage a mile duel Saturday night with Beatty, who ran history's first indoor sub-four minute 3:58.9 two weeks ago. But Delany announced his withdrawal Thursday night.

With these three headliners absent, the indoor carnival at Madison Square Garden still could produce top thrills and world records with Beatty trying for his second sub-four-minute mile, Gubner trying to break his own shot put record, and U. S. star Jack Yerman clashing with Canadian ace Bill Crothers in the 600-yard run.

William Lanier Hunt

Hunt Arboretum To Open In Spring

The new William Lanier Hunt Arboretum will offer new stomping grounds to botanically and other mineded Carolina students with the advent of spring.

The 130 acre arboretum is a major portion of a large botanical garden encompassing 240 acres.

Two gifts to the university for conversion to an arboretum were annnounced last fall: (1) William L. Hunt of Chapel Hill, specialist in southern gardening and civic beautification, gave 24.5 acres along Morgan Creek just oustdie the town of Chapel Hill and adjacent to the Mason Farm owned by the University. He also contracted to give an additionl 100 acres over a period of years. (2) An additional eight acres of land in the same vicinity was given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gray of Chapel Hill. Mr. Gray is a local banker.

Both properties are along Morgan Creek and include the place known as Laurel Hill which was "discovered" in the last century by President Kemp Plummer Battle. The Hunt property is contiguous with approximately 80 acres of land which has been used by the University for the past nine years as an experimental botnical garden.

Plans for a horticulture showplace and laboratory of potential international stature for teaching and research in botany are envisioned. It will be the first major botanical garden and arboretum connected with a state university in the southeast. Part of it will resemble the 5.5 acres Coker Arboretum near the center of the campus—but will be from 75 to 100 times larger and more varied and extensive.

Since 1927

Plans for the development of the entire area began 34 years ago when in 1927 the late Dr. W. C. Coker, who was Chairman of the Dept. of Botany, suggested to President Harry W. Chase that a part of the Mason Farm be developed for botanical research.

In a letter to Chancellor William B. Aycock, the 1927 proposals were recalled by William L. Hunt who states that his own interest in giving additional land to the University dates back to the Coker-Chase conversations. Mr. Hunt wrote: "At last, I have the satisfaction of knowing that my long-cherished vision will be fulfilled and that this unique botanical garden and scenic area will be preserved as an arboretum for the people of North Carolina and the Southern Region."

Hunt Writes and Lectures

Mr. Hunt is a syndicated writer of gardening topics and a lecturer well known in the South and among botanists all over the world.

Citing attention to the advantages and potential of the land, Hunt said, "None of the great botanical gardens like Kew, Edinburgh, Cambridge, and the JARDIN DES PLANTES has anything like the natural beauty and native plants in the proposed Hunt Arboretum. Great horticulturists like Lord Aberconway, late President of the Royal Horticultural Society, and the directors of the European and American botanical institutions have all been impressed with the slides I have shown in my lectures in Europe and this country of Laurel Hill."

The entire area wil be directed under the auspices of the University's Department of Botany. Professor Victor Greulach is chairman of the Botany Department.

The purposes of the garden were indicated in a publication issue by the Botany Department:

1. To provide a laboratory for botanical study.
2. To provide a reliable and convenient source of materials for future botanical study.
3. To provide diverse habitats and test areas for experimental studies in taxonomy, ecology, genetics and physiology.
4. To provide a sanctuary for rapidly disappearing species native to the southeast.
5. To conserve a unique natural area.
6. To provide plantings, nature trails, displays, public lectures, short courses, and publications for public education and recreation.
7. To provide propagation space for the study and development of native species of southeastern plants for possible horticultural use.
8. To include a drug garden for pharmacy students and for research work on drug plants.
9. To include such other areas, spaces or gardens as necessary for most efficient botanical use of the garden.

Long-range plans anticipate ultimate acquisition of additional tracts of land, greenhouses, new plantings of many varieties of plants capable of growth in the temperate climate, landscaping, trails, labelling of trees and plants, suitable clearing of excess trees and underbrush, and other facilities including construction of a caretaker's quarters.

Total acreage for the horticultural expansion is in excess of 200 acres at the present time. This includes 72 acres of the Mason Farm; 35 acres given to the University by Coker College in 1954; the 124.5 acres given by Mr. Hunt; and the eight acres given by the Edward Grays. The Coker College land, formerly the property of Prof. W. C. Coker who developed Coker Arboretum, is a part of the famed Chapel Hill ground known as The-Meeting-Of-The-Waters.

It was in 1952 that the trustees of the University designated 72 acres of the Mason Farm for botanical research. With the Coker College grant, and the Hunt and Gray gifts, total acreage for the North Carolina Botanical Garden is 240 acres.

Politicians Trade Blasts On Party Issue

The exchange of words between the heads of the two political clubs on campus became more heated yesterday as the presidents of the YDC and YRC swapped verbal blasts. T. L. Odom, president of the YDC, asked YRC president Earl Baker to ". . . back up hot-air generalizations with facts. It is the political duty of the minority party to be critical, but this carries a responsibility to put before the public constructive comments and not statements that can not be substantiated."

Baker replied that ". . . this is catastrophic nonsense. It would take a special edition of the Tar Heel to even begin to list the shortcomings of the Democratic Party."

Tension between the two clubs has been steadily increasing as the scheduled date of the YDC-YRC Debate approaches. On Wednesday, Feb. 28, at 7:30 in the Law School Courtroom, 210 Manning, the debate teams for each side will argue: "That the one party system in North Carolina has been detrimental to the best interests of the citizens and the state."

UP To Select Candidates Tomorrow

The Spring Nominating Convention of the University Party will be held Monday night at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Offices open for nomination include: Student Body President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer.

The Senior class nominations will follow the Student Body voting and will be followed by the races for C.A.A. and C.W.A. presidencies.

Delegation chairmen are reminded that their delegation rosters, both their membership and delegation, must be turned into the University Party office by midnight tonight. These rosters must be in by this time or the delegation cannot be seated at the convention.

Bill Criswell, Party Chairman, urges all party members to attend. Criswell added that he would encourage all interested students to attend and observe the convention proceedings.

Peace Corps Parley Plans To Be Begun

Preparation for the Peace Corps Conference to be held here on March 16-17 will begin Monday. Student committees will be named to make arrangements for the conference. Anyone wishing to work with these committees should meet in the Council Room of the YMCA at 4:30.

The Peace Corps now has openings for workers in 15 countries in Asia, Africa and South America. There are jobs available for teachers, nurses, public health workers, persons with agricultural, and home economics experience, and people with backgrounds in construction and the building trades.

Everyone selected for the program will receive training in the language of the country to which he will be sent, although some prior knowledge of the language is generally required. All applicants must be at least 18 years old and have the equivalent of a high school education. Workers receive a living allowance and a terminal pay of $75 a month for each month in service.

A typical project in Peru calls for a wide range of skills. Plumbers, carpenters, mechanics, radio specialists, sociologists, English teachers, and credit union and cooperative specialists are all needed for projects in four Peruvian towns.

Peace Corps Questionnaires (the basic application form) are available at Post Offices or from the Peace Corps Washington 25, D. C.

SIX SELECTED

Six students have ben selected for membership in the Phi Delta Chi Pharmaceutical Fraternity of the UNC School of Phramacy. They are: Henry Watkins, Spindale: Harrell D. Bryan, Chinquapin; Hugh Smith Jr., Pink Hill; Dempsey Hill, Deep Run; Wayne Keith. Lexington and William Horne of Hamlet.

Cast Complete For H. Golden Play

"Only in America," a dramatization of the best-selling novel by North Carolina's Harry Golden, will be presented at the Playmakers Theater here March 14-19. Casting for The Carolina Playmakers' production was completed here yesterday.

Kai Jurgensen will appear in the leading role as Harry Golden. A native of Denmark, Jurgensen is a professor of dramatic art at UNC and a staff director of The Carolina Playmakers. His last stage appearance was in the title role of the Playmakers' highly successful "Volpone." In 1959 Jurgensen was a Fulbright professor in drama at the University of Copenhagen.

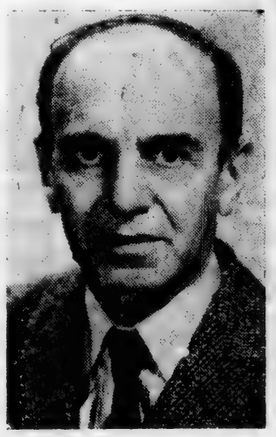
"Only in America" was adapted to the stage by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, authors of the recent Broadway hits "Inherit the Wind" and "Auntie Mame." The playwrights spent weeks with Golden at his home in Charlotte preparing to write their stage play. The play begins with Golden's arrival in Charlotte to found "The Carolina Israelite" and it takes him through the often turbulent five years thereafter. It treats such subjects as Golden's stand as an integrationist and the disclosure of the Carolina writer-philosopher's prison record. The action of the play is set at Golden's Charlotte home and the State Capitol in Raleigh.

Harry Davis, director of The Carolina Playmakers' production of "Only in America," stages the long-running outdoor drama "Unto These Hills" at Cherokee each summer. Davis' recent directing assignments with the Playmakers were "The Visit" and the first off-Broadway production of "Look Homeward Angel," which also had a North Carolina setting. He is Chairman of the Department of Dramatic Art at UNC and President of the South Eastern Theatre Conference.

Esther McClard Alexander of Warrenton will play Helen Cheney, Golden's Negro secretary in the biographical play. Bonney Wilson of Smithfield will appear as the aristocratic Mrs. Archer-Loomis, and Graham Pollock of Gatesville will play Golden's friend Lucius Whitmore.

Others in the cast are Betty A. Setzer, Durham; Edith Hinrichs, Chapel Hill; Stephen Dennis, Kensington, Ga.; David Sheps, New York, N. Y.; Mel Starr, Gastonia; Kermit Ewing, Knoxville, Tenn.; Randolph Umberger, Burlington; Alan Solter, Colonia, N. J.; Larry Warner, Rocky Mount; John B. Dunne, Brecksvill, O.; Dwight Hunsucker, Troy; and Peter Maupin, Wake Forest.

Tickets for "Only in America" become available to season ticket holders Monday, March 5, and to the general public Thursday, Mar. 8, at the Playmakers business office in Chapel Hill. All seats are reserved.



DR. ALFRED BRAUER

Math Teacher Alfred Brauer Gets Renewal

A UNC mathematician has been awarded a renewal on a grant received from the Air Force Office of Scientific Research in special mathematical equations.

Dr. Alfred T. Brauer, Kenan professor of mathematics, is the recipient of the grant renewal. He is one of 31 scientists in the United States and Canada to receive an AFOSR award at this time.

Proposals are selected for awards on the basis of the caliber and originality of the research, the competence of the investigator, the facilities available to the investigator, and the relevance of the research to Air Force interests.

The grants are awarded on the basis of recommendation; for the most part, grants and contracts funded by AFOSR are based on unsolicited proposals. Professor Brauer was first awarded a contract with the AFOSR in 1956.

The special research project which he has been working on since that time is entitled "Bounds for Characteristic Roots of Matrices." A "matrix" is a special arrangement and collection of numbers which are of great use in applied mathematics.

Dr. Brauer has been searching for methods of approximating the roots of an algebraic equation. In 1959, the AFOSR in its report wrote of Professor Brauer's successful approximations, "Because of a present-day utilitarian concern for numerical solutions for problems, Professor Brauer's detailed investigations have attracted a great deal of interest. This has been true also because of the suitability of many of his techniques for use with modern computing equipment."

In nearly every branch of knowledge in which mathematics is used, roots of a matrix are of great importance. They were first needed in astronomy more than 100 years ago for a theory relating to the disturbances of the motion of planets, and they are now used, for example, in many areas of physics, statistics, in the construction of airplanes and other fields of engineering, and in theoretical economics.

The results of Dr. Brauer's research work to date have been published in professional papers. Following publication, mathematicians and physicists in other universities, research institutions, and corporations may request reprints of the published papers to consult them for application of the theories. Some of the establishments which have requested reprints of Dr. Brauer's papers include aircraft companies, universities throughout the world, nuclear energy companies, telephone laboratories, radiation laboratories, and computing firms.

Dr. Brauer has been a member of the UNC staff since 1941. He received a Ph.D. degree from the University of Berlin.

Bircher Offers To Organize Seminar Here

Arthur S. Lyon, High Point coordinator for the John Birch Society, has offered his services in organizing a student "discussion group" on campus. The offer was made in a letter to DTH Editor Wayne King received yesterday.

The campus group would be composed of students "who believe in sanctity of the individual." Interested persons were invited to write Lyon at 2503 Darden Street, High Point, N. C.

The Birch Society coordinator also criticized DTH columnist Jim Clotfelter as a supporter of "more and more Government giveaways" and "tax dodging cooperatives for book sales." Clotfelter recently wrote a column urging the establishment of a student book cooperative.

"Left of Kennedy?" Lyon asked. "I doubt it. If he (Kennedy) had his way. I doubt that there would be anything left to give away, which is the pastime of the Left."

Beaver Wins First Prize For His Play

Frank E. Beaver of Statesville, a UNC graduate now in the armed services, has been named the first-place winner in the Student Theater Workshop's 1962 playwriting competition.

Beaver's play, "The Renewal," earned him a cash award of $50.

The second place winner, Gene Lominac of Asheville, received a $25 award for "Canary by Candlelight."

The playwriting competition, which was begun this year, will become an annual project of the UNC workshop, an experimental theater group composed entirely of students.

Both of the winning plays will be produced by the workshop this year..

Playwright Beaver, now stationed at Ft. Jackson, is a former member of the Carolina Playmakers. He appeared in the "Lost Colony" at Roanoke last summer.

Lominac, a graduate of Western Carolina College at Cullowhee, is an extension assistant at UNC, Both winners studied playwriting at Carolina.

Judging for the competition were Betty Smith, playwright and author of the hit play and best selling novel, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," and novelist-Playwright John Ehle, an instructor in the RTVMP department.

The award was financed through the work of Glenn L. Vernon, an alumnus of the Student Workshop who is now teaching speech and drama at Mars Hill College.

Tinter To Talk At Colloquium

Gerhard Tintner, Professor of Mathematics, Economics and Statistics at Iowa State University and an econometrician of world-wide reputation, will address the Statistics Colloquium at Chapel Hill Monday, Feb. 26, at 4:00 p.m. in Room 265 Phillips Hall. His subject will be "The Application of Renyi's Theory of Stochastic Processes to Economic Development."

Noted Folk Singer Odetta Appears Here Wednesday

On Feb. 27, a packed audience of Carolina students is expected to hear the clear, low voice of Odetta, as she presents her own special sound in folk singing.

Performing songs that mirror the depth of her style throughout the country, Odetta has become known as one of today's most outstanding folksingers. Her talents have been loaned to musicals such as the "Hungary I" and to films such as "Sanctuary" where she portrayed the murderess in a co-starring role.

Moving from Alabama to California when she was six, Odetta's career actually started in Los Angeles. There she found employment as a housekeeper during the day while she studied music at night—art songs and the classics. At that time the thought of going into folk music had not occured to her.

Her first professional break as a classical singer came when she was cast in the West Coast production of "Finian's Rainbow," which toured to San Francisco. It was the first time she had ever been away from home.

"I felt so bad," she relates, "that when I met a couple of Bay City Folk Singers I was probably more receptive to their songs than I might normally have been. They sang the song "I'm My Mother's Child" and I was so homesick!" From those singers she also heard for the first time the powerful work song, "Take This Hammer," which is now one of her most poignant numbers. After listening to their music, she became converted to folk singing from then on.

"It was a revelation that came to me with a whallop," she said. "The beauty and richness of these songs lay in their expression of truth, of our own heritage. And I was fascinated by the freedom they allowed the singers." Odetta then taught herself to play the guitar, with which she now accompanies her numbers.

A perfectionist, Odetta may work as long as a year on a single song and will not offer it in public until she is fully satisfied with its presentation. Generally, when a song does enter into Odetta's repertoire, it becomes Odetta's; few other folk singers ever attempt it again, refusing to challenge her presentation of it.

Campus Briefs

"Is There A Christian Philosophy of History?" will be the topic of a talk by Father John A. Weidinger, Ph.D., to the Newman Club Sunday night. The meeting begins with supper at 5:30.

Graham Memorial will present Odetta at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Memorial Hall. The concert will be free to all UNC students upon the presentation of ID cards. Spouses will be admitted for $1.

All Carolina students interested in forming a coed Caving-Climbing Club are invited to attend a dinner meeting at 5:30 p.m. Monday in the middle upstairs room of Lenoir Hall. Persons unable to attend this meeting may contact David Danzler at 406 Mangum.

A Big Step

Week before last—on Abraham Lincoln's birthday—a group of Greensboro Negroes filed suit against two hospitals, seeking an injunction to bring an end to a "separate but equal" provision in the Hill-Burton Act.

* * *

The group—six doctors, three dentists, and two patients—accused the Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital of carrying on segregationist policies. The 11 Negroes also charged that the Wesley Long Community Hospital did not admit Negroes at all.

* * *

The case is similar to the 1954 U. S. Supreme Court case which decided that "separate educational facilities are inherently unequal," and declared the separate-but-equal principle unconstitutional. Whether the Federal court—or ultimately, the U. S. Supreme Court—will decide that the same is true of medical facilities remains to be seen.

* * *

But the complainants have a one of the patients was denied advalid point. The suit charges that mittance to Long Hospital and was similarly denied care at Cone. Although there is a Negro hospital in Greensboro, the suit claims that the "best facilities for treatment" are denied to Negroes. The suit also contends that use of facilities is denied Negro doctors and dentists.

* * *

The provision under question in the Hill-Burton Act allows for separate facilities for "separate population groups," but does not specifically mention Negroes.

* * *

As a test case, the suit has strong implications. If the provision for separate-but-equal facilities is declared unconstitutional and a ruling handed down barring such facilities, it will mean that no hospital which carries on such a policy will be eligible for funds.

* * *

In the last 15 years, according to a report, the Federal Government has assisted about 2,000 projects in 11 Southern states under the Hill-Burton Act. If the regulations for the act are changed, then it will be a big step toward integrating medical facilities in the South.

Cities Told To Wait

Congress has killed for this year President Kennedy's proposal for a Cabinet-level Department of Urban Affairs. Two types of narrow-mindedness were reflected in the House vote to deprive the 70 per cent of the population now living in cities of the kind of specialized consideration farmers have long had through the Department of Agriculture. One was the parochialism of legislators from rural districts; the other was the racism of those who did not want to see a Negro in the Cabinet.

* * *

The White House believes that it can turn this defeat into votes for Administration supporters in the elections this fall in the urban areas, and especially in the districts where Negroes predominate. The Aliance for Reaction formed by Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans has given a damaging demonstation of its ability to stop New Frontier measures. The coalition will approach future tests on school aid and on medical care for the aged with increased confidence in its capacity for obstruction.

* * *

A real setback has been suffered by the cities and the nation as a whole, for a Department of Urban Affairs is both necessary and desirable. We hope that necessity will be acknowledged and met by Congress next year.

Enter My Parlor

Some time ago we wrote a column asking where the campus Conservatives were hiding. The response was anything but sparse.

* * *

The post-office box has daily held one or more letter, from the Conservative camp. We've picked up several Conservative columnists since that writing, and about the last thing you could expect to read in this column at this point would be the slightest hint that there is a dearth of Rightest feeling at Carolina.

* * *

We were a little surprised, however, to receive a letter yesterday from the John Birch Society coordinator in High Point, inviting interested persons to organize a "discussion" group here. We are not sure the Conservatives on campus will welcome the invitation with open arms. We would even go so far as to say that the overwhelming majority of them will be a little insulted.

* * *

The Liberals, on the other hand, will no doubt welcome any Bircher cordially.

* * *

Warmly, in fact.

"Hmph —There's Nothing In Those Silos But People"

Reader Challenges Bookseller Smith

Mr. King,

I believe the consensus here at Carolina is that the Book Ex. and the Intimate Book Shop are concerned with making a high profit in the sale of textbooks. However, this is not the reason for my writing.

Rather, I was interested in reading the letter written by the proprietor of the Intimate, Mr. Paul Smith. It seemed to be a brief explanation of the profit margin in the retail book business.

Now, Mr. Smith has made an interesting point in explaining the costs and profits of retailing ten dollar texts in his "Shop." And it is ironical to me that I have recently priced a text, which he sells, for ten dollars. I priced the same book at the Book Exchange for seven dollars and seventy-three cents.

Therefore, will Mr. Smith now write another letter, in answer to this one of mine, to explain why this is the case—why he is charging ten dollars for A History of Russia by J. D. Clarkson when the same book—textbook—is two dollars and twenty-seven cents less at the Book Ex.?

Thank you.

Bircher Invites Discussion Here

To The Editor:

In your issue of February 13, I read your editorial and the announcement of the "new left." It's about time they received some mention, they have been around from the days of Socrates.

Left of Kennedy? I doubt it. If he had his way, I doubt that there would be anything LEFT to give away which is the pastime of the Left.

If Jim Clotfelter had six feet he'd manage to get them all in his mouth at one time. He continually espouses more and more Government giveaways, which require taxes, and then advocates tax-dodging cooperatives for book sales.

Perhaps some students who believe in sanctity of the individual would like to form a discussion group. I would be glad to organize such a group. Interested parties may write to me at: 2503 Darden St., High Point, N. C.

Sincerely,

Arthur S. Lyon, Coordinator
John Birch Society.

THE RESPONSIBLE CITIZEN

How Do You Teach Democracy?

One view of the educational implications of Francis Gary Powers' Moscow trial is offered here by Raymond English, professor of political science at Kenyon College in Gambier, Ohio.

"Q. Defendant, did you realize whether by intruding into the airspace of the Soviet Union you were violating the sovereignty of the USSR?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you think now you did your country a good or bad service?

A. I would say a very bad service . . . .

Q. Did it occur to you that a flight might provoke military conflict?

A. The people who sent me should have thought of these things. My job was to carry out orders. I do not think it was my responsibility to make such decisions.

Q. Do you regret making this flight?

A. Yes, very much."

This exchange, in which U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers exposed his lack of political sophistication before a 1960 Russian tribunal which sentenced him to 10 years in prison for spying, was abruptly recalled last week when the 32-year-old airman was dramatically released in exchange of convicted Soviet spy Rudolph Abel.

Among other things, Americans who remembered the trial recalled that Mr. Powers (a) exposed his unawareness of any reasons which his government might have to suspect the aggressive preparations of a totalitarian dictatorship confessedly dedicated to burying his own country; (b) admitted that he knew nothing about politics, and (c) confessed that he was principally motivated by the desire to earn money on a fairly lavish scale.

Pews Is Not an Exception

Most of us, in similar circumstances would probably have behaved as unheroically as the pilot of the U-2. We are an unheroic lot, the spineless, latter-day generations of a civilization upon which the barbarians appear to be closing in. And, no doubt ,even if the pilot had possessed vigorous moral and political loyalties based on real intellectual conviction, the Russians would not have brought him to trial until they had thoroughly broken his spirit.

But the disquieting evidence, for Americans and for the whole world was that little pressure was needed to make this man appear as he did —as a mercenary, rather than a free citizen serving with affection and honor. The episode was crimsonly embarrassing.

Unfortunately, the incident must be brought back to mind. We must keep bringing it back, just as we must keep remembering the revelations of self-like political indifference in many prisoners-of-war of the Korean conflict. We must remember these things, and ask: Why does the country which is the leader of the "Free World" produce citizens who appear to know neither the meaning of freedom nor the imperative loyalty which freedom demands? The captured intelligence report from a Chinese interrogator in Korea can hardly be repeated too often:

"The American soldier has weak loyalties: to his family, his community, his country, his religion, and to his fellow soldier. He is ignorant of social values social conflicts, and tensions. There is little or no knowledge or understanding, even among American university graduates, of U. S. political history and philosophy; the Federal, state, and community organizations; states' and civil rights, freedoms, safeguards, and how these allegedly operate within his own decadent system."

The Problem of Cynicism

The indictment is painfully near the truth. Conceivably, the young men and women of 1960 are less cynical and ignorant than those of 1950. Yet a short while ago a student—a frank, manly, likeable 20-year-old—chose in an examination to write an essay in answer to the question: "What would you do, if you were a prisoner-of-war in Communist hands, and saw that your fellow prisoners were being affected by Communist propaganda?" His answer, excruciating as it is, deserves to be quoted:

"Now what could I do? I can just imagine the situation, stuck in some hole for two years, eating a half cup of rice, hardly any clothing, and my fellow prisoners treating each other worse than the Communists do. My widowed mother back home not collecting her pension because some politician, who is a cheat or a crook, thinks that if you hold any job after 65 you don't get pensions . . . The officers in the army getting the warm clothing 10 miles from the front while we freeze doing the dirty work.

"And after taking American history and political science courses I know that our whole constitution is a farce . . . And the minority groups, Negro, Catholic, Jew, are being held back. Most Americans are greedy and money hungry and don't give a damn about the guys in the prison camp.

"What would I do? — I'd keep my mouth shut."

This is an unusually honest if rather bad-tempered, statement of a legitimate and perhaps fairly widespread point of view. Granted the right of the young man to have strong opioions of his own, we cannot repress a certain revulsion not only at his failure to grasp the real and profound contrasts between a relatively free social and political system (with all its imperfections) and a totalitarian system, but at his conscious rejection of any personal responsibility in the predicament.

If he can feel so totally irresponsible in an imaginary situation, one wonders how he will react in a real one. Above all, one searches for indications of the idealism of youth —for a trace of love, faith, chivalry, and self-sacrifice.

These are extreme illustrations of a social malaise which troubles the free societies in varying degrees. Comparable cynicism and worse ignorance doubtles gnaw secretly at the totalitarian societies, but the diseases of slave-states can hardly comfort the free. Nor can the remedies used by such states—censorship, narrow indoctrination, heresy-hunting, brain-washing, and terroristic inquisitions—be usefully imitated.

This point must be underlined since many of us are periodically tempted to take the short-cut of indoctrination instead of the long rough road of education. We fail to notice that the short-cut does not lead to the same destination as the long road.

If political education is indeed one major remedy to the problem, we find three questions before us. First, are we not already doing a good job of political education in America? The answer seems to be: NO! All along the line, the institutions of education—family, church, schools, colleges, service clubs, labor nions, political parties, the media of mass-communication—are generally doing a fumbling job in the field of preparing and maintaining the knowledge of the values the facts, and the personal qualities needed by free men.

Vigilance Is the Price

The second question is more tricky: Can you have political education without turning it willy-nilly, into political indoctrination? The answer here must be that the price of political education for liberty is eternal vigilance, and that if we cannot maintain the distinction we deserve to lose our fredom. The working hypothesis of a free society must be on the following lines:

It is probably true that the price of liberty is a great deal of intellectual confusion and much emotional suffering and rebellion. In Russia or Communist China, as in Nazi Germany, the Party creates its prearranged contradictions and imposes hate, love, and suffering upon the subject people according to the calculated requirements of the regime. But in Western European democracies and the United States, the individual citizen must find his own way through conflicting values and interests, deciding what to love, what (not whom) to hate, and what to suffer and sacrifice for.

This does not necessarily mean that there are no social norms or no absolute ethical values in free, constitutional states, but it does mean that in such states no government or monopolistic party will or may dictate and indoctrinate such norms or values. If the norms and values are correct, they must—we assume —be fairly self-evident, so that the free man or woman will come to accept them thoughtfully, securely, and voluntarily.

What Kind of Education?

So we come to question number three: What sort of education will help men and women to choose freely and rightly? Notice, as a fundamental necessary assumption, that, although our working hypothesis is that correct norms and values are voluntarily discoverable, we must also recognize that they are not easy to discover.

On the contrary, they are at least as difficult as mathematics or physics or the mastering of a foreign language. They call not only for hard work and hard learning of facts and ideas, but for training in mental and emotional self-discipline; for the clutivation of the imagination; and for the steady and critical acquisition of sophisticated personal and vicarious experience of one's self, one's social environment, and one's relation to the world, mankind, and to God.

Courage (moral and physical), self-control, self-sacrifice, loyalty, kindness, honesty (intellectual and economic), and similar basic qualities of the free life do not "come naturally," although they are correct and admirable. What come naturally are selfishness, laziness, cowardice, greed, dishonesty, cruelty. Thus one tremendous task of education in home and in school is to expose the individual to the full implications and responsibilities of the free life.

The process of exposure involves great efforts for teacher and student. Those efforts are not being made. During the past four years, vast heavings on the bootstraps of scientfic and linguistic cuedation have been seen. But in literature and in history—the two areas where young people learn most about the great human problems and the ideas, values and errors of free men and free societies—little toughening of curricular or instruction has been attempted.

Are we equipped even to know how little we know? How much so-called education in politics at school consists of visits to the waterworks or the post office, or preaching about the duty of voting? How little effort goes into revealing the staggering problems of power-politics, moral decisions, strategic calculations, geographic relationship, economic and ideological factors, mass-hysteria, racial tensions, emotional catchwords, the nature of propaganda, patterns of recent history, and so on?

The liberal education ought to be part of the business of the schools, and the liberal education is a grim and exacting business. There is little enough of it left in the universities and colleges. We ought to try it again sometime.

SYLVIA MULLINS

ALTON HOPEWELL

Mr., Miss Student Teachers Named

Alton Oliver Hopewell, mathematics major from Jamesville, N. C., has been chosen by the students and faculty of the UNC School of Education as "Mr. Student Teacher of 1962," and Sylvia Deas Mullins, English major from Macon, Mississippi, as "Miss Student Teacher." Mr. Hopewell and Miss Mullins will represent the Student NEA at the North Carolina Education Association Convention in Raleigh, March 15-17.

Selection was on the basis of leadership, scholarship, character, and promise as a teacher.

Mr. Hopewell has participated in dormitory activities at UNC and has edited a dorm paper. He has been a member of the SNEA for the past two years and is currently serving as vice-president. For the past five years he has served as a counselor at a summer camp. leader and class teacher in his He has also been active as a youth local church.

Miss Mullins attended Millsap College in Jackson, Mississippi. for two years. At UNC she is a member of the Valkyries, secretary of Kappa Delta Sorority, on the executive committee of the YWCA, and president of the SNEA. She has also been a consistent member of the Dean's List.

Rhine Studies Mental Powers Of Telepathy

By Bill Wuamett
And Linda Cravotta

A woman dreamed that the landlord came to her door carrying a large bunch of funeral flowers wrapped in green silk paper. He laid the flowers across her arms. She turned without a word and carried them into the kitchen. All day the dream haunted her. That evening her husband was killed in a mine disaster.

After the funeral her landlord told her that he had ordered a floral piece but it had not been delivered in time for the funeral. Later that day she answered a knock on the door, and there stood the landlord with the identical floral piece across his arms. She reached out, took the flowers without a word, and carried them into the kitchen.

Occurences such as this happen with such frequency and accuracy that it is impossible to overlook them as mere coincidences, states Dr. J. B. Rhine, world authority on extra-sensory perception (ESP) and head of the Parapsychology Laboratory of Duke University.

Certain persons have regularly demonstrated over long periods of time that they can "read the minds" of other persons. Others have experienced phrophetic abilities to fortell the future. Many gamblers have a "card sense" which enables them to know which cards to play at what time. Some have had success with influencing the roll of dice. Almost everyone at one time or another has been able to sense the exact thoughts of another person as if that person were speaking aloud.

The fact that human beings can gain knowledge without the aid of the physical senses of sight, hearing, etc. is becoming more and more widely accepted, especially among younger people, Dr. Rhine stated.

The cause of these abilities is not yet known by modern psychology. Most psychologists, in fact, refuse to accept evidence of extra-sensory phenomena which have been reported. "It has been the work of parapsychology," Dr. Rhine said, "to bring these apparently non-physical occurences together for careful scientific study."

Dr. Rhine and his associates are always willing to administer tests to anyone who feels that he is "psychic" and even to those who have never had such experiences. Extra-sensory perception is not restricted to a few gifted people, according to Dr. Rhine who now believes that everyone is capable of E.S.P. at some time during their lives.

Extra-sensory perception occurs commonly said Dr. Rhine, exemplified by feelings such as "this has happened before" or "I knew that I shouldn't have gotten out of bed this morning," or "It happened this way in my dream."

The fame of Dr. Rhine has spread throughout the world to the extent that the many books he has written have been published in a number of different languages. The most recent volume about E.S.P., from which the "landlord" incident was drawn, was published by his wife last year. Authors such as Aldous Huxley frequent the Duke University campus for the sole purpose of talking to Dr. Rhine about his latest discoveries.

Dr. Rhine's unique career has taken turn from pre-ministerial studies to botany to psychical research (i.e.) the study of the "psychi"." After studying religion and science, he decided that both were too narrow in their interpretations of man and of life. Firmly committed to the idea that there was something more to man than pure machinery, Dr. Rhine and his wife decided to examine scientifically those seemingly non-scientific happenings to man which religion called "miracles" and science called "coincidences."

Their work ultimately brought them to Duke University where they studied under the distinguished psychologist, Professor William McDougal who was on leave there from Harvard University. Rhine eventually became a professor of psychology at Duke, while he continued with his E.S.P. research.

In 1935, the Parapsychology Laboratory of Duke University came into being. In 1950, Rhine resigned his teaching position in the Department of Psychology and assumed the full-time directorship of the Laboratory, which was by then independent of the Psychology Department.

Dr. Rhine, who sees a definite upsurge in interest and acceptance of E.S.P., is not discouraged by its lack of recognition to date. He bases the refusal of many to accept E.S.P. on the grounds that they fear it. "Look at hypnosis," he commented, " its existence has been known for 200 years and it has only recently come into use in medicine."

Can She Control The Dice?

DR. RHINE RECORDS the way the dice fall in a PK test. The Duke co-ed is concentrating on willing them to fall with the "target face" turned up—the face selected at the start of the test run.

Janus Gives Dates For Fittings

The Society of Janus has announced its UNC blazer fitting on Tuesday, February 27 featuring blazers for all students. This one-day fitting from 11 to 4:30 in Graham Memorial will offer a wide choice of colors, including white, navy, charcoal grey, and the popular Carolina Blue. In addition to the UNC crest inlaid in the pocket, "extras" include piped or plain edging. pre-shrunk fabrics, and an additional plain pocket for after-graduation use.

Founded for the purpose of recognizing students, faculty members, and administration officials who have rendered outstanding service improving dormitory life, the Society of Janus annually presents the Robert White Linker Scholarship Award to a needing and outstanding undegraduate who has excelled and contributed outstandingly to the University community.

Awards are also made each year to the dormitory intra-mural champion. Also during the Spring semester each year, new students are recognized by Janus for their outstanding work.

UNC Students Are Winners Of Grants

Two UNC students are among the winners of the fifth annual Z. Smith Reynolds Scholarships for study at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

They are David John Goode, 21, and William Fred Harriss, 22. Both are seniors at UNC. They will enter medical school there next September.

Goode is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Goode of Winston-Salem. Harriss is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Harriss of High Point.

The scholars are selected by the medical school committee on admissions on the basis of character, scholarship, potential as a physician and financial need.

The scholarships, ranging in size from $2,400 to $4,800 per year, provide for the cost of four years of the medical curriculum and for each of two years of hospital or postgraduate training.

In order to become eligible for a Reynolds Scholarship, a student must have been a legal resident of North Carolina for at least two years prior to registration in medical school. The scholarship requirements further provide that the recipients must follow their profession in North Carolina for at least five years after completing formal medical training.

The formal presentation of the scholarships will be made at an awards banquet April 6.

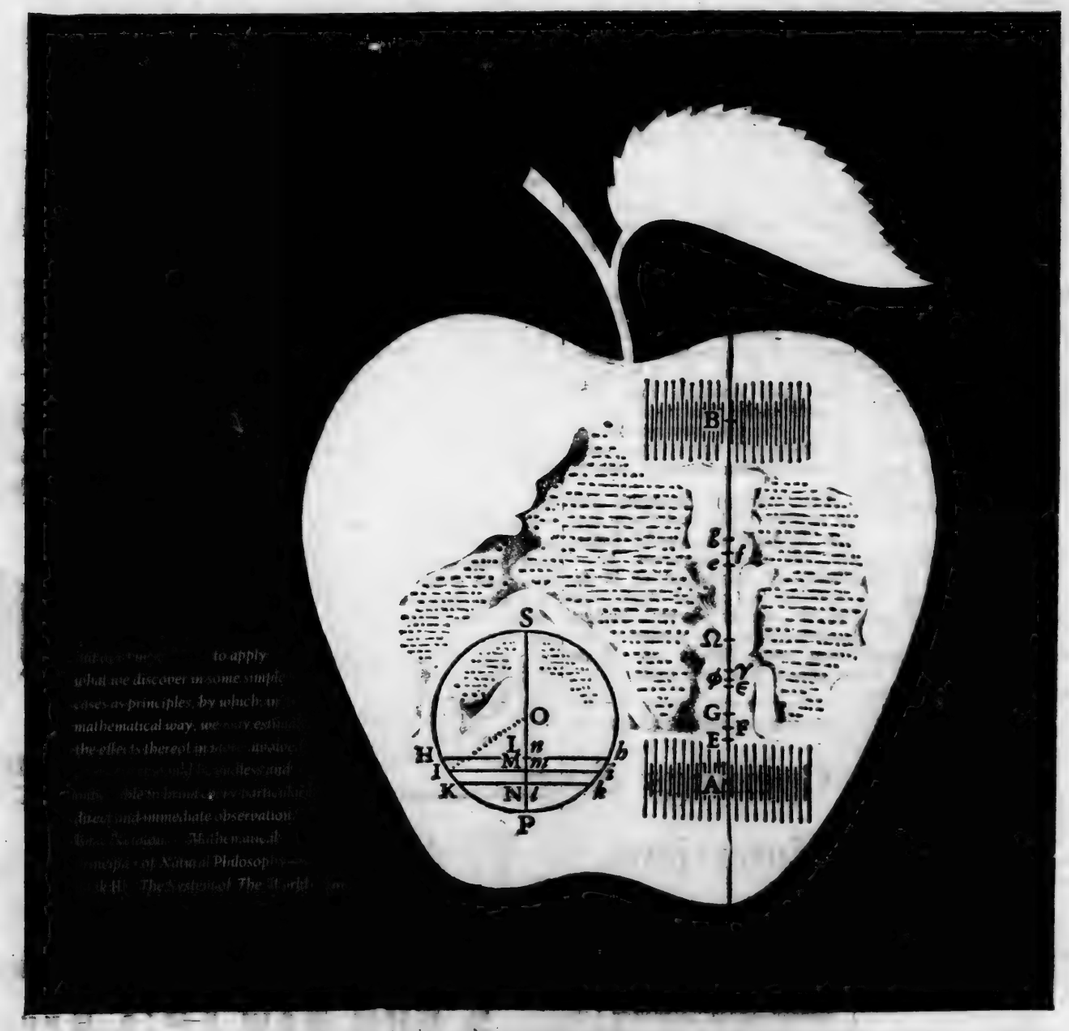
Mathematicians for Space Technology Leadership



In disciplines that follow the tradition of Newton, Mathematicians at Space Technology Laboratories, Inc. seek "principles" for the analysis and evaluation of complex data as a means of accelerating man's conquest of space. At STL, those responsible for Space Technology Leadership look to the Computation and Data Reduction Center to identify and evaluate applied mathematical principles from diverse observations. In so doing, STL Mathematicians may employ advanced digital processing techniques in solving problems and analyzing data acquired from ballistic missile and space vehicle programs. Mathematicians who seek greater stimulus and responsibility are invited to communicate with Dr. R. C. Potter, Manager of Professional Placement and Development, at STL, an equal opportunity employer.

Duke's Blue Devils Topple Carolina By 82-74

Mullen And Mullins Key Methodist Win

By ED DUPREE
DTH Sports Editor

Jack Mullen played less than seven minutes Saturday afternoon, but his presence was enough to pick up a stumbling Duke team and paste an 82-74 defeat on North Carolina's Tar Heels.

The 5-11 Blue Devil guard rode the bench for the first 32 minutes of the game because of a case of bursitis in his left shoulder but when coach Dean Smith's men whittled away at a 13-point Duke lead and finally pulled ahead 58-57 on a back-handed lay-up by Jim Donohue, Blue Devil coach Vic Bubas prepared to insert his 26-year old floor general.

Jeff Mullins, the game's high scorer with 25 points, pushed the Dukes back into the lead, and after a time out Mullen entered the game. General Mullen took charge of the Blue Devil team and quickly disappointed the hopes o fthe aroused Carolina fans.

He artfully set up plays, fed his taller teammates, blocked a Jim Hudock shot, snared three rebounds, and scored four points as Duke outscored UNC, 23-16 in the closing minutes.

The final ten minutes was almost completely M-time for the visitors from Durham. Mullen, Mullins, and Buzz Mewhort scored all but four of Duke's 28 points during that time. The M-spree started at the 10:10 mark when Mullins hit a jump shot to give Duke a 54-52 lead.

Shaffer Sizzles

The score had been 54-46 when Carolina's spectacular Charlie Shaffer pulled the Tar Heels into a close game with three consecutive 30-foot jump shots from the left side. After Mullins' basket Bryan McSweeney layed one in to make it 56-54, Duke. Again Mr. Shaffer came to the rescue with his fourth swisher in a row from the same magic spot to tie the score.

A foul shot by Mewhort was followed by Donohue's two-pointer but at the 8:36 mark Mullins' basket put Duke into the lead to stay.

Enter Mullen. Mewhort made good on two straight jump shots, Mullen added two points, Mullins chalked up a free throw, and Mewhort poured in another and when the Blue Devil smoke had cleared, it was 68-58, Duke.

Larry Brown, the Tar Heel playmaker guard, narrowed the lead to 68-60. The 5-11 junior guard was all over the court, but had trouble with his passes on numerous occasions and made good on only seven of 19 shots from the floor. His 5-6 on the foul line gave him high-scoring honors for UNC with 19.

Art Heyman made it 69-60 with a charity toss and Hudock countered with a push shot to close the gap to seven. That was as close as Dean Smith's charges were able to come.

Hudock Fouls Out

Mewhort scored again with a field goal and seconds later was fouled by Hudock. It was Hudock's fifth personal and the 6-8 UNC forward left the game with eight points for the afternoon. Mewhort hit both of his free tosses.

A charging foul against Brown gave Duke the ball and Mullen connected with 2:40 to go to make it 75-62.

Donnie Walsh scored eight markers in the final two and a half minutes, but his effort was not enough as the seventh-ranked Devils captured their 11th ACC victory and kept alive their hopes of tieing Wake Forest for the regular season top spot. The Deacons played South Carolina Saturday night. The Dukes finished the regular season with a 19-4 overall mark.

The Chapel Hillians stayed with the Durham County invaders for eight minutes, but Jim Hudock's free throw with 12:26 to go in the period was UNC's last first half lead. Jay Buckley added a one-pointer to make it 10-10. Little Bill Ulrich and Heyman scored a pair each, but a soft jumper by Shaffer and a dazzling 30-foot set by Brown knotted the score at 14-14.

Heyman, Harrison, and Mullins acounted for six points in the next minute and Duke took control for the remainder of the half.

With Mullins scoring eight for Duke in a six-minute span, and Donohue, Walsh, and Mike Cooke supplying the UNC points, Smith's men found themselves down 32-22 at the 3:15 mark. Heyman, who had a miserable day from the floor with three for 19 and only 12 points, scored four in this short period.

Sophs Stand Out

The final three minutes saw a couple of sophomores dominate the point making. Carolina's Shaffer scored on two straight field goals and Duke's Buzzy Harrison countered with one of his own. Shaffer scored again with 1:27 left, but Harrison made the half time score, 36-28 Duke, by hitting on a pair of free throws.

Just as they had done in the first half, Smith's basketballers fought on even terms with the visitors for the opening five minutes o fthe last half laf. Another 30-foot two-handed set shot by Brown closed the Duke advantage to 46-39, but then it seemed that the blue persied Devils might make a rout of it.

Buckley, the 6-10 soph center, hit a basket and was fouled by Shaffer. The lean Duke added the one-pointer. His three-point play was followed by one from Harrison and the Blue Devils again had a commanding lead at 52-39.

The hottest Tar Heel streak of the warm February afternoon then made the backyard battle the tight game it always is. Before a regional television audience and 5,000 screaming Carolina partisans, the underdog Tar Heels shook Woollen Gym with their comeback attempt.

Donohue connected with a stylish hook from the right side, Brown hit a twisting lay-up and a foul shot, and Donohue added two free tosses. A two-pointer by diminutive Ulrich was Duke's only accomplishment during this time.

Mullins missed a pair of foul shots, but the man who fouled him was Hudock who left the game seconds later with four fouls on his back. Then Shaffer ripped the cords for his six straight points to make it 54-52. Mewhort, Mullen, and Mullins took over and the Methodist victory was written into the books.

Both teams were dull from the floor in the first half. With Mullins scoring 18 points in the opening 20 minutes, the Dukes shot only 39.3 per cent. UNC's mark was even poorer, 37.5.

The Dukes lead at the half and won the game on the foul line. While Carolina hit on only four of eight foul shots in the first stanza, Duke chalked up 14 of 17 for 82.4 per cent. For the game, Duke finished with 24-30, UNC 14-19.

The second half's field goal shooting was fantastic. Each team hit 18 shots. UNC tried 31 for .581 per cent and the Methodists tried 30 for .546 per cent.

The hottest hand was Shaffer's. The 6-3 Chapel Hill native amazed the fans with his dazzling 20-foot jumpers and ended the action-packed contest with eight of ten shots and 16 points.

Donnie Walsh hit seven of 13 and also scored 16. Other UNC scorers were Hudock eight, Donohue eight, Cooke four, and McSweeney three.

After hitting a sizzling six of eight free tosses in the first half, Mullins finished with eight-14 and nine of 11 fouls for his 25 markers. Mewhort, hitting five of his seven field goal attempts and three straight on the charity stripe, scored 13. Harrison was second high for Duke with 16 and the herald scoring machine Heyman added 12.

The tremendous defensive play of Hudock, Cooke, and Walsh kept the All-American hopeful bottled up. He tried numerous forced shots and missed 13 of 16 for probably the poorest day's work in his varsity career. Buckley added eight for the Methodist Flats team, while Ulrich and Mullen countered with four each.

Blue Imps Edge Tar Babies For Big Four Frosh Title

By Curry Kirkpatrick
DTH Asst. Sports Editor

Duke University rode its tremendous height advantage and some clutch foul shooting to the unofficial ACC freshman championship Friday night as the invaders from Durham edged Carolina's Tar Babies 67-64.

The Blue Imps, down by three with eight minutes remaining in this frenzied battle of attrition, pulled it out on two free throws apiece by guards Elliot McBride and Dennis Ferguson.

Having led by as much as six points in the early going, Duke found itself trailing 60-57 when UNC's Jay Neary canned two foul shots. At this point, the Blue Imps' 7-0 center Hack Tison, who had been on the bench saddled with four personal fouls, returned to the game. The big boy from Geneva, Ill. proceeded to hit two jumpers and a foul shot to give Duke a 62-60 lead it never relinguished.

Bill Brown hit a one-hander with 3:38 left but Tison netted another free throw and a minute later, McBride, fouled by Brown, contributed his two clutch charity tosses, which gave the Imps a three-point margin at 65-62.

However, it was far from over. UNC's Pud Hassell sunk a 20-footer to cut the lead to one and when big Tison was called for charging and eliminated from the game, Carolina was back in business.

With 1:22 remaining on the clock, Neary, by benefit of Tison's foul, was at the line. Jay missed his one-and-one situation but the Tar Babies regained possession and worked the ball to Ray Respess. He, too, missed and this time Duke was not to be denied. The Imps grabbed the ball and started a freeze but this strategy backfired when with 25 seconds left, Ron Herbster was called for traveling.

With Woollen Gym in an uproar, UNC coach Ken Rosemond called time out. On resumption of play, the Tar Babies went into a freeze of their own, looking for the good shot. Hassell took it but the ball fell short, setting the stage for Duke's Ferguson to wrap it up. The six-footer, fouled by Neary in a scramble for Hassell's rebound, calmly sank both free throws to give the Imps their final 67-64 advantage.

Carolina, which had beaten Duke in their first meeting, 74-62, only to lose the return match by an 81-60 margin, matched the Imps basket for basket in the first half.

With 49 seconds left in that opening period, the score was knotted at 33-all, when Brown dropped in a foul shot. Duke's 6-7 forward Brent Kitching went him one better as the Sharon Hills, Pa. ace sunk two charity tosses to give the Imps a one-point lead.

Then Carolina's Respess pulled off one of the prettiest plays of the year. The 6-4 Pantego flash, leaping off balance out of bounds to "save" the ball, hurled it downcourt to Neary cutting for the basket and Jay layed it in as the buzzer sounded to give the Tar Babies a 36-35 halftime lead.

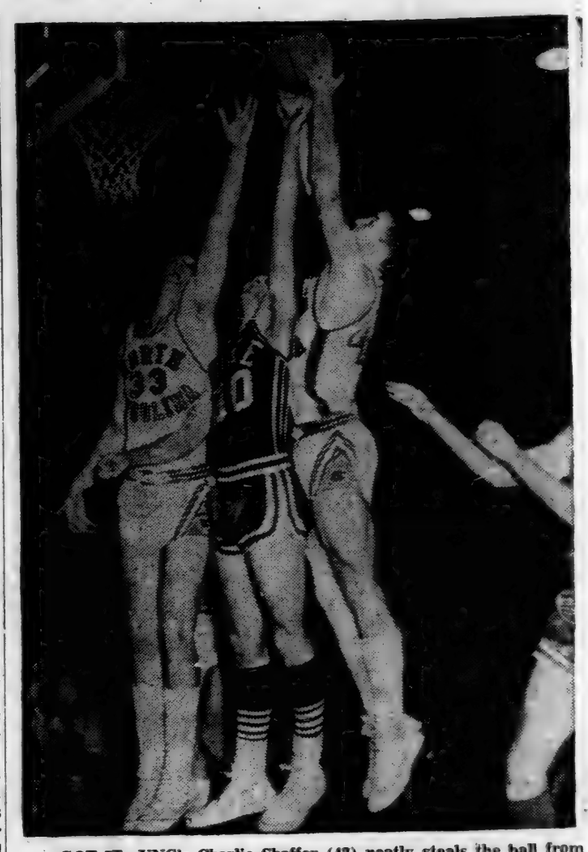
For Duke, which shot 42.6 per cent from the floor to Carolina's 38.7, it was all Tison in the first half. The skyscraper, who like ex-Tar Baby star Billy Cunningham, is a left-hander, scored 20 of his game high 26 points in the opening half. For the game, big Hack was 10 for 17 from the floor while clearing the boards for 15 rebounds.

The 6-7 Kitching hit six of his 13 field goal attempts and added four free throws to finish with 16 points while Ferguson, the Imps floor leader, chimed in with 10.

The Tar Babies, who although dwarfed by the taller Duke squad were outrebounded only by 40-35, had four men in double figures. Neary led with 18 points on seven of 20 floor attempts and four free throws. Brown was four for four from the field and added six charity markers for a total of 14, while Respess had 13 and led the Tar Babies in rebounding with 12.

Duke was charged with two technical fouls in the first half. The first came when the Blue Imps' Ted Mann, son of Duke's publicity director, took a swing at UNC's Brown in a scuffle for the ball. Both boys were restrained, however, and the trouble disappeared. Remarks from the Duke bench provoked another outburst a few minutes later and the Imps were assessed one more technical.

Carolina finished the year with a 13-4 mark while coach Bucky Walters' Durham cagers were 15-2 on the season.



GOT IT—UNC's Charlie Shaffer (42) neatly steals the ball from Blue Devil Buzzy Harrison during yesterday's game. Shaffer made 8 of 10 from the floor to add 16 points to the Tar Heel score. Aiding Shaffer is Jim Hudock (33). Hudock sank 3 for 9 from the floor, and 2 for 3 from the line for 8 points. —Photo by Jim Wallace

Bubas And Smith Commend Mullen

By Curry Kirkpatrick

"Our bench did it."

Duke Coach Vic Bubas was emphatic in praising the reserves of his Blue Devil basketball team and the effect they had on the 82-74 victory over UNC yesterday in Woollen Gym.

"Ulrich (Bill) and Mewhort (Buzz) did a tremendous job out there today and gave us the points when we needed them," Bubas added as he stood amidst reporters in the narrow corridor outside the Duke locker room.

On queried whether he thought he had th best bench strength in the league, Bubas, hot and perspiring from the 70 plus-degree weather, replied, "I can't say that we have the best but I will predict that the tournamnt (the ACC tourney starting Thursday) winner will have the best and I hope that's us."

"Jack Mullen has bursitis in the shoulder and was in traction last week. But when we called on him, he was ready. I thought he was a big factor after Carolina had caught up in the second half."

Asked if Art Heyman was still feeling the effects of a mid-January ankle injury, the Blue Devil mentor said, "Art's all right. He just had a poor day. He'll be ready on Thursday."

The Tar Heels held Heyman to 12 points and limited the All-American to just three of 16 shots from the floor. This factor was echoed by Coach Dean Smith over in the Carolina dressing room.

"We played good defense today," said Smith, "and I thought Hudock (Jim) and Walsh (Don) did job on Heyman."

"I've never seen any team miss so many easy shots as we did in the early stages of this game."

Swimmers Win ACC Finals, But Terps Take Championship

By ED DUPREE

North Carolina's swimmers used their depth to take first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference swimming finals at Raleigh Saturday, but Maryland's mermen won the overall ACC championship.

After finishing third in the regular season with losses to Maryland, 49-46, and N. C. State, 50-45, coach Pat Earey's blue dolphins scored 128 to Maryland's 110½ in the finals. State, the second place team in th regular season, finished with 99½.

The season's overall standings, based on an 8, 7, 6 scoring system for the regular season and the finals gives the Terps 15 points and top spot. UNC finished with 14 and State was third with 13.

Thompson Mann set a new ACC record in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 56.1 seconds. In the same event, UNC's Jim Huffman was third and Barry King finished fifth.

Mann's first record time was set in the morning preliminaries, but he matched it in the finals. The Tar Heel sophomore joined Bob Briggs, Harry Schiffman, and Bob Bilbro to take first place in the 400-yard medley relay.

Mann was the only Tar Heel to win an individual event, but at least two Carolina swimmers placed in each of the other events. Mann also took top spot in the 200-backstroke Friday night with a time of 2:04.9, while Willie Bloom took the 220-freestyle title with a 2:08.8 timing.

Pete Fogarsy of State took the 100-yard breaststroke Saturday in 1:04. His preliminary timing of 1:03.2 bettered the record he set last year.

State's second All-American swimmer, Ed Spencer, set a new record in the 440-yard freestyle with a 4:39.4 time. Bloom, Frank Lea and Art Merrill of UNC finished three, four, five in that event to give UNC nine points, without taking the top spot.

Other first place winners were: Friday—Spencer in the 200-butterfly; Smokey Ellis, NCS, 50-free; Fogarasy, 200-breast; Ron Squiers, Md., 1-meter diving; and UNC, 400-free style relay.

Saturday—Spencer, 100-butterfly; McGinty, NCS, and Gilson, Md., tie in 110-freestyle; and Sandy Patterson, UNC, 3-meter diving (did not count in team scoring).

Merrill Sets Swim Mark

North Carolina freshman swimmer Harrison Merrill, who cracked three national collegiate freshman records last Monday and Saturday, lowered his 220-yard freestyle mark by 1.6 seconds.

His time of 2:02.7—bettering the previous standard of 2:05.2 held by Murray Rose of Southern California since 1958—was achieved in a dual meet between the Carolina freshmen and Myers Park high schools.

Last Monday, within 5 and a half hours, Merrill broke freshman records in the 1500-meter and 220-and 440-yard freestyle events. Coach Dick Jamerson called the performance "one of the most fantastic I have ever seen or heard of."

Myers Park 200 medley relay and 200 freestyle relay teams broke state high school records. Mac McGarity of Myers Park broke the state high school 200 individual medley mark with a time of 1:21.4.

Carolina won the meet by winning the last relay. Score was 49-45.

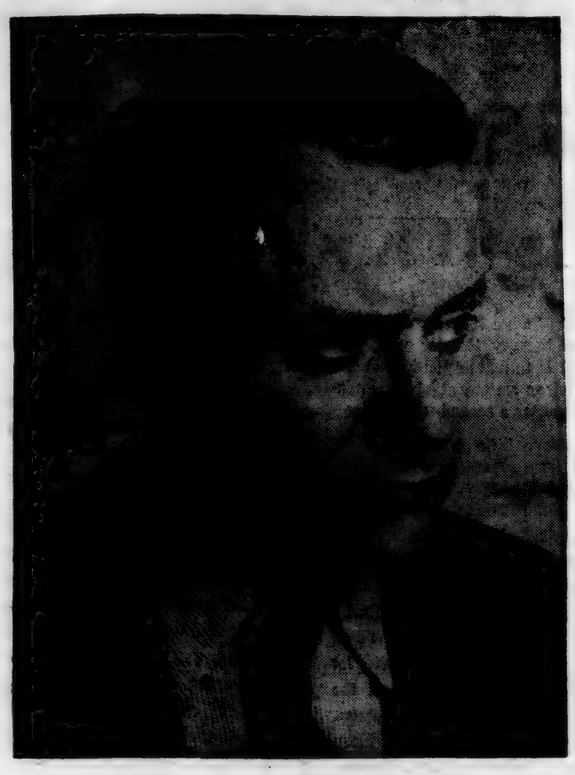
Reston Accepts Bid To Deliver Closing Speech At Symposium



James B. (Scotty) Reston

To Speak On Revolutions And Impact

James B. Reston, Washington Bureau chief for the New York Times, has been named as one of the speakers for the '62 Symposium. Reston, whose two sons have been students at UNC, will address the symposium on the final night.

Reston, whom Newsweek called one of the columnists JFK reads every morning, will analyze the impact of today's revolutions on the American citizen and the university student. "Today's Revolutions" is the theme of the entire symposium.

The Symposium will last from April 1-5. Among others who have been slated to speak is Crane Brinton, Harvard professor and author of "The Anatomy of Revolution."

Since James Reston joined The Times in its London Bureau in 1939, he has been reporting international and national events. He remained in London until January, 1941, when he returned to the United States to work at the Washington Bureau, where he specialized in diplomatic and foreign affairs.

Early in 1943, he was made an assistant to the publisher Arthur Hays Sulzberger, and later that year returned to London as acting head of The Times Bureau. In January, 1945, he became national correspondent covering important national and international political developments. He became head of the Washington Bureau in 1953.

Reston was born in Clydebank, Scotland, on November 3, 1909. His parents brought him to the United States in 1910, and while he received some of his elementary school education in Scotland, he has lived in this country since 1920. He was educated in the public schools of Dayton, Ohio, and at the University of Illinois where he was graduated in 1932.

A journalism major at the University of Illinois, he waited on tables, earned athletic letters in golf and soccer, became president of his fraternity, and, somehow, came up with "wobbly" C's in two courses on Russian history. He worked for the Springfield (Ohio) Daily News and also as sports publicity director for Ohio State University.

He served for a year as traveling secretary for the Cincinnati Baseball Club under Larry MacPhail. Mr. Reston joined the staff of the Associated Press in New York City as a sports writer in 1934.

In New York he also wrote features, worked on the Associated Press city and cable staffs and wrote a New York column. In 1937, The Associated Press sent him to London where he covered major sports events in the summer and the Foreign Office in the winter. He joined the London Bureau of The New York Times in 1939, and remained there until he joined the Washington Bureau of The New York Times in 1941.

On leave of absence from The Times in 1942 during the war, he served as head of the Information Service of the Office of War Information in the American Embassy in London.

Mr. Reston was awarded the 1944 Pulitzer Prize for his news dispatches and interpretative articles on the Dumbarton Oaks Security Conference.

Baker Lashes Democrats On Racial Issue

"The basis of the one party system in North Carolina and other southern states," UNC-YDC President Earl Baker stated yesterday, "emanates from a systematic effort by the Democratic party to permanently deprive Negroes of the voting franchise and a voice in government."

Baker made the statement in connection with the upcoming YRC-YDC debate on the topic: "Resolved, that the one party system in North Carolina has been detrimental to the best interests of the citizens and the state."

"This phase in the history of the Democratic party in North Carolina," Baker said concerning the origin of the state Democratic party, "is certainly not one which any Democrat could be proud of.

"High-tax Terry Sanford, renowned for his vigor of speech and lucidity of expression, has stated that 'North Carolina needs a two party system like a mechanized farm needs a plug mule.' This graphically illustrates the dearth of a real desire for representative democracy in our state on the part of the Democratic machine."

The debate will be held in the law school courtroom (210 Manning) on Wednesday night at 7:30. The debaters will be Earl Baker and Mack Armstrong for the YRC and Johnny Killian and Joe Roberts for the YDC.

WRITES ARTICLE

The Rev. Robert L. Johnson, director of the Wesley Foundation at the University, has written an article for the March issue of "Classmate," a publication of The Methodist Church, published in Nashville, Tennessee. The article is entitled "New Wineskins for New Wines."

UP Names Inman Allen To Head Spring Slate

A series of discussions on "Today's Revolutions," to run in conjunction with the '62 Symposium. Shown left is Dr. Dan Patterson of the UNC English Department, who spoke at the Tri-Delta house on the subject of Revolutions in Literature. Others shown are Norris Johnson, Elizabeth Frazier. Dr. Johnson noted that there have been no real revolutions in literature in the past two decades. He explained that most originality comes from looking backward, and that no new trends have originated since the last war.

McDevitt And Criswell Are Nominated

By Harry W. Lloyd

The University Party, campaigning to regain the student government power it lost last year, nominated Inman Allen for president of the student body in a party convention last night that had only one contest.

There were three nominations by acclamation for the four top offices. Larry McDevitt, a junior, will campaign for vice-president, and Judy Clark, a member of ADPi sorority, is the candidate for secretary.

Bill Criswell, who resigned as party chairman, was elected with relative ease over two other candidates for treasurer.

The UP also named unanimously three candidates for next year's senior class officers, and postponed the naming of a fourth.

Roger Smith received a solid vote for president, Ann Lobdell was nominated for secretary, and Jim Miller was named to run for class treasurer.

Last night's convention kicked off the political activity for the spring. The Student Party will nominate their "Big Four" candidates next Monday night. The SP et to noimnate candidates for legislature last night.

Allen, a junior from Atlanta who was the chairman of the Graham Memorial Activities Board this year, was nominated by Joe Moore. As had been expected, there was no competition for him.

In accepting the nomination, Allen stated that the UP "must work toward expanding our system of student autonomy. This university is no longer small, and is growing every year. We must accept the challenge to contribute to the greatness of a large university. These are the goals of our student government.

McDevitt, in accepting his nomination, said, "There are a great number of barriers in student minds. There are many factions on campus. Student government offer a way for each student to find expression. Our student government offers us growth, expression, maturity, and the fulfillment of party needs."

In the only race of the night, Charlie Battle and Richard Stapleton failed to gain the majority needed for a second balloting with Criswell. Battle had the support of present treasurer Pete Thompson. Stapleton, who was nominated by Dick Lewisohn, entered the race as a dorm candidate with the hopes of balancing the UP ticket.

Stapleton failed to gain necessary dorm backing, and Criswell was able to sweep through a majority of the fraternities and sorocities and an unexpected number of dorms. Battle received solid support from a small number of fraternities.

Roger Smith, the nominee for senior president, will seek to occupy the position his older brother Wade held in 1960.

Voting on the vice-presidential post was delayed until next week in hopes that the UP could get a dorm candidate, Criswell explained.

In another nomination, Cecil Collins won the bid for social chairman of the senior class over Judy O'Grady.

University Trustees Hear Report On Plan For Growth

The growth of enrollment in the state's institutions of higher learning and the high costs to University and State College students were discussed at the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University in Raleigh yesterday morning.

According to a study conducted by Dr. Horace Hamilton, a State College sociologist dealing with population trends, enrollment in all colleges and universities in the state will exceed 103,500 students by 1966, representing an increase of 28,000 in five years.

The population of the Consolidated University, 19,338 now out-numbers the entire population of some counties in the state, and of many towns.

UNC Costs Second In Southeast

The Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees reported that, according to a survey of 28 universities and land-grant colleges in the Southeast, costs at the University are second highest in its group, and State ranks first in its category.

The report said that the state must take care of the increasing costs to students if the state is to progress.

The committee added its parenthetic recommendation that ability to pay should never become a condition of admission to the University.

Friday: On Enrollment

Consolidated University President William C. Friday said the factors contributing to the enrollment increase were:

1. The state's efforts to improve its standing in the number of college age students actually enrolled in college; and

2. The growing demand by college graduates for advanced work.

Mr. Friday, in clarifying the administration's position, listed three things he said ought not to be done to cope with the enrollment increases:

1. The further restriction of out-of-state enrollment, emphasizing the importance of in-state students having the opportunity of associating with students from other parts of the country;

2. Adoption of the tri-mester system, pointing out the present efficiency of the two-semester plus two summer sessions, which use the University facilities 47 weeks of the year, as opposed to the 45-week use of facilities under the tri-mester arrangement.

3. Increasing of costs for students, citing the fact that costs at UNC and State are already among the highest in the Southeast.

Recommendations in May

Mr. Friday will present positive recommendations at the May meeting of the Board, when he will present the Budget Report of the University. The recommendations will be based on the capital improvements program and other budget requests made them.

The Visiting Committee further recommended for the University:

—Construction of a student union and cafeteria, an undergraduate library and additions to the Health Center.

—Long-range planning for land use, and acquisition of more land.

—Periodic appraisal of scientific laboratory equipment and facilities, to keep them up to date.

—Study of the University salary scale, retirement system, faculty travel allowance, program and means of improving opportunities for faculty research and publication.

—Evaluation of student orientation and resident and advisory counseling programs to make them more effective.

—Obtaining scholarship funds and self-help opportunities for students.

—Study and clarification of boundaries of communication between trustees, administration and faculty.

"Step Forward"

President Friday approved as "a step forward" a reorganization of the State Board of Higher Education recommended by two subcommittees of the Governor's Commission of Education Beyond High School.

The reorganization has several advantages, Friday said. It provides a means of communication between all higher educational institutions and the Board of Higher Education, offers an opportunity for the strengthening of community colleges, and enables the lay, community institution and public institution members of the new Board to be "united in their advocacy."

The recommendations should go before the full commission by June 15; and should reach the Governor by September 1.

Snipers Endanger Low-Flying Planes

Campus security officer Arthur Beaumont wondered yesterday if the persons who have been shooting out the red light atop the water tower were trying to commit pranks or murder.

"I am sure that whoever has been breaking the light didn't realize how dangerous it could be," he said.

Airplanes flying at night waiting to land at the Raleigh-Durham airport often cruise low over Chapel Hill, he explained. The blinker light must warn them of the presence of the high tower.

"The light has been broken out four times in the last few months," he explained. "The telephone company has an antenna on top of the tower, and checks it every night to see that the light is still burning. They must make a report if for any reason the light is not working.

"It costs about $50 to get a steeplejack to climb the tower and replace the light. It wasn't too hard to figure that someone had used a .22 rifle to shoot it out."

Cooper Here For Lectures

Dr. David C. Cooper of the University of London, Visiting Professor at Carnegie Institute of Technology this year, will present five lectures at the UNC Computation Center Feb. 26 through March 2 on a new technique for solving problems with the Univac 1105.

Dr. Cooper's lectures will be aimed at persons who have had some experience in the use of digital computers.

A preliminary sequence of lectures is being given this week by Dr. John W. Carr, Computation Center Director, to prepare those who have had no previous experience with digital computers.

The Cooper lectures will be held at 4 p.m. each day in room 324 of Phillips Hall. Interested persons should enroll with Mrs. Parnell, room 30, Phillips Hall, either in person or by phone (967-7073).

No Democrat Should Support It

Jonas Gerrymander

It appears that the sins of the 1961 General Assembly will be visited on the head of either Congressman A. Paul Kitchin of Wadesboro and N. C. Rep. John P. Kennedy of Charlotte when one of the two is selected in May to run against Congressman Charles Jonas of the old Tenth District.

Jonas, five time winner in the Tenth, and a painful thorn in the side of State Democrats, will make the most of the General Assembly's merger of part of the old Eighth District to form the new Eighth which shuttled Jonas, they thought, out into the cold.

And well he should. Although we don't particularly care for Jonas' politics personally, the people in the old Tenth apparently didn't have too much objection to them. He won the district five times consecutively—most recently against young Dave Clark, who presented strong opposition. By shifting him into less friendly territory through some pretty pungent re-districting, the '61 General Assembly asked for a cry of gerrymander, and it's more than a sure bet that Jonas will comply with the request.

And any damage it does will be richly deserved. The attempt to hang Jonas up in a strongly Democratic district is reprehensible and unworthy of the support of any honest voter, Democrat or Republican.

It's coincidental that just at this time the Young Republicans here are planning a debate with the Young Democrats on the topic of one-party control in N. C.

All in all, the effects of Democratic control in the state will bear up under the most stringent criticism the YRC can level. But we're sure of this: no Democrats, young, old, at UNC or anywhere in the state, can, or should, attempt to justify the move to bottle up Jonas.

At least not with a gerrymander.

Publish Or Perish

In the 1962 report of the Visiting Committee to the Board of Trustees, which was recently released, a section headed "Faculty Performance" underscores—with a perhaps justifiable note of pride—the quality of the UNC faculty. It is interesting to note the "indices of quality" used in assessment. For instance: "the record of the faculty in contributing to the enlargement of knowledge through publication in scholarly and professional journals, the amount of financial support received from federal and private agencies for research study, the number of advanced students seeking admission to pursue graduate study, awards and honors received by faculty members and the number of invitations to positions in other institutions that come to members of the faculty."

By way of explanation, the report goes on to say that "every year the University . . . . publishes a record of the publications of its faculty," and "these documents would convince the most skeptical that the faculties of our three institutions are vigorous and active in research investigations and that the quality of their work is consistent with the high standard of a major institution of higher learning."

Besides this, some of them are good teachers too. But if they aren't . . . well . . . they write a lot of books and do a lot of research.

Europe-$300-Cheap

GM Director Howard Henry reports that applications for the GM sponsored charter plane to Europe this summer are not coming in rapidly enough.

In order to confirm the charter, over 100 applications, with deposits paid, are needed by March 1. Round trip fare for the round trip from New York to London is $300, a figure which is $186 below usual cost.

The flight leaves June 5 and the return trip from London to New York will be on August 1. This is not a tour. After landing in London, students are on their own and can travel wherever they desire, choosing their own accommodations.

If the charter arrangements for this flight is successful, the program will be continued.

Reservations can be made at GM information desk before March 1. A deposit of $150 is required, with the balance due by March 31.

This is an excellent and relatively inexpensive program designed for Carolina students — which means that there are no chaperones, lackeys, old maid aunts or other tour leader types passionately interested only in cathedrals, viaducts and ruins.

With 55 days thus unencumbered, you might even get to see Europe.

'Racism In Reverse' Bugs Wilson

It has become a favorite pasttime of many Northerners and some Southerners to castigate the South for its alleged "racism." With a skillful and organized campaign, they have managed to direct attention to the South and keep the spotlight off themselves.

Public schools and other public places have borne the brunt of the attacks in the past. Now the racemongers have taken aim at private establishments as well.

The latest campaign is against private clubs in the Washington, D.C. area. Several high government officials — including the President—have become embroiled in disputes with clubs which exclude members of certain racial or religious groups. These officials are exerting public pressure in an attempt to force these clubs to integrate.

One Representative, Herbert Zelenko (D-NY), has even introduced a bill in Congress "to prohibit the issuance of any occupancy permit, liquor license or other license" to any group in D. C. which practices racial or religious segregation.

These officials are unjustified in attempting to force integration in such private establishments. Theirs is an exclusive membership, and those race minded Harvard dons who don't like it are free to stay out.

Not satisfied with the havoc that integration has brought to Washington's public schools and streets, the mixers want to try out the "Great Experiment" in private clubs.

It seems incomprehensible that these government officials would desire to take their Negro friends into the presence of those whom they have denounced so harshly. One would think that they would be most reluctant to have them to associate with such people.

Integrating these clubs would, of course, create an atmosphere of brotherhood and equality. To make for unanimity, however, a few adjustments must be insisted upon. The President will have to give up his honorary membership in two Washington country clubs which have no Negroes. He will have to prevail upon his father to withdraw from the segregated country club at Palm Beach, where the President often plays golf.

The Kennedys must withdraw from the golf and tennis club at Hyannis Port which has no Negroes, and must refuse to utilize the segregated beach and yachting facilities used by the Presidential family at Hyannis Port.

Jackie will be obliged to relinquish membership in an exclusive hunt club in Virginia which practices segregation. She might also dye her hair varying shades of black and white to satisfy her mixing impulses.

Vice President Johnson will, of course, move from segregated Texas and relinquish his membership in segregated clubs there. The New Frontier must go forward.

Finally we have the question: Will the integrationists refuse to go into private homes unless accompanied by a Negro, or unless assured that a Negro has preceded them there?

It is imperative that all of us be "equal" and "un-bigoted." (Wonder who's voting for whom this year).

MARTIN L. WILSON

"Man, You Look As If You're Really Under Pressure"

Literacy Vote Test Is JFK's Giveaway

ITEM: John Kennedy's demand that the literacy test for voters be removed is to astute political observers a clear statement of his intention to run for a second term.

The above little gem of political ribbing was submitted to the NATIONAL REVIEW (Feb. 13, 1962) in protest to the President's proposal to allow anyone who has completed six years of elementary school the right to vote. Individuals who have completed six years of school would be given the vote irrespective of whether or not they can read or write, let alone understand and interpret the complicated nature of government (especially in these days of fuzzy thinking in the home office.) We see in this plan two factors that deserve attention:

1) An inability of the present administration to adequately protect the right to vote of QUALIFIED Negroes in the South, forcing the administration to resort to unconstitutional means to cover up their inabilities. Also involved in this proposal is the idea that anyone who does not support this plan is, ipso facto, anti-Negro (just as anyone who opposes Urban Affairs is anti-Negro.)

2) A bland subservience to the methodology of Democracy, the idea being that only if everyone (including those who just went to the sixth grade) has the right to vote, then will we have good government (tacit assumption: no democracy could bring forth BAD government.) This mania for democracy leads us to believe that Kennedy and other Liberals are less concerned with the kind of government democracy brings forth, than they are with the method of democracy itself. After all, democracy is only a method for formulating government, and does not necessarily mean that a government operating within the framework of democracy will necessarily do the right thing (first witness: Kennedy as the present government of the United States.)

A NOTE TO HARRY DELUNG: Now, now; let's not have any prejudice against "super" patriots.

On Non-Campus Issues

SL Should Consider Resolutions

Thursday night in Student Legislature a series of speeches set forth a policy which may well affect Student government at Carolina for years to come. As a reporter covering that session, I feel that the Student body should know the details of the discussion.

A major portion of the debate was devoted to the question of whether or not student legislature should consider resolutions on non-campus issues.

Representative John Randall presented a valid point as he noted that over a period of years, the legislators who have also introduced most of the bills which have proved effective, have also introduced the most resolutions. "We must not," said Randall, "in effect cut off these outstanding leaders by stifling their useful creativity."

It was noted that student legislators at Carolina evolved from the Di-Phi debating society which dealt primarily with off-campus issues. Also pointed out was the fact that this congressional district has more universities and students than any in the country. "Therefore," one speaker reasoned "the opinion of the largest representative student government group in the district will demand some recognition in Washington, at least from our Congressman."

One speaker mentioned that all over the world student groups are taking a definite stand on nuclear testing. One of the largest demonstrations ever to take place at the White House recently involved 4700 students marching for unilateral disarmament. It is right that Carolina should take a stand on the issue. The question then presented was just who should take the stand. One representative felt that though issues such as this should be considered on campus, it is not the proper place for student legislature to do so. Another law-maker stated the opposite view, "Since it is the one group elected to be truly representative of the student body, I feel that it is student legislature's place to take a stand on this issue."

In considering the content of the resolution itself, brief debate preceded a roll-call vote in which the resolution was passed by a narrow margin of 18-15. The opinion of a large majority of representatives seemed to be that it was proper for student legislature to cinsider resolutions though their opinion on this particular one was split. The key phrase of the nuclear testing issue was the statement endorsing current policy that the national government "refrain from resuming nuclear testing in the atmosphere, so long as such a policy does not jeapardize the deterrent capabilities of the United States."

This reporter holds a view similar to that taken by student legislature. Our national government has for years been negotiating in the interest of world peace with foreign powers dedicated to our destruction though many of these negotiations have been doomed from the beginning due to the attitude of these adverse factions. Though it may seem futile, a government such as ours, dedicated to peace, must continue a policy of negotiation in hope that a suitable outcome may someday be reached. Likewise, it is certainly fit, indeed it is the obligation of responsibile student government at Carolina to consider resolutions of such world-wide implications. The legislative body of this university should continue to utilize the abilities of outstanding thinkers on campus through resolutions concerning national and international issues.

The Quest For Peace Through Sanity

The events of this month indicate that there is an increasing awareness of the threat of nuclear war on the part of the American people. ATLANTIC MONTHLY carried a procative article entitled "The Limits of Defense," which demonstrated the need and possibility of formulating safe alternatives to war in solving international problems. The student disarmament conference at Swathmore and the White House pickets focused public attention on the necessity of disarmament. More important than any of these developments, however, is the debut of "SANITY: a magazine devoted to peace and disarmament." Judging from the first issue, I should predict that this magazine will soon become the rallying point for the entire U. S. peace movement and be an influential gadfly in pricking the American public's intellectual stupor. There is nothing like bold and original thought to dispel clouds of slogan-bred illogic and stagnant, cliched ideas, and SANITY promises plenty of new approaches to the most urgent problem of our times.

In the first place, SANITY recognizes that the preservation of the peace IS a problem, and one that is not being successfully dealt with at the present time. This is a great deal further than most of our professional politicians are even interested in going. Yet we will make no progress towards a solution so long as "Americans remain content to substitute slogans . . . for critical examination of political problems, and so long as we live with lies and fear the truth," as Richard Ward states in his article, "Psychosis of the Cold War." The articles in SANITY, including one by Bertrand Russell and another by Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling, are critical analyses that must be read by every concerned individual.

Witness M. A. Lebowitz's "The Political Economy of Armaments." At the outset, Lebowitz notes that we have implicitly accepted the view that wealth and well-being are directly related to the amount of our resources that we can destroy each year." Defense production absoros the nation's resources in return for no real physical increase in the economy. In this light, the fear of the economic consequences of disarmament provides a most important example of the belief that organized destruction of wealth creates wealth. What we must ask is 'wealth for whom'?" Lebowitz then proceeds to analyze the workings of that military-industrial complex that both President Eisenhower and C. Wright Mills have warned us against. Over eighty-six per cent of the total value of defense contracts between the years 1951 and 1959 were allotted by direct negotiation with single firms. Moreover, by 1959 the top one hundred contractors were receiving seventy-four per cent of the total military procurement. This picture is a little more readily understandable after Lebowitz points out the great number of ex-military men who use their influence in the services to obtain contracts for specific firms. (Lockheed Aircraft employs twenty ex-admirals and two ex-generals; General Dynamics, seventeen ex-admirals and seven ex-generals; and so forth.) In fact, the Pentagon negotiators suffer a conflict of interests since they too want high-salaried positions in private industry after they retire from the armed forces.

And on what basis do they negotiate? The federal government's Comptroller General has testified before a Congressional Committee that "the government must rely on the prime contractors to submit reasonable price proposals . . . . " The results are only what one would expect. After studying these contracts Senator Douglas found that "virtually every negotiated contract we have examined indicated a price appreciably in excess of what the competitive price would be." We realize what an understatement this is after reading the figures proving that the Navy paid $21.10 apiece for lamp sockets that cost only a quarter in any hardware store, that over an eight year period aircraft and missile contractors realized profits amounting to seventy-one per cent. Having presented these facts, Lebowitz concludes "it is not surprising that the business interests in the country find the possibility of peace slightly unnerving . . . . can we expect these groups to use their power and influence to work for a government position which can LEAD to effective disarmament?"

The challenge which SANITY has accepted is one that none of us can afford to ignore. That challenge is formulated by the editors: "We believe that students in this country and aroumd the world have a most important role to play in the struggle for peace. We believe that everywhere, in ever increasing numbers, they must become actively involved in seeking out alternatives to war. Students must let it be known that they do not intend to be the last generation of homo sapiens. They must take a stand, and go on record accordingly." This magazine deserves to be and must be read by thinking people of all political hues. Copies are available from Bob Brown, telephone 942-6243.

Donations To WUS Help Foreign Students

48 States And 52 Countries Represented In University

The University boasts a student representation from a total of 48 states, the District of Columbia, and 52 foreign countries and U. S. possessions according to enrollment figures for the spring semester, 1962.

The only states not represented at the University are those of North Dakota and Nevada. Those states with the largest number of students at the University are: North Carolina, 5,847; Virginia, 337; New York, 285; Florida, 219; Georgia, 194; South Carolina, 161; New Jersey, 160 Pennsylvania, 147; Tennessee, 135; and Maryland, 108. The total number of students from the United States attending the University is 8,407.

A total of 176 students from foreign countries and U. S. possessions are enrolled at the University. Countries and U. S. possessions represented are: Argentina, 2; Austria, 1; Belgium, 1; Bolivia, 2; Brazil, 1; British Caribbean Federation, 1; British East Asia, 1; British South Africa, 1; Burma, 2; Canada, 6; Canal Zone, 5; and Chile, 2.

Also, China (Formosa or Taiwan), 15; Cuba, 1; Czechoslovakia, 1; Denmark, 1; Egypt (United Arab Republic), 7; El Salvador, 2; Finland, 1; France, 2; French Algeria, 1; Germany, 6; Hungary, 2; Iceland, 1; India, 25; Iran, 3; Iraq, 3; Irish Republic, 1; Israel, 1; Italy, 1; and Japan, 11.

Also, Jordan, 1; Korea, 14; Lebanon, 6; Mexico, 2; Morocco, 1; New Zealand, 3; Panama, 1; Peru, 1; Philippines, 2; Puerto Rico, 5; Saudi Arabia, 3; Spain and Spanish Morocco, 1; Sweden, 1; Syria (United Arab Republic), 4; Thailand, 3; Trust Territories in Pacific, 1; Turkey, 3; Union of South Africa, 2; United Kingdom, 10; Venezuela, 1; and Virgin Islands, 1.

These Algerian refugee students, living in Tunisia and Morocco, are surviving on two meals a day, one of which is only beans. Money used to help these 1,000 students comes from aid through the World University Service, which is being aided this year by the UNC Campus Chest.

Campus Chest Helps Sponsor Aid Program

Twenty-three cents will buy three meals for a Greek student.

Four dollars and thirty-four cents will pay a week's hospitalization for a Japanese student in a TB sanatorium.

These are two of the ways in which the World University Service uses donations from UNC students to aid students in other parts of the world. WUS is one of five organizations that will receive money from this year's Campus Chest.

WUS is a major international mutual assistance program for students and is the only one in which aid is given on a student-to-student basis.

It has engaged in emergency projects such as restoring libraries in Tokyo after an earthquake in 1923, placing 1000 Hungarian student refugees on scholarships in American colleges in 1956, and is now building dormitories in Conception, Chile, which was recently struck by an earthquake.

The basic goals of WUS are to help meet the basic needs of universities and students, to promote the sharing of knowledge, and to foster the development of international understanding and cooperation between the universities of the world.

700 Visit Woman's College For CU Day

Nearly seven hundred men, a majority of whom were from Carolina, invaded Woman's College last Saturday night for the biggest C. U. Day celebration in years.

An open house in Mendenhall Dorm gave students from the three member schools of the Consolidated University the opportunity to become acquainted. Later the C. U. Day Dance featuring the Catalinas was held in Elliott Hall.

The Catalinas, though arriving late, won an enthusiastic response from the crowd. Late hours for the WC girls allowed an extra hour's dancing, pushing the curfew hour back to 12:30.

The C. U. Day program, which is sponsored by the Consolidated University Student Council composed of representatives from Carolina, W. C., and State, was promoted at Carolina by the Communications Committee and the IDC. The two groups hope to establish a permanent program of dorm parties with WC.

"The spectacular interest demonstrated in C. U. Day means that the Communications Committee and the IDC will definitely follow through with their program of dorm parties with Woman's College," CC Chairman Robin Britt said yesterday. "Plans for combo/parties on a smaller scale have already been made and a date for the first party should be set within the next week."

What's New in the Old Book Corner

This advertisment is specially dedicated to the chap who was complaining that we spent so much time telling about the fancey libraries we've been displaying that we neglected to mention constant rain of small blessings in the Old Book corner. Although the notice on the right shows that we're still mighty proud of those handsome rare books, here are a few flowers that have been blushing unseen in the other departments:

3 for 25c Shelf —Those used paperbacks have been selling better this fall than ever before, and we've had a time keeping a jump ahead of the demand. However, the shelves are about half full again now, and hunting should be good.

38c Shelf — Nearly full. I noticed a number of almost new Dollar Book Club selections, an early edition of Tortilla Flat, and a small clump of 1900-1910 lush novels.

72c Shelf — Two copies of Lives of a Bengal Lancer, a small clump of Harvard Clasics, and an early book on nudism seemed to be the high spots here.

Children's Shelf — Lots of small-fry treasure. Noticed a copy of Tanglewood Tales at 25c, and a Child's History of Literature, very handsome with colored illustrations at $1.00

Art Table — Our choice of three books would be Pennell's Adventures of an Illustrator, first trade edition, and boxed, at $4.50, or Rockwell Kent's Wilderness at $3.50. You fellows seem to prefer some of the more fleshy numbers.

History Shelf — Noticed a Men of Our Times, by Harriet Beecher Stowe at $3.50, and a Fyfe: From Scotland's Past at $2.00, but the shelf is full of goodies.

Travel Shelf — Our choice would be Herndon's Valley of the Amazon, but you might prefer the handsome Romantic Castles and Palaces, by Singleton. The former is $4.50, the latter, $2.00

Literature Shelf — Among many good buys, we'd pick Conrad: Life and Letters, a 2-volume set at $4.50, or Louys: Aphrodite, in a limited edition, at $1.50. Ah me — those wonderful 1920's!

Books mentioned here, as you may know, are single copies, and may be gone by the time you come in. On the other hand, nobody knows what little gem may turn up to fill their places.

"The broader your knowledge, the greater your chance of success!" Edwin J. Ducayet, President Bell Helicopter Company

"As I look back, graduating from college in the depth of the depression was a blessing in disguise. It was difficult to get a job, and even more difficult to hold it. It proved to me early in life that to succeed in business requires constant struggle.

"I found that the truly successful individual never stops learning, that a formal college education is the foundation on which we continue to build the knowledge and experience required to get ahead.

"Even in today's age of specialization, a man eventually reaches a point where breadth of knowledge is necessary. The engineer must understand accounting and marketing. The marketing man must know his product. The financial man must be sympathetic to engineering development and sales programs. Management must have a working knowledge of all phases of the complex and highly competitive business world.

"Therefore, even though specializing, a student should make his college curriculum as broad as possible, and diversify his outside activities. Authoritative surveys have shown that only a small percentage of individuals end up in the field in which they specialized in college.

"Widen your world. Broaden your interests right now. Since graduation from college I've discovered that those who are really succeeding today are the ones who do more and keep on learning from what they do. The broader your college interests are now—the steadier your ladder of success tomorrow!"

Heels Meet USC Thursday Night

By ED DUPREE

Wake Forest is the ACC's top seeded team, Duke ranks in the nation's top ten, and N. C. State is playing in the cozy surroundings of Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum in the conference's annual championship tournament.

But who plays the feature game of the open round Thursday night? South Carolina and North Carolina meet in the rubber game of a three-game series at 9:30.

For coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels this late starting time will be nothing new. Three times in Charlotte UNC played Notre Dame, Clemson, and South Carolina in contests which began at 9:15. All were second games of doubleheaders.

The tournament pairings, announced in Raleigh Sunday, are as follows: Lower Bracket—N. C. State vs. Clemson, 2 p.m. and Duke vs. Maryland, 4 p.m. Upper Bracket—Wake Forest vs. Virginia, 7:30 p.m. and UNC vs. South Carolina, 9:30 p.m.

The winner of the UNC-USC contest has the task of taking on either tourney favorite Wake Forest or lowly Virginia at 7:30 Friday night, while the winners of the afternoon games go at it at 9:30.

Saturday night at 8 the winners of these games go for all the marbles and a berth in the NCAA playoffs.

A drawing Sunday installed South Carolina as the fourth seeded tourney team for purposes of bench positions and uniforms. The Gamecocks and UNC tied for fourth in the regular season with 7-7 records. They played twice during the season with UNC winning 83-71 at Chapel Hill, and the southern Carolinians taking a 97-82 win at Charlotte.

Final ACC standings were: Wake Forest (12-2), Duke (11-3), State (10-4), South Carolina (7-7), UNC (7-7), Clemson (4-10), Maryland (3-11), and Virginia (2-12).

Roger (61) Maris Finally Inks Pact

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — (UPI)—Home run king Roger Maris settled his contract dispute with the world champion New York Yankees for a compromise $70,000 Monday and said he'll need "all the breaks" to hit 61 home runs again.

Maris, whose 61 homers last year wrote baseball history, agreed to terms in a lightning 5-minute conference Monday just when it seemed he would hold out past the official Feb. 28 start of spring training.

"I'm happy with the contract," said Maris. "If I wasn't, well, you know me — I wouldn't have signed."

Club General Manager Roy Hamey said Maris did not get "a 100 per cent raise." That's what Roger had been seeking—a doubling of his reported $38,000 salary for 1961. The Yankees had started by offering him $60,000 and came up to about $67,000 in the fourth Maris-Hamey conference last week.

Another boost Monday apparently won Maris' signature on the dotted line.

"We both made concessions to arrive at a salary we feel is fair to both sides," said Hamey. "We paid Maris not only for his home runs but for an exceptionally good year."

Maris, winner of the American League "Most Valuable Player" award in each of the past two seasons, still trails fellow outfielder Mickey Mantle on the Yankee payroll. Mantle, who received $85,000, was one of the first team members to sign this winter and Maris Monday was the last.

The blond southpaw slugger from Raytown, Mo., who was besieged by reporters during his battle with Babe Ruth's 60-homer record last season, immediately ran into another newsmen's barrage of questions on whether "you will hit 61 homers again this year."

Maris grimaced and said, "how long do you think a snowball would last in Hell?"

Then he added, "you can say I really have no idea whether I can do that again."

NIT Tourney Adds Wichita

NEW YORK — (UPI)—Wichita, shut out of title contention in the Missouri Valley Conference by the red-hot battle between Cincinnati and Bradley, landed safely in the post-season basketball field Monday by accepting a bid to the National Invitation Tournament.

The Shockers, with a 17-7 record and two games to play, were the eighth team picked for the 12-team NIT which will be held at Madison Square Garden, March 15-24.

Of the four remaining berths, one is expected to go to either Cincinnati or Bradley, whichever one loses out in the Missouri Valley race for an NCAA berth, and another is expected to go to the runner-up team in the Skyline Conference.

The selection of Wichita, which has a tall starting lineup including 6-10 Gene Wiley, was announced by coach Ken Norton of Manhattan College, chairman of the NIT selection committee.

Teams previously picked for the tournament were St. John's, Navy, Duquesne, Loyola of Chicago, Houston, Dayton, and defending champion Providence.

Wichita has appeared in the NIT once before, losing in an early round in 1954.

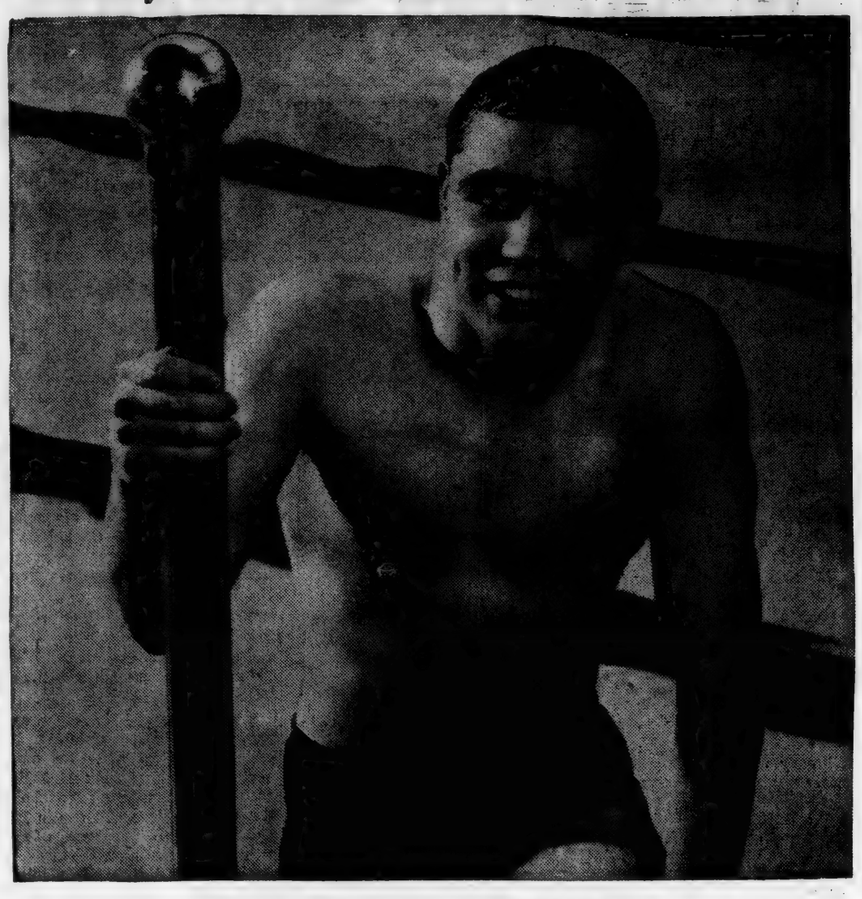
Daily Tar Heel Athlete Of The Week



HARRISON MERRILL

By MARTY KRUMING

"He is one of the finest swimmers we have ever had at the University, and should be a tremendous help to the varsity next season." These were the words used by Tar Baby swimming coach Dick Jamerson to describe his star performer, Harrison Merrill.

Merrill, a freestyler from Atlanta, Ga., has been brilliant throughout the campaign. On Feb. 19 this Tar Baby sensation established three NCAA freshman swimming marks within a space of 5½ hours during the freshman invitational meet held at Bowman Gray Memorial Pool. By crossing the finish line in 18.20.1 in the 1500 meter freestyle, Merrill erased the national record of 19.22.3 set by Herb Portelance of the University of Washington in 1951. The same evening Merrill cracked the records posted by Australia's Olympic ace Murray Rose in the 220- and 440-yard freestyle events. His clocking of 2:04.3 in the 220 and 4:31 in the 440 both established NCAA freshman marks.

Just last Saturday Merrill closed out his freshman career with another sparkling performance in the 220-yard freestyle as he glided to victory with a time of 2.02.7. By bettering his previous time of 2:04.3, this broad-shouldered competitor once again set a new NCAA freshman mark.

For his performances on Monday and Saturday, Merrill has been selected as the third Daily Tar Heel Athlete of the Week.

Merrill's sensational feat in the freshman invitationals left the opposing coaches breathless as many uttered the words "amazing", "fantastic", and "stupendous". As coach Jamerson pointed out, the 1500 usually takes so much out of a swimmer that he is below par when he tackles the other events. For Harrison this was far from the truth.

Jamerson's pride and joy is definitely an all-around swimmer as evidenced by his competition in the 1500, the 100 yard butterfly, and the 200 yard individual medley.

Commenting further on Merrill, coach Jamerson compared him with another Tar Heel great, Jimmy Thomas, who swam for Carolina from 1948-1951. Thomas was a freestyler in addition to being a sensational breast stroker and backstroker. He established three national AAU records in the 100-yard backstroke and set three Eastern Collegiate records in one meet. In 1951 Thomas was considered to be the best backstroker in the world and was also credited with holding nine American records in the backstroke. Returning to Merrill, Jamerson added that he will be great because he has the determination, confidence, and leadership which Thomas possessed.

In addition to Merrill's success in swimming, this performer's life away from the pool is also revealing. He is a pre-med student and a member of the Phi Delta Theta pledge class. Merrill also plays an active role in freshman class affairs holding down the office of treasurer.

As a coach rich in experience, Jamerson predicts a very bright future for young Merrill. Varsity mentor Pat Earey already has an All-American candidate in backstroker Thompson Mann and with Merrill destined for national fame, Carolina could have the finest one-two punch in the nation for the next two seasons.

Wrestlers Point To ACC Finals

By ED DUPREE

North Carolina's wrestling streak of 5 games without a defeat went down the drain at College Park Saturday as the Terps flattened the Tar Heels, 25-5.

Only UNC's Pete Gilchrist salvaged a victory against the perennially powerful Marylanders. By winning on a default, Gilchrist set a new school scoring record of 36 points.

Gilchrist's opponent, Sam Bossert, the 130-pound ACC champion in 1961, dislocated a thumb in the first period of their match and was unable to continue. The five-points for a default assures the Charlotte native of being Carolina's top scorer for the season.

Dick Blackman, the early season scoring leader, lost at Maryland on a decision in the 147-division. Blackman still has 30 points, but has a chance to crack Perrin Henderson's old record of 31 set in 1959.

The Tar Heel scoring sensations got their final chance of the season last night against Virginia Tech. A pin for Gilchrist would have given him a new record of 41, while either a pin or decision would have pushed Blackman past the original record.

It'll be a rugged week for coach Sam Barnes' men. Friday morning, bright and early at 7 o'clock, they travel to Raleigh to weigh in for the ACC championship meet.

The wrestling finals will cover two days with preliminaries starting at 1 Friday afternoon. Semi-finals are slated for 3. The consolations will be at 1 on Saturday with the championships at 3.

Going into last night's match with VPI, the UNC grapplers owned a 4-6-1 record. After losing five consecutive matches they defeated N. C. State and West Virginia, tied Appalachian, and beat Pfeiffer and Duke.

The top Tar Heels, in addition to Gilchrist and Blackman, have been Mickey Nelson, 123-pound division; Willis Johnson, 137; Tom Grant, 157; Gene Record, 167; Glenn Glaser, 177, and Jerry Cabe, heavyweight. In the finals an additional two events will be added—the 115 and 191 divisions. Louis Arthur could be the UNC entry in the lighter division, with Bill Shipp and Gordon Appell possibilities in the big man's class.

Maryland's coach Sully Krouse boasts the individual champions in each division for 1961 and walked away to the team championship with 116 points. North Carolina was second last season with 63 points in the finals.

Honor Council Appeal Is Sent To Committee

President Prods Solons To Pass Med Care Plan

Kennedy Asks Hike In SS Payments

By NORMAN RUNNION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy prodded Congress Tuesday to pass his program of medical care for the elderly which would be financed by a $1 billion increase in social security taxes. He said the "passage of time" had increased its urgency.

To carry out the plan, Kennedy asked an increase in social security contributions of one quarter of 1 per cent on employers and employes and a boost in the maximum earnings base from $4,800 to $5,200. Estimated cost of the first year of operation would be $1,060,000,000.

The President made the plea in a special health message, which also proposed a three-year federally-assisted program to inoculate American children against polio, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

In addition, he requested legislation which would help the nation's big cities fight the growing problem of air pollution.

Addressing himself again to the medical care plan he put before Congress last year, Kennedy said that "prolonged and costly illness in later years robs too many of our older citizens of pride, purpose and savings."

Administration officials felt there was a strong possibility of congressional action on the plan this year, citing the renewed interest of some lawmakers. But the legislation has been bottled up since last year in the House Ways & Means Committee, and prospects for getting it out this season appeared slim.

Democrats believe the proposal will be one of the hottest political issues in the November congressional elections. They are expected to make much of Republican opposition to it.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said after a meeting with the President Tuesday that he thought prospects for passage were "quite good." The Senate is prepared to act, he said, and he hopes the House committee will clear the bill to the floor.

Speaker John W. McCormack, who also attended the White House session said the measure's chances might improve decidedly "if we can only get two Republican votes in the Ways & Means Committee."

Sanford Proclaims Band Day

Tuesday has been declared Navy Band Day in North Carolina by Gov. Sanford in honor of the band's appearance here next week.

Its performance is being sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity to raise money for the Michael Barham Scholarship which the fraternity is establshing.

Sanford talked with the executive committee of the fraternity yesterday and then issued the proclamation welcoming the band to North Carolina.

The committee invited the governor to the concert but Sanford said he could not attend because of a prior commitment.

Glenn Says Some Flights To Fail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Astronaut John H. Glenn, Jr., warned congressmen Tuesday that some future American space flights may fail, possibly with loss of life. But he urged them not to lose faith in the program.

Glenn, appearing with fellow spacemen Alan B. Shepard and Virgil I. (Gus) Grissom before the House Space Committee, said:

"We don't envision every flight coming back as successfully as the three so far.

"There will be failures. There will be sacrifices.

"I hope we will all continue to have the same confidence in the program that we have now, despite the fact there will be times when we are not riding such a crest of happiness and success as we are right now."

Glenn, the firt American to orbit the earth, appeared as the committee began considering President Kennedy's recommendation that $3.7 billion be made available for America's space effort during the next fiscal year.

Introducing the Americans who have ventured over the edge of space, committee Chairman George B. Miller, D-Calif., called them: "The three men who have been closest to the angels."

Predicts First Lunar Landing

James E. Webb, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, told the committee that his agency planned to spend $35 billion on the project over the next 10 years. And he expressed every confidence that this country would land a manned spacecraft on the moon before 1970 — and ahead of Russia.

Webb also disclosed that there would be an announcement in the next two weeks concerning the training of more astronauts.

Meanwhile, the White House said the civilian space agency had been asked to recommend a "proper program" for Glenn which possibly would include a series of public appearances.

The request followed a discussion between President Kennedy and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, head of the space council.

After Glenn addressed a joint session of Congress Monday, there were reports the administration had decided to underscore American's new standing in the space race by keeping the orbital astronaut in the public eye.

En route to Tuesday's hearings, Glenn and the two astronauts who preceded him into space on suborbital flight dropped by NASA headquarters to thank personnel for "behind-the-scenes" help with the program.

French Order Army Troops Into Algiers

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle's government ordered Army troops and tanks to move in force into Algiers and Oran Tuesday to end anarchy and mass terrorism threatening to block an Algerian peace.

The troops, drawn from units held in reserve outside both cities, sped into downtown areas and patrolled streets 10 abreast in some spots in an effort to curb attacks.

But scattered incidents of terrorism continued to take a toll of dead and wounded even as De Gaulle and his Algerian Affairs Committee met in Paris to consider further measures to restore order.

In Tripoli, Libya, the Algerian rebel national council parliament met for the sixth straight day of debate on whether to ratify or reject a cease-fire accord that was approved early last week by the French cabinet.

Denied Reports

In Tunis, authoritative Algerian Nationalist sources categorically denied reports that the rebel council had ratified the cease-fire accord by the required four-fifths majority and was discussing other affairs.

The council still is debating the draft pact, the sources said, and it was not known when the meeting would end.

It had been expected that the council meeting would end last weekend and that a cease-fire to end the 7½-year-old Algerian war could be proclaimed this week.

Officials said Tuesday, however, that the prolonged rebel debate could set the date back to March 7 or 8.

Drawn From Reserves

The troops sent into Algiers and Oran were drawn from units totaling some 40,000 men and held hitherto in reserve.

Paris officials said the government was virtually convinced now that the outlawed Secret Army Organization (OAS) would not stage a full-fledged revolt after a cease-fire was proclaimed.

They said it appeared more likely that the European terrorists instead, would intensify their efforts to create a state of complete anarchy in Algeria to keep the cease-fire from being carried out.

Paris police, meanwhile, continued non-stop questioning of eight young suspected OAS terrorists rounded up in the past few days.

Peace Corps Examination To Be Given

Applicants for the Peace Corps may take the required entrance test at UNC during the statewide college Peace Corps Conference to be held in Chapel Hill during March 16-17, Dean of Student Affairs Charles Henderson, Jr. announced yesterday.

At the request of the campus Peace Corps committee, Washington officials of the Corps will administer the test on Saturday, March 17, in Gardner Hall at 2:30 p.m., to North Carolina applicants who desire to take it in Chapel Hill. The test requires from four and a half to five and a half hours.

Any person wishing to take the Chapel Hill test should notify Miss Anne Queen, Co-ordinator, Campus Peace Committee, YWCA, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C., no later than March 12. All qualified U. S. citizens eighteen years or over may take the tests. Candidates must also pass a rigorous physical examination since they will be called upon to live and work under difficult conditions overseas.

Application questionnaire forms for Peace Corps assignments will be available in Gardner Hall when the test is given. There are openings for qualified students and persons with academic, practical or technical experience in several fields to serve in countries where the Peace Corps is in operation or will be in future months.

Especially needed are community development work teams; teachers; doctors, nurses, and other health specialists and educators; home economists; agricultural extension workers; land and road surveyors; architects; construction workers; librarians; statisticians; skilled craftsmen and technicians. At the present time volunteer Peace Corps teams are at work on a variety of projects in Colombia, Nigeria, Tanganyika, The Philippines, Chile, St. Lucia, B.W.I., East Pakistan, and Ghana.

Invitations to North Carolina colleges to send student representatives to the state Peace Corps conference in Chapel Hill were sent out earlier this month by Dean Henderson and most colleges in the state are expected to send delegates.

Four Washington officials of the Peace Corps will participate in the Chapel Hill conference. Deputy Director Paul Geren will give the opening address on Friday evening, March 16.

A symposium on "The Peace Corps in Operation" will be conducted Saturday morning by Bill Moyers, Associate Director for Public Affairs; Lee St. Lawrence, Senior Peace Corps Staff Officer, and Franklin Williams, Special Assistant to Director Sargent Shriver.

Both sessions will be held in Howell Hall, on the University campus, and will be open to the public.

A luncheon for student delegates in the Carolina Inn on Saturday will be addressed by the Rev. William Coffin, Chaplain of Yale University and a member of the National Advisory Board of the Peace Corps.

Special student seminars on the Peace Corps will end the conference Saturday afternoon.

Women's Orientation Interviews Slated

Interviews for the position of Women's Coordinator of orientation will be held Thursday and Friday, Orientation Chairman Bob Madry announced yesterday. Interviews will be held from 2-5 p.m. each day in Roland Parker III in Graham Memorial.

Interested coeds may sign up for interviews at the information desk in GM. Application forms may be picked up at that time.

Madry urged all interested women to apply and said, "The position of Women's Coordinator will be more challenging this year than ever before. It is vital that a capable person get the job."

YDC and YRC Presidents T. L. Odum and Earl Baker get together before the debate.

Political Clubs Debate Tonight

The presidents of both the YDC and YRC yesterday expressed confidence in the outcome of tonight's debate on the role of the one-party system in North Carolina.

Earl Baker of the YRC and T. L. Odum of the YDC once again heaped abuse on the other's party.

Odum stated when asked if the YDC would uphold the record of the Democratic party in the state, said, "We'll be glad to compare it with the record of the Republican party anytime. If the voters of this state want a Republican administration, there is no law against it; it just takes a larger number of votes. We wish the Republicans who hide behind the Democratic label would show their true colors."

Baker replied, "As a matter of fact the Democratic machine in North Carolina has used every means, both in the law and informally, to prevent the 49 per cent of our citizens who are Republicans from casting a meaningful vote. The attempt to gerrymander Jonas is an example. We intend to fully document our case."

Tony Rogers, chairman of the YMCA Public Affairs Committee, will serve as moderator for the debate at 7:30 tonight in 210 Manning. Rogers said that there will definitely be provision for audience questioning and comment following the debate itself.

The topic of the debate is, Resolved, that the one-party system in North Carolina has been detrimental to the best interests of the citizens and the state.

Carter Case Examined By UNC Trustees

The board of trustees of the Consolidated University decided Monday to submit the case of Ann Carter to a special five-member committee to investigate the appeal of her suspension by the UNC women's honor council last spring.

Miss Carter, whose father is a professor in the School of Business Administration, was convicted by the Women's Honor Council of answering questions contained in an original examination given her class, instead of a make-up examination which the professor said he had given her.

Miss Carter, represented by local lawyer John T. Manning, appealed her case unsuccessfully to Chancellor William T. Aycock, President William C. Friday and finally to the executive committee of the board of trustees. Her appeal to the ful board was considered in a lengthy session behind closed doors Monday.

According to her father Judge Clyde Carter, "there was to be no publicity until a final decision had been made." Chancellor Aycock, President Friday, and Dean Henderson of Student Affairs all followed this policy in refraining from official statements until the board can be appointed and conduct its investigation. "NO comment" was also the statement from attorney Manning's office.

A member of the board of trustees said it was decided that the full board, composed of more than 100 members, would be too large to hear the case, so a five-member committee will be appointed by the governor to investigate the case. The committee which will include at least three lawyers was directed to "act with dispatch" and submit recommendations at the board's next meeting—which will come at commencement time.

University officials did divulge the fact that the investigating committee will be concerned, not only with the Carter case, but also with the whole framework of the University's disciplinary system.

Miss Carter is presently studying in France.

Duke Symposium To Probe Power

Duke University will present its 1962 symposium, "Power Structures: Context for Creativity?", March 5, 6, and 7, in Page and the Women's College Auditoriums. The symposium is open to the public.

Moorhead Wright, operating manager of the General Electric Institute in Crotonville, N. Y., will open the symposium with a discussion of the interaction between the individual and the organization.

John Ciardi, poetry editor of the SATURDAY REVIEW will give the second address, entitled "The Poet and Society."

Dr. Edward J. Shoben, Jr., of the Department of Psychological Foundations and Services at Columbia University, will deliver the third address, concerning how the disciplines of science can be humanized and properly made to embody central human values.

Committee Chairman Karl Ray said, "The purpose of our symposium is to investigate the power structures which compose modern society in an attempt to discover how the interaction of the individual and the power structure affect the opportunity for creative living on the part of the individual."

Delta Sigma Phi

Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity, will conduct rush at its house at 211 Pittsboro Street, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings of this week, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. All interested sophomore and junior Business Administration and Industrial Relations majors are welcome to visit the fraternity during these hours.

4-H Club

UNC 4-H Club members planning to attend the 4-H open house for youth at the Institute of Pharmacy will meet at 6:30 in front of Graham Memorial.

Deadline

All campus briefs must be in by 5 p.m. on the day before publication.

SP Postpones Nominations

The Student Party nominations were unexpectedly postponed Monday night soon before voting could begin on the vacant legislature seats which were to be filled by party vote.

According to Jimmy Weeks, SP Chairman, the postponement was due to "an unforeseen increase in membership of about 10. We felt that all of them should be given the opportunity to vote on the nominations for the openings."

Under SP by-laws, new members must attend one meeting before they are allowed to vote on party matters.

Before postponement Anne Lupton was nominated for the opening in Dorm Women's II in an uncontested election.

Student Apathy To Be Discussed

Student apathy in the field of foreign affairs and international relations at the recent UNC Mock General Assembly in Raleigh will be the discussion topic tonight on WUNC-TV's special news program "Chronicle" from 6:30-6:45.

The station program director Dave Wegerek will interview Dieter Mahnke, a South African student here. Mahnke served as president of the mock assembly.

Wegerek was a delegate to the Swarthmore disarmament conference two weeks ago .

Trustee Inquiry

The framework of the Carolina student judiciary has been challenged in the appeal to the Board of Trustees concerning the suspension of a student by the Women's Honor Council last spring.

The appeal, it appears, involves not only the single case, but the concept of delegating disciplinary powers to students. A brief prepared by Att. John T. Manning and presented to officials here, challenges the delegation of this power by the Board of Trustees to the administration and subsequently to the student judiciary.

This means that there is a chance, although it seems a small one at present, that the tradition of student judicial councils with power to suspend or otherwise discipline students may be ended.

Although the legal aspects of passing down disciplinary power to students has been decided elsewhere, if it appears that any right of due process—which is stipulated by the Board in any student judicial action, was denied in this case, or possibly in others, then the judicial system is vulnerable.

The student judiciary here functions as a privilege, not as a guaranteed right. The power to discipline can be withdrawn from students at anytime, either by the administration or by the Board of Trustees. If it appears that this privilege is being used improperly there is a chance that it will be revoked.

Fortunately, the particular decision by the Women's Council that is being questioned has been upheld by both Chancellor Aycock, President Friday, and "right up to Gov. Sanford's office," as one official put it.

This vote of confidence in the judiciary is heartening. The facts leading to the decision to suspend the student were carefully reviewed and no basis for an appeal was found.

At the same time a careful examination will serve to help point up some of the faults—and there are some that can be remedied—in the system.

The judiciary is far from perfect; but it is not so imperfect that it is kept from being the best system for depriving student government will not, we think, reveal any basis for for depriving students government of the judicial power.

But it will serve to strengthen it by pointing to weaknesses that can be remedied.

Two-Party State?

Storm clouds gathering on the North Carolina horizon may not contain much "thunder on the right" but there are sporadic flashes of lightning revealing that the state's Republicans are in dead earnest this year.

A weekend development saw Congressman Charles R. Jonas officially get into the Eighth District race for re-election. His acceptance of the district's GOP nomination at Rockingham sent the party's campaign temperament into orbit.

Meanwhile, in Taylorsville, the Ninth District GOP convention had its largest attendance since 1916. This district will have the unusual opportunity of choosing its Republican candidate for Congress in a spring primary.

The Ninth's avowed candidates are James T. Broyhill, well-known Lenoir furniture executive and member of a prominent Republican family, and W. Leslie Burdick, the China Grove newspaper publisher who is chairman of the party in Rowan County.

Political observers have predicted for years that North Carolina Republicans will come into their own when they're strong enough to choose their nominees in a primary rather than in convention.

For instance, Republicans in the Fourth District seem to be in their usual quandary in seeking a candidate for Congress. They succeeded in electing a chairman but had to form a committee to look for a candidate. And Eleventh District Republicans couldn't agree on a candidate at their convention.

Aside from developments in GOP conventions, there are indications of resurgence in a number of counties in the Piedmont. Gaston has for a number of months been strengthening opposition to Democratic majority through a citizens' committee working for two-party government. This group's energies were recently turned loose for the GOP cause and the Gaston arm of the party has new life. There has been some revitalization of the Republicans in Cleveland County, too.

Credit for the growth of the GOP in North Carolina should go largely to its state chairman, William Cobb of Morganton, but there is evidence that he is getting a great deal of help from life-long GOP members moving into North Carolina with new business and industries—people who haven't been accustomed to the one-party system that has held sway in the state for so many years.

There is evidence, too, that many nominal Democrats, who have supported the party's choice through the state level but voted the Republican ticket nationally, are reorienting themselves for full-scale local support of the GOP.

None of this means that Republicans in North Carolina are going to stampede the Democrats any time soon. The Democrats are strengthening their party machinery to meet the challenge.

But, to all appearances, 1962 will mark the beginning of a genuine two-party struggle for political control in North Carolina.

The figure around whom the GOP will rally is the Eighth District's Jonas, who could be a serious candidate for governor in 1964. And the rallying point is the Eighth District gerrymander.

It all makes for an interesting spring. ——Charlotte Observer

Political Science Course Is Biased

One paragraph in the editorial from the National Observer reprinted in the DTH Sunday gets at the root of the reason why many Americans exhibit ignorance of or lack of regard for American government and institutions.

A young man was quoted as saying, "After studying American history and political science I know that our Constitution is a farce . . . minority groups are held back . . . Americans are greedy and selfish . . . ."

How can anyone live in the best society that ever existed and not think it is worth fighting for? This boy's attitude is the end result of years of domination of higher learning by people who may be generally described as Liberals.

The basic course in American government at Carolina (Political 41) typically, is biased and inadequate. It contributes absolutely nothing to the students' fundamental understanding of the American system of government.

Anyone who has taken a course in foreign government knows that the proper approach is descriptive and analytical. The approach of Poli Sci 41 is disorganized, subjective, overgeneralized and full of irrelevancies. The main purpose of the course is apparently to rid the student of the "prejudices" and "false notions" which the organizers feel he has picked up from his middle-class background. False notions are ideas which run counter to the assumptions and prejudices of the faculty of the Department of Political Science.

Students of 41 are presently privileged to buy a book by Professors Scott and Wallace which purports to be a casebook on American political processes. Were a little green man from Mars to open the book to find out what American government is like, he would return home and recommend that his people stay clear of us.

The book gives 37 pages of more than 500 to the most basic concept of American government - federalism. All cases are written from a partisan viewpoint. None are analytical or give any detached view of the political processes involved.

The emotional content of the "civil rights" sectionoutweigh any indication of objective examination. It is full of exagerated accounts of the horrible South, including a melodramatic article by Negro beatnik James Baldwin, ("The South had always frightened me".) The professors are entitled to admire Baldwin's essay, but what possible relation does it have to a basic course in American government? Does it teach the student anything important about political processes?

The entire book is unashamedly loaded toward the Liberal viewpoint. Every single case on Madison Avenue in campaigns concerns Republicans. As if to suggest Democrats were too honorable to use such techniques.

In short, there is nothing in the book or the course to give any conception of the essentials of American government. Someone who gets most of his information from the course does not really know anything except superficials about the structure and processes of our government and has no appreciation for the uniqueness and greatness of American institutions.

In the past Americans were proud of their country, not because they were chauvinists, but because they justly felt they were the most flourishing democracy since Athens and their institutions were the hope of the world.

We are not likely to become a more cohesive or motivated people until we again popularize the idea that we have every right to be proud of our country, not because it is ours, but because it is unique and great.

"They're Not Reacting The Way They Used To"

Ervin, Jordan Support UN

Senator Everett Jordan and Senator Sam Ervin are giving us intelligent and responsible representation in Washington by their support of the President's position on the United Nations bond issue.

A Washington report tells us that there is a "hostile flow of mail" into the offices of the North Carolina senators. This is regrettable. If we know what is really good for us and the world, we will show our gratitude to to senators who show their faith in the United Nations at a critical time when many Americans would deliver the international organization to the scrap heap.

The UN's stabilizing operations in the Congo have cost $10 million a month. By the end of 1962 the UN expects to have a deficit of $200 million. It asks member nations to subscribe to a $200 million bond issue. The United States, which has 80 per cent of the world's income, is asked to subscribe up to half of the bond issue. President Kennedy wants us to accept this $100 million quota. The money would be paid back over a 25-year period with interest.

There is serious opposition to the Kennedy position. Always enemies of the UN look for an opportunity to cripple or destroy the organization. Some Americans understandably are irritated by the refusal of Russia to pay its share of the cost of the Congo operation, which it opposed. Other Americans are reluctant to back the bond plan because they think the UN had no business intervening in the Congo. Still other Americans cite "mistakes" made by the UN in the Congo.

None of the arguments against buying the bonds, even if we admit they have validity, are sufficient to override the compelling argument in favor of the bond plan. The compelling argument is that the United Nations must be maintained and it must have full U. S. support if it is to survive. Failure to relieve the UN's financial difficulty will seriously endanger the life of the organization.

The UN has imperfections. It has made mistakes and will make more mistakes, for imperfect human beings formulate its policies and direct its activities. But the UN is indispensable in the quest for world peace.

To refuse to support the President's position on the bond question is to play into the hands of the forces that seek destruction of the United Nations.

Letter Supports Mike Lawler

To the Editor:

We, the undersigned, in light of remarks made in your editorial of Feb. 23, "Probable Candidates", cannot understand why the Student Party is not receptive to Mike Lawler as a candidate for president of the student body.

Granted, Lawler has not been in politics for a year, however, he was an active SP legislator for TWO years previous to that. He did give a legislature seat he had won last spring to the SP. At that same time he won a seat on the Men's Honor Council and has been vitally concerned with the problems of the Honor System ever since. He has served as a member of the SP Executive Council.

These facts considered, we think Lawler to be an exceptionally strong candidate, experienced, capable and personable.

He has been active in campus sports, and has shown responsibility and leadership as coach of the UNC freshman and Chapel Hill High School swimming teams.

We consider him the ablest leader on campus and suggest the ideal ticket for SP and UNC — Mike Lawler for president and Dwight Wheless for vice president of Carolina student government.

CLAIRE ATKINS,
Graduate Counselor

SANDY HOKE,
Women's Honor Council

Editor's Note: The above letter carried 84 additional signatures. Because of space limitations, we will be unable to print lengthy lists of supporters for various candidates. However, we will print the text of the letter and will keep the original signatures on file here if any student wishes to see it.

Test Ban Resolution Shouldn't Be Passed

TO the Editor:

Thursday evening the Student Legislature passed a Resolution concerning nuclear testing. This particular resolution was a very nebulous one, indeed. This bill condemned the Soviet Union for resuming nuclear testing in the atmosphere, but stated that the Student Legislature felt the United States was right in testing in the atmosphere once "the deterrent capabilities of the United States" became jeopardized.

I question the right of the Student Leglislaure to pass this resolution for the following reason: Not one single legislator ran for his seat on a platform which remotely mentioned this issue. Although a few attempts were made in some districts to find how the opinion ran on this issue, no campus-wide straw vote or canvass was held on this issue; every legislator did not know how the sentiment on this resolution lay in his district. How, then, can the Student Legislators feel that they have represented campus opinion, the opinion of the students in their respective districts, when they have made little effort to find what that opinion was?

Secondly, as provided by Article IV of the resolution, a copy of this is to be sent to the United States National Student Association. NSA will, most likely, interpret this resolution as indicative of student opinion here at UNC, and use that interpretation in forming its future policy on this issue. This means, in effect, that the opinion o fthe Student Legislators, although, perhaps, not the opinion of the students as it is made out to be, will be used to formulate policy on this international issue.

Furthermore, some campuses do not elect, but, rather appoint their delegates to NSA national conventions. Until all campuses elect their delegates, it cannot truly claim to be representative of student opinion. In this respect, I congratulate the Student Legislature for making our delegation somewhat representative by providing for such an election in another Bill passed Thursday.

—Jeffrey A. Dick

Reflections

A recent story which came into the Tar Heel office reported that almost 700 college students had invaded W.C. for a big Consolidated University dance and twist party. Jack Paar would have gotten a big kick out of that one. That's an awfully small place to get 700 men. No wonder they were twisting.

Yack Editor Defends Double-Endorsement

To the Editor:

At the last meeting of legislature a bill was passed which made the Editorship of the YACKETY YACK an appointive office rather than a campus-wide, elected position as it has been in the past. This was passed supposedly because there were fears that with the new rule that a person can not be doubly endorsed by both campus political parties, if there were only one qualified person the other party might still endorse someone in hopes of winning the office. Thus a job which requires a person with some technical knowledge could easily become a political football. No one consulted with the present Co-Editors; in fact, this bill didn't even come up before the rules committee to be discussed as is the usual custom. The vote was taken late in the evening and most of the legislators were tired and anxious to adjourn; besides it was presented with the indication that the present editors and the Publications Board were in favor of this move.

You may ask, "So what difference does it make whether the YACK editor is appointed or elected?" and say "If it solved a problem by making it appointive all the better." First a little background. This issue came up before the Publications Board both last spring and this fall. In the new by-laws which were passed by both the Pub Board and the legislature this fall the editorship was left elected. To make sure that no unqualified candidates ran for office all candidates were to come before a Selections Committee of the Publication Board which would examine the person's qualifications and then endorse those individuals who were qualified. NOW, the Board will have the final power to say who the editor will be.

What is wrong with this is that the editorship could easily become a revolving monopoly that stays year after year within one select group. Some may say this won't and can't happen. Yet look at the business managers of the two major publications who are appointed in a similar manner. The business manager of the DAILY TAR HEEL has been a DKE for over five years and the YACK business manager has been an SAE for many years. This occurrence is not particularly bad since the business manager has no control over editorial material, but it does show that there is a real threat of this type of monopoly happening. This, in the case of the editor, would be bad for the student body as a whole for an editor is bound to be somewhat partial to the group of which he is a member. This is evidenced in all past Yacks.

The YACK editor is at the head of one of the larger organizations on campus. This past year over $50,000 was spent on the yearbook. The editor has complete control over how and where this money is spent. Since the editor is the only person who actually knows enough to say whether a person who has worked with him is qualified to take over the editorship, he will virtually have the power to name his successor since it is only logical to expect that the Pub. Board will give his recommendations more consideration than anyone else's. The student body should have this right to select its editor from all qualified candidates. The yearbook is for all students, each student pays for and receives a book; therefore, I firmly believe that the students should have the opportunity to vote for their editor —or at least, have had the opportunity to vote that they did not want this privilege.

Menon Breezes To Win In Election

UNC Press Receives $25,000 Ford Grant

A new grant of $24,720 has been awarded to the UNC Press by the Ford Foundation for the stimulation of the publication of scholarly works in the humanities and social sciences.

The new grant is a terminal payment supplementing a five-year program of the Foundation which has already given to the Press a grant of $51,000. The $24,720 UNC Press grant is part of a new Ford grant of $760,058 to 34 university presses.

Since the program began five years ago the UNC Press has published, with the aid of the original grant a total of forty books of of regional, national and international significance. At least half of these have been authored by persons outside the University of North Carolina, some of them have been connected with other universities which maintain no presses, and several are without any university connection.

Sixteen of the forty titles were written by faculty members of the University of North Carolina. Three more were from State College and Woman's Colege.

The forty Press titles range in subject from Raymond Dawson's "Decision to Aid Soviet Russsia" in 1959 to William Newman's 1958 volume "The Sonata in the Baroque Era."

Titles on the current spring list of the UNC Press and published through the Ford grant include "Negro Leadership in a Southern Town" by M. Elaine Burgess, "Chenavard" by Joseph C. Sloane, "Columbia" by John D. Martz, and "The Scotch-Irish" by James Leyburn.

Among the more important titles issued under the terms of the grant are: "The Neoplatonism of William Blake" by George M. Harper (published simultaneously in England by Oxford University Press); "The Cost of Democracy" by Alexander Heard; and "U. S. Senators" by Donald R. Matthews.

WUNC To Show Documentary On Orbiting

The how and why of Project Mercury—The United States' first attempt to put a man in orbit—will be shown on WUNC-TV in a special one-hour documentary at three different times in the coming week.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has prepared the documentary, MASTERY OF SPACE. It will include films of the actual launching and astronaut John Glenn's reaction during the historic orbital flight. The complete program will be seen Thursday, March 1, at 9:00 p.m.; Sunday, March 4, at 9:15 p.m.; and on Wednesday, March 7, at 11:00 a.m.

The program will contain interviews with John Glenn and Walter Schirra. Animation sequences are used to show the development of future space projects such as Project Appolo, which involves a lunar landing. The program also shows in detail exactly how the booster rockets function during the re-entry.

Jones Writes 2 Articles For Britannica

Lyle V. Jones, professor of psychology and director of the Psychometric Laboratory of the University of North Carolina, has two technical articles which have been included in the 1961 edition of the "Encyclopedia Britannica."

An authority on the study of psychophysics, one of Dr. Jones' Britannica articles is entitled "Psychophysical Methods."

"Psychophysics was established by Gustav Theodor Fechner, a 19th century psychologist." Dr. Jones says that Fechner's classical book, "Die Elemente der Psychophysik," represents not only the beginning of psychophysics but also of experimental psychology.

"Psychophysics is the science concerned with quantitative relations between psychological events and physical events, or, more specifically, with quantitative relations between sensations and the stimuli which produce them," according to Jones. The methods developed for the purpose of specifying and testing such quantitative relations are psychophysical methods.

An example describing the idea of psychophysics is to consider a subject who is lifting weights. The weights may actually weight 20 pounds although the subject may feel that they weigh only about 12 pounds. The weights represent the physical stimuli.

The other article, authored by Dr. Jones, is entitled "Psychological Tests and Measurements: Other Measures of Behavior." Dr. Jones discusses "attitudes measurement," consumer preference measurement," "detection of sensory difficulties in consumer products," and "measurements in general psychological research."

Dr. Jones says, "In addition to aptitudes and achievement, personality and temperament, and vocational interests, numerous other aspects of behavior profitably can be and have been measured. For example, attitude measurement plays an important role in assessing effects of public communication, in discovering the degree to which employees are satisfied with job conditions, or in determining public reaction to proposed new governmental policies. Industry more and more frequently depends upon preference testing to determine relative aceptance of new consumer products. Research psychologists routinely are faced with measuring aspects of human and animal behavior. Methods of psychological measurements have served to quantify behavior in these and in other related problem areas."

Both of Dr. Jones' descriptions are in volume 18 of the 1961 edition of the "Encyclopedia Britannica."

Red-Linked Indian Defeats Kripilanti

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—V. K. Krishna Menon appeared headed Tuesday to a surprisingly easy victory over his anti-Communist opponent in an election contest viewed as a crucial test of the political future of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's controversial defense minister.

Latest official returns from north Bombay showed Krishna Menon holding a commanding lead over Acharya J. B. Kripalani, a former Praja Socialist leader who ran as an independent. Their race was for a seat in parliament.

Congress party leaders claimed victory for Krishna Menon, who also had the support of the Communists in the north Bombay constituency. Supporters of Kripalani, who was backed by the combined opposiiton, virtually conceded defeat with less than 50 per cent of the votes tabulated.

"Our chances are rather bleak," said one Kripalani supporter. Political observers noted that Kripalani had lost even those areas where he had been expected to make his strongest showing.

A decisive victory for Krishna Menon would be a solid vote of confidence not only for him but for Nehru. The prime minister campaigned extensively on behalf of Krishna Menon who was accused by the opposition of being soft on Communism.

In another contest which had created considerable interest, pretty young Princess Maharani Gayatri Devi was reported far ahead in her bid for a seat in the Lok Sabha lower house of parliament. The princess was the candidate of the Swatantra freedom party in her home town of Japur.

Election officials reported Nehru leading by a comfortable margin in his home constituency of Allahabad in Uttar Pradesh.

The latest returns showed Nehru's ruling Congress party will retain its absolute majority in parliament although the Communists made some inroads. The Communist party seemed likely to maintain its position as the largest single opposition group in the lower house.

V. K. KRISHNA MENON

There were 494 seats at stake in the general electoins which began Feb. 16 and ended Feb. 25. Voters also elected new assemblies in the 13 states.

Returns indicated that the Congress party also will capture control of the state legislature. The Communists, however, made gains in Punjab and Andhra Pradesh.

In Punjab, the Communists increased their seats from 6 to 9. In southern Andhra they captured 41 seats against 15 in the old assembly.

Botany Profs Publish New Textbook

Professors Victor A. Greulach and J. Edison Adams of the Department of Botany at UNC are the authors of "Plants: An Introduction to Modern Botany" just published by John Wiley & Sons of New York.

The volume is designed as a textbook for one-semester introductory college botany courses and differs from other available textbooks in its organization, its emphasis on dynamic aspects of botany such as plant physiology and genetics, and its inclusion of many recent research developments in botany.

The two men are also authors of a laboratory manual designed to accompany the text book and published by Wiley, as well as an instructor's handbook relating both to the textbook and the laboratory manual.

Dr. Greulach is chairman of the Department of Botany and has previously published numerous research papers in plant physiology as well as a number of popular botanical articles and laboratory manuals for plant physiology, general botany, and general biology courses.

Dr. Adams, a plant anatomist and taxonomist, has previously published a mumebr of research papers and has been co-author of a general botany laboratory manual. He is currently a collaborator on "The Flora of the Carolinas" which is being prepared under the direction of Dr. E. E. Radford of the Botany Department.

University Gets Grant For Study Of Science Ed

UNC has been awarded a National Science Foundation grant to conduct a program of "Undergraduate Science Education," also known as the "undergraduate research participation program."

Richmond L. Simpson, associate professor in the Department of Sociology, will direct the $12,125 grant award.

The program will enable 10 undergraduate students from colleges and universities both in North Carolina and out-of-state to to spend 10 weeks this summer at the UNC Department of Sociology working on research projects with research advisors.

Each student will receive a stipend of $800. Traditionally, graduate students have had the advantage of using campus laboratories for specialised research projects. The NSF program gives the undergraduate a chance to become accustomed to research work.

Professor F. N. Collier of the UNC Department of Chemistry will also be directing similar programs for undergraduates in the areas of psychology, botany and zoology under continuing funds that were granted by the NSF in recent years.

Winter To Speak On Anthropology Trend

Professor Edward H. Winter, anthropologist at the University of Virginia, will speak on "Trends in British Social Anthropology" at UNC Thursday March 1 at 4 p.m. in the fourth flooor staff room of the Alumni Building.

An informal reception sponsored by the Anthropology Club will follow. Professor Winter has done field work in British Central Africa and is the author of "Beyond the Mountains of the Moon: The Lives of Four Africans," among other published works.

On March 2 Professor Winter will speak on culture change. All interested persons are invited to attend the lecture set for room 308, Alumni Building, at 10 a.m.

Bridge Players Await Results Of Their Play

Twenty-four Carolina students participated Sunday afternoon at Graham Memorial in the campus competition stage of the National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament. The results of the contest will be announced about April 1.

All play in the tournament is by mail and the hands will be judged by William Root, contract bridge authority, and the well known bridge expert, Charles Goren. Last year the Harvard University and Stanford University teams won the national titles.

A cup will be awarded to the colleges of the teams scoring highest of the North-South and East-West hands. The four individual winners will receive cups also for their permanent possession. Campus winners will be awarded certificates.

The Tournament is open to students of all universities and colleges in the United States and Canada. Ray Weisen served as tournament director for UNC in the competition, which is sponsored by the Association of College Unions.

The students playing North-South hands were Curtis Gans and Woody Wooden, Jan Kares and Michael Alexander, Jeff Cartier and Frank Sanders, Fran Lahens and "Mike" Woodworth, Norman Rose and Robert Bolan and Milburn Gibbs and Ralph Macklin. The East-West players were Al Deal and Joe Deutsch, Ed Solomam and Fred Stallings, Hughe Hoyle and Clarence Horton, Larry Martin and Dick Sokol, H. E. Butner and W. M. Seukus and David Hoel and Dwayne Anderson.

Car 54 Gets Grease Job To Prepare For New Year

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Car 54 has been put in the barn, officer Gunther Toody is working the night club circuit using the somewhat less exotic name of Joe E. Ross, and officer Francis Muldoon has dropped his badge and nightstick and picked up the brushes and chisels of painter-sculpture Fred Gwynne.

And producer - director - writer - creator Nat Hiken has absolutely nothing to do for three and a half months—except to plan and help write the mischief that will keep Car 54, Toody and Muldoon busy for another 30 television shows next season.

"Car 54, Where Are You?" NBC's affectionately humorous series about a couple of fictional New York City police auto patrolmen who are always in trobule, wound up the filming of 30 half-hour shows for the 1961-62 season last week at the Biograph Studios in the Bronx. It is one of the first television series to complete its seasonal quota.

The show is one of the few of the numerous new shows that went on the networks last fall to turn into a big success, following the pattern set by Hiken's long-run "You'll Never Get Rich" series starring Phil Silvers as Sergeant Bilko.

"Yeh, but we were a little nervous back last fall," Ross said on the last day of filming. "The reviews on our first show weren't so hot, and for a couple or three weeks we didn't know whether we would or wouldn't. But we began to click with the second episode, and from then on we kept getting stronger."

"It had been especially gratifying," Hiken said, "to get a good foothold with the viewers against such opposition as the Sullivan show on CBS, which has a half-hour head start on us. Not that we're doing a lot of damage to Sullivan's steady high rating. But it is much more impressive to be able to catch on under these circumstances than if there were no strong shows opposite the other networks."

"Car 54, Where Are You?" continues on NBC at 8:30 p.m. Sundays until all of the first season's 30 episodes have been used once, which should be about April 15. Then six episodes will be repeated. This will put the program through May 27.

"We'll be off the air altogether during the summer," Hiken said. "That's good. I don't like that business of 52 weeks a season by using a whole summer of repeats. We'll give the viewers a little rest, and they'll be in a better frame of mind to welcome us back in the fall.

This Is A Sport?

"In this corner, ladies and gentlemen, is that 250-pound terror, Chief Big Hawk."

A small crowd of professional wrestling fans loudly express their opinion of said wrestler.

And in the opposite corner Hans Schmidt, Len Montana, Pancho Villa, Gypsy Joe, Silent Rodriguez, or some other muscular meanie grits his teeth and swears that Big Hawk's wrestling days are numbered.

The bell rings. Seconds later some 500-pounds of sweat and muscle is rolling on the mat, bouncing against the ropes, or tumbling completely out of the ring.

A tape recording of the grunts, groans, and chops to the face which take place during these bouts would be enough to make the listener actually believe a gruelling athletic event is taking place.

This is a sport?

It's a shame that television stations waste their time on these farcical wrestling matches. True, some of these big fellows could qualify for an academy award for their performances on the mats, and their antics sometimes prove to be highly amusing, but their "sport" is not a sport.

With such athletes as Roger Maris, Wilt Chamberlain, Paul Hornung, John Uelses, Jim Beatty, and Peter Snell dotting the world's sports pages it is utterly ridiculous to call these wrestlers pros.

A high school wrestler rates the nod as an athlete before these professional grapplers. The high schooler is devoted to his sport and to staying in top physical condition.

The pro is devoted also. Devoted to money. Chastising the pro for earning a living would hardly be fair, but while professional matches are raking in the cash, college wrestling remains a minor sport.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A Wholesome Game

College wrestling is a clean, wholesome, game. It's finer points far outnumber those of the professional version. First, there is a mehod of scoring college wrestling. Instead of the lengthy, knock-around, bone-crushing exhibitions that the pros put on, the college game is systematic.

Matches are divided into three periods, each consisting of three minutes. For the first period, the wrestlers start off facing each other—or in a neutral position. If either scores a take-down or near pin, he gets points on the running score for the match.

The second 180-second period begins with one of the wrestlers holding the advantage. One gets on his hands and knees in the center of the mat, the other takes a hold that is usually difficult to escape from. But when the escape is made, the defensive man gains points. And if he succeeds in completely turning the tables on his opponents, he scores points for a "reversal".

The third period begins with the wrestlers in opposite positions from their second period starting point.

Of course, if one of the men succeeds in pinning the other's shoulders to the mat, the match ends at that point, and the winning wrestler's team gets five points added to the team score.

If the match is determined on the basis of the individual points accumulated during the nine minutes, it is termed a decision and worth three points.

If the individual score is tied and neither wrestler has accumulated 30 seconds more "riding time" than the other then the match is a draw and each team scores two points. Riding time is the number of seconds or minutes that a wrestler has the advantage in his match.

ACC Finals Coming Up

The Atlantic Coast Conference championships will be held in Raleigh Friday and Saturday and some of the best wrestlers in the east will be present—namely Maryland's powerful team.

The brand of wrestling will not be top-notch, for Maryland is the only conference school that offers a large number of scholarships for the sport. But good wrestling will be exhibited with each man wrestling three times during the two days. The conference champion in each weight class will be crowned around five o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Last season Maryland won the individual title in each division from 115-pound (even the littlest of little men can become stars at big wrestling schools such as Maryland, Virginia Tech, Oklahoma, and Oklahoma State) up to the heavyweight division. Returning for coach Sully Krouse are Dick Maynard, Ron Maunder, Bob Smith, Pat Varre, Eugene Kerin, Karl Offenbacher Bill Rishell and Roger Shoals. Only 130-pound Sam Bossert and 191-pound Bob Hacker have graduated.

UNC scored 63 points in the finals last season for second place behind Maryland's 116. Both Pete Gilchrist and Dick Blackman have excellent chances to take the ACC titles in the 130 and 147-divisions, respectively. Gilchrist, with 36 points, and Blackman, 32, both broke the previous UNC scoring record set in 1959.

Whatever the outcome in the two day wrestling finals, you can be sure the following will not be repeated in Raleigh:

"Schmidt, the German Terror, had been drop-kicked out of the ring by Montana and when he came back claimed he had injured his shoulder. The German tough asked the ref for a five-minute delay. While Montana and the official were talking it over, Schmidt hit the popular Len with the supposedly hurt wing and pinned him for the decision. Montana screamed foul, but Schmidt said, 'I just was too smart for him'."

Buckeyes Top Poll Again; Duke Moves Up To Sixth

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State and Cincinnati maintained their strong hold on the top two berths in the United Press International major college basketball ratings Tuesday while Kansas State advanced to the No. 3 spot.

Ohio State's powerful Buckeyes, shooting for a second straight national championship, were a unanimous choice as the country's No. 1 team by the UPI board of 35 coaches for the second week in a row.

The undefeated Buckeyes scored their 22nd consecutive victory of the season Monday night by beating Iowa, 72-62. The coaches, however, based their selections on games through last Saturday.

Cincinnati, trailing Ohio State every week of the season so far, increased its second place margin by gaining 30 second-place votes. The Bearcats also received three third place votes and two for fifth.

Kansas State exchanged places with Kentucky. The Jayhawkers moved up a notch while the Wildcats dropped to fourth.

Mississippi State remained fifth while Duke and Bradley swapped positions. The Blue Devils took over the No. 6 spot. Bowling Green, tied for 10th a week ago, advanced to eighth; Loyola of Chicago, also previously tied for 10th, jumped up a notch to ninth.

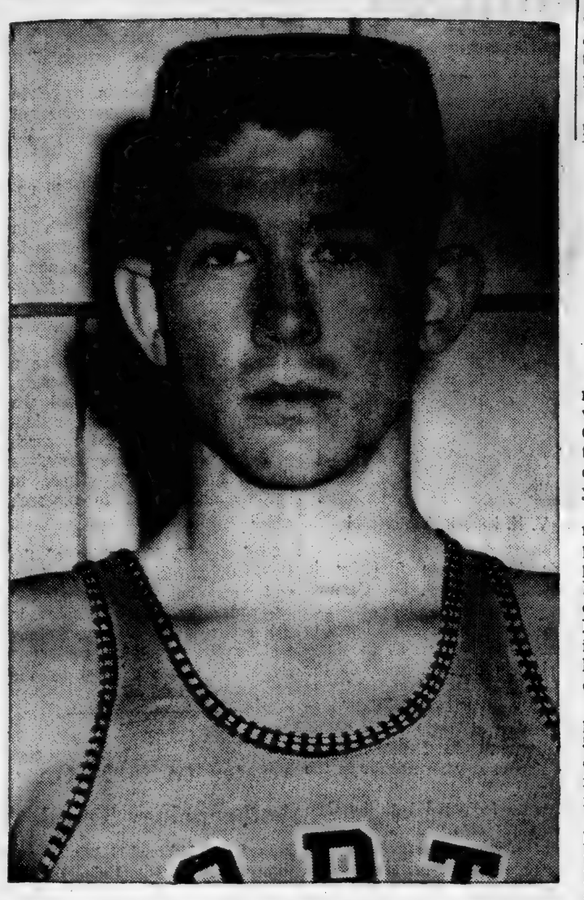
Colorado completed the top 10, joining the elite group for the first time this season.

Heading the second 10 was Oregon State, which fell from eighth, followed by UCLA, St. John's (N.Y.), Duquesne, Utah, Houston, Wake Forest, Arizona State U., Villanova, Southern California and West Virginia. Southern California took the biggest dip after being tied for 10th with Bowling Green and Loyola a week ago.

Ohio State has only two more games on its regular schedule and seeks to become the first team in the history of the ratings to lead the nation each week for two consecutive seasons. The Buckeyes' remaining games are against Wisconsin and Indiana.

TEAM	POINTS
1. Ohio State (35) 21-0	350
2. Cincinnati 23-2	306
3. Kansas State 19-2	250
4. Kentucky 19-2	228
5. Mississippi State 22-1	194
6. Duke 19-4	114
7. Bradley 19-4	90
8. Bowling Green 20-2	69
9. Loyola Ill. 18-2	44
10. Colorado 15-5	41

Second 10: 11, Oregon State 40; 12, UCLA 36; 13, St. John's N.Y. 34; 14, Duquesne 23; 15, Utah 22; 16 tie, Houston and Wake Forest 14 each; 18, Arizona State U. 13; 19, Villanova 11; 20 tie, Southern California and West Virginia 10 each.



BILL BROWN, freshman basketball sharpshooter from Durham, is an all-around athlete. After hitting a cool .536 of his field goal attempts and averaging 12.3 points for the Tar Babies, he will take to the golf course as a candidate for the UNC frosh golf team.

Sigma Chi Triumphs Twice In Intramural Basketball

By JOHN MONTAGUE

Sigma Chi had two close calls in Monday's intramural roundball action, but managed to come out on top in both skirmishes. The Frogs went into overtime to edge out the Chi Phi Shorts, 39-38, while the Blue unit slipped by DU, 36-35.

The overtime battle was won on the foul line, the Frogs sinking 7 free throws in the extra period while the Shorts hit on only two foul tosses. Bill Stratton was the big man for the winners with 17. A 16-point output by Tom Brooks led the Shorts.

Ed Kesler's 12 tallies paced the Sigma Chi Blue over DU, which in turn was led by Larry Jenkins' 12 points.

Sigma Nu Mavericks 35,
Phi Delt Nads 34

John Boxley pumped in 16 for the Nads, but it was not quite enough as the Mavs, led by Jack Rees with 13, squeaked by in this one.

Delta Sig All-Stars 32
DKE Dimes 20

A 13-point performance by Doug Israel was the approximate difference in this contest.

Phi Gam 46, Chi Phi 34

The talented trio of Ward Marslender (13), Dick Evans (12) and Brad Dozier (12) powered the Phi Gams to this cage conquest. Bill Barnett's 10 was tops for the losers.

Chi Psi Styles 72,
Pika Pounders 32

The Styles had their eye on the basket as Paul Donahue poured in 24, Steve Painter hit for 18, Joe Parker netted 14 and Fred Seely connected for 10. The Pounders had Fuller Honeycutt with 12.

Chi Phi Five 81,
Chi Psi Psycho 30

Close. No one hit in double figures in this tightly played contest which saw the Chi Phi crew on top at the finish.

Sigma Nu 31, TEP 16

The Sigma Nu's almost doubled the TEP total in marching along to victory. Treanor's 11 markers led the way.

Kappa Sig Plummers 62,
Kappa Psi Scrubs 32

Dave Fletcher held a hot hand, bucketing 30 points to present the Plummers with their victory margin. Pat Leonard added 10 to the total while Jerry Price hit for 18 in a losing cause.

ATO Drills 51,
Phi Delt Joints 32

Pete Green's 18 points paved the way for the Drills, as the ATO crew romped to another win.

Kappa Psi 29,
Theta Chi 24

The Kappa Psi Blue take this low-scoring contest by five, thus helping to heal the wounds suffered by the Scrubs.

INTRAMURAL SOCCER

Today is the deadline for entries in the All-Campus Intramural Soccer Tournament, to be conducted on a double-elimination basis.

Varsity letter winners and frosh numeral winners are eligible in this event, and two ringers will be allowed each organization.

Glaser Gains Only UNC Win

Wrestlers Dumped By VPI

By ED DUPREE

Glenn Glaser was the only UNC wrestler to register a victory Monday night as VPI's defending Southern Conference champions overpowered the Tar Heels, 24-5.

Glaser, wrestling in the 177-pound division, decisioned Virginia Tech's Hardy, 4-2, for his three-point win. Earlier in the match Dick Blackman battled to a draw with VPI's Hatcher for the other two Tar Heel points.

Blackman's draw broke a string of 13 consecutive VPI individual victories, starting with the preliminary freshman match which the visitors won 37-0.

Wrestling in the 157-division, instead of the 147 he usually participates in, Blackman pushed his season scoring record to 32, bettering the 1959 school mark of 31. His total fell four short of Pete Gilchrists's 36, the new UNC record set Saturday when Gilchrist defeated Maryland's Ron Maunder by a default.

The going wasn't as smooth Monday for the new Tar Heel record holder. Gilchrist's 130-pound opponent, Grandstaff, decisioned the Tar Heel senior, 3-1, thus preventing him from setting another mark.

The loss gives coach Sam Barnes' men a 4-7-1 record, while the Southern Conference Gobblers have a 7-2 slate.

Other Tar Heel scoring for the dual meet season is: Willis Johnson, 12; Tom Grant, 111; Gene Record and Louis Arthur, 10; Jack Jones, 8; Glenn Glaser and Mickey Nelson, 6; Whit Durand, Jerry Cabe, Tom Alexander and Bill Shipp, 5; Gordon Appell and John Ulfelder, 3.

Next stop for the UNC wrestlers is Raleigh, where they compete in the Atlantic Coast Conference championships Friday and Saturday.

Cunningham Leads Frosh Statistics

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Although losing ace scorer and rebounder Billy Cunningham halfway through the season, North Carolina's freshman basketball team still managed to run up an excellent 12-4 won-lost mark this year.

Ken Rosemond's Tar Babies, magnificent with Cunningham prior to semester break, when they piled up ten victories without a loss, appeared to be the finest frosh club in UNC history. When the 6-4 Brooklyn star left (due to the termination of his freshman eligibility), however, Carolina was able to win only two of their last six starts.

This fact, along with his 20.7 points-per game average and his 50 per cent mark in field goal accuracy, proved how much the freckle-face leaper meant to Rosemond's frosh cagers.

Of the ten games Billy played, he was high scorer in seven of them, hitting a high of 31 against North Carolina State at Raleigh in a 73-70 victory. The New Yorker also dumped in 28 points in each of the Tar Babies two games with South Carolina.

Neary, second-leading point getter

Jay Neary, the 6-2 guard from Cambria Heights, N. Y., was second leading point-getter of the year, and considerably picked up the scoring slack after Cunningham left.

Neary boasted a high-game mark in seven contests while hitting 49 per cent from the floor. The flashy jump-shooter had a personal single game high of 24 points—a figure which he hit on two occasions. His season average was 18.1.

Following Neary in the point brigade was Ray Respess. Respess who took over at center after semester break, was one of the state's finest high school ball players while at Pantego last year, and continued his sparkling play this year at the Hill.

Ray shot 49 per cent from the floor while compiling a 15.4 average, and had a game high on three occasions.

Brown Shot 63.6 Percent

Bill Brown, who now leaves the baketball wars for the peace and quiet of the golf course, where he shoots in the low 70's, led the Tar Babies in field goal accuracy with a 53.6 mark. He averaged 12.3 on the season, and led the Tar Baby rebounding in the post-Cunningham games.

Pud Hassell, the former Beaufort ace and Rosemond's top defensive man, wound up with an 8.9 average. He hit a personal high of 20 against the State yearlings in a 68-50 victory.

Bill Taylor, Carolina's "sixth" man, who took over Cunningham's vacated spot in the second semester, turned in some fine performances. The 5-11 hustler from the neighboring town of Cary, was a fine playmaker as well as the team-leader in free-throw accuracy, Taylor hit 12 of 15 foul shots for 80 per cent while averaging 6.3 points per-game.

Future Looks Rosy

All of this points to a rosy future for Carolina basketball when next year, varsity coach Dean Smith welcomes Cunningham and company as they make their long-awaited switch from "Tar Babies" to "Tar Heels."

SPRING 1962: NEW FABRICS, BRIGHTER COLORS, PRINTS

"DAISIES WON'T TELL" is the theme of this smart two-color braided straw cloche that's brimming over with gay spring chic. The band and flower are created of soft leather.

By RUBY ART

New Hats: High, Wide Handsome

The feminine look for spring is essentially a young and animated one. The soft look of fit, flare and lots of ruffles sets the pace for the new silhouettes and fabrics that shape up the millinery story, too.

Soft felts that are easily manipulated and silks with a lot of surface interest are at the top of the long list of fascinating fabrics that go into the fanciful hats for the season.

High turban shaping is one of several draped silhouettes for spring. Slouch hats, high-crowned and mobile looking, take on a new look in soft-as-a-handkerchief felts.

Many of the newer hats are like puffs of clouds in gay maline and flower combinations.

Additional height and soft movement are interpreted in manipulated caps, slouches and toques.

Hats are as flattering as they are new looking. Exciting fabric novelties such as straw-cloth, jersey and straw braid are get-togethers with chiffon, florals and patent-leather trims.

Profile upturns, variations on cartwheels (but with higher crowns) rollers and beret shapes are set off smartly with flowers, bands and bows.

There's a shiny look to straw, straw-cloths and basket-weave straws are being shown to complement new, handsome suits.

Gay pixy hats, little pillboxes with "up-jutting" accents, skimmers and a variety of caps give a gay lilt to the more casually-styled fashions of the new season.

Satins and jerseys as well as silks and chiffons used in trans-season collections continue blithely into the spring scene.

A wide variety of "garden" flowers, bows, cocardes, wide banding, or stand-up single flowers—are all important trimming details for the many different hat styles for spring.

Shiny and matte finish straws and strawcloths — shantung, bali, milan, balibuntl and others—are manipulated into all the new shapes.

From the tiny "miniature," which may merely be a "wedding ring" of a hat with flowers and trim—to the large plateaus and skimmers—hats are making big impressions in high-shaping, tall crowns and gay color.

Spring Fashions In Chapel Hill

By NANCY BARR

New fabrics in brighter colors and conversational prints will accent the college girls' wardrobes this Spring, according to fashion shops in downtown Chapel Hill.

The styles remain basically simple with only the addition of Mandarin collars—or no collars at all—and a flair in the skirts to distinguish this Spring's collection of tailored blouses, skirts and the ever favorite shirtdress.

A trend beginning last Winter for more fullness in skirts reaches a high point this Spring with the new "wrap-around" skirt, gored smoothly from the waist to its flared hem for walking ease. The "wrap-around" is available in whimsical fabrics of patch-quilt madras, Ivy-league paisley, pale flower prints, bright denims and broadcloths.

For accent, the majority of the "wrap-arounds" have large, basket-weaved straw pockets.

The collarless blouse, which entered the college fashion scene last Winter, dominates shirt styles with the round, flat collar as a close second and the Mandarin collar as a bright new entry this Spring. Besides the oxford and broadcloth solid colors, the blouse achieves a new softer look in pastel, tiny flowered prints.

A return to femininity in college girls' blouses, the first since 5th Avenue plastered rows of ruffles down the front of "sissy shirts," is being made in a national trend back to ruffles.

But this Spring a more sophisticated handling of the ruffles makes for femininity without gushing. Soft and loose, a single row of gathered material flows around the collar, down the front and around the cuffs and hem.

The madras plaids in tailored shirts, pleated skirts, kilts and shirtdresses will still be popular, but no longer will the colors be blended and subdued. Brighter, bolder colors have been added, and madras seems to be headed for a permanent position as a type of plaid in its own right rather than a passing fad.

The ever popular shirtdress grows up this Spring in fabrics designed to carry it to almost any occasion. Besides the usual solid-colored dacron and cotton fabrics, the dress can be found in Chapel Hill in striped seersucker, hopsacking, basket-weaved cotton, bold conversational prints and a variety of denims including mattress ticking.

The bold new variety of fabrics have also been used in this Spring's new simplicity in suits. The matching skirts and jackets—many minus collars—can be seen in madras, dacron and cotton seersucker, denium and basket-weaved cotton.

No one color or range of colors dominates Chapel Hill's Spring fashions, except for an unusual emphasis on combinations of red, white and blue.

BOLD STRAW POCKETS . . . accent the newsest look in skirts—the "wrap-around." The blouse is impeccably tailored with roll-up sleeves and without a collar.

Belts Now Important To Fashion

Belts have a big role to play in the spring '62 fashion picture. They boldly define the natural waistline of a simple sheath; highlight the Princess or long torso lines that define a fashion; or, in the hands of an artistic wearer, they may reshape the entire look of a style.

Whatever else they do, the new belts will add impact—of color or size or beauty or novelty.

Sizes range from the widest possible crush belt to tiny string belts—colors will run the gamut—beauty will be seen in exquisite brocades, jewelled fabrics, ornate buckles—novelty will range from "dog leash" belts to handkerchief-sashes that are especially designed to wear with the new low-slung pants and skirts.

Color has come to reptiles and patents, and they show up in the new belts as well as in shoes and handbags.

Short Or Long, Gloves Are Smart

There's lots of news in the ups and downs of sleeves on all fashions, especially on dresses, calling for the smart accents of the new gloves.

The "little white glove" will remain good for spring—but there's lots more to the glove picture this season.

The "little glove," or shorty gives way to the longer four-to-10-button lengths. Dress and suit sleeves are beginning to lengthen, but still remain close enough to the elbow to require longer sleeves.

Color, for example, really comes into its own. There are ten top colors being shown, but many more choices than that are available. At the tip of the top are: apricot, lime green and vivid orange.

New Fashions Flattered

SPRING! Poets sing it . . . hearts are thrilled by it and the wide, wonderful world of fashion welcomes it in 1962 with some of the most flattering, feminine clothes seen in a long time!

As spring arrives and Easter approaches the big news shaping up in fashion circles is the renewed emphasis on "fit".

New silhouettes are very body conscious, focusing exciting detail toward the body, from the waist up.

Suits and new dresses are enhanced with more bosom detail in fresh, new molded shapings. This, in turn, heralds the return of the gracious, always-flattering princess line.

Boxy, unfitted tops to suits and costumes are now passe — bolero-type overblouses and lowered waistline overblouses—are "in".

Other important "fit factors" in the spring shape-up, are bias-cut bloused bodices . . . flattering, away-from-the-neck necklines, either draped, collarless, or with small narrow collars.

Shoulders are flattered by set-in sleeves—quite narrow looking, or very short, full above the elbow very short, full above the elbow many sleeveless fashions of the new seasons.

More flare at the hemline gives more flair to the fashion scene. There's more ease in skirt shapes and hemlines in almost all of the new fashions.

Coats Look New

The fitted silhouette in coats promises an all-new feeling of excitement!!

The shaped coat is flattering to the figure with skimming front and full back. A high-bosom look is achieved with intricate details at the bodice and narrowed waistline.

At the back of these coats, fullness is achieved by panel treatments, falling from the shoulders.

The important line in coats is the "A-line", especially when interpreted in the princess coat. From its small, precise collar, to the fitted and under-bosom accented bodice, to its flare skirt, the princess line adds up to a total of smart flattery. Pockets may be placed quite high or go quite low, but the flare usually starts from the hips and widens to the hem.

Straight-cut or reefer coats are the most figure-hugging coat silhouette of all. Set-in sleeves and thin lapels add to the columnar look. The cardigan and officer's coat are other versions of the straight cut coat..

Suits Take Stellar Role

For the woman who loves suits (and what woman doesn't), this is an important suit season.

Denim-fit suits with a new high-bosom look and free-swinging skirt and higher jacket are smart and very new looking.

Jackets that barely touch the waist are often mated with gored or paneled skirts to ensemble as the bolero suit. These brief of bits of jackets often dip slightly below the waist at the back.

Particularly noteworthy are a group of cutaway and squared off-type jackets. Softer and more defined than the familiar old boxy jacket, they are not buttoned and often combine with their own overblouses and handsomely detailed skirts.

Suits are pointed up with asymmetrical detailing of side-wrapped skirts, or with off-center closing on jackets. Collarless or little wedding-ring collared styles of jackets . . . . set-in, shorter and narrower sleeves and swing-easy, fall softly skirts all delineate the newest suits.

Lovely Dress Styles

There's so much to look for that's new and different in spring dresses, that the entire dress picture shapes up with femininity, flattery and versatility.

The perennial fashion success—the costume—is composed this season in sweet harmony of two and three parts. The most exciting of these ensembles is the three piece costume of overblouse, easy skirt and jacket.

Dashing print dresses are topped by new reefer coats to create equally charming costumes. Open, Channel-type jackets top trim skimmer dresses in two part harmony of color and fabric.. Another popular duet are the overblouse-and-skirt duo.

Again, the princess line is important—interpreted in new dresses with an ingenue look. The high-waistline keynotes the important cut of this style.

Tops with lowered waistlines or at the opposite: raised to bolero length, give a smooth sophistication to the two-piece look of the overblouse dress.

New dress styles are enhanced also by the bias-cut bloused bodice dress which will set the pace for daytime wear as well as for after five. Pretty prints and flowing fabrics star in this silhouette.

The sheath dress relaxes its lines for spring—adds high-waisted detail, a cape-effect or a soft toss-back scarf to underscore the new softer look.

You'll find that dresses have short sleeves, narrow sleeves or none at all; there are lots of collarless necklines in jewel, boat or bateau cuts; skirts are more relaxed, with free-flowing ease and hem flare—and, highwaisted detail will be the focal point of dress fashions.

Trousseau Items In New Collections

Modern brides are more interested in practicality than frills when it comes to trousseau lingerie, according to lingerie department surveys. Young women preparing for marriage today lean toward bright cottons and sporty-type sleepclothes, away from ultra-feminine, fine lingerie.

A great factor in this attitude is our contemporary way of life, which demands lingerie that is easy to care for and that goes from bed-to-breakfast or lounging. Since most young wives cannot afford a servant, they want lingerie that drip-dries and is uncomplicated . . . hence the great popularity of nylon tricot.

Favorite choices of brides-to-be are tricot bridal sets in short lengths, fitted gowns, shifts, print petticoats, breakfast coats, warm robes and separate gowns in pastel shades.

Exciting Suit Styles To Star For Easter

FOR WANDERLUST-ERS or smart "stay-at-homers," this sunny-clime suit in a worsted seersucker, a 100 per cent wool fabric, supplies a brand new fashion bonus. Its light-as-air fabric is wrinkle-resisting, is in the classic gray and white of seersucker stripe. The eased sheath is covered by a waist-length box jacket. Suit by VERA MAXWELL Hat by MADCAPS Gloves by KISLAV

This is the fashion season suit-lovers have been waiting for! Suits are different-looking, more flattering, more colorful and definitely more wearable for more women than they have been for quite a while.

Suits are very much the focal point of interest in the new collections. Since so many women are apt to begin building their spring wardrobes with a "good suit" as the basis, the flattering design and styling of spring '62 suits—is good news.

Beginning with the wonderful buoyancy and bounce of light airy fabrics in suitings, to the colorful "whitened" pastels they are fashioned in, suits show an amazing versatility in dividend "parts."

The jacket and skirt, each of which is designed for flattery and more fit, combine with co-ordinated silk or silktype blouses and overblouses knit suits are often teamed with handsome knit blouses or may take-on a linen or similar-fabric mate.

The unmolded boxy packet is gone — instead demi-fit and fit shapes the jacket.

SPORTSWEAR COVERS A LOT OF THINGS–

Skirts, blouses, culottes, kilties, blazers for campus wear, and Jamaicas or bermudas, surfers, capri pants, windbreakers for play wear. In all the desired colors and fabrics.

Dresses are always an important spring and warm weather item. The big styles thus far this season are homespuns or hopsacks, seersuckers, dacron/cottons with full skirts. Your choice of Bermuda collar or no-collar cardigan. Sizes start at Petite 3.

With the 2-piece bathing suits coming back very strong and the Boy-leg and Mio styles as big as ever, the bathing suit season is here. The styles are sensational and the fabrics are beautiful. Sizes start at 5.

Sportswear: Pure & Simple

Even as dresses, costumes and suits glide into the new season on a crest of femininity, so do the many, diversified expressions of the new season sportswear items.

Obvious expressions of the feminine look are appearing on the sportswear scene in ruffles flounces, frills and fringe. However, the true femininity of sportswear appears in the shape of sportswears . . . in body shaping, that's fitted but not clinging . . . in waistlines that are delineated but not cinched in.

Sportswear collections as a whole reflect pure and simple styling—soft, shapely and flattering.

Two and three piece ensembles —coordinated in color and fabric have a suit look. Their jackets will stress more fit with fitted front and loose-back but shaped at the waistline. There are numerous belted styles and Chanel-type cardigan tops being shown.

For leisure and casual wear, trim pants and simple tops hew to the body in clean-cut understated lines. In addition to the new, exciting hipster pants, Nassau, Jamaica and camp shorts are being shown and are especially noteworthy when topped with long tunics.

A wide variety of skirts is shown for spring into summer wear: some are eased-sheath styles while hip-stitched, boxpleated and cluster pleat styles add flair to the flared styles.

For active and just - watching sport doings, there are deck pants with a gay nautical look, flattering pedal pushers, Bermudas and tapered pants.

Denims, as mentioned, are standouts; there's cotton cord, hopsacking, sharkskins, duck, seersucker all kinds of poplin, tarpoons, linens, cotton knits and homespun cottons, silk and silk-like fabrics—in crisp sparkly plains, in bold florals and geometrics, or just abstracts, and stripes and plaids, of course.

Other newsmakers are distinctive ponhos, in muumuus, in oriental - inspired "houseboy" pants and mandarin jackets. And fashion hails the navy in a wonderful y-diversified group of nautical-in-mood separates and matchmates that are almost "regulation" for the boating crowd (and landlubbers, too) are tricolor gay in red, white and blue.

There are many, many variations on the pants themes. Many are fashioned in true Western styling. others have fringe trims and embroideries.

Topping the smartest, newest pants and skirt styles are blouses and shirts of all kinds. Many are a flutter with ruffles: at the collar, down the front or simply softening the end of the sleeve.

Overblouses are ablaze with novelty all-over prints and color-wise with border trims. The squared-off look takes over in overblouses; they may be midriff short or tunic long.

There's fashion adventure in stem-slim pants . . . many of them in skin sleek stretch pants, in fine cottons and blends. Denims, too, are very, very new—in color and patterns. Gay cotton sateens are a new note this season.

There's a trend to wrap-a-rounds — especially in California-styled sportswear: back-wrap skirts and casual dresses.

No story about sportswear and casuals is complete without giving honorable mention to shirt dresses —brighter than ever this year in the new colors.

Double-knits continue to make news in the separates, coordinate and mix-match picture.. They are wonderfully wearable, wrinkle resistant and lend themselves exceptionally well to color.

They match-up or mix beautifully in T-type tops, skirts and pants and a variety of jacket tops.

Cover-ups in sweaters are fabulously exciting. In addition to traditional types in classic pullovers and cardigans, there are tunic types, ponchos, brief boleros and long, almost coat-like stylings.

And colors—think in terms of ice cream flavors, of bonbons, of a summer-fresh bowl of fruit—think them clear and bright—and lo, you have the sportswear color palette for the fun-in-the-sun season ahead.

RETURN TO FEMININITY . . . in a softly styled, ruffled blouse. A national trend back to ruffles ofrecasts a softer look for Spring.

Lounge-Dresses

Riding in the wake of the wave of popularity which recently swept the muumuu into America from Hawaiian shores is the LOUNGE-DRESS!

Compared to the new spring loungedresses, the muumuu is decidedly last year's style—although both fulfill the same fashion need.

Spring leisure dresses have shape enough to look disciplined, but not enough to require foundations. They offer a great deal more variety in fabrics since the muumuu was basically in a floral cotton print.

The loungedress will be seen in terry cloths, Arnel jerseys, stretch denims, cotton sateens, as well as the airy batiste, dotted swiss and miracle fabrics.

Styles are as varied as those of sportswear and sleepwear combined. The shift, cropped at the knee or above, promises to be favored, but there will also be A-line flares, tent shapes and "baby dresses."

The shift which falls loosely from a high yoke, looks slightly high-waisted and as innocent as a baby dress, is the likely successor to the muumuu's success. This shift, as well as most of the new loungedresses, will slip over the head—although a few have buttons or hidden zippers.

A Cool Spring:

"DARING DAISIES" are fancifuly prnited on acetate Vyrene —the key to this figure controlling, mere-six-ounce suit. Vyrene Spandex is the wonder fiber that's unbelievably lightweight, elastic and controlling.

Denim Sportswear

The big news for 1962 in sportswear is in denim and bed-ticking; old materials used in exciting new ways. These will be very fresh, clean looking fabrics, easy on the budget, yet big in fashion and smartness. They are used most in the lines coming out of California and can be found locally.

Especially popular are the classic no collar shirtwaist dresses and new smart suits in this exciting fabric. They are most often trimmed in red with stitching, buttons or straw belts.

At DeAnne's denim and bed-ticking is available in shirtwaist dresses, two-piece dresses, culottes, swing slacks, sweetniks and matching separates which consist of suits, jackets, blouses, slim skirts, accordion pleated skirts, slacks and bermudas.

To top off the bermudas there is the Uncle Oscar Himmelberger III shirt and a tennis racket with which one is able to "swing into spring."

Pride more often than ignorance makes us refuse to accept new ideas; finding the first places taken in the intellectual parade, we refuse to take the last.—Rochefoucauld.

In courting women, many dry wood for a fire that will not burn for them.—Balzac.

Word From Durham

Suits To Be Fitted

Montaldo's of Durham welcomes Spring 1962 with a varied opinion on Fashion. This is the year when you can do pretty much as you please "Fashion-wise." By this we mean fabrics vary — styles vary and there is certainly "something for everyone" in this omnibus spring.

Fabrics vary — from the very sheerest wool to the prettiest nubby silk—from dacron and cotton blends to the sturdy synthetic fibers.

Suit styles are fitted—demi-fitted—long and short jacketed but nevertheless every well dressed girl on campus needs a new suit.

Coats are long—short—toppers and the wonderful seven-eighths length. Fabrics are as much in the news as the length of your coat.

Cocktail dresses are sheath — full-skirted—evase skirted. They can be bare or covered up. The new polished cottons have the look and feel of silk. The ever-popular shirtwaist dress still holds its own in any fashion picture.

As you can see by this description—Spring 1962 can be a happy, well-rounded spring fashion-wise and there is most certainly something for everyone at Montaldo's. Whatever your taste or which of the styles you choose as your very own, do come into Montaldo's. We look forward to seeing each of you.

Marriage and the celibacy of the priesthood both have their drawbacks; be wise in time and make your choice of something which is not irremediable.—Chamfort.

The first English colony in America was established on Roanoke Island, North Carolina, in 1585. Virginia Dare, who was born there in 1587, was the first child of English parentage born in America.

Here Are New Spring Trends:

Throughout the spring fashion story, the three "fffs" are constantly being repeated: FIT — FLARE—FEMININITY. The theme is repeated over and over again in every dress, suit and coat collection in town. It is stated again and again in casuals, sportswear, loungewear, lingerie and even sleepwear.

Fashion designers, here and abroad, are giving a new feeling of individuality to the new expressions in all types of ready-to-wear.

New silhouettes are definite . . . there's shape and there's form—and there's nothing ahead that looks faddish or "way out."

The mood of the season is one that reveals a sensitivity to fine fabrics, textures and gentled colors.

Listed here, are some of the themes that will show up on the fashions you see and select for spring, for Easter and into summer wear.

LOOK FOR THESE NEW DETAILS IN NEW APPAREL:

Lots of ruffles; they ripple and flutter in jabots, sleeve edgings and just about evrywhere . . . a new diagonal line in dresses is interpreted in wrap skirts, off center closings and similar detail . . . lots of skirt interest, in important tunics and in the general easing of skirts.

Dozen and one variations of sleeve treatments—from the slender look of the totally sleeveless dress or topping—to narrower, set-in sleeves to a new sleeve drape that is deep and bias.

Look for the tiny flyaway jacket —fitted in front and flared fullness at the back . . . choose this as an important addendum to your team of classics. You'll also find them topping many new costumes.

Rainwear To Resist Wet, Soil

Raincoats will appear this spring in all the newest and brightest shades, but lighter colors—even white—will be favored for both men and women. Partly responsible for this latter trend is a new fabric finish, "Scotchgard" rain and stain repeller. This is the first durable water repellent that will not wash or dry clean out. Thus, raincoats, treated with "Scotchgard" rain and stain repeller, eliminate re-waterproofing expenses.

More good news about this rain and stain repeller, if prompt attention is given to oily liquids dropped on fabrics, the stain may be removed easily with a tissue, cloth or sponge. Do not rub but gently blot and the stain will disappear like magic. When stains cannot be removed immediately, they may be washed away later or spot cleaned with any household solvent without leaving a ring.

Treated rainwear will be more stylish than ever before. Cotton poplin, a durable ribbed fabric, has long been a favorite in the classically tailored trench coat. This style usually characterized by raglan sleeves, a double-breasted front, and wide cinched-in belt, will continue to be a leading design for men and women.

Destined to be a close second in popularity with the male population is a single-breasted cotton twill coat, worn unbelted and cut with the narrow Continental look. Shorter lengths also are seen in men's rainwear.

Men's Fashions Stress Blue Look

Men's sportswear for spring 1962 offers a tremendous variety of styles and themes from which the male at leisure can select his casual clothes.

According to the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear, color sets the pace in sportswear. Blue, for instance, comes on strong in navy blazers. Combinations of blue and white also show up frequently in such varied items as madras sport jackets, walk shorts and, of course, is the most wanted combination in seersuckers and cords. Frosted versions of last year's hot colors introduce those vibrant shades modified by the addition of grays and whites in the blends.

Nautical Look

Other muted pale shades include tints of the beige and sage families. The soft familiar camel shades make a strong comeback in jackets, sweaters and car coats. Melon tones are popular with the young set and—probably more important than ever, white used either as an accent color or as the prime hue in many outfits fits into the very salty "Nautical Look" like a marlin spike in a pin rail.

With most of America afloat and the rest of it mooching rides, the "Nautical Look" is a natural for Sunday sailors. The new "Nautical Look" takes its style cue from actual sailing gear and embodies the features needed by crewmen in fair weather and foul.

Signal Flag Shirts

Of course, stemming from last year's very well accepted "signal-flag shirts" that incorporate the varicolored blocks and stripes of the International Cowe flags, there are updated versions in slicker-type jackets, sport shirts, swim trunks and cabana coats.

The sea-going outfits also include sailing denim, white ducks and hooded pullovers with deep pockets that are flapped to prevent spilling out their contents when crawling about the deck or climbing aloft.

In tailored sportswear, the nautical theme shows to good advantage in double-breasted blue blazers and washwear white slacks that can be worn without worry as to cleaning problems.

Aside from the salty influence, spring casual wear keys many of its models to other active sports. Golf, tennis, camping, motoring and other warm weather activities have all contributed some of the inherent style details of their particular garments, too.

Jackets

Laminated jackets, created by the bonding of polyurethane foam backings to various shell fabrics, look as though they will repeat their popularity of last fall. Ideally suited for spring wear, the laminates offer maximum warmth with a minimum of weight. Worn on chilly mornings and evenings, they present little encumbrance during the warm hours of the day.

For summer there are shirt-jackets and shorty shirts, both meant to be worn outboard. Many of these are styled with Continental collars which are experiencing a well-deserved resurgence of popularity.

Polyester and worsted blends of tropical weight lead the field in sports jackets. However, there are a multitude of other fabrics in sport coats and they include wash and wears, linen-types and lightweight tweeds and shetlands. For the most part, the three-button models rule the roost but there are novelty cardigans and other off-beat treatments as well.

And don't overlook the handsome spring sweaters, the many, many comfortable, good looking knit shirts and the "rugged "work shirt" look in top grade casuals.

Formals Can Be Colorful

Formalwear for spring 1962 embodies both the plain and the fancy. Naturally, the first choice for warm weather evening wear is the classic white dinner jacket worn with black tropic-weight dress trousers.

However, equally correct are the soft blues, both the bold and subdued reds, and the other solid shades that mark modern summer dinner jackets. Many are made in washwear constructions, too.

Warm weather formal wear flaunts some fancy innovations, including dinner jackets in patterned madras, batik prints and opulent colored silks and silk finished fabrics. And many a good time will be all the happier this summer because of the air-conditioned comfort of new tropic weight formalwear.

New Spring Selection in Dacron Blends

Nautical Look In Sportswear

Fashions in men's sportswear for 1962 favor the blues. That old Blue Monday has been pre-empted by Blue Holidays and Blue Weekends. For cheerful, zestful blue shades are everywhere to be seen, from navy blue in blazers through every tone of blue in sports shirts, shorts, jackets and slacks.

The new salty look in sportswear is due to the fact that America has gone nautical in its leisuretime interests. The Sunday sailor has influenced the style picture on land as well as afloat.

Signal flag shirts carry out the theme, in blocks and stripes and international code motifs. They're to be seen this year in slicker-type jackets, swim trunks, cabana coats and sport shirts designed for wear with sailing denims and white ducks.

Tailored sportswear reflects the salty influence, too, in the new double-breasted blue blazers and washwear slacks.

Complementing the blue tones are muted beige shades, sage and camel tones, melon hues and plenty of white.

Jackets in laminated fabrics are more popular than ever, because of their immense practicality in being lightweight, warm and weatherproof. Foam rubber backings laminated on jersey fabrics introduced the trend, and now many other fabrics shells are being used in addition to jersey.

The new springtime sports jackets, in either two or three-button models, show signs of the continuing British look influence with hacking pockets, slightly accented waistline, side and center vents and many of the checks, stripes and plaids considered to be "old-school." Worsted and polyester blends are found in profusion, together with many other fabrics including washwears, lightweight tweeds and linen types.

Knitted sports shirts are high on the fashion list this season, and their popularity is due as much to their practicality as it is to their good looks. The so-called jacket shirts are moving into top position, too, especially those designed for wear with walk shorts, slacks and swim trunks.

Sweaters are ever present, and they range in everything from jumbo knits to soft shetlands and cashmeres, some so fine and light in weight they can be worn with comfort in mid-summer. High style honors go this season to the new cardigans.

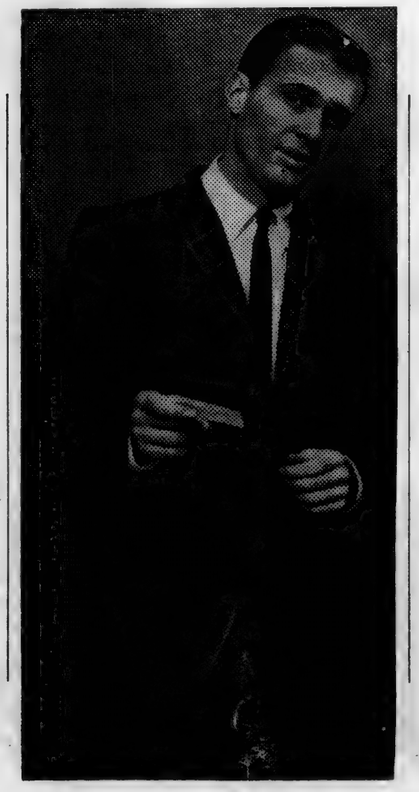
Black & Blue

Black-black—deep, ebony satanic blacks, that leave no room for equivocation, have planted themselves firmly in the acceptance and demand category in men's clothing for spring. Black proves to be an interesting teammate for blue, and many a solid citizen will be starting his round of business calls with a suit of each in this spring's well-dressed assortment.

Like blue, the serviceability of black is an important factor.

CREASE THAT NEVER CEASES

A Crease That Never Ceases is the news from approximately 100 manufacturers of men's suits and slacks. The permanent crease in pure wool, rather than disappearing in the rain as previously, becomes even sharper with exposure to moisture. The lasting crease is a feature in the wool flannel slacks at the left, and in the pure worsted model at right. Sport jacket at left is a tone-on-tone pure wool plaid in a new crepe weave; coat at right is pure worsted wool in a check.



SUIT AND SPORTCOAT FOR A SMART SPRING!—The check overplaid jacket is a three-button American model with notched lapels, flap pockets and center vent. The neat suit is a conventional two-button model with center vent, straight flap pockets and "clover-leaf" lapel. Both are blends using Eastman Kodel polyester with wool or worsted. The fabric defies wrinkles, stays fresh and neat all day long.

Shirts Go For Color

For years men's fashion stylists have been predicting that striped and colored business shirts would make a strong comeback. This spring, according to those in the know, they are right.

It now appears that the average man has lost his fear of fancy dress shirts and as a result many more interesting and good looking spring outfits will be seen.

Most popular of the colored shirts are the blues followed by grays, off-white, tans and soft olive tones. Pink, the style favorite of several years ago, returns in deeper versions than the old pastels. And the striped fabrics include both narrow and broad types and these are often used together as cluster stripes.

Collar Styles

Collar styles show up in the very popular modified spreads, snap-tabs, button-downs, short points and both square and rounded pinned models.

The fabrics include end-and-end madrases, broadcloth, oxfords, and featherweight batistes and open weave leno weaves. Look for many more half-sleeve styles for warm weather wear.

Sports shirts, in many instances, assume the nautical note that keys so much of this season's sportswear. Both button-up and popover styles are made with big roomy pockets and other details culled from actual sailing garments.

A very interesting new note in casual shirts due to get a good deal of masculine approval, is the "work shirt" influence. Among the more obvious details of the "work shirt" styles are big contrasting stitches such as red stitching on blue, and white stitching on gray.

However, it is the rugged denim and chambray fabrics, the uncluttered workmanlike collars and, of course, the big work shirt-type pockets that will offer practical as well as visual value to these rugged shirts for carefree hours.

Spring Suits Have The 'Tall Look'

Suit models for spring and summer are characterized in general by "The Tall Look," reports the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear.

The flattering trend is evidenced in all basic models, including the Trans-American, Ambassador and the perennial favorite, the American Natural. Fine points in tailoring and in fabric patterning are responsible for the "Tall Look"—spelled out by narrow lapels, unpadded shoulders and the use of vertical effect weaves.

Two-button jackets are enjoying a revival, competing this season with the standard three-button variety.. It's all due, says men's wear authorities, to the preference shown for this style by President Kennedy.

The new slim look is further enhanced by the use of stripes in all their profusion — pin stripes, pencil, cluster and chalk.

Equally new and important is the big trend to blue. It's definitely a blue year, for every indigo hue abounds, from navy through sky. There are combinations of blue with blue and of blue with white. While the new note is the blue note, olives and grays continue to hold high favor and are much to be seen.

In answer to a growing demand, men's shops are displaying a whole new line of "midweight" or "interim weight" suits for those in-between days that are too warm for winter weights and too chilly for lightweight varieties. Making them more practical than ever, the use of man-made fibers in the midweight fabrics has produced greater than ever strength and shape

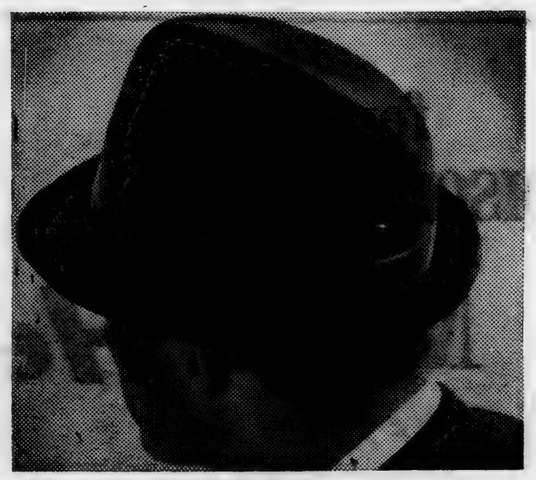
Spring Means Short Sleeves

The shirt story for spring spells comfort. Everyone wants to enjoy the comfort of short sleeves during the hot months ahead—and you'll probably be among the discoverers of new-found comforts.

The interesting innovation in these short sleeve summer shirts is that they now come in a host of fashion-smart collar styles that eliminate that just-off-the-hammock look well dressed men have associated with the short-sleeved sport-shirt-dress-shirt combinations of yesteryear.

Shirt and sport shirt fabrics have gone all out wash and wear. The elite are blended of Dacron and Cotton, come in versions of batiste fabrics, even some open weaves.

Innovation in cotton summer shirts is the non-resin wash and wear finish. It is soft to the hand—feels just like pure cotton; it keeps its wash and wear qualities for the life of the shirt; and it is cooler because there are no resin scales to clog the pores.



Spring Hats Are In Felts, Straws

For early spring the featherweight felt hat offers comfort plus fashion. They make great summertime travel companions, too. Among the most poupular shades are gray, blue-grays, olives and browns. Shapes range from small to not so small; shape them to suit your fancy.

Summer straws place more emphasis on the light natural shades than in the recent past and these lighter colors offer a welcome alternate to the midtone and darks.

Newest kick in straws are soft "shape it yourself" braids and weaves. There are sophisticated sennit sailors for town wear and wild "way out" styles for country and beach wear. Look for bright shades, multi-colored bodies and even blacks in the casuals.

Raincoats Are Short & Long

Spring raincoats vary from very short imaginatively detailed models inspired by European styles to the longer (but still short in relation to old style) American types in classic balmacaans and, of course, split raglans.

LET IT RAIN! Wearing this smart raincoat, you're groomed for any gray day. The fabric is a blend of cotton and rayon that's exceptionally lightweight, yet dependably water-repellent. In the new shorter length.

Look for new dressy double-breasted versions, sleek fly-fronted town coats and a resurgence of medium-shade irridescents to supplement the darks and the standard sand, putty and tan tones.

Fellows who go for the sporty touch will find a good assortment of plaids, checks and madras-like effects. Many are made in wash-wear constructions and many are equipped with "tracks" that permit the addition of zip-in liners for chilly weather. If it is something different you are seeking, look for it in terms of performance. The new coats will keep you dry, comfortable and well-dressed!

Spring topcoats and raincoats are marked by development of existing trends rather than by the introduction of new styles. For instance, the popularity of the split-raglan shoulder construction in both types of garments has reached unprecedented heights of acceptance.

More specifically, in topcoats the trend to lighter (suiting weight) fabrics has really taken hold for the vernal season. To sleek sophisticated citybred sharkskins add new featherweight tweeds many of which have been fortified with man-made fibers for durability and wrinkle-resistance.

Naval Armory Won't Collapse, Hollowell Says

Cracked Beams Forced Dance To Be Moved

The Naval Armory, which has three cracked beams among its rafters, is "not in any danger of falling in", Commander F. W. Hollowell, executive officer of the NROTC here, said Wednesday.

Cmdr. Hollowell said the building, which is owned and maintained by the University, has been thoroughly inspected by the engineers of the Buildings and Grounds department and will remain in use while repairs are underway. The commander said he did not know what caused the beams to crack.

The damage, which resulted in the freshman dance being moved from the Armory to Graham Memorial last Friday, was discovered by a janitor Friday morning. Cmdr. Hollowell's attention was called to the cracked beams and he reported them to the Buildings and Grounds department, which is responsible for the maintenance of University property.

The Buildings and Grounds representatives who inspected the matter said that the dance could not be held there until the danger was estimated, Hollowell said. Scaffolding was erected and repairs were begun Saturday morning.

Stephen Spender Speaks March 7

Stephen Spender, distinguished poet, critic and present editor of the English magazine "Encounter," will speak at UNC Wednesday, March 7, at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

His visit is under the joint sponsorship of the UNC English Club and Graham Memorial Student Union.

London-born, he served during World War II in the Auxiliary Fire Service and later in the foreign office. His first book of literary significance was "Poems" published in 1933 and highly praised for its lyrical temper.

Women's Orientation Interviews Slated

Interviews for the position of Women's Coordinator of orientation will be held Thursday and Friday, Orientation Chairman Bob Madry announced yesterday. Interviews will be held from 2-5 p.m. each day in Roland Parker III in Graham Memorial.

Interested coeds may sign up for interviews at the information desk in GM. Application forms may be picked up at that time.

UN Summer Internships Announced

Professor Frederic N. Cleveland, chairman of the Political Science Department, Monday announced the establishment of a number of summer internships with the United Nations. "This program is unique with UN. No other American university has such an arrangement with the United Nations," Dr. Cleveland said.

There are four internships available, at least one of which is to be filled by a graduate student. Applications will be accepted from any other student who will have completed his junior year by the end of this academic year but who will not have finished his senior year.

The internships will be financed by a grant from the Institute for International Order, located in New York, will carry a stipend of $500 to cover the travel and living expenses of each student while in New York.

July And August

The interns will be at the headquarters of the UN through the months of July and August. They will be assigned duties with the Technical Assistance Board and the Special Fund Secretariat.

Applicants are not restricted to any one major. Selection will be made on the basis of ability, preparation and interest in the field of international affairs. The selection committee will consist of Professors Cleveland, Keener Frazer and Andrew Scott.

'The Deadly Game' To Be Presented

By JEANIE BROWN

"This is only a game, isn't it? Or is it?" Howard Trapp asks himself, in the Petite Dramatique production, The Deadly Game.

Adapted from Frederich Duerrenmatt's novella "Traps", this play inquires into Duerrenmatt's ideas concerning the universality of justice and the degree to which it can be administered. This probing, courtroom suspense drama will be presented Saturday and Sunday at 8 p.m., in Gerrard Hall. Admission is free.

Unfortunate Experience

Howard Trapp, an American salesman, has the unfortunate experience of having car trouble, an evening of lodging at the home high in the Swiss Alps. He seeks of the retired judge of the municipality of Geneva, Emile Carpeau. This cheerful old man invites Trapp to enjoy a festive evening of wine and food, and then introduces him to several old colleagues of the criminal courts.

The old men seem harmless enough, Trapp thinks, and this courtroom game they seem so excited about sounds like an intellectual game but it might be rude not to enjoy their old-age sports, especially since they seem so excited about my qualifications as a member of this game—as the defendant.

Personal Questions

The game is more fun than anticipates, even with the rigid rules the old men impose on the game: no drinking during the questioning, pledging to follow through to the end of the game for "otherwise it really wouldn't amount to anything." Everyone really throws themselves into this game. Then why, suddenly, are the questions getting more serious? Why is the old prosecutor becoming too personal?

THE DEADLY GAME is directed by Wesley Van Tassel. The cast includes Sig Johnson as Howard Trapp, Robert Bloodworth as Goustave Kummer, Paul Gold as Pierre, Larry Walz as Joseph Emile Carpear, Larry McMullen as Pillet, Ed Eilber as Bernard Laroque, and Ginger Carnduff as Helen Trapp.

Symposium Picks Leaders Of April Panel Discussions

Richard Harkness and Dr. Roger Hazelton will head panel discussions on "Contemporary Revolutions in Mass Communications" and "Contemporary Revolutions in Religion" for the coming Carolina Symposium the afternoon of Tuesday, April 5.

Harkness, nationally known as an NBC news commentator, has had a long career in journalism and news analysis. His first journalism job was a United Press staff job in Kansas City in 1928. After several other UP jobs, he moved to Washington in 1934. In 1937 he became a member of the Philadelphia Enquirer bureau.

"Freedom From Fear"

Harkness is personally responsible for the addition of a phrase to the English language. A personal friend of President Roosevelt, he coined the expression "freedom from fear" while talking in Roosevelt's Hyde Park study.

In 1943, NBC added Harkness to its staff as a radio commentator. He began his career on television in 1947 with the first network news telecast from Washington, "Story of the Week."

A personal and behind-the-scenes approach is Harkness' contribution to news commentary work. He is a personal friend of many of the men on whom he reports. His experience with presidential campaigns and international conferences has further qualified him to interpret news in depth.

Harkness is married and lives in Georgetown with his wife and their three sons, one of whom, Peter, is now a member of this year's Freshman Class.

ROGER HAZELTON

Well Known Theologian

Dr. Hazelton has travelled widely in his duties as a collegiate theologian. His stays in Holland, Switzerland, Germany, and France have involved a scholarship as a Fulbright Research Professor at the University of Paris and a grant for study at the German Nietzsche-Archiv. He has been a delegate to many international church councils.

Currently Dean of the Oberlin College Graduate School of Theology, Dr. Hazelton has also held administrative positions at Pomona College, Claremont Graduate School, Olivet College, Colorado College, and Andover Newton Theological School. In addition to his regular duties, Dr. Hazelton has been a guest lecturer and professor at many American colleges and universities.

Degrees

Dr. Hazelton did undergraduate work at Amherst, obtained a master of arts degree from the University of Chicago, and was granted his Ph. D. by Yale University. He has since been awarded two honorary doctor of divinity degrees.

Dr. Hazelton is the author of six books and many articles and a member of several religious councils and committees, including the American Theological Society and the National Council of Churches.

Interests Conflict Is Cause

By JOE HODGES

The job of dorm manager is to be abolished next year and the duties of that position assigned to resident advisers, according to Assistant Dean of Student Affairs William B. Long. The laundry and dry cleaning collections now handled by the dorm managers will be assigned to other students as self-help jobs.

This action will be taken because of the possible conflict of interests involved in enforcing dorm regulations and in maintaining laundry and dry-cleaning patronage.

Little Change In Number

The over-all number of students serving in advisory capacities will not diminish much however because of the two new dorms and the placing of advisers in Parker and Teague.

Applications for the approximately 50 advisory positions are now being received and interested persons should go to 206 South Building and get applications for interviews. The interviews will begin March 15 and appointments will be announced April 11.

New Positions

According to Dean Long, two new positions have been created for Ehringhaus and Craig Dormitories, the two new men's dorms now nearing completion. Each of these 732-man dorms will have a Housemaster and eight to twelve Resident Advisers.

The Housemasters positions are only open to married post-graduate students without children. Serving in an administrative capacity with the Housemasters will be two Head Resident Advisers. This position is open to post-graduate students and will pay $1,250 per year. The other Resident Advisers may be seniors or post graduate students and will receive $500 per year.

Soviet Students May Visit UNC This Month

Twelve Russian men graduate students and an interpreter will arrive in Chapel Hill March 21 for a week-long visit to the University and neighboring areas, according to a tentative itinerary released by YWCA campus staffer Anne Queen yesterday.

The students, some of whom can speak English, will live in private homes and fraternity houses. They will meet with small groups of students, representatives of student government and faculty members, and may sit in on some classes. James Roberts, UNC graduate students in Political Science, will serve as an interpreter.

In addition, brief visits to industries in Durham are planned and the group may spend part of one day at State College in Raleigh.

Their fields of study include Journalism, History, Economics, Education, Art, Architecture and Engineering.

Carolina Forum

March 27, the day before they leave the University for Washington, the Carolina Forum will sponsor an open meeting with them in Carroll Hall.

The Carolina-bound students are part of a group of 24 who will arrive in New York City March 3 for a month stay in the United States. The other twelve will visit the areas of Columbus, Ohio; Minneapolis, Minn.; and the University of California at Berkeley.

The group will spend March 3-7 touring the UN and other places in New York City before splitting up.

Prior Stops

The UNC delegation will spend a week at Pennsylvania State University and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore before arriving in Chapel Hill.

The two groups of students will meet in Washington March 28, returning to New York City March 31 to leave for Russia.

The trip is being arranged by the Council on Student Travel in New York City. It is composed of such groups as the National Student YM-YWCA and the Committee on Friendly Relations among Foreign Students.

Rooms Being Reserved For Summer, Fall

Men's rooms for the summer and fall sessions are now being reserved, according to James E. Wadsworth, director of housing for the University.

April 2 is the deadline for room reservation deposits. At that time rooms not already reserved by their present occupants will be available for reservation.

For this summer double rooms will be available in Conner (for graduate men), Mangum, Winston and Teague for $20. Single rooms will be available in Everett, Graham, and Lewis for $30. Married couples will be in Joyner for $40. The entire deposit must be made by April 2.

The Fall reservation fee of $10 must be paid by April 2 and the other $75.75 paid by July 1 at the Housing Office in 3 South Building.

Cheerleader Bill Before Legislature

Bills to provide for the selection of a head cheerleader and to provide for a uniformity of procedure in all Men's and Women's Council cases head the agenda of the Student Legislature tonight. The group meets at 7:30 in New East.

A resolution for criticism and improvement of the honor system will also come to the floor, according to Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dwight Wheless.

House Optimistic About UNC

By Bill McAllister

In the midst of pessimism about current developments in the University, retiring Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House remains highly optimistic about its future.

"Carolina," says the man who has seen the University grow for more than forty years, "has had defeats before and we will have them again, but we will grow."

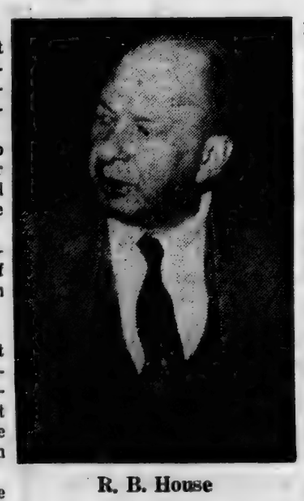
"And defeats," such as the ill-fated bond issue—"a chance of history," he calls it — "may, in time, turn into victories."

Danger Of Complacency

Looking back on the years that he has been associated with Carolina as a teacher and administrator, Chancellor House warns that "the greatest danger facing the University today is the stagnation that comes with complacency."

Chancellor House is not unaware of the dangers that beset the University. When he became Dean of Administration in 1934, Carolina was in the depth of one of the most serious threats to its existence, the Great Depression. "It looked like we were whipped," he recalls, "but we came out of it stronger than before."

He remembers the 23 years that he served as chancellor of the University under the presidency of Frank P. Graham as filled with "worry . . . all the time . . . night and day."



R. B. House

Returned As Administrator

After he graduated from Carolina, he had planned to return here to teach after graduate work at Harvard, but the first World War changed that. He did come back to Chapel Hill in 1924 but as an administrator, not a teacher. He was secretary to the president of the university and later chancellor from 1934 to 1957.

After he stepped down as chancellor, he taught courses in English and classics for five more years. "It took me 65 years to get a professorship," he told a visitor after his retirement as a teacher was announced in January.

His retirement, however, from the classroom will not be complete. He will teach his popular Greek literature course during the evening college next fall.

Many physical changes have come to the campus that House first saw almost a half century ago, but much has remained the same.

No Student Change

Have students changed? "No," says Chancellor House, "Show me any type of student on the campus today, and I can recall the same type when I was a freshman."

"Most students are idealists and hero worshippers, and that's as it should be."

"I don't think education has changed," he continued. "It is too deep to respond to all types of changes. About the only thing that changes in education is science."

House says the fundamentals of education are "youth, age, and resources . . . all combined in a delightful atmosphere."

Students today, he contends, are not grade-conscious "in the right way." He says a good grade should not only signify the student has "mastered the work, but that he can also be expected to do a good job in the future."

House made Phi Beta Kappa while at Carolina and says simply that he owes it to "working harder than the average student." He contends that "it takes more character than brains" to be successful in college.

Failures? "They don't study. That's the reason."

"Degree Is Beginning"

"A college degree is not the final achievement. It is just the beginning. The real test of an education is not what you know when you graduate, but how much you're willing to learn the day after you graduate."

"Student life is hard, but not a grind. There is a deep joy in getting into a subject and watching your mind grow."

His plans after retiring? None other than teaching at night school. "I don't want to plan ahead, House says. "I like an element of newness."

His friends will tell you, though, there are some things that won't change about Robert Burton House.

Firmly fixed within him are certain traits that have made him Carolina's "elder statesman." His calm, resolute voice, the darkened pipe that he puffs constantly, the harmonica that has entertained thousands on the campus and across North Carolina, a deep and strong religious conviction, are—and always will be—a part of him.

Dorm Vote

The University Party, which probably set some sort of record last week by bleating in a slate of candidates in a space of minutes, is currently continuing its pitch to win some support in dormitories.

The question is, how much support will the UP drain off from the SP in the dorms? The answer, until a short time ago, looked simple enough: virtually none. But, after considerable haggling by factions within—or on the fringes of—the Student Party, some leaders in dormitory voting areas are beginning to feel that they can't buck the Student Party strong-men either, although they won't give up until the SP nominating convention convenes and picks its slate.

After this is done, if the men who control the dormitory vote aren't swayed back into the SP fold, the UP's presidential candidate Inman Allen might well start picking up some support, with the help of Bill Criswell, candidate for treasurer.

Criswell has already made strong appeals to the dormitories; his plan to give each dorm a voice in the UP convention — although the plan proved highly ineffective in picking candidates — had some effect in winning some dorm sympathy.

But the big question has been, and remains which party, or which slate, will give the dormitory voters some promising answers to their questions.

In short, which party and its candidates will offer some practical programs to benefit dorms?

It will be interesting to see which party will come up with some.

If either does.

UN Dues

Nobody had expected that Russia would pay the U. N. assessments duly levied against her for operations in the Congo and in the Gaza Strip. She has not done so. This was one important reason why the General Assembly authorized a $200 million bond issue to meet the existing deficit of nearly $114 million at the end of 1961 and the expected deficit of 1962.

It was thought, however, that the Russians would continue their custom of contributing their share to the regular U. N. budget for ordinary running expenses. This it now seems they are going to do. Ambassador Zorin yesterday announced that the Soviet failure to pay the $2.7 million due Jan. 31 on the regular budget was "technical," not "political." He gave assurance that the sum would be forthcoming.

The whole question of the Soviet Union's relationship to the U. N. during the two sessions of the sixteenth Assembly has involved the kind of U. N. we are going to have. Even before Dag Hammarskjold's death last September, the Russians were trying to dilute the powers of the Secretariat. They lost when they were compelled to accept Acting Secretary General U Thant, who is no one's stooge. They may still hope to turn the U. N. into a mere debating society or something less than that.

However, they are not getting very far; and their belated contribution to U. N.'s normal budget, when and if it arrives, will be a small indication that they are not yet ready to walk out of the U. N. altogether even if they cannot force it into their own parliamentary image.

Coward, Hell

On Feb. 25, frail, aging Lord Bertrand Russell braved icy winds at the foot of Nelson Monument in Trafalgar Square in London to shout defiance at a world seemingly bent on destroying itself.

The 89-year-old Nobel prize winner picked one of the coldest days of the winter to deliver a speech, which, for the most part was heeded as much by the icy wind as the world.

Lord Russell, for this attack on the insanity of war as well as a multitude of others, both written and oral, has won little more than contempt from all but a dedicated few who follow him. He has been variously referred to as "intellectual fool," "a completely misguided idealist," and as a "senile old man."

But, most disgusting of all the epithets hurled at Lord Russell is "coward."

Coward? An 89-year-old veteran of countless battles against the inhumanity, ignorance and brutality that he finds so easily the world, a coward?

Impractical, perhaps; idealistic, certainly. But Lord Russell, to those who refuse to see war as inevitable, is a silver-haired old eagle, with more courage at nearly ninety than any one of millions of "heroic" young "fighters."

Disagree with him if necessary.

But don't call him a coward.

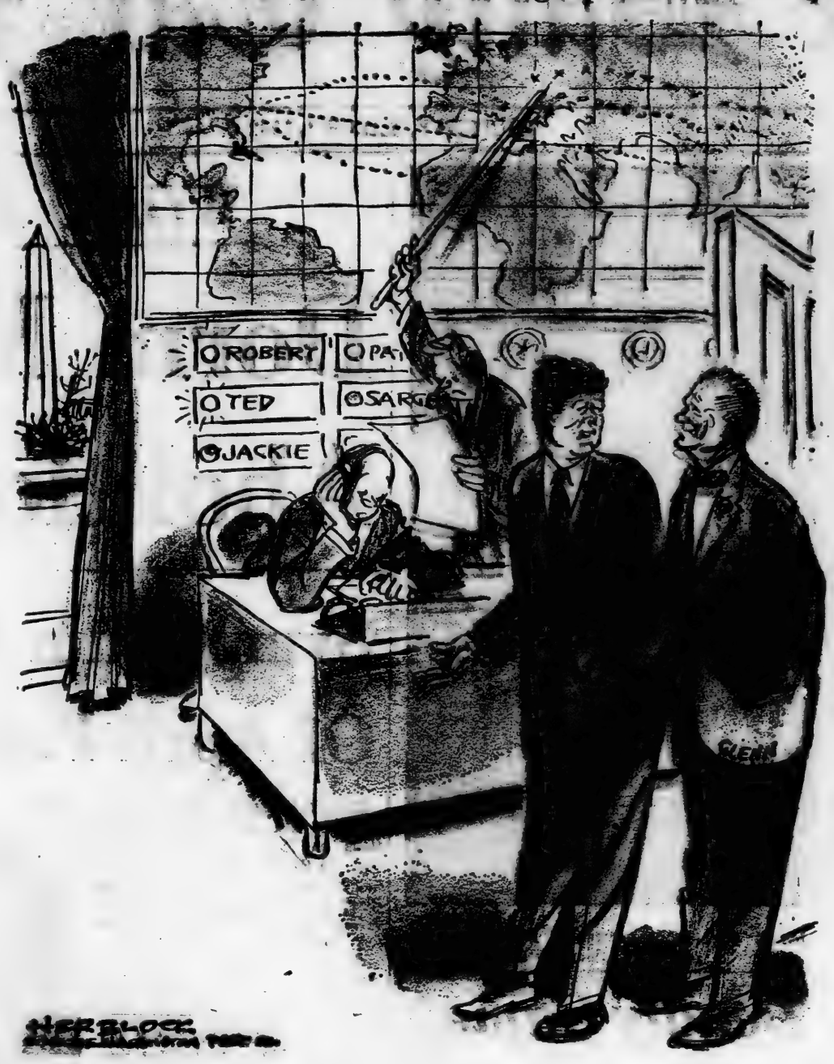
"And This Is Our Own Little Tracking Operations Room"



How Do The Russians Feel

Two brothers in Moscow, ages eighteen and nineteen, sit drinking in a public restaurant on Gorki Street. The younger, Gregori, has just returned from America; he gazes thoughtfully at Mikhail.

'Weird people, those Americans," he mutters. "You're always telling me to sympathize with the capitalist mind —"

"Not sympathize, empathize," Mikhail breaks in. "It's a matter of learning how the capitalist mind sees things. I don't mean you should see things the same way."

"Well, I was surprised to find that Nehru is just as unpopular there as here. The Americans think that if he isn't for them he must be for us. I wish I could be sure of that."

'Don't we all!" Mikhail concurs.

"I'd hoped to see your friend Roger Somerset, but no such luck. But I've read those letters of his, and they've almost convinced me the capitalists are sincere."

"Have you ever suspected they AREN'T?" Mikhail asks in surprise.

"Sure I've suspected it! How do you find sincerity in a country that's founded on race prejudice? In the southern States the only way to get elected is to outdo your opponent at hating the Negroes."

"That's how it looks to us," Mikhail says, "but the Americans don't see through it. They call it democracy and they really believe it, even though it acts like a sort of disguised Fascism—"

"Oh, you're the orator today, Meesha!" Gregori rags him.

Mikhail does not smile. "The thing I've spent years trying to drill into you is that we shouldn't see things in terms of heroes and villains. We have to understand our enemies before we can defeat them. Your American capitalist looks over at us and fumes about 'that lunatic Khrushchev rattling the missiles in Germany and trying to blow the world to bits—'"

"And what would he say about the Communist theoretical state?" Gregori interrupts. "None of the people I talked to would get down to real questions like the race riots and the American Nazi Party and the John Birch Society. They kept harassing me about Hungary and Berlin."

"Not for the reason you think, though. They really think we did the Hungarian people a disservice by smashing that counterrevolution in 1956. They don't grasp working-class philosophy—most of them don't even WANT to understand our principles. When I was there last year I asked an old man if he knew anything about Communism, and he said, 'No, but I know it's no good.'"

"Granted, the capitalist mind thrives on ignorance," Gregori says thoughtfully.

"But not consciously. Don't you see the Americans can't see us as a dedicated movement to liberate the workers. All they see in us is a collection of hypocrites, disguising our greed with blather about the proletariat and the end justifying the means. They compare our system to Fascism; we say the same thing about theirs. If each side could realize that the other really meant it, there might be some mutual understanding."

"Do you want to compromise with capitalism?" Gregori asks slyly.

"No," says Mikhail, unruffled. "This is why I think there's some naivete in your outlook, Gregori. With you it's the Roman Catholic theory of either-or. You seem to think that, in trying to understand capitalism, I'm forsaking principle."

"I don't either, you Trotskyite!" Gregori laughs bouncily. "I was just trying to scare you."

"After knowing Roger Somerset, I don't scare easily. I wish you could have met that fellow. You run up against some really amazing arguments."

"Well, have it your way. The only thing I got out of that trip was a chance to practice my English. Sometimes, Meesha, I think you're a gone visionary. Always trying to read the other fellow's mind. I wish I could read Kennedy's—that maniac will set the world on fire yet."

"Sometimes," Mikhail says wearily. "I'm tempted to go neutralist—there, there, Gregori! Don't spill your vodka like that, and choke and sputter at me. It was just an idle thought."

Gregori smiles faintly and says nothing.

By Birch Society

Masi Overlooked

An Open Letter to Mr. Arthur S. Lyon, Coodinator of the North Carolina John Birch Society.

Sir:

Although I read with great interest and patience, I was greatly disappointed by your letter to the Daily Tar Heel. I feel certain that the honored position of a niche on the blacklist of your group, awarded to Jim Clotfelter, should have included myself also.

I do not doubt that Jim deserves the laurels you have bestowed upon him, but may I be so presumptuous as to present a formal application for censorship? For a long while now I too have opposed the antics of frustrated warriors, politicians, theologians, and various other associates of the super-patriotic witch-hunt.

I have opposed, with zeal, Sen. McCarthy, Robert Welch, and all three Fulton Lewis's. I have supported, and continue to support, what you call "Government giveaways." Giveaways such as a decent medical program for the aged and infirm, financial support of the United Nations, the one organization which brings the entire world to the conference table, and social legislation attuned to the problems of 1962, a belief which sees the nineteenth century as History not current events.

In the past I have often expressed an admiration for Art, and a desire to see the creative and intellectual endeavors of Man held in greater esteem than those aimed to gain the quick dollar.

While I realize that you must have an extensive waiting list of those seeking disfavor, I do hope you will give this humble note your consideration.

Thank You
JOE MASI

Celibates Neglected?

To the Editor:

A couple of visitors to our campus Sunday afternoon were disgusted to see two Carolina students displaying their amour for each other on Raleigh Street. At the time I tended to defend the students' behavior, simply because they were students. But on second thought, I see no sense in pretending that such displays are not very embarrassing to me as a passer-by. Therefore, I mount my dusty soapbox and raise my campaign banner: "Make the sidewalks safe for celibates!"

Certainly a lone nature-lover strolling through the arboretum these warm afternoons is prepared to ignore the lovebirds he encounters, and a coed racing to the dorm at closing hour knows she must push her way through the small mob clustering at the door (hoping not to separate a good-nighting couple in the process). But affection displayed in inappropriate public places not only makes me uncomfortable, it also lowers my estimation of the offending couple. True affection between two persons allows room—in fact, creates room—for thoughtfulness for others.

JANE FOLGER

Communist Speaker

Dear Sirs:

As you know, Communism is being widely discussed in this country, but in most cases WITHOUT the Communists. This is not only unfair because Communists are most often the targets of attack at such discussions. It is un-American in tradition. Also it is not due process. It is like holding a trial without the defendant being present or having a hearing.

Many speakers on this topic are either professional anti-Communists or ill-informed persons whose material is based on untrue, prejudiced or outright reactionary sources. Such speakers create the atmosphere of the witchhunt and help ultra-Right fascist elements to the detriment of peace and social progress.

Communism is a philosophy and movement which is more than one hundred years old and has many millions of adherents throughout the world. The Communist Party, U.S.A. is in existence 43 years and it has according to objective historians made valuable contributions in the struggles of labor, of the Negro people and for the case of peace, democracy and social progress generally. Communists have made heavy sacrifices in the course of these struggles. They ought to be given a fair hearing.

We wish to inform you that we have set up a Lecture Bureau to make speakers available who can speak with knowledge and authority on Communism.

They will give a truthful view of the Communists on such topics as Communism, Marxism, the McCarran Act, the policies of the ultra-Right, the vital issues of peace, democracy, freedom of speech, socialism and other current topics. Such speakers are available for lectures, symposia, and debates.

It is entirely legal to have Communist speakers, as the Attorney General recently stated.

Fees for speakers is not a main consideration. We ask organizations able to do so to cover fare and expenses. May we hear from you?

LECTURE BUREAU,
COMMUNIST PARTY, U.S.A.

Birch? Why Not . . . ?

To the Editor:

In response to a statement of opinion concerning facts alleged to support a particular political view we can take at least three courses: accept the statement without a critical evaluation of those facts upon which it is supposed to be based, completely reject the opinion without a critical evaluation of those facts, or we can evaluate the facts and attempt to reach a decision on the credibility of that statement of opinion on the basis of our appraisal of its grounds. No scholar would advocate or consciously practice the first two modes of response. The true scholar would follow the third methodological pattern, ever conscious of the pitfalls of bias, and attempt to reach as sound a decision as is possible on the basis of the facts.

Those of us "who believe in the sanctity of the individual and who try to follow the methodology of the true scholar, have been challenged in a Daily Tar Heel published letter by Mr. Arthur Lyon, a coordinator of the John Birch Society, to evaluate the facts by learning what the facts are. Mr. Lyon represents a point of view which has received much attention in the press all over the United States. But I venture to say that few of us know what the views of the John Birch Society really are, and much less do we know of the facts alleged to support them. We can react to what we DO about the Society by blindly accepting its views or by blindly rejecting them. Many of the charges made by the Society are so serious that it would be absolute folly to ignore them without a careful evaluation of their truth. I cannot, in good conscience, refuse to carefully consider the views of the John Birch Society. But, I for one need to know a lot about them. Therefore, I have written Mr. Lyon expressing my interest, and I urge any other interested parties to do the same. Mr. Lyon's address is: 2503 Darden Street, High Point, N. C. If there are any other parties on campus who feel the way I do, please contact me also.

Right Letter, Wrong Names

To the Editor:

We, the undersigned, feel that the Student Party is making a political error by allowing commitments to one party member prevent serious consideration of another experienced, dynamic candidate for president of the student body who has come into the foreground.

Presidential Assistant Dwight Wheless was a shoo-in for the SP nomination until Honor Council member Mike Lawler announced his candidacy recently.

Considering that the function of a political party is, in part, to serve the students by advancing the most capable candidates available to represent the party's view, it is unwise to be unreceptive to Lawler.

We seriously hope that the Student Party will be open enough to realize that party loyalty is not to one candidate, but first and foremost to every student of the University who wants the best candidates available nominated.

Editor's Note: The letter appearing yesterday endorsing Lawler was reported, because of an error, to have been signed by 84 persons. The list of 84 signatures credited to that letter actually were affixed to the one appearing above. Yesterday's letter was signed, as it appeared, by Sandy Hoke and Claire Atkins only.

Open Letter To C. Wilson

To Mr. Clyde Wilson:

Sociologically speaking, your ethnocentrism has caused you to lack empathy in studying political problems thus deeming it impossible for you to comprehend the purpose of Poli. Sci 41.

An open mind should be a prerequisite for this course. By the way, 41 is a prerequisite for all other courses in government so how do you possess such great insight into how an introductory Poli. Sci. course should be taught? You're taking 51 this semester so how did you become such an authority?

The text for this course was both descriptive and thorough. The case book was purposely prejudiced. Carefully chosen cases of this type were used to stimulate seminar discussion and encourage the student to do some thinking outside the class room. No one said the authors of these cases were justified in their beliefs. You were encouraged time and again to do outside research, formulate your own opinions and discuss the cases in light of your findings in the seminar.

Something all the "Clydes" on campus should learn is that one is going to give you all the answers. And no intelligent professor is going to paint a one-sided picture of politics being a bowl of peaches and cream.

I am certainly an advocate of patriotism and genuinely loyal and proud of my country. Your pride, however, seems to be not unlike the optimism of Voltaire's "Candide".

Cease-Fire Seen For Mid-March

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI)—The Algerian rebel government announced here Wednesday it had been given a free hand to conclude peace talks with the French and to proclaim a cease-fire ending the 7½-year-old war in Algeria.

March 15

A cease-fire now appeared likely by about March 15. The announcement followed a tense six-day session of the Rebel National Council (CNRA), or parliament, in the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

In Paris, President Charles de Gaulle's cabinet quickly met in cabinet session to map strategy for the final, probably difficult round of Algerian talks. The French government already had approved a draft cease-fire accord reached in secret talks with rebel negotiators.

At the same time French authorities announced the arrest of more than 60 persons in France in a drive to smash the outlawed Secret Army Organization OAS and other opposition to De Gaulle's cease-fire plans.

Time Bombs

In Algeria, OAS terrorists greeted the Tunis rebel announcement by exploding murderous time bombs in an Oran crowd of Arab women and children.

Officials said at least 19 persons were killed and about 50 wounded in the bombings. One unofficial report placed the death toll as high as 30 as the OAS stepped up a terror campaign to keep Algeria French.

Carolina Meets Gamecocks Tonight In ACC Tourney

By ED DUPREE

The Atlantic Coast Conference's eight basketball teams face a do or die situation today in the first round of the annual tournament. Four of the roundball quintets will not be around for Friday's action.

North Carolina's Tar Heels, 7-7 in the ACC, face South Carolina, also 7-7, but seeded fourth in the league for purposes of uniforms and bench positions. The Gamecock-UNC game is slated for 9:30 in N. C. State's Reynolds Coliseum, the site of eight previous ACC championship tourneys.

The first game of the day pits 2 o'clock. Everett Case's Wolfpack State against Clemson's Tigers at had a close call with Press Maravich's sophomore studded team recently in Raleigh and the fast improving Clemson crew could give the home team a good battle. State is seeded third with a 10-4 record, while Clemson finished the regular season in sixth place at 4-10.

Duke's sixth ranked nationally Blue Devils try for their third win o fthe season over Maryland (3-11) in the 4 o'clock contest. Vic Bubas's high-flying Dukes finished the season with an 11-3 mark and an overall 19-4 record to rank with the nation's best.

Deacs Meet UVA

At 7:30 defending champion Wake Forest begins defense of its title with Len Chappell leading the way. The Deacs are top seeded with a 12-2 record and face last place Virginia, which won only two games. Wake's All-American candidate Len Chappell is usually at his best against the Cavaliers. At Winston-Salem he rang up 50 points as the Deacons walked over the Virginians.

And in the day's finale, coach Dean Smith takes his UNC Tar Heels onto the court to meet South Carolina for the third time this year. At Chapel Hill, the Tar Heels won 83-71, but a subsequent trip to Charlotte resulted in a 97-82 loss.

Bob Stevens' Roosters boast the league's third leading scorer in Art Whisnant, an Icard, N. C., native, who holds a 21.6 average. USC fans, despite Whisnant's scoring, have a well-balanced attack to crow about. Bill Cronin is averaging 12.6, Bobby Robinson, 11.5, Scotti Ward, 11-1, and Ronnie Collins, 11.

Smith has four men in double figures and the tallest man on the floor to throw at the Gamecocks. Larry Brown paces the scoring with a 16.4 mark, while Jim Hudock holds a 15.3 average. Don Walsh's 13.6 and Charlie Shaffer's 10.1 round out the double figure men. Jim Donohue, at 6-8, will be the biggest man in the game, and holds a 5.6 average.

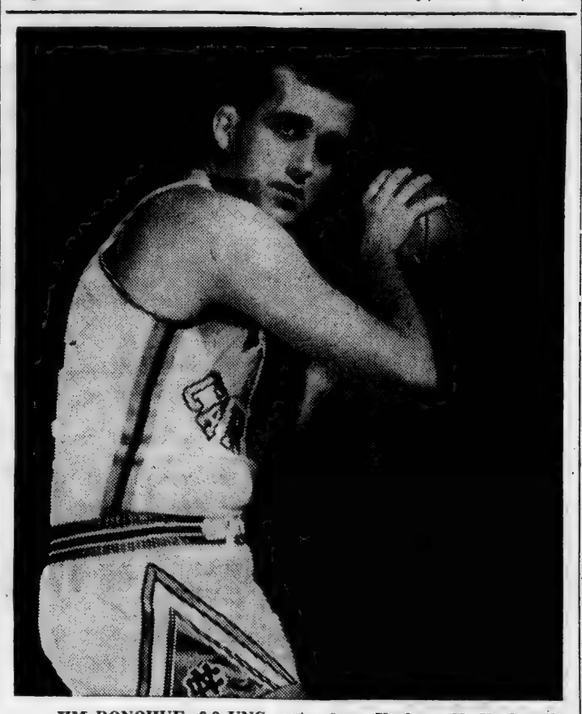
Pack Tough in Tournament

State's Wolfpack is always a rugged opponent in tournament play. Under Case they have won 14 tourney games in eight years, while losing only four times. In four of the eight seasons, the Raleigh boys captured the league championship in the three-day playoffs.

North Carolina's national champions won the tournament title in 1957, Maryland came out on top in 1958, and Duke defeated Wake Forest in 1960 for the top spot. Last season in a rematch with Duke, Bones McKinney's Deacons took the championship—and this year they have basically the same team back to defend the title.

MONOGRAM MEETING POSTPONED

The Monogram Club meeting originally scheduled for tonight has been postponed. It has been rescheduled for 7:30 in Woollen Gym next Thursday.



JIM DONOHUE, 6-8 UNC center from Yonkers, N. Y., has the distinction of being the tallest man on the floor in tonight's contest with South Carolina. The big Tar Heel senior is averaging 5.6 points a game for coach Dean Smith.

UNC Still Leads Shooting; Chappell Has 30.9 Mark

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Final regular-season ACC statistics show that although UNC's Tar Heels finished in a tie for fourth place in the standings, Dean Smith's boys still led the league in field goal accuracy with a mark of .473.

The Tar Heels edged arch-rival Duke in this category by one-tenth of a percentage point while Wake Forest the regular-season champion was third with a .470 figure.

Carolina placed fourth in the conference in regular season team scoring. UNC, with a 73.4 points-per-game mark, trailed Duke, Wake and South Carolina in that order. The Blue Devils carry a league-leading 82.9 team average into the ACC Championships while Wake has averaged 80.9 and the Gamecocks from Columbia, 79.2.

State Best Defensively

In defensive averages, the Wolfpack of North Carolina State has been the stingiest with their points. Coach Everett Case's boys have allowed their opponents only 66.9 points a game. Duke is second in this category with a 67.9 mark while, surprisingly, Maryland, with only 3-11 won-lost mark, is third at 72.3.

Vic Bubas' second place Duke cagers boast a 51.6 rebound average to pace the conference in this all-important category. N. C. State and Clemson finished the regular season with identical 47.1 retrieve averages to finish behind the Blue Devils. Carolina, during the regular season, was able to beat out only Virginia in team rebounds.

In individual statistics, the league's two All-American candidates Len Chappell of Wake and Art Heyman of Duke, finished (as they did last year) 1-2.

Chappell: 30.9

The regular-season campaign saw Chappell roll up 711 points in 23 games for a 30.9 average, while Heyman, who had led Chappell much of the early stages of the season, went into a mild slump and finished with 559 markers in 22 contest for a 25.4 average.

Art Whisnant, South Carolina's big threat, whom the Tar Heels hope to contain tonight in Raleigh, and Duke sophomore Jeff Mullins finished in a dead heat in scoring behind Chappell and Heyman.

The former two each averaged 21.6 in the regular season with Whisnant scoring 540 points in 25 games and Mullins getting 496 in 23 games.

Laquintano Finished Fifth

Tony Laquintano, Virginia's fine guard, was the only other ACC player to top the 20-point average mark during the past season. Laquintano netted 4450 points for a 20.5 average and fifth place in the conference.

State guard Jon Speaks and Carolina's Larry Brown, both playing restricted 16-game schedules, finished 6-7 in the conference scoring totals. Speaks takes an 18.2 average into the championships while Brown has a 16.4 mark.

Chappell, Heyman, Whisnant, Mullins, and Speaks all were nomed yesterday to the annual ACC sportswriters all-star team while Laquintano and Brown placed on the second team. UNC center Jim Hudock also earned second-team mention.

FROSH BASEBALL

All freshman baseball candidates are to meet at Emerson Stadium today at 3:30, dressed in Woollen Gym equipment. In case of rain, the meeting will be in 301 Woollen.

The so-called free lunch program for school children, according to Agriculture Department figures, costs one billion dollars a year.

Burns' 22 Paces Cobb To Victory

Clayton Burns' 22 points led Cobb to a 67-66 overtime win over Parker Tuesday despite Bob Lacey's 29 markers. Charlie Elkins also scored 29 for the Joyner Tunas in a 62-45 win over the Avery Aardvarks. The Town Touts mauled Stacy, 63-35, as Bob Watkins rolled up 29 points.

Other games were: Chi Phi Foxes 50, TEP Tidbits 27; Aycock 52, Graham 37; Pharmacy 65, Law Hawks 59; Winston 44, Joyner 37; Alexander Esquires 51, Avery Atrocities 41; Hillel 31, BSU 28.

Chest Committee Receives Thanks Of Gov. Sanford

Gov. Sanford presented the leaders of the Campus Chest with a letter Wednesday thanking them for pledging funds to the State Mental Hospital for children in Butner.

The Governor told Campus Chest Co-chairmen Jean MacDougall and Charles Shelton, and Asst. Director Bill Hoyle he wished to express his support for this particular charity. The hospital is to receive the first $1,000 from funds collected during the up coming drive.

Although the hospital is state supported, it has no funds for improvements because of the defeat of the bond issue. Medical equipment, books, toys, and a sun covering for a play area are needed.

In his letter, Sanford stated that interest in the hospital is ". . . . an index of mature and heartwarming concern on the part of college students for the less fortunate."

The children's institution is one of five organizations slated to receive funds from this year's drive. Money will also go to heart research, the World Union of Students, the American Friends Service and the Tours Scholarship.

This year's drive includes an Auction, March 8; a solicitations drive, March 13-15 and a carnival, March 17.

Moore Guilty; Gets 30 Years

Robert (Lucky) Moore, 29-year old Carrboro printer, was sentenced to 28-30 years on the roads in Orange County Superior Court yesterday after pleading guilty to the December pistol slaying of William Ellis.

Solicitor Ike Andrews accepted Moore's plea of second-degree, unpremeditated murder. He had originally pressed for a first-degree charge.

Moore, the father of five children, was charged with shooting Ellis after a midnight argument over a gambling debt.

Kennedy Presents Conservation Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy laid before Congress Thursday one of the most ambitious conservative programs in history, and asked that it be financed in part by a "user fee' on recreational areas.

The President said outdoor recreational facilities were among the bisc requiements for a sound national conservative program. He proposed a "land conservation fund" to meet the expense of acquiring new recreation areas for the nation's expanding population.

Discussion Groups Being Formulated

Are you interested in the revolutions going on around you?

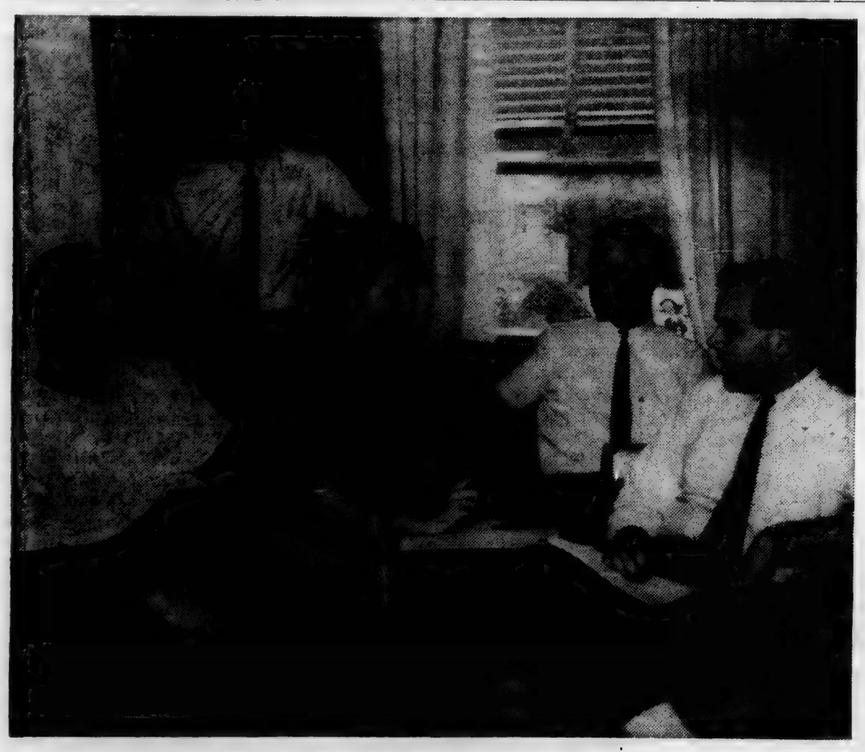
The Carolina Symposium is arranging discussions in dorms, fraternities and sororities on such topics as "Revolution in Literature," "Revolutions in Politics," "Revolutions in the Arts" and "Social and Economic Revolutions."

This year the Symposium has arranged joint discussions between Beta Theta Pi and Whitehead Dorm, ATO and Kappa Delta, Pi Beta Phi, and Chi Psi. These discussions were lead by such men as Dr. Dawson of the Political Science Dept., Dr. Sessoms of the Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology, Dr. Sam Hill of the Dept. of Religion, Dr. Patterson of the English Dept., and Dean Henderson, Dean of Student Affairs.

The Symposium is trying to arrange sessions between men's and women's dorms. The women's dorms are willing, but Joe Oppenheimer, chairman of the Symposium, says, "We have had difficulty in getting participation in men's dorms because of lack of organization and interest.

However the Symposium is eager to arrange meetings for any dorms and we are now in the process of scheduling sessions with Winston and Old East.

Any dorm who wants to participate in these discussions can call the Symposium office at 942-1958 to make arrangements.



THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE of the Carolina Symposium meets in conference to plan this year's program. L. to r. are Bill Bevis, Dennis Rash, Jan McColskey, Bob Sevier and Joe Oppenheimer.

Ferlinghetti Book Dedicated To Prof

Lawrence Ferlinghetti, the San Francisco poet, has dedicated his latest book of poems called 'Starting From San Francisco,' to Phillips Russell, his former professor in the University here, now retired.

In his dedication Ferlinghetti says: "To Phillips Russell, professor emeritus, in return for some seeds he perhaps didn't know he sowed."

The new book is published by New Directions. In the back is a record of Ferlinghetti reading aloud from it.

95 Passengers Perish In Astrojet Explosion

Airliner Does Nosedive At N. Y. Airport

NEW YORK (UPI) — An American Airlines astrojet carried all 95 persons aboard to sudden death Thursday when it nosedived into Jamaica Bay and exploded moments after taking off from Idlewild Airport in clear, crisp weather for a non-stop flight to Los Angeles.

American's Boeing 707 luxury Mercury Flight No. 1 was lost in the nation's worst domestic crash involving a single airliner.

The crash came just 63 minutes before astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. arrived at La Guardia Airport, 12 miles away, for a triumphant motorcade through the streets of New York.

Among the 85 passengers killed in the baffling crash of the $6 million jetliner nearly half as long as a football field was W. Alton Jones, 70, chairman of the executive committee of the Cities Service Corp., and close friend of former president Dwight D. Eisenhower. Jones was en route to the coast for a fishing trip with Eisenhower.

Also killed were Adm. Richard M. Conolly, president of Long Island University, and his wife, and Irving Rubine, vice president of Highroad Productions, which helped bring the movie "Guns of Navarone" to the screen. Conolly, 69, a much-decorated hero of World War II, gained the nickname of "Close-In Conolly" for his daring inshore bombardments of enemy held beaches.

Civil Aeronautics Board investigators flew immediately from Washington to investigate the disaster, the second worst in domestic commercial aviation history. The worst was the collision of a United Airlines DC-8 jet and a Trans-World Airlines constellation over New York City on Dec. 16, 1960, killing 134 persons.

The big puzzle in Thursday's disaster was: what went wrong in near perfect weather to cause the plane to crash on takeoff? Nearly

Masked Robber Affronts Wife Of Student

By GARRY BLANCHARD

Police and sheriff's deputies are continuing their search for a masked man who stuck a pistol in the face of a student wife while she was hanging out clothes behind her Victory Village home about 10 p.m. Wednesday and said "This is a hold-up."

Her husband said later he intends to call on Chancellor W. B. Aycock and Director of Housing James E. Wadsworth today to discuss greater security measures for the Victory Village area, which is just outside the Chapel Hill town limits.

Recounting the incident, Mrs. Pat Britt Carrington, 22, wife of second year law student Kenneth Carrington, 23, said, "He just appeared through a line of clothes I had just hung up. We just sort of stared at each other and he was very calm. There were lights all around. He didn't seem to mind that.

"Walked Away"

"He put his hand on my shoulder and put the gun in my face and said 'This is a hold-up,' very quietly. I screamed and ran into the house. He just stood right there and watched me run in. Then he turned and walked away."

Minutes later police and sheriff's deputies arrived and began an intensive search of the area around the Carrington's 630 Hibbard Street home.

Carrington, at the Law School studying, arrived a short time later.

Dogs Lost The Trail

Chapel Hill Police Chief W. D. Blake said dogs brought in to track the man lost his trail in woods between Purefoy Rd. and Pittsboro Rd., south of Hibbard St. The search continued for four hours, until 2 a.m. yesterday, when rain forced a halt.

Mrs. Carrington, who is employed at Memorial Hospital, described her assailant as six-foot-one, thin, Negro, wearing light clothes and a handkerchief over his mouth.

Meanwhile, Chief Blake renewed his request for residents to notify police immediately of any unusual occurences. He said incidents such as this one have cropped up periodically since last May.

Serebriakov Defends Russian Position

Soviet Envoy Cites Progress

By CHUCK MOONEY

A Russian spokesman lectured on what several students termed the "usual party line" to about 200 people in Carroll Hall Wednesday night.

Quoting Karl Marx, Gennagi Serebriakov, Second Secretary of the Russian Embassy in Washington, tried "to help Americans understand the position of the U.S.S.R."

Here are some of the main points of his speech:

"The Soviet people are now engaged in peaceful labor, building the grandeur of a Communist society.

"In 1980 we will produce 250 million tons of iron and steel.

"Oue gross national product will increase five fold; our industrial output, six fold; our farm products, more than three fold," he said.

"The Soviet Union wants disarmament by the 'strictest' inspection controls. We have tried to stop nuclear testing, while the U. S. did its 'utmost' to continue it.

Peaceful Coexistance

"Peaceful coexistance is the main principle of Russian foreign policy. This is the only alternative to war.

"Any conflict can turn into war. Any effort to change German borders would certainly lead to war. The Soviet Union has been trying to conclude a German treaty since 1941."

His audience received Serebriakov's speech passively — some cleaned their fingernails, several cleaned their glasses, a few laughed in spots, two went to sleep and the rest alternated between scraping their feet and squirming in their seats.

They perked up during the question-answer period after the speech. Some of the questions were:

Common Market

—What does the U.S.S.R. think of the European common market?

"We have our own common market," Serebriakov answered.

—How do you regard the Berlin wall?

"The West forced us to build it. There was two-way traffic. We built it to lessen tension and keep western propaganda out — not to keep East Germans in.

—Do you think it lessened the tension?

"Yes, no doubt," he added.

—Why can't East Germans travel freely in East Germany, asked a German exchange student?

"I think they can travel freely in East Germany. Naturally they must get a visa to cross the borders," said Serebriakov.

Serebriakov was invited to UNC by the International Student Board. He drove from Washington Wednesday afternoon and returned Wednesday night.

Debaters Draw 70 For Battle Between Clubs

Debaters representing both the Democratic and Republican clubs on campus came to grips Wednesday night over the question of party politics in North Carolina. Some 70 persons attended the debate.

The Young Republican debaters, Earl Baker and Mack Armstrong, contended that democratic political processes in North Carolina have been weakened by "legal, extra-legal, and illegal methods of the Democratic machine," and quoted statistics to show that Democratic government in the state had resulted in North Carolina being "near the bottom of the pile in education, income, and other benefits."

Gerrymandering, failure to reapportion state senate seats, control of the boards of election and other methods were pointed out by the Republicans as "preventing the people of the state from having a clear choice in voting."

The YDC debaters, Johnny Killian and Joe Roberts, replied by stating that ". . . all's fair in politics. . ." and that the reason Republicans in the state were weak was because "apathy and selfishness exisited in Republican leadership." They also brought forth statistical facts to show that North Carolina was not as bad off as the Republicans' figures intimated.

The Democrats stated that North Carolina was in fact a two party state, even though some irregularities exisit. Questions from the audience were answered by the debaters after the summaries by both sides.

Both club presidents expressed satisfaction with the debate, although they had hoped campus interest would be more widespread. Odom stated "I hope, as was suggested tonight, that a debate of this type can become an annual affair on campus. I think constructive presentation of alternative ideas is very healthy."

A First Step

New Codification

A bill to codify procedures in the Men's and Women's Honor Councils was scheduled to be introduced in Student Legislature last night.

Although the bill incorporates only a few changes in the already existing procedures used by the Councils, it is nonetheless an important piece of legislation. Prior to this bill, no complete codification of procedures existed, making it at times difficult for defendants to know what procedural guarantees they have. Central to the bill is an article defining grounds upon which a student may move, postpone or terminate a hearing. This not only assures uniform procedure, but also provides the defendant with a written guarantee of his rights. If any of these right can be shown to have been violated, a move for postponement must be granted until such time as errors can be corrected. The article also provides for termination of a hearing if the defendant is under jeopardy of conviction, or has been acquitted in another student government judiciary.

Also, if the council hearing the case has no jurisdiction, the defendant may terminate proceedings. This is a particularly important section in the new codification. Last year, a law student was suspended by a court which was forbidden by the Student Constitution to try his case. The section should eliminate future recurrences of such slipshod practices.

Also important is a section calling for an increase in the number of members required to hear a case from six to seven. This will eliminate the possibility of having a student suspended on the strength of only four votes. Since a two-third vote is required to suspend, the new procedure will require five out of seven votes, instead of four out of six, which is currently the case. The bill also carries a recommendation that the number required to hear a case be raised to nine as soon as the number of council members is raised to allow for it.

In either case, the danger of error is lessened.

All the changes included in the new codification are for the best.

However, there are others that could be added—and, we hope, will be added—to improve the quality of the student judiciary.

Some of these can be included in the new codification before it is ratified by the Student Legislature. Included in these needed changes is a provision to insure that all hearings are open, with the possible stipulation that no defendant's name be used without his permission. Another is a stipulation that no student can be disciplined by any part of the student judiciary unless it can be clearly shown that his alleged infraction is in some way connected with his capacity as a UNC student. This would eliminate Council action on cases which are in no way connected with life in the academic community. The student judiciary should not act on cases involving civil infractions and which are not connected with the University.

Re-evaluation of the judiciaries with consideration for their true purpose — which is to act only in the academic area — is needed. Restricting their area of jurisdiction would be a valuable first step toward such a re-evaluation.

The new procedures bill will be a valuable aid providing firmer basis for the student judiciary.

It might also be a first step in strengthening it.

Liquor Logic

Senator Olin Johnson (D., S.C.) wants a law against serving free drinks on airliners. He says it's wrong for non-drinkers to have to "bear the expense of distribution of free cocktails and champagne to others."

Superficially this has a logical sound, and it's bound to be applauded by drys. But there is a flaw nevertheless.

The same thing, for instance, would under the rules of consistency apply to free meals. We have seen passengers turn them down too — particularly during what the loudspeaker sometimes mentions as a slight turbulence.

There's even a weight question. How about the thin man who carries one shirt in a linoleum brief case and the fat passenger who uses a cowhide two-suiter? Except when you get into overweight, or anyhow as we've been given to understand it, airlines figure weight factors on the average rather than the individual.

Mind now, we are not holding that there aren't persuasive arguments for doing away with the free drinks. All we're saying is that when you're selling service the cost accounting isn't as simple as it might look to a Senator who's never had to sharpen a pencil and sit down to it.

Disarmament: What Chances?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Within the next week diplomats from 18 nations will begin gathering at Geneva in search of a less fearful formula for peace than the existing "balance of terror" between East and West. United Press International assigned a three-man team to report on the outlook for the Geneva disarmament meeting. It consisted of Stewart Hensley, chief UPI diplomatic correspondent in Washington; Henry Shapiro, UPI Moscow manager and dean of American correspondents in Russia, and K. C. Thaler, chief diplomatic correspondent in Europe. Their findings are presented in the following dispatch written by UPI's foreign editor.

United Press International

One after another the long black limousines will roll up to the white marble building called the Palais Des Nations in Geneva.

As the passengers of these rented cars enter that building on March 14 the world once again will embark on the quest for peace at the conference table.

The diplomats will arrive from 18 nations for the disarmament meeting that was arranged at the United Nations General Assembly last fall. They will represent the United States and four NATO allies, the Soviet Union and four Communist bloc countries, and eight of the so-called neutral nations.

The setting for their meeting is one of dignity and grandeur, on the shores of Lake Geneva with a view of the snow-capped Alps beyond. In this huge building the League of Nations floundered in the days before World War II, and here many another peace effort has broken up in failure. Three months of four-power negotiations on Berlin in 1959 produced no agreement except the final one to go home. Three years of nuclear test ban talks collapsed last month.

And now the question is: Will it be any different this time? The diplomatic reporters of UPI have sought the answer in the major capitals where they have addressed themselves to these other broad questions:

—Why has Premier Nikita Khrushchev repeatedly demanded that the Geneva sessions be turned into a summit meeting of world leaders?

—Does Khrushchev really want disarmament?

—What is the barrier that prevents the scrapping of all arms?

—Is any agreement possible at Geneva?

To two of these questions there are fairly firm answers. On the others there can be only educated guesses based on past performance and, as all horseplayers know, past performance is not necessarily a reliable guide to the future. This is especially true when the future hinges on the mercurial temperament of Nikita Khrushchev and the devious paths of Soviet diplomacy.

SUMMIT

It is the view of officials in Washington that Khrushchev's call for a summit meeting of the 18 nations at Geneva is tied in closely with his efforts to prevent the United States from resuming nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

There is real fear in the Soviet Union that the United States may get some nuclear weapons advantage, according to Thaler's report from London.

In Washington the view is that Khrushchev hopes for a summit session to put pressure on President Kennedy to dissuade him from renewed U. S. testing, but at the same time the Americans assume Khrushchev knows Kennedy is sincere when he says he will base his decision solely on the nation's security needs.

KENNEDY
. . . no summit yet

This brings up another likely Khrushchev motive — Propaganda.

"It is likely that Khrushchev is paving the way to blame the United States, and incidentally Britain, for failure of the Geneva talks to make any progress," says Hensley. "It is assumed that such propaganda, combined with attempts to stir up world reaction against resumed U.S. tests, fits into Khrushchev's plan to discredit the West."

Well in advance of the Geneva meeting Khrushchev has accused Kennedy of dooming the talks before they could get started by opposing a summit meeting.

Having completed its own set of nuclear tests, the Soviet Union now appears anxious to impress the world with proclamations of peaceful designs.

Why is it that Khrushchev is not content with a foreign ministers' meeting at Geneva?

Shapiro, who has known Khrushchev longer than any other American correspondent, says the Soviet chief feels foreign ministers' meetings are a waste of time.

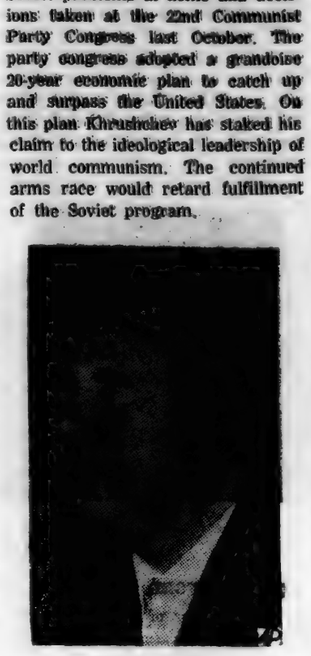
"For practical purposes, he is his own foreign minister and he doubtless considers Kennedy and Macmillan as the effective foreign secretaries of their countries," Shapiro reports. "In private, and sometimes in public conversations, he has expressed impatience even with summitry on a broad level and has suggested that the United States and the Soviet Union alone should solve the problems of peace. 'Who will object,' he asked me in an interview in 1957, 'if these two great countries agree on world peace?' "

Sincerity

Does Khrushchev really want disarmament?

Shapiro believes the answer is yes — if he can get it on his own terms.

The Russian premier's interest in arms cut is tied in closely with Soviet problems at home and decisions taken at the 22nd Communist Party Congress last October. The party congress adopted a grandoise 20-year economic plan to catch up and surpass the United States. On this plan Khrushchev has staked his claim to the ideological leadership of world communism. The continued arms race would retard fulfillment of the Soviet program.



KHRUSHCHEV
. . . uncertain

"Although Khrushchev has boasted that the Soviet Union can afford both guns and butter,' disarmament alone will enable him to achieve a standard of living approximately that of the United States," Shapiro says.

The Barrier

If Khrushchev actually would like to see general disarmament, then what is holding it up?

Basically the answer is this: The NATO allies don't trust Khrushchev.

The West wants international inspection teams which can confirm that disarmament agreements are being carried out. Khrushchev wants each nation to do its own policing. One reason the Western powers are wary of trusting Khrushchev is that he broke the voluntary moratorium on nuclear tests last fall. On other fronts the communist record since World War II has not been one to inspire trust. There have been the communization of Eastern European nations by the Red Army, the aggression in Korea, the Berlin blockade and the interventions in Hungary and Tibet.

"Russian tactics still are seen here as designed to deprive the west of nuclear deterrent, which is considered by Britain still to be the fundamental basis of the West's defense," reports Thaler from London. "This would give Russia, with her overwhelming conventional forces, dangerous advantage over the West."

The Russia position, as outlined by Shapiro, is this:

"Disarmament first and then controls."

Inspection without disarmament is espionage, the Russian contend. After disarmament is achieved — on pure faith — All countries will be open to inspection, Khrushchev has said, because then "there will be nothing to conceal."

It is obvious the West never will trust Khrushchev that far and, even if it were to do so, there still would be another barrier to disarmament. That is Communist China.

Any agreement between East and West would be useless without including Red China. And it is unlikely Red China could be persuaded, even by Khrushchev, to agree to a major disarmament plan.

Agreement At Geneva

Against this background of mutual distrust, is any agreement at all possible at the Geneva conference? The answer: Not much but maybe a little.

The three UPI reporters, after adding up their findings, see it this way:

Hensley — Neither side can seriously expect a breakthrough on a broad front when the disagreement is complete on the heart of the issue — inspection. But there might be agreement on some fringe issues.

Shapiro — Since the Western powers have not irrevocably rejected Khrushchev's offer for a summit meeting it is reasonable to expect that the Russians will accept a limited agreement at Geneva to pave the way to a summit meeting later. Diplomatic opinion in Moscow holds there is better than a 50-50 chance of a summit meeting later this year.

Thaler — Prospects for success of the Geneva disarmament conference are rated low in the light of past experience and present indications. The consensus is that very little will come out of the Geneva conference in concrete terms, unless there is a reversal of the Soviet position. And that is unlikely.

One reason Kennedy and Macmillan have held out some hope of a summit meeting later this spring is that they hope this will induce some concessions from the Soviets at Geneva in order to win a top-level meeting later.

Summary

Summit — The Western allies see Khrushchev's proposal for a summit meeting at Geneva as a grand stand play which might make it possible for him to turn the disarmament sessions into a propaganda circus or to blame the West for blocking disarmament by refusing to talk to him. That is why they have held out the hope for a summit session later, if the Geneva talks show a genuine Soviet willingness to negotiate.

Sincerity — Khrushchev would like disarmament if he could get it at his own price — meaning no international controls. The reason is that he needs to spend the money at home to reach Soviet production goals and raise the Russian living standard.

Barrier — The West distrusts Soviet intentions. Khrushchev refuses to accept international disarmament controls which he calls "espionage." And any real agreement on disarmament would have to include Communist China, which will not be represented at Geneva.

Agreement — Because of mutual distrust there's not much chance of a breakthrough on a broad front. There's always a chance of some give and take on side issues and a possibility of progress on some East-West issue outside of the disarmament question.

Failure — The world will continue to live under the "balance of terror" between East and West that is created by the terrorizing prospect of nuclear retaliation.

Legislature Should Stick To Campus

Can the votes of 18 representatives of the Student Legislature be interpreted as representing the opinion of the entire student body of UNC on a national issue? If it can be, then the Student Legislature has embarked on a new form of government that is a far cry from democracy.

There has been an amazing amount of warped logic and absolute bunk used to justify the legislature's passage of a nuclear test ban resolution which is to be sent to President Kennedy. There were 15 representatives who had enough respect for true democratic action to vote against the resolution, but unfortunately there were 18 who lacked this respect. Where or from whom did these 18 representatives receive the authority to vote on a non-campus issue?

Maybe they got it from the Di-Phi debating society. After all the Student Legislature evolved from the Di-Phi, and the Di-Phi is always debating on non-campus issues, so naturally the current legislature should be able to pass resolutions on non-campus issues. In other words the Student Legislature equals the Di-Phi. So why don't we change the Student Legislature into a huge Di-Phi society and have it debate on such imperative issues as the superiority of men over women, and send that along with the nuclear test ban resolution for President Kennedy's close inspection. No, these 18 representatives will have to look farther than the Di-Phi society for authority to speak out on non-campus issues.

Well, then, maybe they received their authority from the student body. After all the Student Legislature is the "one group elected to be truly representative of the student body." But representative on what issues? Is there one representative in the Legislature who honestly feels that he has been given a mandate by his voters to represent them on non-campus issues? If so, it would be interesting to hear just how such a mandate was obtained, since in the last election of representatives there was no mention of non-campus issues..

If these 18 representatives did not receive their authority from Di-Phi or the student body, where did it come from? God? Yes, of course, that is where it came from! They received a divine message from heaven, and were ordained prophets to lead the poor, ignorant, blind student body over the rough sea of national issues into the promised land where "outstanding leaders and thinkers" can pass resolutions on any issue that happens to bug them. These prophets do not need the student body's consent. They do not need democracy. They are the chosen few, picked by a benevolent God to speak out and represent the masses. They are Nietzsche's supermen, towering above the ignorant herd in their intellectual superiority.

If the student body has a voice, let it be heard now. Do not allow yourself to be led like blind sheep by these self appointed prophets. Do not roll over and play dead. Rumors of your death have been heard far too often lately. A petition condemning the student legislature's assumed authority in representing the student body on national issues is being circulated. Those who care in the slightest about having a democratic form of government should sign this petition. Not to sign it would be to condone oligarchy and the murder of democracy at UNC.

Rhode Island Congressman To Speak Here

Congressman John E. Fogarty of Rhode Island will be guest speaker at the University of North Carolina School of Public Health on March 5. He will address a student-faculty seminar that will be open to the public.

Fogarty was first elected to the U. S. House of Representatives in 1940 and has now completed over 20 years of service in that body. He was assigned to the Appropriation Committee in January of 1947 and has been a member and chairman of its subcommittee providing funds for the Department of Labor and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Congressman Fogarty has become nationally known as the spokesman for medical research in Congress. During his years on the Appropriations Committee, funds for the National Institutes of Health have grown from three and a half million dollars to $755 million for the current year.

The National Institutes of Health is the world's leading medical research organization and is responsible for the majority of research in the field of the health sciences carried out at the various universities of the nation.

Because of his work in the field of health sciences, he has received a large number of important awards. He has been honored by the American Cancer Society, Welfare League for Retarded Children

Open Movies Group Delays Picketing At Carolina Theater Until March 10

The Carolina Theater was given a stay of picketing until Sunday, March 10, after Manager E. Carrington Smith told members of the Executive Committee for Open Movies he would have a decision on integration on that date.

The group originally set yesterday as the deadline for resuming picketing if no definite action on complete integration had been taken.

Approximately 35 students, faculty and townspeople attended the meeting held in the Church of God, Carrboro, Wednesday night.

Managers' Meeting

The new date was set after W. G. Enloe, district manager for the Paramount-King theater chain, told representatives of the Committee a district meeting of theater managers would be held March 7 in Charlotte to decide on integrating the Carolina.

If Smith reports that no decision was reached or if complete integration is not offered, the group will resume picketing.

Discussion at the meeting was led by Wayne Bowers, professor of physics. Speakers indicated a feeling that the decision to be reached in Charlotte would be the final move in a series of delays since picketing began at both local theaters last spring.

Picketing Stopped

The Varsity integrated at the end of the year and picketing was stopped at both theaters.

Bowers said the committee would probably disband itself if the Carolina is integrated and if members decide not to continue work in other areas.

Dick Grimmolt, head of the picketing committee, said picketing of the Carolina would begin on the 10th if results of the managers meeting are not favorable.

The motion moving the deadline to the 10th was carried unanimously.

DARRYL F. ZANUCK

Zanuck's '12 O'Clock High' Stars Gregory Peck Tonight

Tonight's Free Flick, "Twelve O'Clock High," stars Gregory Peck, Hugh Marlowe, Gary Merrill, and Dean Jagger. Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck, "TWELVE O'CLOCK HIGH" tells of a young general who takes over a U. S. bomber group in England toward the end of 1942 and slowly builds up its collapsing morale.

Tension with his subordinates and an internal struggle between the humane person he is and the hard disciplinarian he must be take their toll on him. This ruggedly realistic drama has been called one of the outstanding films about World War II.

For his role as the general, Gregory Peck won the New York Film Critics award for the best actor and Dean Jagger was awarded the Academy Award for the best Supporting Actor.

Showings will be at 7:30 and 9:30 in Carroll Hall and students will be warned about the no smoking and refreshments rule to assure continuance of the Free Flicks.

Film Society To Show 'M'

Fritz Lang's famous "M", a classic of crime and horror films, will be shown to the membership of the UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society on Monday evening, 8 o'clock, in Carroll Hall.

Inspired by the Dusseldorf child murder case, "M" stars Peter Lorre in his best acting role on the screen. Like the equally successful "The Blue Angel", which introduced Marlene Dietrich to a world-wide audience, "M" is considered by film historians as Lang's personal statement of the psychological situation in Germany in the early Thirties.

The film's moral point of view is that in the wake of retrogression terrible outbursts of sadism are inevitable, and it anticipates what was to happen on a large scale unless people would free themselves from the specters pursuing them.

Two years later the Nazis offered Lang complete charge of German film production; he declined and fled to the U. S. and Hollywood where he made such films as "Fury" and "Woman in the Window." He returned to Germany after the war was over.

A Laurel and Hardy short, "Double Whoopee," with Jean Harlow in an early screen role, is also on the program.

A few memberships to the film society's spring series are still available at $3.00 each for the six remaining six programs in the series.

Dr. Rippy Featured Speaker At World Affairs Conference

Dr. J. Fred Rippy of Durham, University of Chicago professor emeritus of Latin American history, will be a featured speaker at the 12th annual North Carolina "Conference on World Affairs" to be held at UNC Thursday, March 8.

Dr Rippy will address the afternoon session of the conference beginning at 2 p.m. He will speak on the historical background of present-day conditions in Latin America. A question and answer period will follow his address.

From 1926 to 1936, Dr. Rippy was a member of the history faculty of Duke University and he served as editor of the Duke University Press. He attended Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., where he received a B.A. degree in 1913. He received a M.A. degree from Vanderbilt University in 1915 and a Ph.D. from the University of California in 1920.

Honorary Degree

Dr. Rippy was awarded an honorary D. Litt. degree by Southwestern University. From 1917-20, he was a member of the history faculty of the University of California. He became a member of the history faculty of the University of Chicago in 1920 where he served until 1926.

Following his service at Duke University, Dr. Rippy returned to the University of Chicago where he was a professor of history from 1936 to 1959.

Dr. Rippy was the sixth recipient of the William Volker Award "for distinguished service as scholar and teacher." He received the award in 1960. He is an honorary life member of the N. C. History and Literary Association, the Texas Philosophical Society, and the Inter-American Academy.

Author And Lecturer

Dr. Rippy is the author of 12 books. He collaborated in writing 14 others, and is the contributor of numerous articles to scholarly journals. He has lectured at various universities throughout the United States, including Johns Hopkins, University of Virginia, University of North Carolina, University of Texas, University of Oklahoma, and the University of Washington.

The N. C. Conference on World Affairs is arranged annually by the State Council on World Affairs in cooperation with the Extension Division of the University of North Carolina. This year's conference is looking at "Latin America — Our Southern Neighbors." All sessions will meet in Carroll Hall, beginning at 10 a.m. Registration will be held from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Thursday, March 8.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

The nudge is permitted when a beautiful girl is sighted in an unusual place or at an unusual time.

LESSON 3 - Concerning self-control

Although we believe that girl watching has it all over bird watching, we feel that these two hobbies do share one important characteristic. They are both genteel. They both respect the rights of the watched. A girl watcher who asks a beautiful stranger for her name and phone number is like a bird watcher who steals eggs. (If the stranger happens to have a pack of Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes, and you're dying for a good, natural smoke, you may break this rule.) Normally, the girl watcher's pleasure is warm, quiet and internal. However, there are cases when a discovery is so dazzling it must be shared. Such a case is illustrated above.

Tigers Startle Wolfpack, 67-46

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Clemson's surprising Tigers pulled off a startling, 67-46 upset victory over the Wolfpack of North Carolina State yesterday afternoon to open the ACC Championship tournament in Raleigh.

Press Maravich's boys, with a tenacious defense, and some fine shooting by Jim Brennan and Tommy Mahaffey, led at the half 27-18 and then proceeded to pour it on the helpless State cagers. Brennan and Mahaffey each netted 15 points to pace Clemson.

After being carried off the Reynolds Coliseum floor by his jubilant players, the weary Maravich credited the win to his "law of averages philosophy."

"I told the boys that when you're rolling dice, snake eyes or box cars might come up numerous times in a row, but eventually seven or eleven will come up. Our seven-eleven was coming up. We felt it in our bones, thoughts, and feelings."

The Clemson coach added, "Our big problem was getting the boys in the right frame of mind. I knew after our recent trip to Virginia and Maryland (Clemson won both games) that we could win this game with State. We just had to get the boys to believe in themselves."

His boys believed in themselves to the tune of 67-46.

Maravich praised his team's defensive aggressiveness and pointed out that his boys were just now catching on to the "mombo defense," which Clemson has been using all year. The victory over State College was Clemson's first win in ACC tournament history, and stamps them now as the "dark horse" in the tourney.

Duke defeated Maryland in the latter game of the first doubleheader yesterday and will meet Clemson tonight in a 9:00 semi-final contest.

The Blue Devils had some trouble with the Terps and led by only 51-48 with some five minutes left. But at this point, Art Heyman who scored 22 points went on a rampage and the Durham boys pulled away to their 13-point victory.

Prior to the Duke-Clemson match tonight, the winners of yesterday evening's Wake Forest-Virginia and UNC-South Carolina clashes will face each other at 7:?0 in the first semi-final game. The winners of tonight's games meet for the championship at 8:00 Saturday night.

Terps Rated As Favorites To Cop Title

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

North Carolina's wrestling team a distant second to Maryland's Terrapins last year, try to make it a little closer this time as the 1962 edition of the ACC Championships begins today in Raleigh.

Coach Sam Barnes' grapplers who came up with 63 points last season, far behind the Terps' leading 116 markers, finished the regular season with a 4-7-1 mark and are considered to be the only team capable of giving Maryland a run for the title.

UNC's lineup will include Louis Arthur in the 115-pound division, and Mickey Nelson at 123 pounds. Pete Gilchrist, the Charlotte senior who set a new Carolina total point record of 36 this year, will fight at the 130 level.

In the 137-pound weight division Dick Blackman is expected to line up for the Tar Heels. Blackman who also broke the former UNC record during the regular season with 32 points, weighed in at 154 pounds last Tuesday in the match with VPI, but was expected to shed enough weight to be ready to go in the lighter class this afternoon.

Either Willis Johnson or Jack Jones will start at 147-pounds while Tom Grant is slated to go in the 157-pound division. Gene Record at 177, Glenn Glaser at 77, Jerry Cabe or Bill Shipp at 191, and Gordon Appell in the heavyweight division, complete the UNC lineup.

Coach Sully Krouse's College Park grapplers have won every ACC Championship on record and will be going after number nine this weekend. The Terps won every individual championship in last year's league meet and nine of their ten winners return this year to defend their titles.

Led by 157-pound Eugene Kerin, who for the past two years has copped the "outstanding wrestler award of the ACC", the Terp champions include: 177-pounder Bill Rishell, 147-pounder Pat Varre and 115-pounder Dick Maynard.

Other Maryland champions are: Roger Shoals, a heavyweight, Ron Maunder, a 123-pounder and 130-pounder Sam Bossert.

The meet opens with preliminary rounds in the ten weights at 1:30 this afternoon. The semi-finals start at 3:30 today with the finals slated for 3:00 tomorrow.

Patterson Surprised At Liston's Demand

NEW YORK (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson expressed surprise Thursday night at Sonny Liston's "attempt to dictate terms" for their proposed $10,000 title fight in June.

At his training camp in Highland Mills, N. Y., Patterson said: "I could hardly believe those Philadelphia reports about Liston wanting more money seems to me Sonny once said he'd fight me for nothing if he got the chance."

Stoneman Scores 22 As SAE's Win

By JOHN MONTAGUE

Keith Stoneman collected 22 points Wednesday afternoon in leading the SAE's to a 67-20 demolition of the Pi Kap Phi's. Teammate Ned Martin chipped in with 11 to aid the rout.

The Phi Kap Flashes had almost as easy a time of it, belting the Sigma Chi Trolls, 60-26. George Boutselis was the big gun with 29, followed by Mineno with 15 and Dave Crawford with 12.

In other intramural cage action:

Delta Sig Rouges 49,

Pi Lamb Polecats 25

A well-balanced attack which saw four men in double figures was simply too much for the Polecats to handle. Bob Oldham (14), Frank Potter (13), John Faison (11) and Lee Basinger (10) led the Rouges, while Robin Katz managed 11 for the losers.

Phi Delts 56, Pika 39

Jerry Evans and Bill Hubbard teamed for 24 and 15 respectively as the Phi Delta five crushed the PiKA's. Bob Roberson with 13 and Bill Craig with 10 topped the losers.

Delta Sig 51, Phi Kap Sig 42

The Phi Kaps had Gene Sigmon with 16, but the Delta Sigs had John Griswold with 13 and John Corbett with 12.

ATO Rooters 33, Sigma Nu Riflemen 25

A fairly even match which saw Bill Seymore as the high scorer with a 10-point output which gave the Rooters the victory margin.

Pika Pandas 50, XBT Zygotes 31

A 19-point performance by Jake Lohr paced the Panda attack. He was joined in the double digit by Tommy Tygart with 10. Stu Eisenstat netted 16 for the Zygotes.

Carolina Swimmers Travel To New Haven For Easterns

Nine members of Pat Earey's Tar Heel swimming unit, which placed first in the ACC finals at Raleigh and third in regular competition, will be in New Haven Connecticut on March 15, 16, and 17 for the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships.

Representing Carolina in the medley relay will be Bob Bilbro, sophomore sensation Thompson Mann, Harry Schiffman, and Pete Swift. Equally as illustrious is the freestyle relay team of Bilbro, Willie Bloom, Schiffman, and Bryan Williams.

In addition to the Tar Heels participation in these two events, distance freestylers Frank Lea and Arthur Merrill and sophomore butterfly specialist Mike Bissell are also slated for active duty.

Since all of Earey's mighty men were unable to make the trip, only those who finished 1, 2 in the ACC championships and the two medley relay quartets were eligible.

Carolina will be in for some rough weather as it goes against such powerhouses as Navy, Dartmouth, and host Yale.

Although the Easterns shape up as being the most important annual event in this part of the country they will serve only a warm up

THE GRASS IS ALWAYS GOLDER

The academic world, as we all know, is loaded with dignity and ethics, with lofty means and exalted ends, with truth and beauty. In such a world a heinous thing like faculty raiding—colleges enticing teachers away from other colleges—is not even thinkable.

However, if the dean of one college happens—purely by chance, mind you—to run into a professor from another college, and the professor happens to remark—just in passing, mind you—that he is discontented with his present position, why, what's wrong with the dean making the professor an offer? Like the other afternoon, for instance, Dean Sigafoos of Gransmire Polytech, finding himself in need of a refreshing cup of oolong, dropped in quite by chance at the Discontented Professors Exchange where he discovered Professor Stuneros from the English Department of Kroveny A and M sitting over a pot of lapsang soochong and shrieking "I Hate Kroveny A and M!" Surely there was nothing improper in the dean saying to the professor, "Leander, perhaps you'd like to come over to us. I think you'll find our shop A-OK."

(It should be noted here that all English professors are named Leander, just as all psychics professors are named Fred. All sociology professors are, of course, named Myron, all veterinary medicine professors are named Rover, and all German professors are named Hansel and Gretel. All deans, are, of course, named Attila.)

But I digress. Leander, the professor, has just been offered a job by Attila, the dean, and he replies, "Thank you, but I don't think so."

"And I don't blame you," says Attila, stoutly. "I understand Kroveny has a fine little library."

"Well, it's not too bad," says Leander. "We have 28 volumes in all, including a mint copy of Nancy Drew, Girl Detective."

"Very impressive," says Attila. "Us now, we have 36 million volumes, including all of Shakespeare's first folios and the Dead Sea Scrolls."

"Golly whiskers," says Leander.

"But of course," says Attila, "you don't want to leave Kroveny where, I am told, working conditions are tickety-boo."

"Oh, they're not too bad," says Leander. "I teach 18 hours of English, 11 hours of optometry, 6 hours of forestry, coach the fencing team, and walk Prexy's cat twice a day."

"A full, rich life," says Attila. "At our school you'd be somewhat less active. You'd teach one class a week, limited to four A students. As to salary, you'd start at $50,000 a year, with retirement at full pay upon reaching age 29."

"Sir," says Leander, "your offer is most fair but you must understand that I owe a certain loyalty to Kroveny."

"I not only understand, I applaud," says Attila. "But before you make a final decision, let me tell you one thing more. We supply Marlboro cigarettes to our faculty—all you want at all times."

"Gloryosky!" cries Leander, bounding to his feet. "You mean Marlboro, the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste—Marlboro, the cigarette with better makin's—Marlboro that comes to you in pack or box—Marlboro that gives you such a lot to like?"

"Yep," says Attila, "that's the Marlboro I mean."

"I am yours," cries Leander, wringing the Dean's hand. "Where do I sign?"

"At the quarry," replies Attila. "Frankly, we don't trust paper contracts any more. We chisel them in marble."

'With Exceeding Regret'

US Will Resume Tests In Air Unless Russia Agrees To Ban

Ban Must Be 'Fully Effective' By April

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "With exceeding regret" President Kennedy Friday ordered a resumption of United States nuclear tests in the atmosphere by late April unless Russia agrees to a "fully effective" test ban before then.

The president, who announced his decision on nationwide radio-tv broadcast offered to meet with Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan in Geneva if he Soviets are ready to negotiate such a pact.

Kennedy said he ordered the new U. S. tests because the big Soviet test series showed the Russians had developed some "awful decisions and techniques" and had made "some substantial gains in weaponry."

But he said 1961 Russian tests did not give the Soviets superiority in nuclear power. He also declared that an analysis of the Russian experiments showed they had not yet developed an anti-missile missile.

Kennedy said the ultimate objective of the United States was not to test for the sake of testing.

"Our real objective is to make our own tests unnecessary," he said, "to prevent others from testing, to prevent the nuclear arms race from mushrooming out of control, to take the first steps toward general and complete disarmament.

Soviets Must Choose

"That is why, in the last analysis "It is the leaders of the Soviet Union who must bear the heavy responsibility of choosing, in the weeks that lie ahead, whether we proceed with these steps—or proceed with new tests."

He said if Russia persists in rejecting "all means of true inspection, then we shall be left no choice but to keep our own defensive arsenal adequate for the security of all free men."

After a 34-month test moratorium, Russia last Sept. 1 began a massive series of about 50 above ground explosions. From the time of his inauguration until Sept. 1, Kennedy had been pressured by both sides of the testing argument.

Once Russia broke the moratorium, however, anti-testing pressures on the President declined rapidiy and in November he ordered preparations for testing begun. He met Macmillan at Bermuda in late December. The British agreed to let the United States test at Christmas Island in the Central Pacific and this country permitted Britain to use the Nevada proving grounds for underground shots, the first of which was fired Thursday.

Dual Endorsement Proposal Defeated

A bill to prohibit double endorsement of legislative candidates was defeated in Legislature Thursday night by a vote of 21-10.

A primary objection to Student Party Legislator John Randall's bill was that both parties should have the right to double endorse even though it is often party policy to not do so.

TV Committee

In other action, the body established a TV Repair Fund Committee to hear all requests for money to repair television sets which were placed in resident halls by legislative action several years ago. The bill passed unanimously.

Another bill from the Finance Committee was approved that appropriates $51.25 to student government to purchase supplies and over the cost of a recent poll on the University Entertainment Committee.

Band Support

The Legislature also passed a resolution urging student support of the Navy Band performances here Tuesday. Money from the two performances will be used by the Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity to establish a music scholarship in honor of James Michael Barham.

In other action, a bill concerning the selection of a head cheerleader and a bill providing funds for the use of legislators in communicating with their constituants were reassigned to committee for further consideration.

Superior Court Clears Student Of Charges

Irving Long, a senior journalism student from Rockingham, was found innocent of charges of public drunkenness and disorderly conduct in Superior Court Thursday. He was arrested for allegedly intimidating the pickets in front of the Carolina Theater last January.

Long appealed the case from the Chapel Hill Recorder's Court where he was convicted of both charges.

Might Start A Disturbance

According to policemen Coy Durham and Herman Stone, Long came out of the Goody Shop and started walking towards the pickets shouting and cursing in a loud and boisterous manner. The arresting officers testified that they were afraid the defendant might start a disturbance, and ordered him to leave the scene immediately.

They said he refused at first, but, after being told that he would be arrested if he did not go back to his dormitory, Long turned around and walked a few yards down the sidewalk.

He then, according to Durham's testimony, went into the Goody Shop and ordered another beer. He was then arrested.

Stopped To Get Coat

However, Long and two witnesses testified that he was neither drunk, disorderly, nor intimidating the pickets. The defendant said that he left immediately when told to do so, and only stopped in the Goody Shop to get his coat when the officer arrested him.

Bert Chiemiego and Richard Albiez, two students who were present at the time of the arrest, also testified that Long was not cursing or in any way threatening the pickets.

The jury deliberated about thirty minutes before delivering the verdict of innocence.

Morehead Selections Are Near

The winners of the 1962 Morehead Scholarship competition are being selected this weekend and will be announced over regional television Tuesday by John Motley Morehead. The winners are being selected from 67 finalists from North Carolina high schools and selected prep schoous in the South and East.

WUNC-TV

The broadcasts will originate here by WUNC-TV, Channel 4, and will be carried live by the following television stations: WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Greenville; WECT-TV, Channel 6, Wilmington; WSJS-TV, Channel 12, Winston-Salem; and WBTV-TV, Channel 3,, Charlotte. Delayed broadcasts will be carried at a later date by television stations in Greensboro, Durham and Asheville.

The all-expense-paid Morehead Scholarships were first awarded in 1951. They were established by John Motley Morehead as part of the John Motley Morehead Foundation at the University of North Carolina. Morehead, who is 91, is a native North Carolinian, now living in Rye, N. Y. He is an executive with the Union Carbide Corp., New York City.

The Morehead Scholarships are considered among the most valuable in the nation. They are worth $5,100 for four years of study to North Carolina residents and $6,800 to non-residents, allowing for the tuition differential.

Since 1951, a total of 318 Morehead Scholarships have been awarded.

Committeeman Will Address YDC Friday

YDC National Committeemen J. Albert House will address the first general session of the annual Statewide College Rally of Young Democrats Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The session will follow registration at the Law School 3-5 p.m. and supper upstairs in Lenoir Hall at 6. Members of the Permanent Rally Committee will be selected at the meeting.

At 9 there will be a dance and a meeting of the State Federation Committee at the School of Law.

State Chairman Bert Bennet and State Democratic Executive Secretary Tom Davis will be the featured speakers at a breakfast at the Carolina Inn at 7:45 a.m. Saturday.

After the breakfast a general session will be held at Graham Memorial with State YDC President Wiliam "Dub" Graham as speaker.

Peace Corps, Operation Support and the Committee On Political Education (COPE) will be topics of discussion in seminars from 10-11 and 11:15-12:15 a.m. at Graham Memorial.

The Rally will end after a general session at 1:30 at the School of Law when the State Federation Committee will give its report.

Chilean Envoy To Visit UNC

Sergio Gutierrez Olivo, Chilean ambassador to Argentina, will visit UNC from Saturday to Wednesday.

Ambassador Olivo will be primarily visiting the Department of Political Science and the Institute of Latin American Studies. Dr. Frederico Gil, director of the Latin American Institute, will be Ambassador Olivo's official UNC host.

The visiting diplomat will meet with Consolidated University President William C. Friday and with University Chancellor William B. Aycock. He will also conduct a seminar in the Department of Political Science.

French Battle Moslems

ALGIERS (UPI) — French Zouave troops stormed into the Casbah Friday and battled Moslems with tommyguns and riflebutts to stop the 80,000 residents of the storied native quarter from invading the city's European sections in an orgy of revenge.

Police said five Moslems, one soldier and a Jewish painter were killed and eight moslems wounded in the battle which raged for half an hour through the lower sections of the sprawling, squalid and disease-ridden quarter built on heights overlooking the harbor.

Moslems Killed

Lesser violence erupted in the port of Oran where soldiers opened fire on an Arab crowd demonstrating in the Moslem suburb of Lamur but the crowd scattered quickly and no casualties were reported. In Mers-El-Kebir, six miles to the west, Europeans hacked five Moslems to death in street fighting.

The casualty toll in these and other isolated outbreaks of stabbings and shootings throughout Algeria brought the toll for the day to 34 killed and 35 wounded by 6 p.m. This brought the total since Jan. 1 to 1,308 killed and 2,182 wounded.

Car Set Afire

The Algerians who live in the Casbah were inflamed after a series of scattered European terrorist attacks beginning at 8 a.m. They threatened to pour out of their hillside quarters into the city proper despite a massive turnout of French troops. One group overturned and set afire to a European car parked on the street.

UNC BUILDING

Telescope To Probe Space

By JIM NEAL

UNC physicists are building a telescope that is not a telescope. It has no lenses and is not in a tube.

This "telescope" will have radiation detectors instead of glass lenses, said Prof. E. D. Palmatier, chairman of the Physics Department and head of the project.

It is a telescope because the detectors will have a common axis, like the lenses in an optical instrument.

NASA Project

The telescope is part of a $65,000 research program sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It will be sent up in a satellite to investigate the number and make-up of primary cosmic particles approaching the earth.

"The detectors will record any cosmic particles which pass through them both." Dr. Palmatier said. The satellite will operate only above the Van Allen radiation belts.

Cosmic radiation particles are the nuclei of atoms, stripped of their electrons. They travel at the speed of light, and have great energy. Primary particles are those which have not entered the earth's atmosphere.

Speed And Energy

Cosmic particles have such speed and energy that they have been found at depths of four miles in the earth. There is no effective shield against them, Dr. Palmatier said, and a tube around the radiation telescope would be ineffective.

In an optical instrument, the tube is used to keep out light which would confuse the observer. It only allows light traveling parallel to the tube into the lenses.

Mechanical Trouble Blamed For Crash

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mechanical failure in the control system apparently caused the mysterious death dive of an American Airlines jetliner into Jamaica Bay Thursday with the loss of all 95 persons aboard, the nation's federal aviation chief said Friday.

FAA Administrator Najeeb E. Halaby, summarizing first findings of the investigation during a speech to FAA employes in Washington, said "there was no evidence of sabotage or pilot error" in the crash and "apparently no indication of power plant failure."

Sabotage Denied

His denial of sabotage apparently wrote off as a hoax an anonymous bomb threat made against this morning's Los Angeles-bound American Airlines Flight 1 — the same flight that plummeted to earth without warning from sparkling skies Thursday.

The call resulted in cancellation of the flight. A search turned up nothing.

Theory

Halaby stressed that at such an early stage of the investigation — with much of the wreckage and a number of bodes still buried in the murky bay waters — any explanation of Thursday's crash was merely a theory. But he added: "It appears to have been some kind of mechanical failure in some part of the control system."

His statement appeared to back up speculation by veteran pilots that the $6 million jet had suddenly become locked in a death dive into the bay while its pilot struggled helplessly to pull it out of a sharp bank and left turn prescribed by Idlewild Airport rules.

The Asphalt Jungle (tonight's free flick) stars Sterling Hayden, Jean Hagen, Sam Jaffe, Louis Calhern and Marilyn Monroe. Directed by John Huston, this is a crime melodrama of a jewel theft, and the criminals' human failings.

Local Artists To Have Exhibits

By EDITH ALSTON

The Paintings Upstairs gallery on West Franklin Street has announced a new group showing by local artists that will begin March 12.

The proprietors, Jean Haslem and Eleanor Smith, feature original works at their gallery. Referring to the one man exhibit by artist Robert Shannon, which closes next week. Mrs. Haslam said, "We have gotten a wonderful response throughout the area. It has been a great success." The gallery features a new collection of works on sale each month.

Nine Artists

The display beginning March 12 will be the work of nine artetchings, and sculpture, both realists including paintings, drawings, istic and abstract. The works will range in price from two to two hundred dollars, slightly less than those of Mr. Shannon.

Several of the artists are students or graduates of the art department of the University of North Carolina.

Welded Sculpture

Dwayne Lowder is working towards his Masters in creative art at UNC and will display some of his welded sculpture.

Tim Murray came from Reading England to study art at Chapel Hill and is working toward his Masters degree in art.

James M. Haymaker received his Master in Art Education from UNC and has taught in the Chapel Hill school system. He will display three abstract paintings.

Irene Reichert worked as an assistant in the Art Department of the University of Alabama, from which she graduated, and studied under a Fulbright grant at the Universities of Innsbruck and Vienna.

Others

Other artists displaying their works will be Mary Ligon Seegroves of Charlotte. Lynn Deal of Chapel Hill, and Eleanor Smith and Jane Haslam, both of Chapel Hill.

The Gallery is open 10-5 Monday through Friday except for Wednesday afternoons, 10-1 Wednesday and Saturday, and 2-5 on Sunday. Beside displaying paintings for sale the gallery offers art lessons, for individuals or groups, and art materials at a 10% reduction.

State Receives AEC Contract

RALEIGH (UPI) — North Carolina State College has received a $25,223 Atomic Energy Commission research contract.

Announcement of the contract was made today by Dr. J. Harold Lampe, dean of engineering, and N. W. Conner, director of engineering research.

The one-year research program will be conducted by Dr. J. K. Ferrell, chemical engineering professor at State College.

After Accosting

Village Patrols Increased

By GARRY BLANCHARD

University officials have ordered a temporary increase in night-time patrols of Victory Village in the wafe of a student wife being accosted by a man with a gun—possibly fake—behind her Hibbard Street home Wednesday night.

Bloodhounds brought in to track the man shortly after 10 p.m. Wednesday reportedly disclosed that his trail led past some 20 windows in the married-students housing area.

Meanwhile, no new developments have been reported in the continuing search for the intruder, but authorities say he fits the description of the man seen prowling in several area homes last spring, when a series of at least eight such incidents began.

The announcement of increased patrols followed a meeting between Chancellor W. B. Aycock, University Business Manager Arthur Branch and the Law School husband of the woman accosted Wednesday.

Stop-Gap Measure

Chancellor Aycock said the order is a stopgap measure which will remain in effect until the area's student Board of Directors recommends specific measures for permanently increased protection. The board is to meet early next week.

This order applies only to campus police, but Chapel Hill Police Chief W. D. Blake and Orange County Sheriff C. D. Knight say their departments are cooperating. The area is just outside the Chapel Hill town limits and technically is the responsibility of the Sheriff's Office.

Several of the previously reported cases of assaults or attempted assalts on women in the area involved white men, authorities say, and most concern women who are nurses at (N. C. Memorial Hospital. All of the cases are under investigation by the State Bureau of Invesrigation.

Latest Incident

In this latest incident, the student wife reported she was hanging up clothes when the Negro man suddenly appeared through a line of clothes. She said he put his hand on her shoulder, stuck a pistol in her face and calmly told her "This is a hold-up." Police say the gun may have been a toy.

She pulled away and ran into the house screaming, she said, whereupon the man turned and strolled nonchalantly away into the woods beyond the clothesline. Officers believe the man had a car parked near the village utility area several hundred yards away, where his trail faded out.

20 Man Force

Campus Safety Officer Arthur J. Beaumont says the campus police force numbers 20 men, including himself. Six of the twenty are inside guards at the Hospital and Woollen Gymnasium, leaving thirteen for regular patrol duty.

Beaumont said yesterday he has requested more men, and university officials say they may be forthcoming after next years budget is approved by the state legislature.

"We only get called in when something happens," Beaumont said. "The big thing in our favor is that we have students who are cooperative. We couldn't possibly police the whole (9,000-student) campus all the time."

Should Fees Be Voluntary

Yack And DTH

Several times in the past few years, the question of voluntary subscription to student publications has come up in regard to the Yackety Yack and the Daily Tar Heel.

While it is generally believed that most students here are willing to have the cost of the Yack and DTH automatically included in the student activities fees, this is merely an assumption. The Student Legislature annually appropriates about $25,000 for costs of the DTH and about $32,000 for the Yack. This amounts to roughly $3 per student for the DTH and $3.50 for the Yack.

Periodically, various students or groups have requested that either or both of these fees be deducted from their activities fee on the grounds that they did not want to subscribe.

Just how many students feel this way is not known, since no poll or referendum has been taken.

We feel that voluntary subscription to either publication would be impractical. The problem of delivering the DTH to only those students who desire to subscribe to it would be troublesome and expensive.

With the Yack, no problem would occur in distribution, but it would be virtually impossible to print it unless a sufficient number of students ordered them, since the cost per book goes up as the number printed goes down.

However, this is a question which should be decided by student opinion. If most of the student body does not want either the DTH or the Yack, then there is little reason for these students to have to pay for them.

We propose that the spring elections this year include a ballot for choice between voluntary subscription and inclusion in student fees for the Yack and the DTH.

Campus Chest

Each year, as a matter of course, this newspaper puts in an editorial plug for the Campus Chest fund-raising drive. This has always seemed a little ridiculous, actually, since it doesn't seem very likely that the editor would OPPOSE the project.

We point this out only because we would like this request for support to be considered, not as one made merely as a matter of course, but as a special plea for a particular mental health hospital to which Campus Chest funds will go this year.

The decision to give Chest funds this year to the Children's Mental Health Clinic located in Butner, N. C., was made, not as an indiscriminate choice between various programs which need funds, but because the hospital in Butner is desperatedly in need.

We will not run through the catalogue of reasons why mental health programs—and particularly children's mental health hospitals —need more money.

The reasons are there, and all who are sceptical have but to visit one of the hospitals to change his mind. There is never enough money, never enough equipment for adequate treatment and research.

What we do want to say is this: the Campus Chest this year did not have to look around for projects to assist; the need was evident.

Contributions to the Campus Chest drive last year averaged less than 10 cents per student. Perhaps this was because contributors were not made aware of how much the money was needed.

This year, no one needs look twice.

Home?

The State College student government is unanimous in wanting all State College's home basketball games played at home, and not in Charlotte, 150 miles away. You can't blame the students.. It's kind of discouraging to have to travel 150 miles to see a home basketball game. It's not only discouraging, it just doesn't make sense.

Apparently State College officials are committed now to playing that "home" game next year in a Charlotte basketball tournament. If they're committed, they'll probably have to go through with the arrangement, though they earlier had had the good commonsense to discontinue it now once this commitment is out of the way.

State College students aren't the only ones irritated at this business of "home" games 150 miles away from home. So are State College alumni in this area, and other supporters of State College here.

And while they are considering the evils of "home" basketball games in Charlotte, State College officials should review again the fact that its "home" football game with Carolina is always played at Carolina. Money is the reason there, since both teams can make more money when they play in the larger stadium at Chapel Hill.

But State College students and supporters here are getting more than weary about that important "home" game always being played away from home.

"Ah, It's Good To Get Out Of Costume And Relax'

History's Devious Path

History treads a devious path. We can see what has happened in the past by studying charts, texts, and data. However, years must be spent in study or research to enable us to understand the feelings and emotions, the thoughts and ideas, and the situations and problems which contribute to the complexity of history.

The tortuous unraveling of the chronicles of the past reveal to us many men. We see some in a very good light, as heroes. The villains are painted so because they have been on the losing side, be the battle physical or ideological. That is, the role of hero or villain, just or unjust, is inexorably decided in the eyes of the beholder (to prostitute a phrase). The historian may attempt to be objective, but the mindset of the era will suffice to consign the subject to fame or infamy.

Two men, about whose fate it is interesting to speculate, have been in the news recently. Francis Gary Powers and John H. Glenn, Jr. What will be their historical signifigance?

We all know Glenn's status presently. He is the man of the moment, the greatest hero the United States has produced since "Lucky Lindy" in 1927. Actually, we could say without fear of rebuttal that he is in fact a hero of Western Civilization.

What of Powers? Can we say with certainty that he is a hero or a villain? Granted, we have yet to learn the complete story behind the escapade which catapulted him into the realm of international relations. We can only speculate if he is a hero to his country or a traitor. There are adherents to both sides. History may show him to be as tragic a figure as Benedict Arnold, an early Revolutionary War hero, whom fate has turned into a traitor.

The effect of the flights that these two pilots took were, in essence, opposite to each other. Certainly they have had reverberations stretching across the glode.

Francis Powers was a spy. He was sent on high altitude intelligence flights across the USSR. Immediately prior to the Summit Conference of May, 1960, he was shot down over Russia. His existence proved a potent tool for the break-up of this conference.

A sudden deep freeze fell over the world situation. American prestige fell to the blade of this weapon. The ensuing trial, in which Powers spoke rather freely, shoved the US further into the hole of degradation.

Since then, a series of space accomplishments have raised the prestige of the Russians. If the pattern of recent events can be accepted as any criteria, then the spectacular flight of the Friendship 7 should shake the apathetic picture of the United States held by many foreigners.

Glenn's flight appears to have provided quite an impetus for further work. International relations, in a very cool state since the U-2 incident, sems to have warmed ever so slightly as evidenced by the exchange of messages between East and West concerning mutual cooperation in space. The three orbit trip of the American astronaut may thus have more than merely scientific effect.

In the overall picture of American prestige, this may provide the greatest change since the Powers episode. Scientifically, a tremendous stride was taken. Politically, the picture of the US as a war monger (as has been drawn since May, 1960) could be, to an extent, obliterated. For example, the accumulated data of the flight are open to all for peaceful research.

We are not attempting to equate or compare Powers or Glenn. We indulge only in speculation as to their significance now and in the future. Will history be kind to John Glenn, or reduce him to obscurity? Will, perhaps, Francis Powers appear as a hero to future historians, or merely as a pawn in the hands of great manipulators?

Could there be events in the history of the future that will send both of these pilots to historical oblivion? Or, could a power upheaval completely negate the influence of these two men. How devious a path history does tread.

—KEN TOPPELL

Reflections

The oldest buildings on campus can usually be distinguished by a heavy coat of dead ivy, a squeaky floor, or a leaky roof. Professors must be distinguished as to their time of service in much different manners.

The aging prof wears proudly a moth eaten coat of elegant tweed which he bought on a year's salary during the depression. His voice has lost its squeakiness, and has matured into a resonant bass. And his roof leaks too. His once proud, stray-haired locks have grown sparse, letting quite a bit of shiny pate show through.

Double endorsement by campus political parties is an issue that has always played an important part in many elections. Many office seekers are candidates first and party men second. Ironically, the candidate that gets endorsement by both parties is usually not one who agrees with both factions, but one who has a weak stand on most issues. He may have a wide political appeal, but he is usually a political illiterate. This campus may be able to tolerate independents, but the doubly-endorsed candidate will soon become extinct.

Campus parties, in order to be successful, must be able to face in many directions at one time. There are so many different groups around that they must satisfy to get votes.

As long as most students can remember, the two "factions" existing on campus are "frat men" and "dorm men." The party that wins the most votes is usually the one that can throw its prettiest face toward both of these groups. The differences that exist between the two powerful factions are primarily ill-conceived, or don't really exist, but it looks as if again they will play a major part in the March 27 elections.

Yesterday was the twenty-first birthday of campus politics H. G. (Bud) Broome Jr. His friends and enemies wish him many happy returns (political and social.)

My forbears were workers of the soil, but yours were ignorant peasants.

I give my subordinates a bit of advice for their own good; you give warnings; he makes threats.

My child engaged in a harmless escapade; your child took part in a mischievous prank; his child is the leader of a gang of delinquents.

I sincerely believe that "too much prosperity" as a nation makes us flabby and lazy and decreases our intitiative — but I personally have not reached, nor ever expect to reach, the point of "too much prosperity." Has anyone, in his own view?

I am tender-hearted; you are sentimental; he is soft-headed.

Somethin' Else—Masi

If you are in the mainstream of academic life at the University of North Carolina, or even if you are a Business major, you occasionally put down your copy of SEX LIFE OF A COP or WINNIE THE POOH long enough to attend a flick at the Variety or Carolina theaters.

If it was your supreme misfortune to forsake Pooh Bear and the gang for an evening at the Varsity last week, you probably enjoyed some parts of LOVER COME BACK, but never really got a good look at the million dollar kisser of Doris Day.

The close-up cameras insisted on treating dear old Doris with the tenderness that a Chicken might display for a hard-boiled egg, or an Otter for a Harpsichord (if you happen to know). The crows feet of the commoners and wrinkles of other chicks of Doris' age all melted (rather like Cheese!) into a golden and (sometimes) light blue halo about her cheeks and eyes, giving her the aspect of a Provolone and tomato wedge. Her hair was clearly seen, however, as were her ankles and elbows, but I find little to be thankful about in such non-cathartic elements.

The entire flick was a mess. Its reliance on a flood of running jokes removed it from any possible claim to Comedy. It's as if someone tickles you and calls himself a Comedian.

After this flop there was nothing more to see except the newsreel, the Coming Attractions, and a cartoon in which a Mouse chases a Cat, a Canary engulfs a Whale, and a Sailor chug-a-lugs a can of Spinach.

Who's pulling my leg?

Student Legislators Did What They Thought Right

The anoymous article concerning the heinous act of the Student Legislature in sending a note to the president of the United States suggesting that we might stop nuclear testing was a brilliant, scintillatingly inaccurate piece of mush.

Democracy is government by the will of the people. A republic is the idea of having a government by representation. The representatives are impowered by the people to act as they see fit.

The question of whether or not the representative has the right to do something not explicitly outlined for him by the constitution under which he operates has been asked for centuries.

It was asked of Thomas Jefferson when he purchased Louisiana, and of the representatives of the Third Estate when they defied the king of France to meet in the Tennis courts and declare a Republic.

The eighteen legislators who voted for the resolution, did what they thought was right. They were elected and put in office by students who were confident that the legislators would do what they felt was right. That is democracy. Fear of taking action or intiative is fear and nothing more. The question of the justification of the legislature in passing the resolution is something that should be handled in the coming elections, not by some self appointed vigilante committee waving a petition in the air.

In almost every country in the world students have provided a force leading towards progress and freedom.

Almost every major university in the United States is now discussing and unifying public opinion on national matters.

Government by the people of a nation depends for its existence on discussion and opinion. The universities have the duty to sponsor opinion not mutilate it.

If UNC remains silent it will be nothing strange or different. It would simply be a re-iteration of what Thomas Wolfe said and of What Yardley said, that the University is filled with nice, indolent, complacent, stagnant, easy going fellows who are not too enthusiastic about anything and don't really give a damn.

It is almost as if there is some general belief that the South has lost her right to speak out in National politics and to lead the nation. Who ever it was who wrote that the legislature should stay glued to campus affairs, was saying just that.

Most universities are speaking out now. The legislature is the best voice UNC has or can hope to have. We are advancing or decaying. It is essential that we advance, and that when we advance UNC be a contributing part of the advancement.

A man who is afraid to think or to talk or to act has no right existing in a democracy. He is more dead weight than a help. A university that is too afraid or two apathetic or too disjointed to have a voice, is on the same level.

Machines can think and learn to read and write; a good deal more goes into making a man. Men, not machines make democracies.

Mr. Whateverhisnamewas came up with an interesting point: if the student body has a voice let it be heard now. If someone says or does something that you don't like, stand up to it, and say you don't like it.

Now is the choice. Elections come in the spring. Those elections will decide whether the next legislature will be able to speak out when it is time for UNC to stand for something, or whether it will be afraid of its own shadow.

The choice is between a university that is alive and a part of a growing nation, and a university that is not much more than a gangrenous sponge. The choice is between life and death, not just of UNC but of everything that this Nation once stood for.

Reservists' Releases Scheduled

WASHINGTON (UPI)—An estimated 3,100 military reservists will be released early from active duty so they can study or teach in schools and colleges, the Defense Department announced Friday.

The men will be allowed to return to civilian life up to 90 days before the end of the one-year terms for which they were mobilized last fall. Those planning to attend summer session or the regular term next fall are eligible.

School Releases

Most of those involved already were entitled to early releases for school purposes. But a Defense Department directive spelling out the policy extended eligibility to elementary and secondary school teachers.

A department spokesman estimated that between 600 and 700 teachers and 2,500 students would apply for the early releases, limited to 10 days before the start of a school term. A total of 156,000 reservists were called to active duty in the Berlin crisis last fall.

Other Releases

The spokesman said early releases for school purposes were granted to members of the regular forces near the end of enlistment terms. Similar early releases can be obtained for seasonal employment or other hardship reasons.

This means early releases might be granted to a baseball player for spring training or to a farmer for summer harvesting, the department spokesman said.

The department said no decision had been made on when the bulk of the reservists would be returned to civilian life.

Dental Pictures To Be Widely Used

Motion pictures to be filmed in the UNC School of Dentistry March 13 will be used for training dental assistants in dental assistants in dental schools throughout the United States.

Three training films will be produced under directions of the UNC Bureau of Audio-Visual Education here. They will be filmed at the TV studios here.

Dr. John O. Wilson of Atlanta, an authority in the field of dental practice administration, has been selected as the principal practitioner in the films. Each of the three films will be 15 minutes in length.

The project is being sponsored by the Manpower and Education Branch, Division of Dental Public Health and Resources of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Nationwide Use

It is planned to distribute these films to other dental schools throughout the United States. They will be used to train dental, students how to work effectively with a dental assistant.

On Monday, March 12, Dr. Wilson will address the faculty and the student body of the School of Dentistry, plus members of the Durham-Orange County Dental Society.

He will speak at 8 p.m. in the Health Affairs Auditorium of the N. C. Memorial Hospital.

On Monday, a "dry run" of the three movies will be made and the actual filming will be completed Tuesday.

Emory Grad

Dr. Wilson is a graduate of the Emory University School of Dentistry. He was a member of the faculty at Emory from 1947 to 1954. He is a member of numerous professional and scientific societies including the American Academy of Oral Medicine and the American Academy of Practice Administration.

During World War II he served as a dental officer with the U. S. Navy and at present is a commander in the U. S. Navy Reserve Dental Corps.

Dr. Wilson has done extensive research in the field of time and motion studies as applied to dental operations, modern dental office design and the developments of teaching aid and the use of instruments in the field of oral processes.

K's Summit Stand Might Hurt Arms Talk

LONDON (UPI) — Leading diplomats feared Friday that Premier Nikita Khrushchev's continued insistence on an immediate summit meeting spelled trouble for the March 14 Geneva disarmament conference.

Khrushchev renewed his call for the summit meeting in letters to five government chiefs in the past 24 hours. The Soviet leader warned that only a top-level meeting could set the forthcoming Geneva meeting on a successful course.

He did so Friday in letters to the Italian and Nigerian premiers. Thursday he wrote on the same lines to President Charles de Gaulle, Canadian Premier John Diefenbaker and Swedish Premier Tage Erlanger.

Government officials here were awaiting a reply from Khrushchev to the latest proposals from President Kennedy and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan which suggested earlier this week that a summit be put off until the Geneva conference has produced something for the government chiefs to talk about.

Time is running short, the Geneva conference is due to open March 14. Kennedy and Macmillan, moreover, have proposed that their foreign ministers meet with Russia's Andrei Gromyko around March 12 to discuss nuclear tests and Berlin.

Moscow has given no indication thus far to London or Washington whether or not Khrushchev would go to Geneva, even if Kennedy and Macmillan stay away from the opening stage of the conference.

Demand Present

Khrushchev's letters to the leaders of five nations, who will be represented at the Geneva conference indicated clearly Friday that he has not dropped his demand for an immediate 18-nation summit.

Said one weary official when asked how he interpreted Khrushchev's latest letters: "we don't interpret them, we just read them."

Some diplomats believed Khrushchev was not in favor of the Kennedy-Macmillan proposed meeting of the Big Three foreign ministers.

According to official sources, Foreign Secretary Lord Home and Secretary of State Dean Rusk intend in any case to go to Geneva for the opening of the March 14 conference.

United Nations Cheers Glenn In Rare Show Of Enthusiasm

NEW YORK (UPI) — Astronaut John Glenn conquered a new world Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zerin gave him personal greetings from Premier Nikita S. .Khrushchev and 600 U. N. diplomats and other spectators stood and cheered for a full minute in a manner rarely seen in this world of stiffly starched protocol and decorum.

"Overwhelmed"

Glenn said he was "overwhelmed all over again."

Glenn, his six fellow astronauts and their wives and families visited the United Nations as guests of Acting Secretary General Thant who gave them a champagne and punch reception on the 38th floor of the blass and marble Secretariat Building.

The blonde Marine hero seemed astonished when Dr. Ralph Bunche, undersecretary for special political affairs and the ranking American in the U. N. organization, asked for his autograph.

Started Off Early

Glenn, who received the most roaring welcome in the history of New York during a ticker tape parade Thursday through the canyon of heroes, got an early start Friday for his adventures in the worl dof diplomacy.

Despite a night on the town that included a visit to a hit musical and the Empire Room of the Waldorf-Astoria, Glenn was up early to receive still another honor—a scroll and resolution from the city of New York, a scroll from the National Association of Manufacturers, a red leather-bound Bible and a golden trumpet.

Toots And Grin

The 40-year-old astronaut who once played a trumpet in a high school band called the instrument a "beauty." At the instigation of newsmen present he sounded a few tentative toots and flashed his grin in appreciation.

He was eight minutes early for his arrival at the United Nations. The millions who thronged the streets Thursday were back at work and his motorcade sped through the streets with no delay. He was accompanied by Ambassador Adlai Stephenson .

Waved At Workers

The bare-headed, ruddy-faced Marine arrived with his smiling wife Annie in an open car with Stevenson, waved at U. N. workers on hand to see him and walked through sub-freezing sunshine into the U. N. building, eight minutes early.

The Soviet Ambassador sought out Glenn and warmly shook his hand. He said he brought personal congratulations from Khrushchev who previously had sent them through President Kennedy. Zorin and Glenn talked animatedly through an interpreter for several minutes.

Cheered For Minute

From the reception Glenn and the astronauts descended to the Economic and Social Council Chamber. The 600 diplomats, tourists, newsmen and U. N. employes present cheered for a full minute while the astronaut's father, John H. Glenn Sr., raised his hands over his head in a boxer's victory signal he used when his son addressed a joint session of Congress earlier this week.

Glenn leaves for his hometown of New Concord, Ohio, Saturday and then the other astronauts report to Cape Canaveral. Glenn joins them Monday.

Red China Postpones Congress

LONDON (UPI) — Communist China Friday announced postponement of a national People's Congress scheduled to open in Peiping Monday as arrival to a similar Moscow meeting. Diplomatic sources believe the move indicates Peiping is reluctant to force an immediate showdown with Moscow.

No Reason Given

The Communist New China news agency announced that the Peiping rally—first of its kind in two years—has been put off until March 19. It gave no reason for the delay.

But diplomatic sources said the move appears to have been largely, if not exclusively, prompted by China's desire to gain time and await Moscow's next step in the Sino-Soviet ideological conflict.

Await Decision

The sources believe Mao Tze-tung and other Peiping leaders particularly wanted to see what decisions come out of the Moscow party Central Committee meeting which—by design or coincidence—also was scheduled for March 5.

The Moscow meeting ostensibly is designed to deal with the complex problems of Russian agriculture. But the Peiping-Moscow conflict is understood to rank high on the agenda.

South Carolina Stops UNC In ACC Tournament, 57-55

By ED DUPREE

Carolina's last basketball game of the season was as hectic a contest as Coach Dean Smith's boys could have asked for.

Before a near capacity crowd of 12,000 in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum Thursday, Bob Stevens' battling South Carolina Gamecocks came from 11 points behind to edge past the Tar Heels 57-55. The win advanced the boys from Columbia to the semifinals against Wake Forest, an 81-58 winner over Virginia.

The two teams, who tied for fourth in the ACC's regular season with 7-7 marks, showed the aroused fans just how much basketball could be played in one short minute. The score was 52-52 at the 1:32 mark when USC's Bud Cronin connected on a field goal to give the Gamecocks a 54-52 advantage.

Larry Brown, UNC's high scorer with 18 points, tried one of his nifty two-handed sets, but the ball missed its mark. The 5-11 Carolina playmaker came out with the ball in the scramble for the rebound and the blue-jersied Heels had the ball again.

This time 6-8 Jim Hudock, one of the three UNC seniors playing their last game, went up for one of his deadly jump shots—but again the sphere refused to drop. South Carolina came back with the rebound at the 0:55 mark.

The remaining 55 seconds saw everything happen. South Carolina's one-eyed guard Scotti Ward was fouled and missed his first shot on a one-and-one opportunity. In another battle for the loose ball UNC's Charlie Shaffer fouled Ronnie Collins and the 6-3 sophomore calmly sank two shots to give the Roosters a 56-52 lead.

Five seconds later Donnie Walsh was fouled by Ward and when the Gamecocks complained too violently, referee Lennie Wertz called a technical foul. With 0:39 on the clock, Walsh was on the foul line with a one-and-one situation. The Tar Heel senior guard missed his shot.

Then the other half of Smith's sparkling backcourt combo, Brown, stepped to the stripe to take the technical shot. It dropped and the margin was narrowed to three points, 56-53.

Carolina brought the ball in from midcourt, but at the 0:32 clocking Brown was called for charging—it was his fifth offensive foul and the UNC hustler was replaced by Bryan McSweeney.

South Carolina's Art Whisnant had a pass intercepted by the Tar Heels, but the Heels just as quickly lost the ball on a bad pass of their own. Then a South Carolina pass was caught at midcourt by Shaffer who spotted Mike Cooke free under the basket. He rifled a pass and Cooke layed it in. UNC was behind 56-55 and USC had ball possession with 16 seconds remaining.

Whisnant controlled the ball for most of the next 13 seconds and was finally fouled with three seconds remaining. He hit the first shot to make it 57-55. His second attempt missed the mark and McSweeney hauled down the rebound and called time out.

Some fans left, but most of them stayed on. Perhaps they remembered an early season game at Duke, which N. C. State won by one point on a desperation inbounds toss and a last second shot by John Punger.

Touchdown Pass Falls

Shaffer, a football quarterback in the fall, was given the chore of heaving the pass. His target was Cooke who fired the shot from near midcourt, but the shot fell short and Carolina's shortest basketball season since 1933 was over.

The first half was close all the way. A two-pointer by Shaffer gave UNC a 20-12 lead, the largest of the half. Brown, minutes earlier, at the 10:32 mark had drawn his third foul and was forced to the bench for the remainder of the half. South Carolina cut away at the lead and was down only 24-19 when Whisnant hit a foul shot.

From there Bobby Robinson and Shaffer went on a two man scoring binge. Robinson scored to close the gap to three, but Shaffer popped one in to make it 26-21. Shaffer hit a free throw, but Robinson scored two more and added a free throw seconds later. Carolina left the floor with a 27-26 lead.

In the opening six minutes of the second stanza Carolina was a ball of fire. Brown scored six points on two jumps and a driving layup, Walsh added five on three foul shots and a jumper, and Shaffer accounted for three as the Tar Heels ran to a 41-30 lead. But the Tar Heels went cold and scored only three, while the Gamecocks tallied 11.

Walsh hit one of two foul shots and Brown connected on a short jump and the lead was back to six, at 47-41. Cronin narrowed it to 49-46 minutes later, but Walsh hit a sparkling driving layup at the 4:35 mark to recapture the five-point lead.

Fouls Galore

Whisnant scored from the foul line, Robinson hit one of two from the same place and Shaffer hit a foul shot to make it 52-48. The fouls continued to roll in and Whisnant hit two free shots at the 3:48 mark to narrow the Tar Heel advantage to only two points. Robinson tied it at 2:42 and Carolina never saw the lead again.

The Carolina five worked the ball around (following a time out) and played for nothing but the best shot. Brown spotted a man open under the basket and threw a pass, but Whisnant intercepted it for South Carolina. Stevens' men then called time.

Fourteen seconds later Cronin scored to give the Roosters the lead and the scoreboard clock slowly ticked off a USC win.

UNC outshot the Gamecocks from the floor, 40.7 per cent to 33.3, but their two point margin from the floor was topped by USC's 15-11 advantage on the foul line.

Liston Agrees To NBA Cut, Will Fight Floyd In June

By RUSS GREEN

PHILADELPHIA (UP) — Tough and determined Sonny Liston said Friday that he would fight heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson in June and if necessary let the National Boxing Association set the percentage for his share of the gate.

His anouncement came after he first turned down 12½ per cent, backed by a $200,000 guarantee, offered by Championship Sports, Inc., and Tom and Al Bolan, the promoting brothers.

Liston asked 20 per cent of the live gate and ancillary rights, expected to reach $10,000,000 from all sources, and was still pressing for that cut.

The challenger and his attorney Morton Witkin said in a joint statement Friday that he thought he was entitled to more than the 12½ per cent offered.

But, the fighter and lawyer said, "if the NBA or its duly authorized representatives are of the opinion the 12½ per cent as offered is fair and equitable, Sonny will sign for the fight at 12½ per cent."

Witkin said if the NBA believed the offer was not equitable, and that Sonny's unwillingness to sign was a reasonable request, he would be guided by its decision and fight for a percentage the association deemed reasonable."

"In short, the NBA can write the ticket and we will buy it," Witkin said.

He continued that neither Liston nor he wished "to infringe upon the powers and-or the duties and obligations of the NBA."

Witkin said he was sending a copy of the statement to Bolan, and to Paul Sullivan of Pittsburgh, a Pennsylvania state athletic commissioner who is chairman of the NBA championship committee.

Bolan, in New York, termed the offer to let the NBA decide "ridiculous" and said it was not within the association's province to enter the negotiations.

"The NBA doesn't have the right to set up the percentage and I don't think it would want to handle the matter," Bolin said, adding that it merely named Liston as the logical contender and "if he rejects what it believes is a reasonable offer, he no longer can be considered."

But Bolan said he was pleased that Liston appeared content to accept the 12½ per cent.

Witkin revealed—he said for the first time—that the Patterson camp asked that Liston deposit $150,000 to insure a return match, even before the first match is signed.

The attorney, who said this was in addition to the "substantial portion" asked to be withheld from Liston's purse as a return match guarantee, called it "an unwarranted demand."

Wake Tops Gamecocks

Two much Len Chappell. That was the story of Wake Forest's 88-75 victory over South Carolina in Friday's semi-final round of the ACC tournament.

Big Lennie poured in 38 points to run his career total to 2000 as the Demon Deacons pulled away from a determined South Carolina team in the final five minutes.

South Carolina took a 43-41 lead into the second half, but the Smaller Gamecocks could not cope with Bones McKinnedy's men in the stretch drive.

Bob Woollard's short presence in the Wake lineup was an important factor in the contest. The 6-10 Deac drew his third foul with 15:31 to go in the first half and didn't return until five and a half minutes of the second period had passed.

When Woollard entered the game, South Carolina led 57-52, but the lanky Baptist cager teamed with Chappell to smash South Carolina's upset hopes. Chappell scored and Woollard hit a pair of layups to give Wake Forest the lead at 58-57. After that, the Deacs never trailed. Tim McCoy and Ronnie Collins exchanged foul shots and then the Deacs went on an eight-point scoring streak interrupted only by a Scotti Ward jump shot. When Chappell hit on a three-point play at the 7:52 mark, the Deacs led 68-60.

Four straight foul shots by Collins closed the gap to 70-67 by the 5:46 mark. From then on it was all Chappell as he scored 12 points in the final five minutes. Billy Packer scored 16 points, Woollard, 13, and Dave Wiedemen, 11 as the Deacs hit 50.8 from the floor. Chappell hit 12 of 17 field goal attempts and 14 of 17 free tosses.

Collins with six field goals and eight for eight on the foul line, led the Gamecocks with 20 points. Bobby Robinson had 16, Art Whisnant, 15 and Bud Croin 14. South Carolina hit 41.5 from the floor but added a fabulous 31 for 34 on the foul line.

Measuring Distances

NO CHAPEL HILL hasn't become a missile tracking station. This wierd looking machine is a telerometer designed to aid surveyors on measuring distances. Men from Alster & Associates of Washington, D. C. came here Friday to survey for a new map. The telerometer bounces a radar beam off of distant object so that the distance from the telerometer to that object can be completed.

SP, Up Hold Convetnions On Monday

By BILL WUAMETT

Campus politics will be in full swing Monday night as the Student Party convenes to nominate all of its candidates for the spring elections and the University Party holds its second convention to complete its slate of nominees.

The SP will meet in Howell Hall and the UP will meet in Memorial Hall. Both conventions will start at 7 p.m.

The four nominations for the student body offices are expected to dominatte the SP convention. Four candidates have been mentioned at this time for the office of president. Dwight Wheless, Mike Lawler, Bud Broome and Robin Britt are all expected to try for the nomination.

May Try For VP

One or more of these four may withdraw, however, and run for the vice-presidency. Scott Summers is also expected to be a candidate for this office.

Lindsey Raiford is the only definite candidate for secretary at this time although it is expected that others will try for this office.

Jimmy Weeks, chairman of the SP, and George Rosenthal are the anticipated candidates for treasurer although Scott Summers has also been mentioned for this office.

"Big Four" Last Week

The UP nominated its "big four" candidates last week and also named three of the senior class officers. The senior class vice-president, CAA and CWA officers, and a party chairman will be picked Monday night.

The party will also endorse an editor for the DTH and will endorse a number of candidates for the Student Legislature, former chairman Bill Criswell said yesterday.

Criswell said there were two major candidates for the job he vacated last week to accept the treasurer's nomination. Phil Smith and Whitney Durand are expected to try for the post.

The basic platform for the spring campaign will also be presented Criswell said, although he expects it to be greatly expanded after all the candidates have been picked.

Other SP Business

In addition to nominating the student body officers, the SP will decide if a candidate for editor of the DTH will be endorsed and will pick its candidates for the Senior Class, NSA, CAA, WAA and Student Legislature.

SP Legislator John Randall said that a motion will be introduced to establish the following rules of convention procedure: to allow each candidate to speak 5 minutes and to have one seconding speech of 3 minutes, and to allow open discussion after the seconding speeches.

U. OF PENN. PAPER SUSPENEDED

The University of Pennsylvania student newspaper was suspended last Saturday and its editor placed on conduct probation by the Dean of Men who "acted on the advice of the student government."

The Men's Student Government had been attacked by the Daily Pennsylvanian Friday in a front page editorial entitled, "Abolish Student Government."

Approximately 1,000 students demonstrated in front of the Dean's house following the suspension. The Pennsylvanian staff also sent a telegram to the university president and trustees that termed the suspension "an unwarranted breach of academic freedom" and "outright censorship."

WOMEN'S CURMEW

ITHACA, N. Y.—The abolition of curfews for senior women received almost unanimous support from Cornell women last week in polls taken in dorm meetings. Sororities also generally favored the action, according to the Cornell Daily Sun.

The Cornell Women's Student Government Association has postponed action on the proposal in order to formulate an administrative policy to deal with the new regulations. Some suggested changes are the establishment of all-senior women's Dorms, a sign-out system to locate girls in emergencies, and the use of night watchmen to admit students to dorms after they are locked out for the night.

BEER COSUMPTION

URBANA-CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — A bill calling for the revision of state drinking laws in Illinois was passed last week by the U. of Illinois Student Senate. The revision would allow 18-year-olds to purchase and consume beverages with an alcohol content of 6 per cent or less.

SSL To Receive Ten Varied Bills

By STEVE VAUGHN

The State Student Legislature, scheduled to meet Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will consider ten bills introduced by various schools on topics ranging from the reduction of public welfare operations in the state to the required study of Negro history in state schools.

Meredith College will submit a bill entitled "An Act to Reduce the Cost of Public Welfare Operations in North Carolina" in which it is stated that the present laws permit unworthy persons to be supported at public expense and that these persons tend to reproduce their own kind. Therefore, the task of supporting these persons is becoming too great for the state under existing eligibility laws and they should be revamped, the bill states.

Taft-Hartley Act

Davidson College proposes a bill to "put some teeth" into the Taft-Hartley Act with abill about right to work laws.

An American Common Market is proposed by High Point College. High Point suggests that the U.S. and Canada work together to offset the alignment of European nations and to strengthen relations between the two countries.

State College wants to effect a bill to make ghost writing of scholastic work by non-students.

Negro History

North Carolina A. and T. College has submihted a bill to make the study of Negro history compulsory in North Carolina schools. The outlined purpose of the bill is to improve race relations through a more thorough acquaintance with the contributions made by Negroes to the progress of the state.

A bill by Woman's College, Duke University states that whereas fallout shelters serve more as a war provoking agent than a potential life preserver (in case of sustained nuclear war), over three-quarters of the national civil defense budget should not be allocated to the provision of shelters.

Carolina will introduce a bill advocating compulsory inspection of automobiles and requiring all cars sold in the state to be equipped with seat belts.

Commercials

Saint Augustine's College wants legislation against ambiguous and discriminatory radio and television commercials on the grounds that certain commercials invite all to buy, yet discriminate against certain consumers.

Woman's College, UNC, will present a resolution to ameliorate the condition of migratory workers. The bill asks for minimum wage, child labor laws and improved health and welfare services for the workers among other things.

Atlantic Community

Duke men and East Carolina counter a floor fight with High Point with their introduction of a bill providing for the establishment of a more unified Atlantic community.

The first provision of the bill is that the U.S. join the Common Market. The resolution goes on to propose a general Atlantic Federation with the eventual cessation of sovereignty to a common governmental system.

Sanford May Speak

Governor Terry Sanford and Secretary of State Thad Eure will probably speak to the body.

Carolina delegates to the session will be Dennis Rash, Robin Britt, John Randall, Dwight Wheeless, Scott Summers, Lila Smith, Pete Harkness, Beth Walker, Rufus Edmisten, Bill Imes, Bill Whichard, Bill Criswell, and Bob Spearman.

LUTHERAN MEETING

The Evening Circle of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church will meet at 8 o'clock this evening at the home of Mrs. R. W. Bost at 209 North Street. Mrs. C. E. Brewer will be co-hostess. Mrs. Bost will be program leader.

MANAGEMENT INSTITUTE

A management institute for the frozen food locker industry will be held here Monday, March 12.

Chi Psi, Theta Chi Can't Rush

Half of the 24 social fraternities on campus did not have 80 per cent of their members make a C average of Student Affairs William last semster, Assistant Dean Long reported yesterday.

Two fraternities, Chi Psi and Theta Chi, lost their rushing and pledging privileges for the spring semester after failing to make the 80 per cent average for the second semester in a row.

The other ten have been placed on probation and will lose their privileges for next fall if the average is not met this spring.

The ten that have been placed on probation are: DKE, Kappa Sig, Zeta Psi, TEP, SAE, SPE, Pi Kappa Phi, Sigma Chi, ATO, and Pi Lambda Phi.

Editorship Candidates Approved

Three candidates for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel were passed on by the Selections Board of the Publications Board last week.

Mike McClister, Chuck Moony and Ernest Stepp all received the Board's approval.

All candidates for the editorship must meet with the board in order to have their names placed on the official ballot for the spring election. The approval of the Board, however, is not necessary.

Candidates are judged on prior journalistic experience and on general journalistic competence.

The Selections Board will meet again this week to interview any candidates who were unable to attend the meetings last week.

Lecture On Women Set Thursday

Mrs. Emil T. Chanlett, Chapel Hill resident and delegate to the Inter American Commission of Women, will speak on "Women in Latin America" at the 12th annual North Carolina Conference on World Affairs to be held at UNC Thursday.

University Chancellor William B. Aycock will welcome the visiting conferees at 10 a.m. Thursday morning.

In the past 20 years, Mrs. Chanlett has made extensive travels in Latin American countries. She visited Brazil in 1941; the Dominican Republic and Honduras in 1945; Brazil in 1948; Peru, Brazil, and Argentina in 1957; Venezuela, Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Chile and Peru in 1959; and Colombia in 1961.

Work In Rio

During the mid-forties, Mrs. Chanlett worked in the Institute of Inter American Affairs in Rio de Janeiro and Belem, Brazil. Following that, she was associated with TACA Airlines, Tegucigalpa, Honduras, in 1945 and 1946.

In 1955 and 1956, Mrs. Chanlett worked with the Institute of Research in Social Science at UNC. She has served as a consultant with the Overseas Education Fund in 1957 and 1959, and with the Bureau of Public Records Collection and Research of UNC in 1958 and 1959 and with the Institute of Latin American Studies of UNC, 1959-61. Currently she is a visiting lecturer in French at North Carolina College at Durham.

UNC Grad

Mrs. Chanlett attended UNC where she receiver a B.A. degree with highest honors. She also received an M.A. at the University, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Cobb Lacks President, Treasurer

Cobb Dormitory is without a president or a treasurer.

Richard Burrows, who succeeded to the presidency from the vice-presidency after Bud Broome resigned at the beginning of the year, announced his resignation at a dorm meeting last week. Broome resigned to accept a Resident Advisorship and Burrows is resigning for personal reasons.

Vice-president Mike Putzel, who had planned to assume the presidency, will remain in his present position because he does not have the required C average required for the dorm presidency.

Secretary Clarence Dixon, next in line, has refused to accept the presidency and the treasurer has moved out of the dorm.

This leaves Cobb without a president until regular elections are held in four weeks, unless IDC President Jim Gaulden makes a temporary appointment until that time.

Newly elected officers will only serve until the end of the academic year when Cobb begins renovation for conversion to a women's dorm.

Japanese Appeal On N-Testing

TOKOYO (UPI) — Chief cabinet secretary Masayeshi Ohira said Saturday the Japanese government will appeal soon to both the U.S. and Soviet governments to abandon nuclear testing.

He said the government will send a "formal note" within the next few days to the U. S .government in addition to Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda's letter of March 1 to President Kennedy, which requested the U.S. to "reconsider" its decision to resume atmospheric nuclear tests.

During the summer he teaches at the University of Michigan and the University of Washington.

Navy Band Traces History To Early Days Of Nation

By BRIAN MARSHALL

The Navy Band, appearing here Tuesday, has had a long history of development.

The first Navy musicians were probably those fiddlers and hornblowers in the early frigates. When called upon, they could manage a "jig" or two but they were seamen first though, and became musicians only by chance.

The United States Navy hired its first musician when James F. Draper signed aboard the frigate Brandeywine for $10 a month on July 25, 1825.

Soon after Draper, other ships began carrying three or four musicians who were called out on special occasions. When battles with pirates and enemy ships thinned their crews, bandsmen quickly became recruiters. They would march through the streets loudly rolling drums and tootting fifes—urging landsmen to enlist.

WWI Brought Changes

The years 1917-18 brought many changes to band music. When the United States entered World War I, rousing marches were used to back the call to arms. The results of this were quickly recognized by the government and some of the country's finest musicians began to wear the Navy Blue.

During this period, John Phillip Sousa became the leader of the Great Lakes Navy Band. With better talent, the bands now began to play not just marches but the classics, light operas and the popular ballads of the day.

The Armistice brought an end to all this though, as the artists returned to civilian life. However, now there was the feeling that a Navy Band was needed.

Band's Creation

Bandmaster Charles Benter was given the difficult task of creating a Navy Band—a band that would rank second to none in the world. By 1923, Benter had organized 63 men into the "Washington Navy Yard Band." It grew in reputation and on Inauguration Day, 1925, President Coolidge signed a special act of Congress designating Benter's Band as the permanent official band of the United States Navy.

That fall, the organization made its first annual concert tour. Since that time, the band has played for millions throughout the United States as well as in Canada, South America, Puermaica, Haiti and the Virgin Islands.

Unfair Rule

The administration's handy, all-purpose answers to the fraternity academic problem, the 80 per cent rule, took a heavy toll this semester. Exactly half the campus social fraternities didn't make it; two lost rushing privileges; the remaining 10 on probation.

All in all, the direct effects will be good. Each of the twelve houses will no doubt put more emphasis on academics—which is the ostensible purpose of the rule.

But the effect of the rule is not the only consideration in judging its worth. Other aspects of it are not quite so attractive.

To begin with, it is a collective punishment for indivdual shortcomings. It is patently unjust that every member of a house should be punished because some fail to meet requirements.

If one, or five, or twenty members of any given fraternity fail to turn in a "C" average, then only those members should be restricted in their fraternity paricipation. Why take a cut at the entire house?

Perhaps the answer to that question is that it is easier, or more effective that way. But is it equitable? Is it fair to penalize those members who manage to a balance between fraternity participation and academics?

Too, it seems strange to put a special academic requirement on fraternities, when the all-fraternity average usually turns out to be slightly higher than the all-campus average. But, even if we assume for the sake of argument, that the fraternity man should do better academically than the rest of the rest of the campus, the question of the penalty imposed under the ruling should be considered.

If a fraternity fails to meet the 80 per cent minimum for two consecutive semesters, it loses rushing privileges. Once again, this is very effective. Probably the best way to force a house into line is to threaten to take away its rushing privileges. And since the whole argument for the ruling seems to be that the ends justifies the means, this is the means that is being used, whether it is fair or not.

The objection to the 80 per cent rule is not that academic standards are high enough. They aren't. But if they are to be raised, they should be raised oll over the campus, not just in fraternities.

Part of the test for any ruling should be that it be fair. .The 80 per cent rule is not.

'Can', Not Must

So many of us for so long have been painting such a grim and gloomy picture of what education must be. We have told ourselves breathlessly that we are thus far behind the Soviets, and that by such and such an hour on such and such a day we must have mastered so many hours of this science or that science, and must have produced X number of Ph.D's.

So many of us have hammered away nightly at our children, beating into their no doubt perplexed heads that the drudgery they are having to perform this very year in their homework is necessary so that the even greater drudgery they will have next year can be handled in preparation for even greater drudgery the following year.

We have indeed gone out of our way to make the business of securing an education a grim one. We have hammered and drummed away at the point that if you don't get all this educational hard work back of you, you'll never make $50,000 a year as a scientist or a lawyer or a doctor.

We have led ourselves away from the old blessed idea that the securing of an education was necessary so that hitherto locked doors could be opened into new and wonderful worlds. We have forgotten to remind our children that education is not just a path leading to wealth an dpower, but is even more a great and wonderful highway taking us into a world o fopportunity and beauty and singing and joy.

Recently, Gov. Sanford talked by TV to children of North Carolina. It was good to hear him, to see that he was doing for our children the things we haven't done in giving them a better picture of what education really is, and what it must be.

He didn't make any attempt to whip them down the road of education by pointing to it as simply something which would bring many dollars to them. He tried hard to get across to the children the thought that education is simply another word for opportunity, that schooling is really just a key which can unlock so many doors to so many wonders. He worked to get across the idea that education isn't necessarily drudgery, that it can be an exciting thing and that it must be an exciting thing.

He didn't try to measure education for our children in terms of dollars or school rooms or number of teachers and what those teachers are paid. He did try to measure it for them in terms of beauty and hope and chance for the future.

One of the great needs of our system of education today is getting those needs to the people. Governor Sanford went a long way toward gettiing that true story of those needs to the people.And in getting that story across to the children, he helped some of us oldsters get our own eyes in better focus on what education can be for our children.

He helped us realize that the key word in education should be "Can" and not "must."

International Program Huge

This is the fourth in a series of explanatory articles about the National Student Association. Because of the importance and scope of the international program of N.S.A. this article is devoted to this one phase of U. S. N. S. A. activity. N.S.A.'s international program is one of the most extensive in the student field.

N. S. A. helps sponsor the World University Service (W.U.S.) which distributes material relief in underdeveloped nations. The U.S.N.S.A. is a member of the U. S. National Commission for U.N.E.S.C.O.. This national commission advises the U. S. government on U.N.E.S.C.O. policy in the fields of "education, science, and culture." Also, U.N.E. S.C.O. can utilize resources and personnel to handle the emergency needs of students in other countries. In 1956 U.S.N.S.A. joined with other national student unions to establish the Coordinating Committee for International Relief for Hungarian Students. U. S. N. S. A. has contributed toward improving the condition of students in underdeveloped countries.

The N. S. A. maintains contact with many foreign student organizations set-up in U. S. universities. These groups contain visiting students from a particular area. N.S.A. cooperates bilaterally with national unions of students all over the world. The U.S.N.S.A. is a member of the International Student Conference, a meeting of about seventy national student unions. It is through this liaison that many of the other N.S.A. international programs are carried out.

In the realm of student exchanges and scholarships, the N.S.A. has a number of services, The Foreign Student Leadership Project has sponsored 24 foreign student leaders in U. S. schools since 1956. These foreign students study here for one year and participate in student activities. The effect of this program is to increase international understanding at home and abroad. The U.S.N.S.A. also provides a student exchange program with the Soviet Union and Poland. This is part of the US-USSR Cultural Exchange Agreement. The U.S.N.S.A. also acts as host to visiting foreign students in this nation, a service many foreign student associations reciprocate for us.

In another capacity the U.S.N.S.A. is active in encouraging student interest in international affairs. International Student Relations Seminars are held throughout the U.S.A. in member schools. The International Commission, which in contrast to the National Commission, handles all these N.S.A. foreign projects, sends a campus international administrator to visit American Campuses and give advice concerning international programs. Five oversees Commissioners maintain liaison with the leaders of the national union of students in other countries. Through the Young Adult Council the N.S.A. aids organizations aimed at increasing on-campus awareness of international issues and opportunities. Publications are also a major aspect of N.S.A. distribution of information. Through N.S.A. American students can voice their opinions on international topics.

The final area of N.S.A. endeavor of international scope is the N.S.A. Educational Travel, Inc. This organization provides a low cost cultural and education foreign travel program and maintains a travel information and advisory service for American Students. The N.S.A. travel plans are low-cost, meaningful student-to-student programs combining the best elements of tour travel with those of independent travel. Summer tours all over Europe range in price from $900 to $800 plus reduced air or steamboat expenses. For full information come by Student Government offices. Various seminar tours to Europe, Latin America, and Japan are offered.

The N.S.A. believes that the American Student's horizons should be as broad as his world itself and for that reason maintains an extensive foreign program. As an individual student in an N.S.A. member school it is your opportunity to take advantage of this.

"You Sure You Won't Let Me Fall?"

Reader Answers Commie Question

To The Editor:

After reading the letter from the Lecture Bureau, Communist Party, U.S.A., I want to inform the writer just why, as he put it, "Communists are most often the targets of attack" by Americans and why they are frequently not asked to defend their positions.

Americans attack Communists who are trying to impose Communism as the form of government in every country in the world. The Communists are determined to do this by any method that is necessary, whether by popular consent or violent disregard of popular consent. To them, the end justifies the means, even the slaughter of millions such as in Russia, China, Poland and Hungary. What is even worse, true democracy and freedom are non-existent in those countries where the voters can choose from candidates of only one political party and where the people are allowed only the news that the government allows. If the United States were a Communistic country, then we would not be allowed our treasured two-party system, all available news including that which criticizes our government, and the freedom to change our form of government by vote.

There, Mr. Who-Ever-You-Are from the Lecture Bureau, Communist Party, U.S.A., are the reasons why Communists are under attack. If the United States were not a place where differences of opinion are tolerated, and where there exists true freedom of speech, I would never have had access to your letter. Because you and your kind are dedicated to the destruction of America's principles of freedom and because you wouldn't want to lecture to us unless your lecture would help you to that end, you will never be asked to lecture to many of us. If Communists were not dedicated to the use of any necessary means in order to impose world-wide Communism, then the attitude of Americans would be much different.

Says Who?

SP Not Open Forum?

To The Editor:

There have been several letters in the Tar Heel lately that have been accusing the Student Party of not being an open forum. As a member of the Party, I have found this far from being true. There has never been to my knowledge any member of the Student Party who has had his opinions silenced by the party nor prohibited from presenting his opinions at any open party meeting. And in so far as I know there has never been any student who has been denied membership.

The Student Party is a party of individuals and as individuals each member may form his own opinions. Many of the members have formed the opinion that Presidential Assistant Dwight Wheless is the most highly qualified and should be supported by the Student Party. I do not believe that this is discrimination against any candidate. This is a view of certain members of the party. Other views have been expressed but to say that the support given to Dwight Wheless is discrimination against other candidates is erroneous.

My support goes to Mr. Wheless because it is my belief that his ability and qualifications to perform the job of President of the Student Body are of the highest caliber.

$2 Million To Be Shot Down

WASHNGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Air Force one day this spring will fire a two million dollar missile from the West Coast of California in the hope it will be destroyed within the next 20 minutes.

Destruction of the Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile out over the Pacfic would mean the Army's Nike-Zeus anti-missile missile has passed its first test as a space weapon killler.

The test-the first of a series of 47 shots-will consist of a mock push-button war waged over a 4,500 mile firing range between Vandenberg Air Force Base north of Los Angeles and the remote little coral island of Kwajalein in the Pacific.

The simulated fight will pit the Atlas, streaking at a speed of close to 16,000 miles an hour, against the 48-foot Zeus designed to hunt down and destroy its rival with probably less than three minutes' notice.

Because of the supersonic speeds involved, the feat expected of the Nike-Zeus has been compared to shooting down a bullet with a bullet.

The outcome will have tremendous significance. If successful, the Nike-Zeus would give the free world a weapon in the immediate future to combat Russia's multi-megaton nuclear missiles of which Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has boasted.

Good Evidence Provided

Even without the combat-condition test series, experimental Zeus launchings against electronic ghost targets have provided the Army good evidence that its anti-missile missile can shoot down Soviet missiles before they would reach their targets.

But several big questions still remain to be answered when the Army begins the long series of test firings.

The actual tests, slated to continue for more than a year, will use up 47 of the Atlas boosters. With much of the cost being written off as an Air Force training expense. The "ghost targets," however, are are available in unlimited quantities on magnetic tape.

This is because the electronic brain of the Nike-Zeus has no way of knowing whether the anti-missile is being fired at a ghost target or at an actual ICBM warhead.

The ghost targets were "canned" on magnetic tape months ago by powerful Army radar which, from Ascension Island in the South Atlantic, tracked Atlas and Titan ICBM's as they soared down-range from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

When the tape is fed into a Zeus computer at White Sands, N. M., Point Mugu, Calif., or on tiny Kwajalien, the result, from the missile's standpoint, is the same as if the photographed warhead were at that moment approaching the point from which the Zeus is being test fired.

Advanced Rapidly

During the warmups for the big tests, the technicians have regarded the ability of the Zeus to intercept these ghost targets as more important and informative than its successful interception of a slower Nike Hercules missile at White Sands, N .M. Dec. 21.

Some Zeus partisans now comment that anti-missile science, once considered an impossibility, has advanced to a point where an ICBM warhead hurtling through space at nearly 286 miles a minute could under some circumstances be considered a "sitting duck."

Critics contend that the initial Kwajalein tests will be conducted under carefully controlled conditions rather than those to be encountered in war. In its first attempts to intercept the Atlas, the Army will know when the ICBM is launched and its approximate trajectory.

Even in these tests, however, an important part of the Zeus system known as the acquisition radar may be getting its first real long-range test.

An anti-missile crew is a litfle like the staff of an astronomical observatory which, in addition to a large telescope pinpointed on a spot in the sky, must have a smaller, wide-angle telescope to tell the big telescope where to look. The acquisition radar is comparable to the wide-angle scope to scan quickly large portions of the sky.

The Army has announced that its tracking radar had successfully followed intercontinental missiles over "several" hundred miles and had picked up the Echo satellite at a distance of 1,500 miles.

Whether such ranges will be possible when first information has to come from the acquisition radar is one of the big remaining questions.

Gov. Sanford Endorses Chest

To Campus Chest Chairman:

Considerable progress has been made in recent years in our understanding of human behavior. Yet we have far too long neglected to address ourselves, on a broad front, to the problem of understanding of the mentally sick child.

This problem in our society literally begs for solution. Although there are dedicated workers in this area, trained in treatment and research techniques, they are far too few and their efforts are far too feebly supported, both economically and morally.

Your thoughful and generous gift to the program for mentally ill children is of multiple import. It calls to our attention a relatively neglected field; it is an index of mature and heartwarming concern on the part of college students for the less fortunate; it encourages, perhaps more than you know, those who are already working diligently and faithfully searching for solutions to the problems of the mentally sick child; and , of course, its very practicality extends the range of searching.

From researchers' efforts we hope a breakthrough will occur—a breakthrough to which you have contributed economically and morally .

It is gratifying to know of your interest and concern for these children. I commend your wise and humanitarian action.

With best wishes always,
Terry Sanford

Pledges Support

To The Editor:

An unsigned article in Friday's Tar Heel deserves the support of every student on this campus. Attacking the Student Legislature for attempting to represent the student body on national issues, it stated that there is a petition in circulation that condemns the Student Legislature for their assumed authority.

I would like to be among the first to sign such a petition. The Student Legislature has about as much authority to represent the student body on national issues as does the Daily Tar Heel editor.

Arms, Summit Conferences Depending On K's Reaction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fate of the Geneva Disarmament conference and a possible summit meeting hinged Saturday on Soviet Premier Nikita Khhrushchev's reaction to President Kennedy's decision to resume above-ground nuclear weapons tests.

Khrushchev's response was expected to be tough, expanding on the "blackmail" and "aggression" cahrges already voiced by the Russian press. Ofgicials said his political position required the most vigerous reaction.

The premier is under fire from the Chinese Communists and some elements at home for taking a too-soft attitude toward the West. But there was some doubt here that he would go so far as to torpedo the 18-nation disarmament meeting scheduled to begin March 14.

Officials said they thought it more likel he would want to use the conference—to be attended by five Communist, five NATO, and eight neutral nations — as a sounding board to rally world opinion against the resumption of U. S. tests.

Khrushchev Might Attend

There was even a revival of speculation that Khrushchev might go to Geneva himself despite the refusal of most other heads of state to accept his recent proposal to turn the meeting into a summit session.

Khrushchev late Saturday had still not replied to the message Kennedy sent him a week ago rejecting the idea of opening the conference at the summit but offering a top-level session later if developments warranted.

Offilcials here expect that a definite clue to Khrushchev's intentions would emerge Monday in his opening-doy speech to the Moscow meeting of the Russian Communist Party's Central Committee. While the conference is billed as being devoted primarily to agricultural problems, U. S. officials said they did not see how the Soviet leader could ignore major cold war problems in his speech.

Three-Phrase Proposed

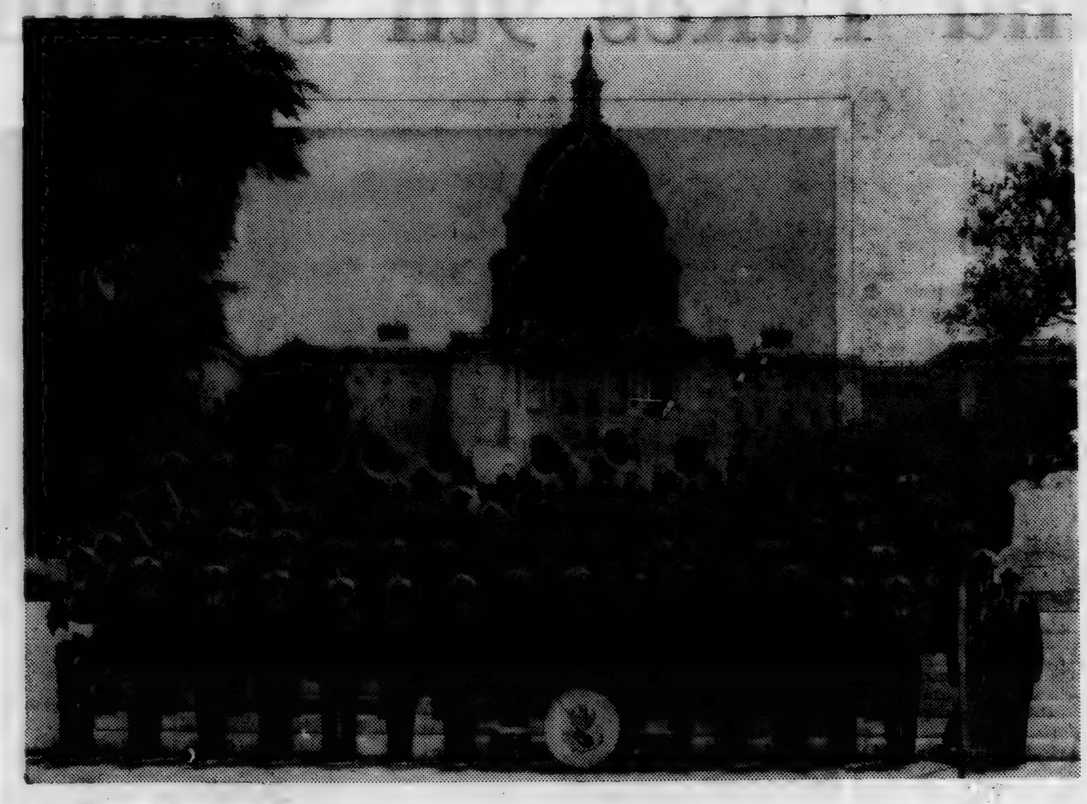
Meanwhile, officials of the five Western countries to be represented at Geneva — the United States, Britain, France, Canada, and Italy — pressed ahead with work on the three-phase disarmament proposal they plan to present. The proposal is based in general on the plan the United States laid before the United Nations last September.

President Kennedy Friday night described it as a plan "for a major 'breakthrough to peace'."

It includes proposals "to halt production of fissionable materials and nuclear weapons and their transfer to other nations — to convert them from weapon stockpiles to peaceable uses — to destroy the warheads and the delivery systems that threaten man's existence — to check the dangers of surprise and accidental attack — to reserve outer space for peaceful use — and progressively to reduce all armed forces in such a way as ultimately to remove forever all threats and thoughts of war."

Inspection

The proposals also include the usual provision for international inspection and control to guarantee observance. These are the ones Khrushchev will not accept in either general disarmament or a nuclear test ban.



Charlotte Hospitals Picketed

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (UPI)—Negro students began picketing at four local hospitals Saturday in a protest over segregation.

Dr. A. R. Hawkins, a Negro picket, said the demonstrations would be aimed at "the overall community battery of segregated hospitalizations." Forty Negro students from Johnson C. Smith University here picketed during the morning, but Hawkins said up to 200 would participate later.

Main Target

The main target, Hawkins added, was Memorial Hospital which is operated by the city and county. It has more than 400 beds with only 20 available for Negro use. The other hospitals were Presbyterian, Mercy and Good Samaritan.

Good Samaritan is the only local all-Negro hospital and has both Negro and white doctors on its staff. It is operated by the city and its nursing school was closed two years ago.

Test Decision Is Protested By Japanese

TOKYO (UPI) — Fanatical leftist Japanese students singing the Communist "Internationale" marched on the U.S. Embassy Saturday to protest President Kennedy's decision to resume atmospheric nuclear tests but were driven off by strong police reinforcements.

Elsewhere in As a reaction ranged from the guarded underthe remonstrations of the neutralists, to the barely concealed gnee by the Communists eager to exploit the decision for propaganda purposes.

The attempted march of the embassy by about 60 members of the ultra-leftist Zengakuren Student Organization was the only immediate violent manifestation of protest. About 300 Tokyo policemen were waiting a short distance from the embassy when the snake-dancing, singing students appeared.

Dispersion Ordered

Police ordered the students, who were carrying placards denouncing Kennedy's decision, to disperse. When they refused, police charged with swinging clubs forcing the students to retreat.

Other Japanese also spoke out against resumption of American nuclear tests in the atmosphere.

More Mercury Stamps Ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Post Office Department announced it has ordered another 100 million Project Mercury stamps because of the unprecedented demand for the issue honoring astronaut John H. Glenn's historic orbital flight.

The new authorization boosted to 320 million the total printing for the blue and yellow four-cent stamp depicting Glenn's capsule orbiting the earth. It was issued minutes after the flight ended successfully Feb. 20.

— Navy Band Traces History —

100 Members

The band consists of approximately a hundred members. This is often subdivided, however, into smaller groups as dance bands, string ensembles and combo. All the band's members are carefully picked musicians who could take their places with the finest symphonies in the world. With this quality it has developed a reputation for being one of the "world's finest bands."

The band's duties are extensive. They are an indispensible part of Washington's parades, inaugurations, ceremonies of state, military funerals, and White House functions. Their summer evening concerts are an institution in Washington. There by the Potomac they play to thousands relaxing on the lawns and steps near famous monuments. The band's winter concerts in the departmental auditorium are equally well received.

New Conductor

Lieut. Anthony A. Mitchell conducts the band. He took the post only last week upon the retirement of Commander Brendler, a 49-year veteran of Navy service. Mitchell has been in the band for 17 years and was one of the pioneers of television broadcasting.

On Tuesday, the band will play two concerts in Memorial Hall. The 2:30 matinee will be lighter than the evening, but basically both concerts will be much the same. The program will include the music of such Broadway hits as "West Side Story" and "Gypsy," some solos, mraches, and a number of classical pieces. Featured will be such composers as Richard Rodgers, Leonard Bernstein, Tschaikovsky, Mayerbeer, Leowe, Strauss, and Styne. A major part of the program will be the music from the "Victory at Eea Suite."

Tickets At Y-Court

Tickets will be sold in the Y Court all day Monday. They can also be obtained at Kemp's, Danziger's, and Hill Hall. Student tickets are $1.00 and the general public is $1.50. Special tickets are also being offered to school children.

Concert times are at 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. The concerts are being sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia music fraternity for the benefit of a music scholarship.

Maryland Takes 9th Straight Wrestling Title

Carolina Finishes Second In Finals

By DAVID CLARK

Maryland breezed to its ninth consecutive ACC wrestling championship as about 200 cheering fans assembled in Raleigh at the Reynolds Coliseum to witness the finals of the 1962 tournament. Maryland walked off with the championship. Carolina was second and Virginia a close third. The team scores: Maryland — 115; North Carolina—61; Virginia—44; State — 30; Duke—14. Clemson, Wake Forest, and South Carolina do not have wrestling teams.

The Tar Heels were often the bridesmaids but never were the brides as six Carolina wrestlers finished second. Dick Blackman gave Gene Kerin of Maryland quite a battle before being pinned at 1:34 of the final three-minute period. Other runnerups for Carolina were: Louis Arthur—115-pound; Milton Nelson—123; Pete Gilchrist—130; Tom Grant—147; and Gordon Appell—heavyweight.

There were but three pins scored in the championship round. Fred Sentner of Maryland pinned Hyde of Virginia at 2:49 of the second period in the 137 class. Kerin pinned Blackman and Richard Guidi of Maryland pinned his 157-lb. foe from State—Simmons—in 49 seconds of the first period.

Maryland's Pat Varre in the 147-pound class was awarded the Outstanding Wrestler Award selected by the coaches present. Varre defeated Politi of Duke, Athearn of State, and then Tom Grant of Carolina for the class championship and the Outstanding Award.

The Terps sported a 79-point team score after Friday's first round matches. Carolina was a second with 53 points. Other first day scoring was Virginia, 42, North Carolina State 26, and Duke, 12.

Gordon Appell scored the major tournament upset Friday when he decisioned Maryland's defending champion Roger Shoals.

Shoals, however, was the only Terp to fall by the wayside as the grapplers from Maryland advanced nine men into the semi-finals. North Carolina advanced six. Virginia three and State two. Duke failed to advance a man.

Clemson's Sophs Surprise Duke, 77-72, In Tourney

By ED DUPREE

Press Maravich pressed the Clemson upset button again Friday night and his sophomore-studded Tigers came from behind to startle nationally sixth-ranked Duke, 77-72, in the major upset of the ACC basketball season.

Sophomore Jim Brennan poured in 34 points as Clemson advanced to the finals of the conference championship tournament against Wake Forest's top-seeded Deacons Saturday night. Brennan hit 12 of 22 field goal attempts and dropped in 10 of 11 free throws for the second highest single game mark of the first two rounds. Wake's Len Chappell blistered the nets for 38 points in the first game of the semifinals, which Wake won 88-75.

In the tourney's opening round the surprising Tigers stormed to an easy 67-46 upset over third-seeded North Carolina State. The upheaval of second-seeded Duke was not as easy as the first win, but once Maravich's boys took the lead in the second half they were not to be denied. They played like veterans—these sophomores—and Duke's hopes for a third straight championship bout with Wake Forest were all over.

Vic Bubas's Dukes found themselves ahead 24-12 in the opening period and they left the floor at halftime with a 38-30 lead. The Blue Devil advantage jumped to ten points and stayed there until it reached 44-34. During the next ten minutes, the men from Durham could muster only six points, while Maravich's sparkling sophs rolled up 23. Clemson led 57-50 when the smoke had cleared and their pressure play in the stretch run held off the fighting Blue Devils.

Duke pulled to within one point four times in the closing minutes, but was unable to catch the Tigers. At the 2:37 mark with Clemson leading 69-66, the Reynolds Coliseum scoreboard clock went on the blink. The final 2:37 was played with the time being announced over the public address system.

By the time Clemson had stretched its lead to 77-70, the excited crowd of 12,400 watched in misbelief as they realized Maravich's youngsters had waved their magic wands again.

There remained some twenty seconds in the game when Clemson's 6-2 guard Nick Milasnovich ceased to contain himself. The only other double figure man in the Clemson group with 11 points, Milasnovich stood near the mid court line and bounced up and down exicitedly while one of his teammates was on the foul strip.

When the game ended the Tigers roared with glee and carried Maravich off the floor for the second straight day. Heads lowered, the Blue Devils walked off the floor.

All-American Art Heyman hit only seven of 27 shots, but his 13 of 16 from the line made him Duke's high scorer with 27. Jeff Mullins scored 15 and Jay Buckley added 12.

Mike Bohonak scored nine for Clemson, while Tom Mahaffey and Woody Morgan had eight each.

Duke outrebounded the Tigers, 61-37, as Heyman pulled down 20 and Mullins snared 15. Don Mahaffey's 11 paced the Clemson rebounding.

Wisconsin Upsets (Yes) Ohio State

By GEORGE ARMOUR

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—Amazing Wisconsin, the cinderella team of the season, Saturday defeated the nation's top ranked team, Ohio State, 86-67, and made the upset look easy.

The Badgers handed the Buckeyes their first loss in 13 conference games this season and snapped their overall win streak at 22 games. Wisconsin ranks second in the Big Ten with a 10-3 mark and is 17-6 overall.

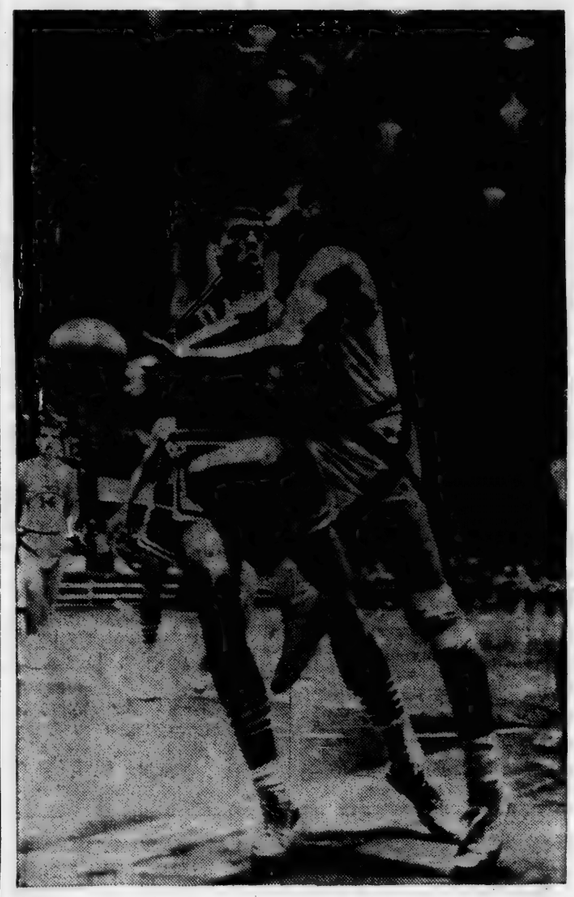
Sophomore guard Don Hearden poured in 29 points and junior forward Ken Siebel added 22 to lead the Badgers. Wisconsin took the lead midway in the first half and held it the rest of the way, most of the time by a comfortable margin over the conference champs.

Everybody's All-America, Jerry Lucas, led the Buckeyes with 23 points.

It was only the second loss in 51 games for the Bucks, whose last defeat was at the hands of NCAA champ Cincinnati in last yar's tournament.

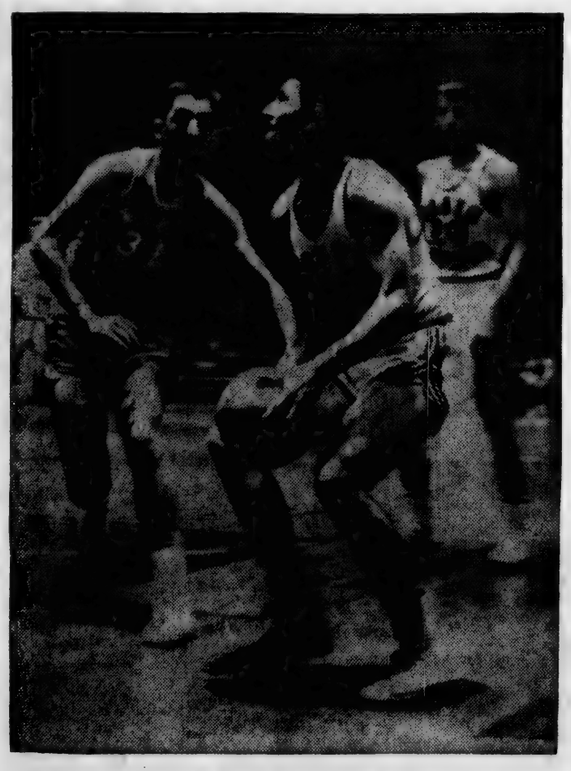
The Badgers led by as much as 10 points in the first half but held only a 37-30 lead at the intetrmission. Wisconsin, whipped to a fever pitch by a capacity crowd of 13,445, poured it on in the second half and made the all-powerful Buckeyes look like just another team.

The Badgers used a man-per-man defense throughout and they collapsed on Lucas. Wisconsin had been easy to score on all season, but Saturday ball-hawking and the rebounding of Siebel, Tom Gwynn and Tom Hughbanks gave them an exceptionally strong defensive game.



OOPS! Clemson's Nick Milasnovich loses the ball as he drives in for a layup in the first half of the Clemson-Duke game Friday. Guarding him is Duke center Buzz Mewhort. Milasovich was second high Clemson scorer with 11 points.

STOLEN BALL. South Carolina's Bobby Robinson swipes the ball from huge Len Chappell of Wake Forest in Friday's game. Chappell growls his displeasure, but things went pretty much his way. He scored 38 and Wake won 88-75.



SOUTH CAROLINA'S Scotti Ward sticks his tongue out before sinking a jump shot in Friday's ACC tournament action. Tommn McCoy of Wake Forest charges in to guard the Gamecock guard.

TRAPPED. Bill Ulrich, Duke's 5-10 guard, is dwarfed by 6-8 Manning Privette of Clemson as the tall Tiger ties him up. Privette is caught with the 'I didn't foul him' look on his face, Ulrich seems to be taking a bite out of the basketball..

A Bridge Player's Dream: Dean Dealt Thirteen Spades

The odds against being dealt 13 spades in a bridge game are 159,755, 357,992 to 1, according to Hoyle—but Nat Dean did just that in a game at the Sigma Nu house Friday.

Dean, a junior from Johnson City, Tenn., was sitting to his left of the dealer, Lyn Turner, when the near-impossible hand was dealt. Dean's partner was Litch Huie, Turner's was Mike Morris.

After he had picked up about six or seven spades, Dean "thought he might have a pretty good hand." When the spade count reached ten he began to wonder? Three more and the "pat hand" was complete.

Turner opened with a diamond and Dean pre-empted with a three spade bid. "I knew that if I opened seven spades, they would go to seven no trump," he said.

Morris passed and Huie answered his partner with a four club bid. The dealer passed and Dean, naturally, went to seven spades. After two passes Turner doubled, Dean redoubled, and the cards were laid on the table.

You can't argue with a hand like that.

It Finally Happens: Wilt Scores 100

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Wilt Chambarlain finally did the "impossible"—100 points in one game!

In the greatest show of his fantastic career, the 7-foot, 1-inch star of the Philadelphia Warriors connected for 36 field goals and 28 free throws Friday night to lead the Warriors to a 169-147 victory over the New York Knickerbockers at Hershey, Pa.

Wilt's 100 points broke his own single-game NBA scoring mark of 78 points and the 316 points by both teams made it the highest-scoring game in basketball history. The previous record was 312—set when the Boston Celtics beat the Minneapolis Lakers, 173-139, on Feb. 27, 1959.

Selvy Scored 100

The 100 points also equalled the official all-time single-game record by any player in a pro or college game. Frank Selvy of Furman scored 100 in a game against Newberry College in 1954.

A crowd of 4,124 poured into the court and swarmed around Chamberlain when he reached the 100 mark. The demonstration held up the game for a minute and a half Chamberlain shot 36 of 63 from the floor and made 28 of 32 free throws. He set new marks of 31 points in a fourth period and 59 in a second half.

Rodgers Key Man

Playmaker Guy Rodgers was the key man as the Warriors began to feed their great scorer to help him achieve his goal. Rodgers wound up with 20 assists. The Warriors led at the end of each period by scores of 42-26, 79-68 and 125-106. The Warriors broke away to a 19-3 lead in the first period and then Wilt took over for his one-man show.

Oscar Robertson scored 41 points as the Cincinnati Royals beat the Detroit Pistons, 120-112, and clinched a tie for second place in the Western Division and Bob Pettit's 33 points led the St. Louis Hawks to a 138-120 trumph over the Celtics in other Friday night games.

Wheless Outdistances Britt, Lawler For SP Nominations

The famous herald trumpet section of the Navy Band

Navy Band Plays Twice Here Today

The U. S. Navy Band hailed as the "World's Finest Band," arrives here today to give two concerts in Memorial Hall at 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. The Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia music fraternity is sponsoring the concerts for the benefit of a music scholarship.

Governor Terry Sanford has declared today "Navy Band Day" in North Carolina and the concerts have also won endorsement from President Kennedy and television and screen star Andy Griffith. This will be the Band's only North Carolina stop on their current tour.

The Navy Band contains within itself a complete symphony which presents the works of the masters while it retains its versatility by performing modern numbers. The soloists within the band have also gained outstanding reputations in their own right. For these reasons, the Band has come to be called the "World's Finest."

Lieut. Anthony A. Mitchell conducts the organization. A 17 year Navy veteran, he has degrees from the U. S. Naval School of Music and the Catholic University of America. Following World War II, he was one of the original pioneers in the television broadcasting industry.

Today's 2:30 matinee will be designed more for grade and high school students, who will also be able to see special showings of the Morehead Planetarium production, "Red Giants to White Dwarfs."

Similar Concerts

Both concert performances will still be much alike however. Included will be the works of such modern composers as Richard Rodgers, Leonard Bernstein, Frederick Leowe, and Jule Styne. Also featured will be such composers as Tschaikovsky, Meyerbeer and Strauss.

Both concerts will be varied, including the music of Broadway hits like "Camelot" and "West Side Story," as well as marches, some solos, and a number of classical pieces. A featured part of both concerts will be the music of the "Victory at Sea Suite."

Concert times are 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. Student tickets are $1.00 and general admission is $1.50.

Ed McCormack Enters Senate Race In Mass.

Nephew Of Speaker Opposes Ted Kennedy

BOSTON (UPI)—Atty. Gen. Edward J. McCormack Jr. Monday announced his candidacy for the U. S. Senate, declaring he would campaign "all the way" against his opponent — expected to be President Kennedy's youngest brother, Edward M. (Ted) Kennedy.

The attorney general, 38-year-old nephew of House Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., said he hoped his campaign for the Democratic nomination would not tend to divide the party either locally or nationally.

Kennedy, 30, was expected to make his formal announcement later this month and enter this first campaign for elective office.

The seat at stake is the one vacated in late 1960 by then President-elect John F. Kennedy. It has been filled on an interim basis by Sen. Benjamin A. Smith, D-Mass., a friend of the President, who was appointed by former Democratic Gov. Foster Furcolo at Kennedy's behest. Smith is not a candidate in the primary.

Yale Singing Group Appears Here Friday

Graham Memorial will present the Yale Glee Club Friday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The group has been in existence for over 100 years and has appeared throughout the U. S. and Europe, and extensively behind the Iron Curtain

A special admission policy has been announced for this GM function. Students and faculty will be admitted free with ID cards and student wives and dates "in tow" will also be admitted free.

TO BREAK ARMS DEADLOCK

Soviets Approve Summit In March

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has accepted an Anglo-American proposal to hold a foreign ministers meeting in Geneva this month in an attempt to break the deadlock over disarmament and nuclear testing.

The White House said Monday that President Kennedy has received a message "on the subject of the disarmament conference."

Although the White House declined to comment, other sources said that in the message which arrived Sunday Khrushchev reluctantly agreed to send Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Geneva for the disarmament sessions starting March 14.

Although Khrushchev had wanted a summit meeting to open the Geneva conference, he was faced with opposition from Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Reports from Moscow said that the premier apparently now has discarded any plan to personally attend the start of the meeting.

Instead, he agreed to Kennedy's proposal of Feb. 24 urging that the U. S., British and Soviet foreign ministers meet in advance of the Geneva conference to help pave the way for the success of disarmament negotiations. This, in turn, could conceivably lead to a summit conference before June 1.

The new Soviet message said Gromyko is willing to meet beforehand with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and British Foreign Secretary Lord Home.

French government sources said a short time later that France will boycott the whole 18-nation disarmament conference, and will not even send an observer.

Kennedy's hope is that sufficient progress can be made on a "foolproof" nuclear test ban treaty at lower diplomatic levels so that a summit conference could be held in Geneva and the agreement ratified.

If this happened, the president has said he would agree to call off the resumption of U. S. atmospheric nuclear tests, now set for late in April.

Macmillan echoed this policy in a statement to the house of commons Monday. Announcing that Khrushchev had "broadly agreed" to the foreign ministers meeting, he said:

"I hope that the progress made in this aspect of disarmament will be such as to make it possible for President Kennedy and myself to meet Mr. Khrushchev in Geneva, to conclude the final stages of a treaty to ban tests."

Rusk tentatively plans to leave here for Geneva on March 10. Diplomats said he hoped to meet with Lord Home the next day. A meeting with Gromyko could take place on March 12.

UP Finishes Spring Slate

The University Party convention last night postponed most of its important business to an open party meeting Thursday night. Phil Smith defeated Whitney Durand for the party chairmanship in the only close election of the meeting.

The nomination of presidents of the CAA and the CWA, the endorsement of legislative candidates, and the presentation of the party platform for the spring elections were all postponed by the convention of about 150 members.

The party decided not to endorse a candidate for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel as former chairman Bill Criswel told the group that the executive committee felt "it would not be opportune to endorse an editor at this time.

"The UP may support one person in this campaign," Criswell said, "but the person will not have the official backing of the party."

The endorsement of legislative candidates was postponed as Criswell told the body there had been "poor response to date in that only 26 candidates had applied for party endorsement." There are 50 legislative seats to be filled.

The presentation of the party platform was also postponed due to several sections being incomplete. Criswell said that presidential nominee Inman Allen had urged that the platform be presented in detail Thursday for the approval of the party.

The party completed its slate of senior clas officers by nominating Richard Stapleton for vice-president. Stapleton defeated Bob Richardson by a wide margin.

Katherine Parrish was nominated for president of Women's Athletic Association by acclamation. Bill Imes was selected as a NSA representative, also by acclamation.

Whitney Durand was selected as vice-chairman of the party as he defeated Roy Kirk.

Susan Crow Is Named Women's Co-ordinator

Susan Crow, a Junior from Wilson, has been selected as Women's Coordinator of the 1962 Orientation Committee, Chairman Bob Madry announced yesterday.

"I am very pleased and honored," stated the appointee, "and will do my best to see that the Women's program is meaningful and well-organized next fall."

Miss Crow was President of the Student Body at both her high school and at Peace College, where she directed the orientation program. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Her first tack will be to help select the rest of the Orientation Committee. Interviews for positions on it are being held Tuesday through Thursday of this week in the second floor of Graham Memorial.

In announcing Miss Crow's appointment, Chairman Madry said, "Those of us that selected the Coordinator are confident that Susan will do an excellent job and that the women's part of orientation next fall will be a success."

Madry thanked all applicants for the position and said that "it was not an easy job, since many capable girls applied."

"I hope that these people will apply for other positions in the Orientation program; we can use them all."

Interviews To Open For Orientation

Interviews for positions on the Campus Orientation Committee will be held Tuesday-Thursday, March 6-8. Orientation Chairman Bob Madry announced Monday. Tuesdays' interviews will be held in Roland Parker I, Thursday and Friday's in Roland Parker II.

Applications are now available at the information desk in Graham Memorial and at the desk of the Reserve Reading Room in the library.

Raiford And Summers Are Nominated

By HARRY W. LLOYD

In a lengthly and fiercely contested debate for the Student Party nomination for president last night, Dwight Wheless captured a landslide victory over two other candidates.

Wheless, a junior who has served as presidential assistant this year, outdistanced both Robin Britt and Mike Lawler for the SP nomination. Another possible candidate, Bud Broome, withdrew before the nominations.

The Student Party, which took more time in choosing its candidates for president than the University Party took last week in selecting its entire slate, will be attempting to keep its hold on the top two student government seats which it captured last spring. Wheless, in winning the SP nomination, will face UP candidate Inman Allen in the March 27 elections.

Wheless, a junior, was the third candidate to be voted on. Lawler had received 24 standing votes, and Britt had received 24. When Wheless appeared to have outnumbered both of them, he was accepted by acclamation.

The Party voted to postpone action on the choice of a candidate for vice president, in order to give Britt and Lawler time to decide whether they wanted to run.

Lindsay Raiford was a unanimous choice for secretary when there were no other nominations. She will oppose Judy Clark in the election.

Scott Summers, a sophomore, was elected by acclamation to run for treasurer. He will oppose Bill Criswell.

Wheless, who was supported by Rufus Edminston, who had also been nominated but refused to run because he will be in law school next year, promised "to fulfill the needs of the students and to represent them." He proposed a number of changes, notably in dormitory and campus areas. He, as well as his two opponents, asked that the present administrations policies on improvement of academic and social life of the dorm resident be continued.

Britt, the current chairman of the communications committee, stressed a number of goals, including one to invite all N. C. merit scholarship finalists to the campus. Britt claimed support of dorm presidents, and "guaranteed" that he would deliver victory.

Lawler, who was supported by DTH editor Wayne King, said he wanted to make a "return to politics" after a year's stay on the honor council.

Platform chairman Richard Akers told the convention that the final party platform would be presente dat tonight's meeting, which will also be held in Howell Hall.

Campus Seminars In Foreign Study Begin March 12

"What you take with you to Europe in a large part, determines what you will bring back," says C. C. Shotts general coordinator of the Y -sponsored Seminars Abroad program for Carolina students.

A series of on-campus seminars, planned to prepare students for what they will find in Europe, is being offered beginning March 12, and culminating in a three day seminar in Washington. There students will visit and talk with members of the various embassies of the countries to be visited, plus the Russian embassy.

"We will go where the issues are hottest," says Shotts.

The schedule for the on-campus seminars, to be held every Monday at 9 p.m. is as follows:

March 12—England, Scotland, Ireland and France.

March 19—Switzerland, Italy and Germany.

March 26—Austria, Denmark and the Netherlands.

April 2—Art and Architecture in Europe.

April 9—East/West Conflicts in Europe.

April 16—European Interests and Attitudes.

The East-West Conflict seminar, on April 9, will be centered on Berlin, emphasizing Russian and American influences and showing the opinions of individual European countries on this conflict. Other seminars are designed to acquaint the students with different ideologies, local customs and attitudes, and places of particular interest in each of the countries to be visited.

Although this program was designed originally for the students participating in the Seminars Abroad trip, anyone is welcome to attend any and all of the seminars. Those interested are asked to contact C. C. Shotts in the Y office.

Committee Not Appointed Yet

The five-member committee ordered by the board of trustees of the Consolidated University to investigate the appeal of the suspension of Ann Carter has not been appointed yet to the knowledge of the Office of Student Affairs.

This committee, to be appointed soon by Governor Sanford, is to include at least three lawyers and will be directed to "act with dispatch" and submit recommendations at the board's next meeting.

Miss Carter was convicted by the Woman's Honor Council of answering questions contained in an original examination, instead of a make-up examination which the professor said he had given her.

Dr. George I. Blanksten

Blanksten To Talk On Latin America

"Revolutionary Changes in Latin America" will be the topic of Dr. George I. Blanksten, professor of political science at Northwestern University, when he addresses the Carolina Symposium on April 4.

Dr. Blanksten has traveled extensively in Latin America and taught at the University of Mexico in 1959.

He acted as Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs for the U.S. Government during World War II and joined the staff of the State Department in late 1945.

After receiving his doctorate from U.C.L.A. in 1949, he published books on the political situations in Ecuador and Argentina. His most recent book, concerning the role of the U.S. in Latin America, is now in press.

GM Schedules New European Flight

Graham Memorial has announced that although an insufficient number of students turned out to arrange a jet charter flight to Europe this next summer, a new opportunity is now available.

Ararangements have been made for students currently enrolled this term (and last as well) to fly by jet from New York to London and return for only $300.00. Departure will be June 11 at 9:15 p.m.—arriving London at 8:35 the next morning. The return flight will depart from London at 1:40 p.m. on August 22 and arrive New York at 4:20 the same day. No variation in flight can be made—one must go and return at these times. The flight will be via DC-8 jet, tourist class on Alitalia Air Lines.

The deadline for signing up for this flight is March 31. A deposit of $150.00 is required at that time and payment in full must be made by April 30.

Manning Appointed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy Monday named Robert J. Manning, a former newspaper man, as assistant secretary of state for public affairs.

Manning, 42, succeeds Roger W. Tubby in the $20,000-a-year post. Tubby recently was named U. S. representative to the United Nations and other international organizations at Geneva.

Manning has 26 years news experience. He was born in Binghamton, N. Y., and has worked for Associated Press, United Press International and as an editor for Time, Life and Fortune and Sports Illustrated.

Manning formerly was Sunday editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

He is married and has three sons, Richard, Brian, and Robert.

Campus Briefs

Legislative Candidates

At the beginning of the Fall Semester, each men's dormitory district will lose one legislative seat with the exception of Men's Dorm I and VI. These seats will be reapportioned to Men's Dorm I.

Indication will be made on the ballot of the spring election of the seat which will revert to Dorm Men's I. A student shall be eligible for election to that seat only by such indication on his petition of nomination. If there are no candidates for those seats within 20 days of the election, the seats will automatically revert to Dorm Men's I for the spring election.

A petition signed by 25 students and the candidate or party endorsment must be received by Dave Buxton, chairman of the Elections Board by Wed. in the Student Gov. Office.

Freshman Social Committee

There will be a compulsory meeting of the Freshman Class Social Committee tonight in Graham Memorial at 8.

CWC

The Carolina Women's Council will meet tonight at 6:30 in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial.

CWC Presidency

Junior and senior independent women may arrange interviews for the presidency of the Carolina Women's Council by contacting the social chairman of their dorms before Mar. 9.

NAACP

There will be a meeting of the NAACP tonight at 8:30 in 203 Alumni. Elections will be held and there will be discussion of plans for a program dealing with voter registration.

Alpha Epsilon Delta

Alpha Epsilon Delta will hold its second rush meeting at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, March 8, in Room 226 of the med school. All premedical and predental students are invited to attend.

Caving-Climbing

The Caving-Climbing will meet Wed. at 6:30 p.m. in the front room upstairs in Lenoir Hall. Slides of a new cave in Georgia will be shown.

Residence Council

The Women's Residence Council will interview candidates for Chairman on March 13-15. Senior girls can obtain application forms from the Dean of Women's Office this week. After the forms have been returned to the Dean's office, applicants may sign up for interviews at the Information Desk in Graham Memorial. Interviews will be held in Roland Parker from 4-6 p.m. each afternoon.

DTH Editor

There will be a meeting of the Selections Board of the Publications Board Wed. at 5 p.m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room. Interviews will be held for candidates for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel.

BA Dean's List

The School of Business Administration has announced the addition of four students to its Dean's List for the fall semester. These are Nancy Carol Earle, Stacy Arnold Nunnery, James Barry Pitleman, and Kenneth Ervin Tutterow.

Women's Council Candidates

Interviews will be held this week for Women's Council candidates by the Bi-partisan Selections Board in the Woodhouse Room in Graham Memorial. There will be a signup sheet on the door of Woodhouse.

Even From Buckley

We Expected More

The National Review, last week quite by coincidence carried a "review of author-politician Gore Vidal's latest Broadway show, "Romulus." Also by coincidence, Vidal happened to be the gentleman who loosed some rather pointed comments about William F. Buckley, Jr., on the Jack Paar show recently.

Buckley, by coincidence, edits the National Review. Strange as it may seem from all this, "Romulus," by coincidence, was panned by the reviewer.

Beyond all this coincidence, there is the question of the review itself. Roughly half of it was devoted to the play; the remaining half was dedicated to the vilest sort of smear of Vidal himself. Pointing out that "the author of the play is far more interesting than 'Romulus'," the reviewer, Noel Parmentel, Jr., lets loose with a snickering, back-room-smut attack on Vidal that would better grace the pages of Confidential than anything faintly resembling a respectable publication.

Relying for the most part on not-so-veiled innuendo, reviewer Parmental goes right to the brink of libel in an attempt to undercut Vidal.

Some of the less vicious comments:

"Gore Vidal's concern with ('effeminate') theater would seem to follow from some of the things he has concerned himself with in the past."

"During his early career as a "serious" novelist, he evinced an interest in homosexuality equalled only by that of . . . the editors of "One." Many of his novels and stories are clinical, apparently informed commentaries on the problem."

Other comments by the "reviewer" are considerably more pointed, and couched in much more colorful — to say the least — language.

This sort of vicious back-biting and smearing is not even worthy of the National Review — which is saying quite a lot. The attack is vicious, vulgar and thoroughly in bad taste.

We expected more than this, even from Buckley.

A Unique Opportunity

Russian Visit

The visit of twelve Russian graduate students to the University the latter part of this month represents a unique opportunity for us to observe close-up what the experts call the cardinal danger of communism: The religious dedication which motivates its adherents and orders their thinking.

Only the irrational can even hope that our guests will not be superbly-trained highly-intelligent young Party men who are ultra-trustworthy devotees of Russian Communism, determinted to do their part in eventually "burying" capitalism. It does not make the crudest kind of sense for us to believe otherwise.

After all, if we were sending a group of American students to Russia on a trip such as this, we would send none but the best. It is absurd to think that the communists have not done likewise.

And facing up to the facts of the students' visit, as those facts appear from here, is not to condemn the students. It is simply to be realistic. If anyone is to be condemned, it must be the Russian leaders who have forged a system that turns people into semi-automatons as many persons expect our guests will be.

It seems the most we can try to do, where the students are concerned, is ventilate their stereotyped notions of us by receiving them warmly, according them the hospitality for which Americans — Southerners in particular — are justly famous, not going out of our way to try to convert them to our way of thinking, and getting all the insight we can into what makes them tick.

We are almost certain to be frustrated in our attempts to befriend the students, it seems to me, and in our attempts to compare with them the relative advantages of our respective ways-of-life. One of the sterile beauties of communism is that its leaders have perfected the art of rationalization, and the students undoubtedly are well-vaccinated against any and all ideas that do not coincide with their carefully-molded beliefs.

There is another factor, too. Perhaps some of the students will wish to do more than see only what they wish to see. But it does not seem unreasonable to think that perhaps one of each student's tasks is to keep an eye on his fellows and report on their conduct.

In essence, then, we should not expect the students to be overly friendly or especially reasonable. But we should expect to learn from them that which we are told we have most to fear from communism.

Segregation & Supreme Court

The last judicial prop under the effort of Southern states to evade or delay racial desegregation of public transportation facilities by means of conflicting local laws was swept away by the Supreme Court in its unanimous, peremptory (per curiam) ruling of Feb. 26. The Court said sharply it had "settled beyond question that no state" can "require" this discrimination. And it cited three direct and eight corollary decisions as proof that "settlement" was made by due process of law.

"Wait A Minute — That's Not What I Had In Mind"

In logical and factual sequence the Supreme Court then instructed a Federal district judge in Mississippi no longer to delay trying the cases of Freedom Riders, who have been jailed for insisting on their right to desegregated transportation, until state tribunals have passed on the constitutionality of the local laws in conflict. This delay was ordered by a three-judge Federal court, in consonance with a procedural principle which the Supreme Court itself had sanctioned. But, said the Justices on Feb. 26, this principle could not be applied when its "prior decisions" have, as in this instance, made "frivolous any claim that a (state) statute is not unconstitutional on its face." And the Supreme Court ruling strongly implied a notice to the Federal trial judge that jail sentences for insisting on desegregated transport facilities are invalid when this insistence is made peacefully.

The per curiam ruling, moreover, completed the funeral services and interment of the constitutional doctrine the Supreme Court proclaimed in Plessy v. Ferguson (1896) and maintained until 1954. This doctrine, applied in that case also to transportation, was that if public facilities are "equal" they constitutionally may be "separate." But, though the Supreme Court in 1954 reversed Plessy in general while reversing its principle as applied to public primary and high schools, state school laws have since been upheld whose incidental effect may be racial segregation.

The key statute is the Alabama Pupil Placement Law. It establishes certain criteria — health, moral environment, effects on public order, etc. — on which local boards may grant or deny the requests of pupils for admission to or transfer from a public school. The Supreme Court found this "not unconstitutional on its face" — no statutory device to perpetuate total school segregation — but unconstitutional in operation when an enduring and deliberate pattern or single example of racial bias can be established as the reason for denial of admission or transfer.

The asserted authority of the Supreme Court to ban legalized racial segregation has thus expanded since the 1954 decision. But, though this extension has indeed prevailed, it has not changed the view of many respected lawyers that neither the Federal Constitution nor any United States statute authorized the Supreme Court's 1954 ban on racial separation in the public schools on which its subsequent desegregation rulings in other areas are based. However, once the Court has assumed the function of making new public policy without specific constitutional or statutory foundation, as it did with respect to segregation in 1954, the policy can be nullified only by non-enforcement on the part of the Executive, or by acts of Congress to the contrary. Rarely has a President declined to provide this enforcement. And nullification by Congress is effectively sustained because ever since the Supreme Court found authority to declare both Congressional acts and Executive actions unconstitutional the American people have accepted this as necessary to orderly government.

These are the sources of the supremacy of the Federal judiciary over the other two coordinate branches of the Government of the United States that has become a fact of our national life. It is customary for lawyers and judges to deny this, but it operates nevertheless with the finality Charles E. Hughes conceded in his uniquely candid statement that "the Constitution is what the judges say it is" at any time. That truth was clearly revealed in the school decision of 1954. Its rationale was that racial segregation is "a denial of the equal protection of the laws (Fourteenth Amendment)" because separated school facilities are "inherently unequal." And this judgment was based on researches by sociologists from which they concluded that racial segregation "generates a feeling of inferiority" among Negro school children "that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone."

Urban Affairs Department: No Need

Editor's Note: Although the proposed new department of urban affairs has been soundly defeated and killed in the House, President Kennedy has announced that he has not abandoned plans for a later attempt at establishing the new department. The following reprint from the Western Political Quarterly discusses practical, non-political aspects of such a department.

* * *

Not only are there strong political arguments against the creation of a department of urban affairs, but there is a strong case against it on grounds of administrative soundness. Creation of a department has come to be regarded as a panacea for all administrative ills. Yet a study of the service departments over the years, and of the Department of Defense in particular, since its creation in 1947, produces considerable evidence that departmentalization is not a guaranteed cure for administrative difficulties. Establishment of a department, indeed, may only delay the cure or force it to take place in different surroundings. Back of the proposal is the idea that a simple organizational change will provide the answer for urban and metropolitan problems. This is a false belief. The mere creation of a new administrative unit is not the answer to a problem as complex as that presenter by the phenomenon of metropolitanization. Creation of a department would beg the most important question of all, what is the federal government's proper role in urban areas? The answer is not merely to assign urban affairs to a single organizational unit. It is a matter of principle and philosophy, not of method. To create a method without first having established a philosophy to base it on is to put the proverbial cart before the horse. Coming as they do at this time, when the federal government's thoughts about the basic issues involved are still inchoate, such a proposal is clearly premature.

Moreover, a department of urban affairs as proposed would be based on a geographical concept rather than on a functional one. To admit it would be to introduce a maverick into the administrative corral. The work of such a department, if all the programs carried on by the federal government affecting cities were placed under its jurisdiction, would necessarily cut across the functions of a great many existing agencies and departments. Indeed, once the Pandora's box is opened, how is it to be closed? What programs do not have an urban interest, save those pertaining strictly to agriculture? If housing and related activities and civil defense are the first to be included, how can arguments for the inclusion of a host of others be denied? Thus in the hearings of H.R. 1864, the representative of the American Municipal Association declared that in his opinion the new department "should include such items as highways and urban transit, airports and airport administration, public health matters . . . water and air pollution, and juvenile delinquency" in addition to housing and urban development and renewal and civil defense. What would be the effect at least on the departments of Commerce, Interior, and Health, Education and Welfare of the creation of a department of urban affairs? It would certainly conflict with their organization and ongoing programs, to say nothing of the complexities it would introduce into the programs of many independent regulatory agencies. To insert an executive department based on a geographical pattern into a system primarily organized functionally would make for more, rather than less, confusion in the administrative structure.

It is argued that the new department would simply parallel the existing Department of Agriculture and serve city dwellers in the same way that Agriculture serves the farmers. But even if it be admitted that Agriculture is principally concerned with farmers, yet its organizational base is strictly functional. A comparable situation would be created if the new department were made simply the department of housing. This title, however, would not give it cognizance over the broad area of urban problems which sponsors of the new department desire. What would be done with activities like airports, highways, and water pollution? Is it suggested that these functions too be divided along geographic lines and that urban highways be placed in the new department but rural highways left where they are now? Would highway matters thus be divided between two departments? Would the same duplication be repeated for water and air pollution, airport construction and maintenance, water supply, hospital construction, and all the manifold other urban programs of the federal government? Indeed, with what department and agency of the federal establishment would a department conceived upon geographic lines not conflict? To ask the question is to supply the answer. To create such a department would be to create an organizational misfit.

Moreover, it cannot be conclusively demonstrated that merely because certain activities of the federal government reach a particular magnitude they should automatically be brought together under a single executive department. The Veterans' Administration would seem to be a case in point. In terms of the number of employees, size of budget, and amounts of money distributed, it would long ago seem to have deserved elevation to departmental status. Yet it has functioned with benefit to the group it serves through the years without cabinet status. What advantages would have accrued to have converted it into an executive department? Proponents of the department of urban affairs claim that one advantage would be better representation in the administrative structure. The heads of HHFA and OCDM now sit with the President's cabinet when matters pertaining to them are discussed. What would be gained by giving them secretarial status?

But it is argued that instead of occasional participation in the cabinet, the urban affairs secretary would be a full-time member. This argument is based on the assumption that the cabinet is in fact a policy-forming body. Actually the President makes policy, and the cabinet may or may not be consulted. Confusing the British system with its theory of cabinet responsibility and the American system where it is sometimes said the cabinet members are the natural enemies of the President is responsible for this. Under the American system access to only one man, the President, is important, because he bears the chief burden for policy-making. Entree at the White House is much more important than cabinet status. Harry Hopkins, during World War II, was a good example of a man who did not have cabinet status but who was much more powerful than any cabinet officer because of his entree to the President. Good entree at the White House, good working relations with Congress, and effective group pressure produces better results in many cases than a seat in the cabinet.

Nor can it be demonstrated that the research and educational programs which are so urgently needed with regard to metropolitan problems can be carried out best by a single department. How much research of a general nature is worthwhile? In regard to mass transportation, for example, must not a solution be fitted to the needs of each individual metropolitan area? Indeed, is there a need for the federal government to conduct such research at all? Today there is a host of agencies, public and private, carrying on research on these problems.

Finally, a department of urban affairs is unnecessary now. Attention to metropolitan problems is not guaranteed merely by the creation of an executive department. It can be secured as well under the existing arrangement of agencies, once they all recognize "that our metropolitan communities provide the environment within which the greatest number of people live and the largest part of the nation's busines is carried out."

Given the need for focusing the attention of the federal goverament on metropolitan area problems, creation of a department of urban affairs or its equivalent is not the way to accomplish the objective. The proposa ldoes not make political sense, it is not in accord with the administrative concepts on which the rest of the executive branch is based, and functionally it would add to the difficulties of effective administration.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

This Is Fair Representation?

The Student Legislature has once again overstepped its bounds and passed a proposal supposedly representing the attitudes of the student body.

The recent Test Ban Proposal passed by the legislature and then sent to President Kennedy is a deplorable travesty of justice and infringes upon the basic rights of the student body.

It is not, however, so much the results of this proposal as it is the means by which the results were achieved. If such an important national issue was upcoming, especially around election time, a poll of student opinion should have been mandatory. In this case, little effort, if any, was used to poll student opinion.

As it stands now 18 students (even 15 members of the legislature voted it down) claim to be the mouthpiece for over 8,000 students. We have been officially recorded as saying that we are in favor of the test ban, but are we?

This appears not to be the first time that the Student Legislature has decided to play the role of the supreme ruler. Past racial policies also point out the oligarchical tendency of this governing body.

Even their arguments seem to cry out for an oligrachy under the pretense of being a Republic. A perfect example of this was shown in the article in the Sat. March 3 DTH. The entire article was a masterpiece in avoiding an issue, besides being—to coin a phrase from its author—"pure mush."

In conclusion, I believe that the entire student body should wake up, look around and see what has become of their rights. I therefore urge everyone to sign the circulating petition reprimanding the student legislature.

Overlooking an issue as vital as this will only tend to make them step farther the next time. Where it could lead to no one knows. Besides being totally unconstitutional, they are acting in a manner detrimental to the rights of the student body.

Half Of N.C. Med Students Entered Here

Of all North Carolinians entering medical schools in this state during the current academic year, over half of them entered the School of Medicine here.

This past Sept. 130 residents of North Carolina began medical studies. Of these 103 entered the three medical schools of North Carolina, UNC, Duke, and Bowman Gray.

Of this 103, a total of 60, or 58 per cent, were freshmen at the UNC School of Medicine, which represents 46 per cent of the total state residents who entered all medical schools last year.

The remaining 27 students who began the study of medicine outside the state were distributed among 15 medical schools throughout the East and South.

This and other data concerning medical schools enrollment has been in the 61st annual report of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association.

ONE MILLION JOBLESS TEEN-AGERS: OUR NATIONAL DISGRACE

This year, more than one million teen-agers will have nothing to do. They're not ambitious enough to stay in school. And not skilled enough to hold down jobs. In this week's Post, you'll learn why many employers won't take a chance on a teen-ager. And what we can do to put these boys to work.

Speaks At Lincoln Day Dinner

Tower Takes Smack At Democrats

By CHARLES HEATHERLY

"There is a resurgence of conservatism in the United States. People are turning back to the basic conservative policies of our ancestors," said Senator John Tower (R-Tex.) at a Lincoln Day Dinner in Durham Saturday night.

The Senator spoke to a capacity crowd at the event which climaxed the 1962 North Carolina State Republican Convention. Tower said the South was awakening to realize it had been misled by the Democratic party and that the only alternative lay in returning to the GOP.

Humorously the 5'4"-Texan inserted, "I have been asked by the Texas Chamber of Commerce to tell you that I'm exactly one foot shorter than the normal Texan."

Tower, the frist Republican Senator from Texas since Reconstruction, predicted that 1962 would be a year of gains for Republicans. He defeated a heavily favored conservative Democrat in a special March election last year for the seat vacated by Vice-President Johnson.

In an appeal to bring grater Republican leadership to the South, Tower noted that Southern Republicans have more national influence than ever before—"a distinction not present in the Democratic party."

The conservative spokesman commented that he had been elected because "a number of people were dedicated to a cause, not because they wanted federal jobs."

Attack On Kennedy

He went on to attack the Kennedy Administration for its efforts to bring about greater socialization and more centralized power in the presidency.

"What kind of party holds that the people do not have sense enough to build their own schools our roads? Should the administration be allowed to spend our money in the manner that a bunch of Harvard professors feel best for us?" the former Midwestern University professor asked.

He predicted defeat for the president's medical aid proposal as well as the education bill.

He termed Kennedy's unsuccessful attempt to establish a Department of Urban Affairs "clumsy" and charged that the young president has received a "slap on the wrists" for attempting to blackmail congress with the racial issue.

Earlier in the convention, National Party Chairman Williiam Miller said "If Kennedy wants a Negro in the cabinet . . . he might appoint one as attorney general. I know hundreds of Negro lawyers who are better qualified than brother Bobby."

Jonas Will Run

Another highlight of the convention came when Charles Jonas reiterated a statement of candidacy for the newly formed 8th congressional district. He will be seeking his 6th term. "Mr. Republican," as he is called, is North Carolina's lone GOP delegate in congress.

A resolution was unanimously adopted honoring Jonas and pledging full support in his re-election campaign and in "any future endeavor he may undertake" (possibly meaning the 1964 gubernatorial race).

William Cobb of Morganton was re-elected as chairman of the State Republican Executive Committee. He had no opposition.

In the afternoon session an amendment was rejected which would have changed the method of electing delegates to the National Convention. It would have given the heavily Republican Western section of the state greater reperesntation.

String Group Plays Twice This Week

The North Carolina String Quartet will be featured on WUNC-TV's concert series, HILL HALL PRESENTS, Wednesday at 9:30 p.m., and repeated Sunday, Mar. 11 at 9:15 p.m.

The Quartet will perform "Quartet in A Minor, Opus 41, No. 1" by Robert Shumann, and the first movement of J. C. de Arriaga's "Quartet No. 1 in D Minor."

The North Carolina Quartet consists of four accomplished musiians who are in various ways connected with UNC and have been playing together 10 years.

Members of the Quartet are Edgar Alden, Associate Professor of Music at the University of North Carolina, graduate of Oberlin College and the University of North Carolina; Jean Heard, graduate of the University of Alabama and the Juilliard School of Music; Dorothy Alden, graduate of Oberlin College, instructor of string groups at Chapel Hill; Mary Gray Clarke, graduate of the Manhattan School of Music and the University of North Carolina, instructor of cello at Chapel Hill.

LESSON 4 - Why men watch girls

Men watch girls for various reasons. Personally, we need no better reason than the reason men climb mountains. They are there. We have heard old men say they watch girls because it makes them feel younger and young men because it makes them feel older (see above). While investigating the reasons why men watch girls we picked up a clue from, of all things, a bird watcher. He told us that he formerly had been a flower watcher. Then one day a Speckle-Breasted Jackdaw happened to land in his garden as he was watching a calla lily and he noticed that the bird moved. He switched to birds on the spot. Girl watchers have discovered that girls enjoy this same advantage (movement) over calla lilies. (Speaking of advantages, how about Pall Mall's natural mildness!)

Clemson basketball coach Press Maravich brought a colorful basketball team to Raleigh last week for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship tournament. The likeable Maravich, who spends most of his time on the bench chewing on towels, could just have easily wrapped his players in one big bundle, stuck them in an oversized picnic basket, and left the following letter.

"Enclosed is a basketball team, rich in talent, but lacking in experience. This team won only ten of 14 games during the regular season, but three of these losses were by narrow margins to Wake Forest, N. C. State, and North Carolina.

"The big boy on top is Tommy Mahaffey, a 6-7 220-pounder from LaGrange, Ga. He has been troubled by a foot injury all season and hasn't been in top physical shape since the North Carolina game on Dec. 5 because of the injury. He could be ready to go at full steam against N. C. State this afternoon.

"The prize package in this bundle is Jim Brennan. He's only 6-2, but this sophomore from McKeesport, Pa., is a real offensive demon. His 16.3 average ranks him eighth in the ACC in scoring. By his senior year he could be the best guard in the conference.

"Nick Milasnovich, another sophomore, is also 6-2. He followed Brennan in the league scoring race with a 15.3 average. Nicky was also the top foul shooter for Clemson during the regular season with a .769 percentage.

"Also in my basket you will find six other sophomore basketball players. Two of these are big boys, Woody Morgan, 6-7, 190, and Manning Privette, 6-8 205. Both of these young giants are from Hartsville, S. C. So you see all my talent isn't from outside the state.

"The other four sophs are Mike Bohonak, 6-3, from Pittsburgh, Gary Burnisky, 6-5 from Bridgeville, Pa., Richard Hall 6-0 from Savannah, Ga., and Donnie Mahaffey 6-8, 215. Donnie is the younger brother of Tommy. Too bad both of them won t be back next year."

"This is my team. If you watch these boys play this afternoon you may see a bunch of sophomores and one senior at their season's peak. They have the desire to play and the desire to win. I'm sure they'll win your affections as they have mine."

Maravich's youngsters and the senior Mahaffey warmed up the fans a little when they romped over State in the opening game of the tourney by the surprising score of 67-46. When asked if he thought Clemson could continue to play as they had against State, he replied, "When a team gets a hot hand, there's no telling what may happen."

By the time the Clemson-Duke semifinal game had started, few people really thought the Tigers could do it again. But when the boys from Clemson came from behind in the second half, Reynolds Coliseum sounded like a larger model of Clemson's "Tiger Den", officially known as the Clemson Field House. It seemed that 12,000 of the 12,400 fans had adopted Clemson as their team. They held on to the lead and for the second straight day, Maravich rode off the court on his players' shoulders.

The final game, lost 77-66 to Wake Forest, was anticlimatic. The carriage turned back into a pumpkin, but the Clemson pumpking patch will be among the ripest by December. These sophs will be juniors and Choppy Patterson, 1960 All-Conference guard, will be back. Things couldn't look rosier for Maravich.

'My Greatest Thrill': Bones

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

"My biggest thrill in sports."

This was Wake Forest coach Horace "Bones" McKinney's verdict on his Demon Deacons' 77-66 win over Clemson for the ACC Championship Saturday night in Raleigh.

"Yes sir, that has to be my biggest. Those early-season losses had both the boys and me down quite a bit and I must admit I had my doubts about this club. But tonight capped the most satisfying pleasure of my coaching career."

The gangly McKinney, an ordained Baptist minister, then went into a small sermon before the cluster of reporters and photographers gathered around him in a small vestibule beneath the Coliseum floor.

"When you have faith in a bunch of boys and you know you're right about them, you can disregard other people's doubts. You fellas had us written off in January but after the Duke game, we came back. This club has the insides of champions and I think they proved it out there tonight." No one seemed to disagree.

The weary Deason coach drained his Pepsi bottle and went on, "Chappell was great. So was Packer. But I want to emphasize the tremendous team effort that was given. You san call Clemson the "Cinderella team" all you want but I think us coming back after those early-season disappointments makes us as much a "Cinderella" as anybody.

McKinney had one last thought. "As I said, the comeback of my boys this year has to be my greatest thrill. But it wouldn't have been complete without this championship victory tonight. On January 27 (the night of the Duke game which Wake lost, 82-68), we had an awful long ride home back to Winston-Salem. Believe me, it will be a short ride home tomorrow.

Wake Forest Stops Clemson, 77-66; Meets Yale Next In NCAA Playoffs

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The bubble burst for Clemson Saturday night.

The magic carpet that Press Maravich and his "Tiger Tots" had been riding all week was rudely pulled from under them as the powerful Demon Deacons of Wake Forest rolled to the ACC Championship, 77-66.

For the sophomore-studded Tigers, who had never won a game in ACC tournament history before their victories over North Carolina State and Duke, which got them into the finals, the defeat was a bitter pill to swallow.

The first ten minutes of this title struggle were fairly even, but when 6-2 Mike Bohonak hit a jumper with 10:42 remaining in the first half. Clemson had seen its last lead. Wake's Frank Christie drove for a basket and, fouled on the play, sank his free throw for the three-point play and a 20-19 lead which the Deacons never relinquished.

Coach Bones McKinney's boys built the lead to 43-28 by halftime and the writing was on the wall.

Wake maintained its 15-point margin through the early stages of the second period largely on the play of their fabulous 6-8 forward Lennie Chappell. Big Len, held to only 12 points in the first half, proceeded to score 16 of Wake's first 20 points in the concluding period as he matched the entire Clemson team basket for basket.

Chappell, in celebration of his being named to the All-American first team, netted a game high of 31 points before fouling out with 4:40 left. The 12,400 fans packed into Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum, gave the Portage, Pa. native a three-minute standing ovation as he left a North Carolina court for the last time.

Prior to Chappell's departure, Clemson had cut the lead to 12 at 59-47 on three consecutive baskets by their fine guard—Jim Brennan. But Billy Packer, who contributed 21 points to the Deacon total, hit a one-hander and two free throws at the 16:40 mark to ice it for the champs.

The Tigers, who never quit fighting, narrowed the final margin to 11 in the closing moments but by this time, McKinney had cleared his bench to give the reserves a chance to play in this Wake Forest moment of glory.

Sophomore guard Brennan led Clemson with 21 points, while Bohonak had 13 and Nick Milasnovich, still another soph, added 10. The Tigers shot a dismal 39.1 from the floor but did hold the advantage in rebounds, 40-33.

Wake Forest hit a fantastic 68 per cent of their field goal attempts in the first half and finished with 53 per cent for the game. Chappell netted 10 of 16 field goals and added 11 of 15 free throws, for his 31 points. In addition to Packer, Dave Wiedeman was also in double figures for the Deacons with 10.

McKinney and his Wake Forest club, having won this ACC Championship festival for the second year in a row, now advance to the NCAA playoffs. In their quest to get another shot at Ohio State, the Demon Deacons first face the Ivy League champion, Yale, at Philadelphia's Palestra on Monday, March 12.

Vinroot, Brown And Walker In Senior Races

Richard Vinroot, Larry Brown and Beth Walker, now Junior class officers were all renominated by the Student Party Monday night to run for their same positions in the Senior class. Jeff Guller and Gail Woodward were picked to fill out the Senior class slate.

Vinroot was nominated for the presidency by a unanimous vote of the convention, as were Miss Walker for secretary and Jeff Guller for treasuer.

Larry Brown defeated Bruce Greene for the vice-president nomination in the only close contest, and Gail Woodward was picked over Judy O'Grady by a fairly wide margin for social chairman.

Soviets Blast Farm Trouble

MOSCOW (UPI) — A parade of Communist party leaders from throughout the Soviet Union Tuesday blamed everything from inefficient management to the late Josef Stalin for the nation's lagging farm production.

Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev had placed part of the blame for the agricultural failures on "the leadership" in opening a meeting of the Communist party's Central Committee in the Kremlin Monday.

Khrushchev warned that the seven-year-plan is in "serious danger" because of the failure of the farmers in the various republics to meet quotas in meat, dairy production, grains and other products.

All leading Soviet newspapers printed lengthy accounts on Khrushchev's nearly six-hour report on the failure-after-failure of Soviet agriculture.

Orientation Posts Still To Be Filled Through Interviews

Interviews for positions on the Campus Orientation committee are being held today and Friday in Roland Parker II.

Applications are now available at the information desk in Graham Memorial and at the desk of the Reserve Reading Room in the library.

MOOT COURT TOMORROW

80 Per Cent Rule Still A Problem

By Joe Hodges

"I'd like to see the IFC continue its present trend toward becoming a strong guiding force for fraternities rather than functioning mainly as a conservation and protection agency," Assistant Dean of Student Affairs William G. Long said yesterday.

When asked to comment on the reasons for the rule requiring that 80 per cent of a fraternity's active membership maintain a C academic average, he explained the history and origins of the rule.

In the past the academic averages of fraternities were generally lower than those of the rest of the University. Accompanying these low averages were various other fraternity problems of wide range.

At that time the IFC was very weak and could not effectively handle the problem. Since something had to be done, the Faculty Council began to discuss some course of action. Their first idea was that of the "deferred rush" but fraternity reaction was extremely adverse, the main objections being financial. As an alternate course, the Faculty established the 80 per cent rule.

Under this rule, fraternities are placed on rush and pledge probation if 80 per cent of their active membership does not maintain a C average for any given semester. If they still fail to meet the requirements the following semester, then they lose their rushing and pledging priviledges until such time as they do meet the requirement.

Fraternities usually exert as great an influence on their members as do any campus organizations. They work in a fraternal spirit in athletics, charity, and in social undertakings. Often, however, they tend to look at academics as individual undertakings." The rule is designed to help create a fraternal atmosphere toward academic achievement also.

"Although there is no definite axiom that pairs high academic achievement with general success in other areas, this trend has been observed on the campus."

The Dean, himself once a fraternity member for five years, observed that the rule has had a few adverse effects as some fraternities regularly de-activate many of their members merely to achieve the required 80 per cent C's. "This action appears to be a little bloodthirsty and is not the desired result of the rule. Other fraternities seem to approach the rule with a proper attitude, encouraging better scholarship by other methods."

He noted that the large number of fraternities on probation now is probably partially a result of the greater emphasis placed on fall rush rather than spring rush. "Since rushing and pledging is the lifeblood of any fraternity, the rule could be considered harsh. With a strong IFC however, this responsibility of maintaining high standards could possibly be placed once again in the hands of the students and they could conceivably change the type of restriction.

"Relative to the situation prevalent at the time of its institution, I'd say that the 80 per cen rule has been effective, but I think a strong IFC would be even more successful."

Although he is not completely satisfied with the IFC at this time, the Dean did say that it has improved this year in the proper direction.

Sigma Chi Made Required Marks

The Office of Student Affairs yesterday reported that a recheck of the grade average of Sigma Chi revealed that the fraternity made an 80 per cent average and will not be placed on probation as the Office reported Saturday.

Dr. Ralph Bunche To Address Forum

Bunche has served the United Nations since 1946 when he resigned from the State Department after being a delegate to several of the formative conferences of the UN.

Dr. Ralph Bunche

He served as mediator for the UN in the Palestine dispute and directed the negotiations which resulted in the four armistice Agreements between Israel and the Arab States.

In 1956 Bunche organized and supervised the UN Emergency Force during the Suez crisis. He also organized the UN operation in the Congo.

He holds a Ph.D. from Harvard and served on the faculty there until 1950, when he resigned with the rank of professor. While at Harvard, he organized the Political Science Dept.

Bunche has been the recipient of numerous honorary degrees and awards including Phi Beta Kappa, the Nobel Peace Prize and the Four Freedoms Award.

Infirmary

Students in the infirmary yesterday included Gladys Carr, Jane Taylor, Martha Wolfe, Eileen Gunter, Anna Swann, Dorothy Fayed, Martha Acton, Mimi Farquhar, Ann Glanckotf, Scott Ward, Marshall Turner.

SP Endorses Clotfelter And Wrye For Ed.

The Student Party last night endorsed Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye as co-editors of the Daily Tar Heel after a heated hour-and-a-half debate. The pair defeated Chuck Moony by a fairly wide margin.

The party voted in the first action of the night to postpone the nomination of a vice-president of the student body until a party meeting Monday night.

The party voted to endorse a candidate after numerous speakers emphasised that it was the party's duty to take a stand on issues and candidates.

Other nominations and the presentation of a party platform were not complete at presstime.

Katanga Leader To Meet Adoula For Talks Soon

ELISABETHVILLE, KATANGA, The Congo (UPI)—President Moise Tshombe announced Tuesday he will leave for Leopoldville on March 15 for talks with Central Congolese Premier Cyrille Adoula on ending Katanga's secession from The Congo.

Tshombe said the United Nations has promised him all the security he wants for his mission. He told newsmen that Jose Relz Bennett, U. N. chief in Elisabethville, gave him a "solemn declaration" that all security arrangements for the trip and his stay in Leopoldville are complete.

Observers said Tshombe's acceptance of the guarantees by the United Nations removed the last obstacle to his meeting with Adoula. Tshombe will go to Leopoldville with a mandate from his assembly to discuss ending Katanga's 18-month secession on the basis of the Kitona agreement of last December.

Tshombe reported "all is calm" at Kamina, where U.N. patrols and Katangese gendarmes skirmished Monday.

U.N. sources said there had been no more shooting but that the garrison at the former Belgian military base was on a full alert. There were reports of "large-scale troop movement" by Katangese forces in the region in Northern Katanga.

Tshombe blamed the U.N. troops for the clash. But U.N. headquarters in Leopoldville said the Katangese opened fire first.

Military Aid To Thailand Is Increased

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, declaring its firm intention to resist Red aggression in Southeast Asia, promised Tuesday to step up military aid to Thailand to the greatest extent possible.

It also said it would move to halt any Communist attack on Thailand without the prior agreement of other members of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO). Some member countries have indicated they felt SEATO could act only by unanimous vote.

The U. S. pledges were made in a joint communique issued by Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman. It covered agreements reached during Thanat's five-day visit to Washington.

Thailand, which shares a common border with Laos, has shown mounting concern over its position if Laos or South Viet Nam should fall to the Communists. It also has questioned whether the SEATO alliance would act promptly or bog down in debate.

Although the U. S. pledges referred specifically to Thailand, they presumably applied with equal force to outright aggression against any Southeast Asian nation. The United States already has stepped up its military aid to South Viet Nam.

Thanat said that as a result of agreements reached during his talks here, "we can express hope for a more stable future for Southeast Asia and, of course, Thailand."

Morehead Foundation Gives 47 Scholarships

$1.7 Million Has Gone For Grants Here

"They're all here, They're all all right, they're all paid for, and they're all yours," John Motley Morehead told Chancellor William B. Aycock yesterday as he presented 47 new Morehead Scholars to the University. Mr. Morehead made the presentation at a live television ceremony in Swain Hall.

Since 1951, when they were established, a total of 365 Morehead Scholarships have been awarded. These represent a monetary value of $1,726,025.74. 157 of the recipients have graduated from graduate or undergraduate school at UNC.

The scholars were told by Mr. Morehead that they weighed a total of 7849 pounds and that they were receiving an average of $5,823 per boy. "That's quite a price to pay," "Uncle Mot" told the group, "for boys on the hoof."

This year's scholars are: Alvin M. Fountain, II, Gerald Edwin Shaw, Howard G. Godwin Jr., William E. Hudson, George P. Dingeldein Jr., James C. Hart, David W. Burkette, John P. Harmon Jr., Alexander T. Shaw III, Andrew J. Harrell III.

George L. Wainwright Jr., James Bischoff, William W. Taylor III, William J. Busby, John Harmon, David M. Moore, Paul A. Jensen, Charles A. Barton Jr., Walter R. Graham Jr., John R. Hamilton, James W. Hyder Jr., Homer E. Legrand Jr., Spencer F. Tinkham.

Clifford P. Case III, James B. Meade, Henry G. Hortenstine, Laban T. Betty Jr., Burton J. Willingham, Joseph F. Martin, Gordon M. Fitz-Simons, Scott F. Ackerman, Malcolm W. Dunlevie Jr., Richard S. Johnson Jr., Spencer W. McCallie, Robert B. Butcher.

David R. Thompson, William T. Campbell, Albert B. Marshall Jr., Charles L. Snow Jr., Michael K. Tooke, George W. Doyle, Lawrence A. Ehrhart III, Walter C. Upton, John W. P. Cartwright Jr., Wade H. Logan III, John R. Steele, William N. Thomas III.

U.S. Promises Safe Testing In Pacific

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House gave assurances Tuesday that U. S. atomic tests in the Pacific will be conducted with "no hazard to the people of Hawaii or other Pacific islands."

The statement was made in a letter sent from the White House to Sen. Oren E. Long, D-Hawaii. Long had inquired about the possible effects in Hawaii of the resumption of U. S. atmospheric tests.

The tests are set for Christmas Island in the Pacific, 1,500 miles south of Hawaii, and Johnston Island, 1,000 miles southwest of the state.

Lawrence J. O'Brien, special assistant to President Kennedy, wrote Long that "the President agrees that the people of Hawaii should be forewarned of effects which might cause concern."

He said that "instructions have been issued that advance public notice be given of any scheduled event which is expected to produce any such effects in Hawaii, so that the people there will know what to expect."

O'Brien also said that the task force conducting the tests "will make careful meteorological observations before each test to establish that prevailing weather conditions are such that no hazard from radiation will result in areas outside the danger zone.

"Further precautionary actions will include early notices to navigators and airmen of the boundaries of the danger area, constant screening of the perimeter of this area to warn surface craft away, and general surveillance of the area to ascertain that no one is in the danger area who has not been advised that the area has been set aside for nuclear tests," he said.

Campus Briefs

Elections Board

The Elections Board will hold an important meeting at 5:00 in Woodhouse Conference Room. Members unable to attend are asked to contact Dave Buxton, 968-9077.

Inter-State

Any student with at least a 3.5 average and interested in attending University of California for his junior year is invited to apply for the Wigginton Ellis Creed Inter-State Scholarship, worth $1900 for the year 1962-63.

Applications may be obtained from: Committee on Undergraduate Scholarships and Honors, Room B-1, 2256 College Avenue, University of California, Berkeley 4, California.

Women's Dorms

Women students of the University requiring dormitory space for the summer or fall are asked to sign up in their dormitories between Thursday, March 8, and Friday, March 16. Failure to do so may mean that the student will not be able to live in the dormitory or room of her choice.

Women students living in town who wish to move into the dorm for the fall or summer should go to the Dean of Women's Office, 202 South Building.

Men's Council

The Bi-Partisan Selections Board will meet Thursday and Friday from 2:30-5:30 in Roland Parker III to interview applicants for membership on the Men's Council. Candidates must be passed by the Board or have a petition of at least 25 signatures for their names to appear on the ballot.

Women's Council

Rising junior and senior independent women may arrange interviews for presidency of the Carolina Women's Council by contacting the social chairman of their dorms before Mar. 9.

KKG Officers

New Kappa Kappa Gamma officers include President, Jane Womack; Vice President, Sally Sloan, Rush Chairman Mary Hamrick; Panhellenic representative, Deal McArthur, and Pledge Trainer, Dershie Bridgland.

Legislative Candidates

At the beginning of the Fall Semester, each men's dormitory district will lose one legislative seat with the exception of Men's Dorm I and V. These seats will be reapportioned to Men's Dorm I.

Indication will be made on the ballot of the spring election of the seat which will revert to Dorm Men's I. A student shall be eligible for election to that seat only by such indication on his petition of nomination. If there are no candidates for those seats within 20 days of the election, the seats will automatically revert to Dorm Men's I for the spring election.

A petition signed by 25 students and the candidate or party endorsment must be received by Dave Buxton, chairman of the Elections Board by Wed. in the Student Gov. Offices.

Alpha Epsilon Delta

Alpha Epsilon Delta will hold its second rush meeting at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, March 8, in Room 226 of the med school. All premedical and predental students are invited to attend.

Caving-Climbing

The Caving-Climbing will meet Wed. at 6:30 p.m. in the front room upstairs in Lenoir Hall. Slides of a new cave in Georgia will be shown.

Residence Council

The Women's Residence Council will interview candidates for Chairman on March 13-15. Senior girls can obtain application forms from the Dean of Women's Office this week. After the forms have been returned to the Dean's office, applicants may sign up for interviews at the Information Desk in Graham Memorial. Interviews will be held in Roland Parker from 4-6 p.m. each afternoon.

DTH Editor

There will be a meeting of the Selections Board of the Publications Board Wed. at 5 p.m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room. Interviews will be held for candidates for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel.

Tax Law Changes On House Floor In Near Future

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker John W. McCormack predicted Tuesday after meeting with President Kennedy that administration-backed changes in the nation's tax laws would be brought before the House "in the very near future."

McCormack and other Democra-congressional leaders met with Kennedy for more than an hour at the White House.

The Speaker said the weekly breakfast meeting was devoted largely to tax legislation which has been approved by the House Ways & Means Committee. The legislation would provide tax credit for industrial investments and make other changes in tax laws. McCormack told reporters after the White House meeting that he expected the measure to be ready for floor action by this weekend.

House Democratic whip Hale Boggs, a member of the Ways & Means Committee, said it was hoped that the tax credit measure would stimulate a great deal of new investment and, in the process, new employment.

French Fleet Leaves Port

PARIS (UPI) — France's Mediterranean fleet put to sea Tuesday on the eve of the crucial round of Algerian peace talks. Unofficial reports said some of the warships would arrive in Algiers and Oran just before proclamation of an Algerian cease-fire.

The fleet, spearheaded by an anti-aircraft cruiser and a carrier sailed from Toulen as an Algerian rebel delegation arrived in Geneva for the resumption of negotiations with the French beginning Wednesday at the French border resort of Evian-Les-Bains.

Officials said the fleet sailed for a one-month training cruise and would return April 4. It included the cruiser Colbert, flagship of Vice Adm. Andre Jubelin, the aircraft carrier Lafayette, 10 escort vessels, three submarines and a supply ship.

The fleet is scheduled to hold exercises Saturday off the coast of Corsica and to visit Naples, Bizerte, the Spanish Balearic Islands and the big naval base of Mers-El-Kebir, just west of the Algerian trouble-spot port of Oran.

Both French and Algerian rebel officials expressed optimism on Tuesday that the new round of peace talks would produce a cease-fire ending the 7½-year-old war in Algeria.

Algerian rebel Vice Premier Belkacem Krim, arriving at the head of a 10-man delegation in Geneva, said: "We have come here with a desire to put a definite end, if possible, to these negotiations.

Self-Imposed Segregation

Black & White History

When the State Student Legislature convenes in Raleigh before long, one of the bills which will be considered advocates putting a required course of Negro history into every North Carolina high school curriculum.

Sponsored by North Carolina A. and T. College, the purpose of the bill is to "improve race relations through a more thorough acquaintance with the contributions made by Negroes to the progress of the state.

This is patently ridiculous. While we are probably as concerned with the status of the Negro as anyone at A. and T., and at least equally concerned that the contributions of Negroes be recognized, we are a little startled that the A. and T. delegates think this is a way to do it.

* * *

Negro history is, and should be a part of North Carolina. It needs no seperation from the history of the state. It seems a bit peculiar that the bill from A. and T. attempts to do exactly what the Negro should be fighting. It separates history into black history and white history—in effect, segregates it.

We can understand and well appreciate the purpose of the bill, which is to encourage recognition of the Negro as a vital and important contributor to progress. But Negro history needs no special consideration, just as the Negro needs no special consideration. The Negro contribution is no better or worse than the contribution of any other group.

The efforts of the A. and T. delegation are representative of an attitude that is hurting rather than helping the cause of the Negro. That is the attitude that Negroes ARE different. Over-sensitivity to racial problems on the part of the Negro only serves to draw racial lines more clearly.

* * *

The purpose of civil rights activity is to erase those lines, not accentuate them. And they are not erased by a proposal which implies that there is really such a thing as white-skinned contributions and black-skinned contributions.

There isn't. There are only contributions by men.

It's The Student's Choice

Biased Text? Yes!

Recently, a student wrote a column for this page criticizing the casebook text used in Political Science 41 seminar groups. The text, Democracy, USA, written by Earl Wallace and Andrew Scott of the Political Science department, is, as the student pointed out, loaded with the Liberal viewpoint.

Most of the cases provide a one-sided, relatively narrow analysis. The approach is biased, the examples carefully chosen to demonstrate a particular argument.

* * *

But the use of the book in the discussion groups is not, as the critical student seems to think, a liberal propaganda piece. The purpose in using it is not to provide a handbook for Liberal evangelists, but to spark disagreement and discussion —in short, to make students think. The book provides one side of the argument; it's up to the student to provide the other.

Most students enter Carolina with an already-established set of political and social values and attitudes which if they are not challenged, stay with him until he graduates. Some of these attitudes may be well-founded, others may not. If they are challenged, those that are well-founded will stand; those that are not will fall.

* * *

This is not to say that four years at Carolina must change the set of values that every student brings with him. But the prime function of education is to act as a catalyst by providing the necessary information and stimulus to bring about an intelligent inquiry.

A good teacher, a good class, a good text is one which is concerned with the problem of getting a student to think straight and develop a set of right values.

This is the tenor of the Political Science 41 program and the reason for using the Scott and Wallace casebook. The leaders of the discussion groups are not concerned with swinging anyone around to the way of thinking propounded in the cases. They are concerned with overcoming intellectual paralysis.

* * *

The very fact that a student was moved to criticise the text after using it for a semester is a good indication in itself that part of its purpose has been served.

Petition-Signers Uninformed

As Doc Field said in his attack on the action of the Student Legislature in passing a resolution against nuclear testing, a great deal of "mush" has been thrown around.

The resolution was passed by the Student Legislature on February 23, 1962, by a vote of 18 for and 15 against. Many members of the Legislature felt that the resolution was not strong enough. Most felt that only a rabid unilateralist or a person who felt that it was imperative for the United States to recommence testing immediately could oppose the issue.

The resolution reads as follows:

. . . . THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED BY THE STUDENT LEGISLATURE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, THAT:

Article I: The Student Legislature of the University of North Carolina condemns the Soviet testing of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere, and Soviet uni-lateral repudiation of the voluntary moratorium on nuclear tests undertaken by the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the United States of America in November of 1958.

Article II: The Student Legislature of the University of North Carolina is in accord with the policy of the United States government that said government refraining from resuming nuclear testing in the atmosphere so long as such policy does not jeapordize the deterrent capabilities of the United States.

Article III: The Student Legislature of the University of North Carolina does not support any policy of unilateral disarmament on the part of the United States.

Article IV: Copies of this resolution be sent to President John F. Kennedy, the ambassador from the Soviet Union to the United States and the United States National Student Association.

It is obvious ,and should be obvious to the originators of the petition to condemn the Student Legislature for passing the resolution that the resolution does not claim to represent the entire student body at UNC. In fact the first statement made in the resolution reads "Action: Passed as amended by roll call vote of 18 for and 15 against with 1 abstaining . . ." The resolution does not even claim to represent the entire Student Legislature. It merely states the opinion of 18 out of the 34 representatives present.

There is no question of "unconstitutionality." The Legislature has always been allowed the freedom to think as it wishes and to pass resolutions as a result of that thinking. It is difficult to believe that anyone who seriously believed in representative government could want it to be different.

As for the charge that the Student Legislature has assumed an oligarchical role, the Student Legislature was designed to run the Student Government. In the past year, 82 bills were introduced; 59 were adopted; 3 were rejected; 9 were withdrawn or tabled, and 11 await final action. Only 3 were of controversial nature.

There is no need for a "counter-petition" or even an objection to the petition that is now in progress. It is pretty clear that the signers of the petition never laid eyes on the resolution passed by the Student Legislature, or for that matter even found out what the resolution said.

"I'll Order The First Round For The House"

Film Society Requests Material

To The Editor:

We continuously need information to help us in preparing film program notes for our UNC-Chapel Hill Film Society. If anyone on campus or in Chapel Hill has old books on the film, magazine articles, film reviews, press books, old stills from films or photographs of screen personalities they would like to donate to our cause, we would be most grateful for them. Anything we receive would be cataloged and made available as 'library' material to film students, researchers, etc.

So far we have had to depend on the personal libraries of one or two of our members. We would like to start a real library of motion picture material and would welcome any contributions on films made in the past or present. Any old films would be greeted with joy, of course.

MAGGIE DENT
Chairman

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Reflections

Political speakers, of whom there have been a number lately with the campaignings going on, are just as liable to use the clinche as are any other speakers or writers. This fact was never more obvious than at the Student Party convention in Howell Hall Monday night.

There, the word of the day was "dynamic." If a candidate wasn't dynamic, he wasn't worth talking about. There were other phrases tossed about — idea man, little man with a big way, man of action — but sooner or later, every speaker who took the platform extolled his candidate as dynamic.

When this candidate takes office, he will begin to talk about "expedience." It will be his policy to do only what is expedient. But both parties failed to show any evidence of expedience at their recent conventions. Neither meeting was started within 40 minutes of the time scheduled.

Birch Coordinator Defends Welch

To The Editor:

You showed true liberality in printing my last letter, for I know it was not the popular thing for you to do. I think you very much.

As a true conservator, I respect the true liberal which you have shown yourself to be.

Conservation is defined as the "act of preserving from decay, loss, or injury". Conservators are those who actively participate in protecting our country from moral decay, economic loss, and subversive injury.

By allowing me a voice in your columns, you have proved yourself not only a true liberal, but a true conservator.

The liberal is often enjoined to "seek the truth without regard to where the path may lead". I would simply add to this "look both ways". Truth is more often found directly than through devious twistings and turnings.

1. "Disseminators of hate literature".

Hate is defined in Webster's as a "bitter aversion toward". Hate literature then must be that which expresses a bitter aversion toward. Toward what?

A bitter aversion toward evil is virtuous, and conversely a bitter aversion toward good would be without virtue. To describe any literature as "hate" literature then prejudices without attesting to the veracity or falsity, or virtuousity.

2. "Crackpot".

Much has been made, by the press, of the fact that Mr. Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society, called Mr. Eisenhower a "conscious agent of the Kremlin". (Early detractors in their zeal changed this to "card-carrying Communist".)

First, let's set aside the fact that the quoted document was the personal communication, of a personal belief, between the writer and some of his friends, two years prior to the formation of the society.

Second, let's set aside the fact that this document was stolen from the personal effects of one of Mr. Welch's friends in Germany and hurried into print in Chicago.

The entire document was stolen, and presumably the press had access to all of it. I understand that this document is 186 pages in length.

For 185 pages Mr. Welch documents his reasons for his conclusions about Eisenhower.

In many cases the press has been jumping to conclusions about Mr. Welch's conclusions.

Mr. Welch reached his conclusions from 185 pages of fact. If anyone would quickly dispose of Mr. Welch, the simpliest, surest way would be to print Mr. Welch's body of fact, closely examine it, and if erroneous, refute each fact one by one.

Mr. Welch, incidentally, is a scholar of some note, meticulous in his examinations and compilations. He is the youngest graduate of UNC (He graduated in class of '16 at the ripe old age of 15).

I recall that Harry Truman told J. Edgar Hoover to "go jump in the lake", when Hoover warned that Harry Dexter White was an enemy agent, and underscored his decision by promoting White to Under-secretary of the Treasury.

I recall that Dean Acheson, Felix Frankfurter, and Adlai Stevenson were all character witnesses for Alger Hiss, who was convicted for prejury for denying he was a Communist conspirator.

I recall that much of our news media blindly sang the praises of Castro.

These same people are being quoted as authorities on the "danger from the right". They were wrong before.

Nowhere have I found a single fact, employed by Mr. Welch, in arriving at his conclusions, proved erroneous.

I know some knowledgeable men, who admit all of Mr. Welch's statements of fact as fact, that reach different conclusions. These men, including Eisenhower's first Collector of Internal Revenue (Mr. T. Coleman Andrews), say that Mr. Welch simply could not believe a man, any man, could reach the level of responsibility achieved by Mr. Eisenhower and be completely stupid.

These men reach a different conclusion, from Mr. Welch, for they say that Mr. Eisenhower IS that stupid.

They DO say that Mr. Eisenhower, on his record, has done more to advance Communist subversion in this country than any other living man.

3. "Fascist"

The press has solemnly pointed to Mr. Welch's statement in the Blue Book that "the Society shall be monolithic in structure" stopping there and condemning the Society as Fascist. Their conclusion holds little authority if they finish the context of the statement in the Blue Book pointing out that, "being a purely voluntary association of men who love freedom which must operate strictly on persuasion as to the correctness of its policies, rather than through any form of coercion" and "each member is asked NOT to do anything which is asked which he cannot in good CONSCIENCE accomplish" that the fundamental principles of a dictatorship are violated.

* * *

Society members hold in common:

1. That man has an eternal soul.

2. That God meant for man to be the director of his fate, succeeding, or failing, rewarded or punished, for his own overt actions. None of this denies the responsibilities of any individual to others.

3. We reject the idea of our "brother's keeper", for the idea of our brother's brother. We clearly recognize a duty to help, but not to "keep".

4. We believe that what we cannot accomplish for ourselves, must be asked of God, not government.

5. We believe, with Lord Acton, that "power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely".

6. We believe that government should be for the benefit of man, not man for government.

7. We believe through pursuit of individuality, the sovereignty of the individual, and the reduction of government as a cureall of ills, that through the interplay of individual dealings on an international level a better world will result as Statism declines, and fears of the power it represents.

In conclusion, I would like to make perfectly clear that I graduated in Economics as a devoted disciple of Keynes at Duke in 1949, with an "A" average in my major. Conservators have been variously branded as rightwing, reactionaries, flag-waving, etc., and then forgiven as "not understanding the complexities of the Twentieth Century, and would like to repeal it".

I believe that Lord John Maynard Keynes was a man of considerable brilliance, who earnestly believed his theories to be the answer to the ills of mankind. As his earnest student drawing upon twelve years of practical experience in the business world as first a salesman, then as a methods engineer, then as a business proprietor, then as ass't. Comptroller of a giant corporation with net assets exceeding half a billion dollars, then as general manager of a multi-million dollar corporation, I find flaws, serious ones.

Within the past four years I have read more than four hundred books concerning Communism, plus multitudes of government pamphlets, plus attending more than fifty hours of lectures on this subject.

I was completely serious when I suggested a discussion group for those who believed in sanctity of the individual.

What better method for the development of the student liberal or conservative than to seek the sparks of truth from the grinding wheel of controversy.

It occurs to me that no one man, nor one group of men, has been blessed with all the truth.

Controversy can light the way to truth that epithets will hide.

Only those who fear TRUTH need fear the John Birch Society, the Society does not fear the TRUTH, it seeks it, as does any honest scholar.

My proposition is this; there is no middle of the road, for the moderate to travel, the road forks to right and left, the right leads to freedom the left to slavery. The student liberal is standing in the fork in the road examining both, the conservative is already committed. The liberal may widen the road to freedom, but he'll never change the direction of the road to slavery which is called socialism.

Powers Gets Clearing By CIA Board

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Central Intelligence Agency today cleared U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers of any wrongdoing in his flight over Russia. It said he had been instructed to "surrender without resistance and adopt a cooperative attitude" if escape was impossible.

In a summary statement made public through House and Senate Armed Services Committees, the CIA said Powers was not expected to take his own life if his plane went down or he was captured.

It said the poison needle with which the pilot was equipped, and which figured prominently in his Moscow trial, was supplied only in event he was subjected to torture or other conditions which made suicide seem the best way out.

The CIA report also gave some details of what happened when Powers' U2 was downed over central Russia on May 1, 1960.

Although this point was not covered in the report, Chairman Carl Vinson, D-Ga., of the House Armed Services Committee said experts decided the U2 was brought down from 68,000 feet by a surface-to-air-missile which scored a near miss and disabled the plane, throwing it into a spin.

The official account made it clear that by the time Powers had freed himself from the cockpit and was ready to leave the now-wingless, tumbling U-2, he had been tossed by whirling G-forces into a position where he could not reach the "destruct" switches.

CIA Director John A. McCone said he was authorizing release of back pay to the pilot, amounting to $50,000.

Mrs. Mann Is Speaker Here On Alcoholism

Mrs. Marty Mann will be the featured speaker of the Orange County Forum on Alcoholism at the Public Meeting on Thursday, March 8, 8 p.m., in Hill Hall. The Forum will give special groups and the community as a whole an opportunity to consider the illness of alcoholism and what can be done about it.

A prominent lecturer and author, Mrs. Mann founded the National Council on Alcoholism in 1944 and became its executive director working closely with scientists such as Dr. Howard Haggard and Dr. E. M. Jellinek of Yale University. The National Council on Alcoholism, at first sponsored by the Yale Plan on Alcoholism, became independent in 1949. Mrs. Mann's book "New Primer on Alcoholism" communicates a wealth of information to the public at large and conveys a telling and vital message of hope to the personally interested reader.

The initial event of the Forum will be the meeting of the ministers and social workers of Orange County on March 8, 12:30 p.m. at the Presbyterian Student Center. The Rev. Joseph Kellermann, Director of the Charlotte Council on Alcoholism, will speak on the counseling of alcoholics. The Rev. Kellermann has had a wealth of experience in counseling of alcoholics, first as a minister and now as director of a council on alcoholism. In 1958 and 1959 he lectured at the Yale Summer School of Alcohol Studies.

Other events of the Forum include a luncheon on Friday, March 9, 12:30 p.m. at the Carolina Inn and a meeting of the Orange County law enforcement officers on Friday afternoon, 3:15 p.m., Chapel Hill Town Hall, at which Mrs. Mann will speak.

The Forum is being conducted by the Orange County Council on Alcoholism. The Council carries on a continuing three-pronged program of education, information and rehabilitation. Its program is supported by funds appropriated by the Orange County ABC Board from the sale of alcoholic beverages in the county of Orange.

Ya Gotta Have Glycogen, Man!

By JOE HODGES

Did you ever realize that love is "a matter of vitamin B-1, phosphorus, and starch metabolism?"

When Dr. Carlton Fredericks was asked to explain the relationship between nutrition and kissing, on a WOR radio broadcast, he told it—in full!

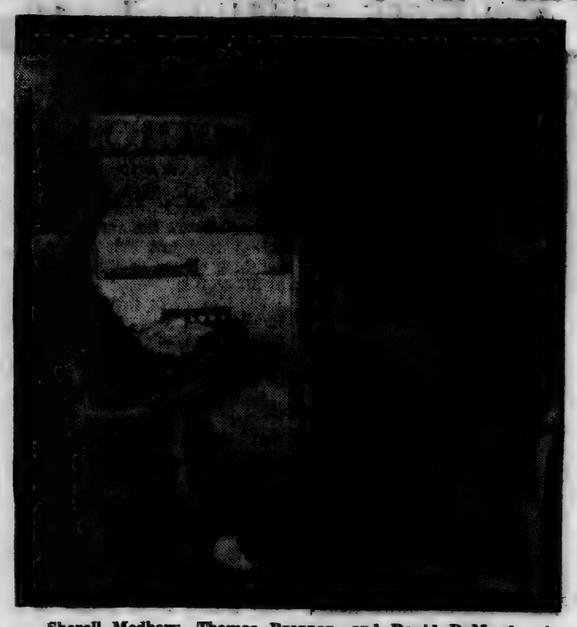
"When a fellow kisses a girl," said Dr. Fredericks, "the adreno-sympathetic system calls on the liver for glycogen for energy. This in turn forces the release of insulin, vitamin B-1, and phosphorus to burn the sugar.

"In his brain, if he is doing any thinking, which is problematical, there is an exchange of starch, phosphorus, and thiamine between the thalamic and the cortical brain. As the pulse and respiration rates rise, there is increased exchange of oxygen on the intracellular level, which would mean increased consumption of thiamine and phosphorus."

It looks like it takes a real scholar to appreciate the chemistry of sex.

HILLEL WOMEN TO MEET

The March meeting of the Hillel Women's Club will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 14, at the home of Mrs. William T. Kohn on Meadow Lane. Chaplain Fred Reid will speak on "The Work of a Hospital Chaplain." All members are urged to attend.



Sherell Medbery, Thomas Brennan, and David DaMond enjoy records in new Library collection.

Learning Before Shelters

CHICAGO (UPI) — A physicist told college educators at the 17th annual national conference on higher education Tuesday that if they must choose between bomb shelters and learning in their budgets, they should chose learning.

"It is far from clear that shelters bring any net gain," said David R. Inglis of the Argonne National Laboratory.

"As long as the U.S.S.R. has not mounted a serious shelter program," Inglis said, 'the question remains whether we want, in addition to the arms race, to initiate a shelter race which not really protects anyone and will result in no great advantage to either side."

Navy Commissions Polaris Submarine

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (UPI) — The Navy placed its Polaris missile submarine in commission here Tuesday and Secretary Fred Korth proclaimed that "we have the finest retaliatory weapon in the world."

Joining the fleet was the U.S.S. Sam Houston. The nuclear powered craft will carry 16 Polaris missiles.

At the commissioning ceremony, Korth said the United States had "marked superiority" over Russia but there was no reason to doubt that the Soviets would reach the same standards of excellence attained by this country.

At the moment, Korth said, "it can be truthfully stated that our second strike capability is far greater than the first strike that any potential enemy can launch against us."

The Sam Houston is a 6,900-ton submersible, 410 feet long and carries a version of the Polaris missible which has a range of 1,500 miles. Earlier versions were of 1,200-mile range. A 2,500-mile range version is under development.

Korth said that Polaris missile submarines, which now operate in the north Atlantic also eventually will be stationed in the Pacific. He said the Navy planned to have support facilities for its Pacific Polaris subs in both Hawaii and Washington state. He did not elaborate on these plans. In calling the Polaris "the finest retaliatory weapon", Korth said Russian submarines fire missiles of 350-mile range.

Korth, in part of his speech, seemed to slap back at the claim heard during the Senate military muzzling inquiry that the government was following a "no-win" policy in the struggle with communism.

"There are some who say that we are adopting a policy of status quo—that we don't want to win—that we have lost the desire to excel," he said. "I don't believe that is the case in the nation as a whole and I can assure you that the opposite is true in this Navy of ours."

Miss Chapel Hill Contest Set March 23

The Miss Chapel Hill Pageant will be held in Memorial Hall for the first time in its 12 years of existence.

The Chapel Hill Jaycees, who sponsor the pageant, have reserved Memorial Hall for the evening of March 23. They expect a large response from the Carolina campus since ten of the eleven winners in previous contests have been Carolina co-eds.

Mary Ann Henderson, last year's winner is currently UNC Yack Queen. The 1957-58 Yack Queen was elected Miss Chapel Hill the following year. She is now Mrs. Diana Jones and will assist in the staging of the pageant this year.

Library Gets Records From Class Of 1960

The Library now has the collection of phonograph records which was a gift of the Class of 1960.

At present there are 134 single disc recordings and 31 multi-disc albums in the collection. It includes readings in English, German, French, Russian, Latin and Italian. There are also many literary and documentary spoken-word recordings..

Some highlights of the collection are a six-record set of Goethe's FOUST (in German), thirteen Shakespeare plays, twenty-two recordings from the "Yale Series of Recorded Poets" and fourteen recordings from the Library of Congress' series "Twentieth Century Poetry in English." Additions to the collection will be made as funds become available.

The set is located in the Undergraduate Library. Students may listen to the records by checking them out at the desk and playing them on the turntable there. The turntable will accept six headphones at one time.

IDC Places Three On Probation, Moves 5

The IDC Court, in deciding cases during February, placed three students on probation and moved five others from one dorm to another.

One student placed on probation was charged with spraying soap on a dorm floor and the other two were involved in a water fight.

Also involved in the water fight were three of the students who were removed from one dorm to another.

Shakeup In Sukarno Regime Gives Military New Powers

JAKARTA, Indonesia —(UPI)— President Sukarno rearranged the Indonesian cabinet Tuesday in a move which apparently gave the military increased influence in the government.

The re-shuffled government has defense minister and army chief of staff Gen. Adbul Haris Nasution emerging as probably the most powerful.

Nasution was named deputy first minister for defense and security with seven ministries or departments under his control: defense, security, army, navy, air force, attorney general and a minister without portfolio.

WOMAN'S COUNCIL

Bi-partisan interviews for the Woman's Honor Council will be held today from 4-6 and from 7-9 p.m.

The selection committee is composed of 3 members of the Woman's Council, 1 UP representative, 1 SP representative, 1 WRC representative, 1 CWC representative, and 1 Pan-Hell representative.

Observers interpreted the shake-up as aimed primarily at tightening the administration in the light of domestic and foreign problems. Indonesia is involved in a dispute with the Netherlands over West Irian Dutch New Guinea and Sukarno has threatened to use force if necessary to gain control of the territory.

Indonesia also has been plagued by food shortages and the resultant jump in prices. There have been reports of race riots in some areas.

There were no new faces in the top eight posts under chief minister premier Djuanda, who retained his position. But several former cabinet members were dropped.

Most conspicuous absence from the new lineup was that of Iwa Kusun Sumantri, former minister of higher education. Also missing was Atty. Gen. Gunawan, who was the official host to Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy during a recent visit.

Gunawan was replaced by his former deputy, Kadarusman.

It was the first major cabinet re-shuffle since Sukerno doubled the size of his cabinet to about 40 posts in mid-1959 to implement his administration of a "guided democracy."

There was no immediate indication whether Abdulgani, one of the chief architects of Sukarno's so-called "guided democracy" form of government, would get another post.

Sukarno said the formal installation of the new cabinet will take place Thursday.

It was announced that 51 Indonesians captured by the Dutch last Jan. 15 after a naval clash off Aru Island are expected to arrive shortly by chartered plane from Singapore. The navy identified the Indonesians as crew members of an Indonesia motor torpedoboat sunk by Dutch naval patrol units. The repatriation was arranged by the international Red Cross through the United Nations.

Then you'd like computer programming, the new career that makes full use of your logical talents. If you have a keen analytical and logical mind—and want to use it fully after college—then computer programming at IBM may be just the career you've always looked forward to.

A computer programmer examines a business, industrial, or scientific problem and translates it into a special mathematical-logical language for the computer. Working at amazing speeds, the computer can produce answers in minutes, even seconds. Some of these answers might actually take days to produce by other methods.

The problems are interesting and varied. IBM programmers have used computers to predict hurricanes, tell days ahead where satellites will be in space and locate the best factory sites for businessmen.

No previous knowledge of computers is necessary; an intensive training course will equip you for your work. But you should have an analytical and logical turn of mind, and at least two years of college mathematics.

In computer programming you will find that the salaries are excellent, and that the future can be virtually as unlimited as the future of the computer itself. There are ample opportunities for continued education.

The IBM representative will interview on your campus. He will be glad to give you details about this fascinating new profession. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer. The 1962 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament is history now and for the second consecutive year Wake Forest will represent the ACC in the NCAA playoffs.

The All-ACC team, selected by the conference sports writers prior to the three-day tournament, included Wake's massive Lennie Chappell, Duke's Art Heyman and Jeff Mullins, South Carolina's Art Whisnant, and State's Jon Speaks.

The Daily Tar Heel All-ACC selectors took tournament play into consideration and came up with only one first team change — UNC's Larry Brown replaces Speaks on the star team.

Curry Kirkpatrick, Marty Kruming, Harry Lloyd, and myself named Chappell first on each ballot. Fifteen points were awarded for the top selection, 14 for the number two selection, and so on in descending order down to the fifteenth selection. Thus the All-American Chappell paced the voting with 60 points.

Second in the voting was Heyman, a second team All-American, with 55 points. Mullins followed his team mate with 51 and Whisnant, the only North Carolina native on the team had 45. Brown's 38 was enough to give him the first team berth by two votes.

Speaks' 36 made him the top man on the second team, but Clemson's sophomore sensation Jim Brennan was close behind with 35. Brennan was the high scorer for Clemson's cinderella team in each of its three tournament contest.

Also on the second team is Jerry Greenspan, Maryland, 25 points, Tony Laquintano, Virginia, 21, and Dave Wiedeman of Wake Forest, 19.

N. C. State's Ken Rohloff led the third team with 18 points. North Carolina's Jim Hudock and little Billy Packer of the Demon Deacons tied for the next spot with 17 points each, and Don Walsh became the third Tar Heel to gain a berth on the 16-man team with ten points. Two N. C. State players, John Punger and Russ Marvel tied for the 15th spot with nine points each.

State placed the most men on the mythical team with four, while Wake and UNC put three men each on the squad. Duke's two-pronged scoring punch of Heyman and Mullins marked the only Blue Devils on the team. Maryland, Clemson, South Carolina, and Virginia each placed one man on the all-star group.

And which conference or region could top the following little ACC all-star team? Only men under six feet are on this team and for the starters this corner would select Brown, 5-11, Wiedeman, 5-11, Laquintano, 5-11, and Duke's Jack Mullen also 5-11. The fifth spot belongs to 5-9 Packer. A strong bench would be provided by Mike Nofsinger, Maryland, 5-9, Bill Ulrich, Duke, 5-10, Butch Hassell, Wake Forest, 5-11, and the smallest player in the ACC, Virginia's 5-8 sophomore Jay Lambiotte.

While we're on the subject of All-star teams, let's try a few more. First, the big man's team.

The tallest of the giant group would be Wake's lean Bob Woollard and the just-as-lean Jay Buckley of Duke. Both are listed at 6-10 on their team rosters. Two men in the league are listed at 6-9, although neither is a starter. State's Ron Gossell and Virginia's Richard Katstra rank in this 81-inch category. And of the five 6-8 men in the ACC, Len Chappell gets the nod for the fifth spot.

Little Lennie, who sometimes appears to be at least 7-0 when he leaps for a rebound or layup, would hold down a guard shot on this towering team. On the bench would be UNC's Jim Donohue, Clemson's Donnie Mahaffey and Manning Privette, and Maryland's Scott Ferguson, all 6-8.

Wake Forest coach Bones McKinney, who measures in the vicinity of 6-6, is a shoo-in for the tall team's coaching position.

Native North Carolina stars are scarce but the following homegrown All-star team would give a pretty fair showing: UNC's 6-3 Charlie Shaffer and 6-2 Mike Cooke. Shaffer's from Chapel Hill, Cooke from Mt. Airy. Durham places "Wheaties" Whitfield of State on this team — Whitfield stands 6-5 and can really leap despite the tar on his feet. The final two spots belong to Whisnant, the 6-5 Icard native, and big Bill Hull, the 6-6 Wake Forest basketballer who also played football for the Baptists.

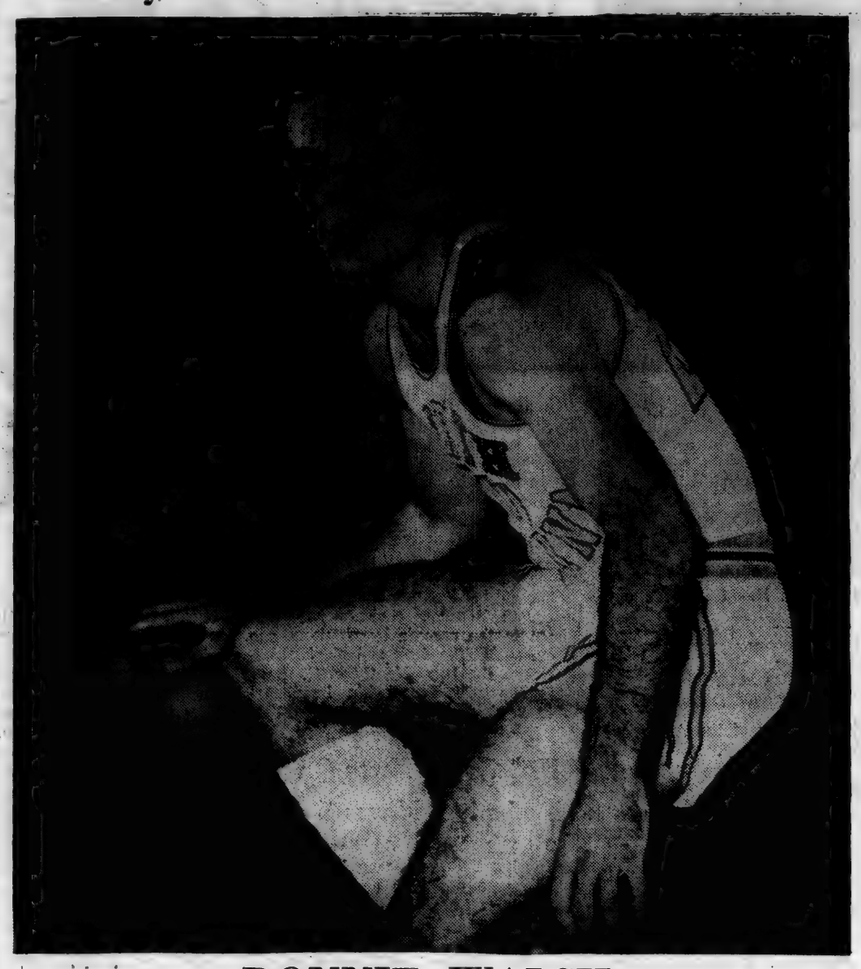
How about an All-Pennsylvania team? Players already mentioned who qualify for this team are Chappell, Packer, Hudock, Mullen, and Laquintano. They could be ably assisted by Maryland's Bob Eicher, and Clemson's Mike Bohonak and Gary Burnisky.

New York and New Jersey have sent their share of hardwood heroes to play basketball in the ACC. From these we would name Heyman, Brown, Walsh, Rohloff, and Woollard to the first team. Rohloff and Woollard are from New Jersey, the other three from New York. The team would have a strong bench in Donohue and Bryan McSweeney, both of UNC, and New York and Greenspan, Ulrich, Bob Koehler of Wake Forest, Paul Jelus of Maryland — all from New Jersey.

And how about an all-ineligible-inactive team of Bill Stasiulatis, Maryland, Bill Cunningham and Dieter Krause, UNC, John Key of State and John Hasbrouck of Virginia. Key of State is the only one of this group which is not scholastically ineligible. He gave up basketball for the books.

Before we get carried away any further with these varied all-what have you teams, let's just say that the ACC is an All-American-conference — one which plays probably the best brand of basketball in the nation.

Daily Tar Heel Athlete Of The Week



DONNIE WALSH

By ED DUPREE

Last week was a week which wasn't dotted with superman performances by UNC athletes. A number of Tar Heels turned in creditable performances, but none were earth-shattering.

Jim Brown won his usual two events for the indoor track team, the high and low hurdles, as Carolina defeated the John Uelses-less Quantico Marines by 64 2/3-44 1/3. Uelses' presence wouldn't have changed the outcome of the meet, but it would have added to the color of Friday's Tin Can contest.

In the same meet Jerry Stuver turned in an admirable 4:12 mile run while finishing second to Quantico's Paranya.

Sam Barnes' wrestlers, as usual, finished second to Maryland in the annual ACC wrestling championships. Six grapplers finished second, but none were able to take an individual championship.

Dick Blackman weighed in at less than a pound over 137 and was unable to compete in that class. At the start of the week Dick had weighed 154, and the strategy was to wrestle him in the 137-division in which he had a good chance for a first place. Then when he couldn't make that division, he relaxed, ate heartily, and wrestled against Maryland's Eugene Kerin who had taken the most outstanding wrestler award two straight years. Kerin pinned Blackman, but not before Dick had given him a good battle. As a result, Kerin did not get the MOW award for the third year in a row.

On the basketball court, Tar Heel athletes had only 40 minutes in which to exhibit their abilities. Larry Brown played a steady game and led the scoring with 18 points. Charlie Shaffer hit five of ten shots, pulled down nine rebounds, and scored 13 points.

But Donnie Walsh, Dean Smith's senior guard who scored only ten points, has been selected by the Daily Tar Heel as its fourth athlete of the week.

During the curtailed 17-game season, Walsh became the number one percentage shooter in Carolina basketball history. Against South Carolina in the opening round of the tournament he continued to take only the good shots. He tried four and missed only one for a .750 mark in his last game for UNC. For the entire season, the 6-0 guard from Riverdale, N. Y., tried 152 shots and hit 85 for a sizzling .559 percentage. This tops Jim Hudock's mark of .500 set last year.

Two other Smithmen shot exceptionally well in one semester showings. Playing during the second semester only, Shaffer hit 35 of 55 shots for a .636 mark and averaged 10.4 points a game. Dieter Krause, scholastically ineligible for the second semester, hit 16 of 28 shots for the first ten games for a .571 mark.

Dean Smith's shuffle offense made the better shots possible and the team set a new school field goal mark of .469, bettering the .444 established behind Doug Moe, York Larese, and Hudock last season. Walsh came on slowly in his three seasons at Carolina. During the 1959-60 season, he was reluctant to shoot in his substitute role. He finished the season with a 1.7 average.

Then last season he started in 13 games and did standout jobs on defense against high-scoring backcourt men. He began to shoot more and averaged 3.2.

Walsh was always regarded as very quick, an excellent ball-handler, and a man that had all the necessary shots for college ball. This season he capitalized on his soft jump shot and fast break layups to rack up a 13.4 average, third on the team.

A member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity and a political science major, Donnie has been a Dean's List student. He plans to enter law school next year.

Tracksters Look To Indoor Games After Quantico Win

UNC's track and field team warmed up for the annual ACC indoor games last Friday night by polishing off the Quantico Marines 64 2/3-44 1/3.

The Tar Heels won eight of the 13 events in this—their last meet before attempting to dethrone champion Maryland this Saturday in Woollen Gym.

Senior Jim Brown, the swift hurdler, led the cindermen as he won both the 70-yard low and high hurdle races. Rhett Everett, coach Dale Ranson's star cross-country man, won the two-mile race in 9:18.4. The time bettered the conference record for this distance.

Jerry Stuver posted a fine 4:12 clocking in the mile run in finishing second to Quantico's Paranya. The Marine edged Stuver by inches.

Assistant coach Joe Hilton, who directed the Tar Heel trackmen in the absence of head coach Ranson, currently in Mesa, Arizona, instructing the Chicago Cubs in the art of running, also praised Harvey Henry for his performance in the shot. Henry finished third in the event but his heave of 48-6 was only four inches short of the winning throw.

Barry Tiedemann pole-vaulted 13-6 to tie Quantico's Jeisy but neither one would have been close to a win if a young man by the name of John Uelses had made an appearance. Ueleses, the prolific vaulter who in Jan. became the 1st man to clear 16 feet, is stationed at the Quantico base but Friday was in New York for another meet.

Tom Clark, in the high jump; John O'Bannon in the broad jump; John McNinch in the 60-yard dash; Bob Hart in the 600-yard run; and Scott Brent, in the 880, were the other Tar Heel winners.

The Summary:

High jump: 1. Clark, UNC 2. Tie between Croom, UNC, Harkema, UNC and Marshall, Quantico (6' 2").

Shot put: 1. Hart, Quantico 2. Kovalakides, Quantico 3. Henry, UNC (48' 10").

Broad jump: 1. O'Bannon, UNC 2. Jeisy, Quantico 3. Croom, UNC (21' 2").

Pole vault: 1. Tie between Jeisy, Quantico and Tiedemann, UNC 2. Whittle, UNC (13' 6").

70-Yard high hurdles: 1. Brown, UNC 2. Lindley, UNC 3. Turner, UNC (9.2).

60-Yard dash: 1. McNinch, UNC 2. Brooks, UNC 3. McLamb, UNC (6.5).

70-Yard low hurdles: 1. Brown, UNC 2. Lindley, UNC 3. Turner, UNC (8.3).

Mile: 1. Paranya, Quantico 2. Stuver, UNC 3. MacArdle, Quantico (4.12).

Fencers Place 2nd To Strong Detroit

The UNC fencing team came in second last weekend in the VMI Invitational Tournament. The University of Detroit, tenth in the nation, placed first with 64 bouts won, while the Tar Heel fencers won 41. VMI won 35 bouts to finish third and Citadel was last in the four-way meet with 23 wins.

North Carolina's team captain, Don Hubbard, was the outstanding Carolina fencer. Hubbard won 14 of his 19 bouts for a .737 average. Jon Weber won six out of nine for .667.

Saturday afternoon's highlight came in the final bout when Hubbard defeated VMI captain Jordan, 5-1. Jordan, a high scorer in last year's national finals, had been undefeated for the day.

In the foil competition, Hubbard was tops for UNC with a 5-2 record. Hart was 3-2, Weinstein, 5-4, and McFadden, 1-5.

In the sabre competition, Hubbard was again high man winning six bouts and losing three. Welch was 5-4 and Toney 4-5.

Weber won the most epee bouts finishing with a 5-4 mark, but captain Hubbard won all of his three bouts. Welch was 3-5 and Hart 2-4.

"It was the best meet we've had this year," said Coach Pebley Barrow, "and if we had had depth, we might have won it."

Fencing is not recognized as a varsity sport at UNC, but each year the Tar Heel fencers meet tougher opponents. If the caliber of fencing continues to improve as it has, the chances of a varsity team at UNC will be strengthened greatly.

At Gerrard Hall

Chest Auction Is Tonight

The Campus Chest will take off with a big bang as the auctioneer's gavel opens the bidding at the Campus Chest Auction tonight, 7:30, at Gerrard Hall.

Auctioneers Kemp Battle Nye and Bob Cox will attempt to outsell each other in order to make more money for the Campus Chest fund.

The list of items up for bid will include a pair of Governor Sanford's cuff links, a '52 Studebaker with no battery, three genuine Ku Klux Klan robes, Chancellor Aycock's gavel, and a goal post from the Carolina-Tennessee football game. Also up for bids are six Tri-Delt mermaids, and a one-way bus ticket to Fort Lauderdale.

Steaks And Clothes

Chapel Hill merchants have pitched in with many useful items up for bids. Steak dinners for two, for example, from the Ranch House and the Rathskeller are representative of the items offered by the local restaurants. Clothing stores such as Milton's, Town and Campus, Stevens-Shepherd, Julians and Varleys have all given shirts, pants, blouses and sweaters.

Kemp will bring along some old two-dollar bills he said he just happened to have lying around his record shop as well as aspecial surprise.

Many other valuable items from local merchants, fraternities, sororities and dormitories will be auctioned off at bargain prices.

Five Charities

Proceeds from the auction will go into the Campus Chest fund which benefits five charities: The Chlidren's State Mental Clinic in Butner, The Heart Research Program at Memorial Hospital, the American Friends Service Committee, the World University Service, and Tours Scholarships.

Last year, The Campus Chest Auction was enjoyed by many and made over $900 for the fund. The Chest hopes that theis year the $900 goal can be surpassed.

Campus Briefs

Elections Board

There will be an important meeting of the Elections Board today at 5 p.m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room in Graham Memorial. Any member unable to attend should call Dave Buxton, 968-9077.

RADIO CLUB

The Amateur Radio Club will meet tonight at 7:30 in Caldwell Y.

UP

The University Party will hold legislative interviews for the last time from 4-5 p.m. today in the UP office in the basement of Graham Memorial.

ASPA

The American Students for Political Action has received a reply from the FBI—all members will note that the meeting time has been changed and that a new time will be chosed as soon as possible.

Peace Corps

There will be a very important meeting of the Planning Committee for the Peace Corps conference upstairs in the YMCA Council Room today at 5 p.m.

Legislative Candidates

At the beginning of the Fall Semester, each men's dormitory district will lose one legislative seat with the exception of Men's Dorm I and V. These seats will be reapportioned to Men's Dorm I.

Indication will be made on the ballot of the spring election of the seat which will revert to Dorm Men's I. A student shall be eligible for election to that seat only by such indication on his petition of nomination. If there are no candidates for those seats within 20 days of the election, the seats will automatically revert to Dorm Men's I for the spring election.

A petition signed by 25 students and the candidate or party endorsment must be received by Dave Buxton, chairman of the Elections Board by Wed. in the Student Gov. Offices.

Men's Council

The Bi-Partisan Selections Board will meet Thursday and Friday from 2:30-5:30 in Roland Parker III to interview applicants for membership on the Men's Council. Candidates must be passed by the Board or have a petition of at least 25 signatures for their names to appear on the ballot.

Women's Council

Rising junior and senior independent women may arrange interviews for presidency of the Carolina Women's Council by contacting the social chairman of their dorms before Mar. 9.

Orientation Posts Still To Be Filled Through Interviews

Interviews for positions on the Campus Orientation committee are being held today and Friday in Roland Parker II.

Applications are now available at the information desk in Graham Memorial and at the desk of the Reserve Reading Room in the library.

Two Dorms Scheduled For Freshmen Only

Ehringhaus, Ruffin Picked In Experiment

By JOE HODGES

"Next fall we will begin an 'experimental year' in the dormitories, trying some new ideas which have been suggested," Assistant Dean of Student Affairs William G. Long announced yesterday.

Reservations Changeable

Housing Director James Wadsworth has announced that anyone who made a room reservation prior to the announcement yesterday of a new housing assignment system may change their reservation by applying at the Housing Office.

At the top of the list of ideas on the experimental plan, is the establishment of two dorms which will be exclusively for freshmen except for resident advisors and IDC representatives. These two dorms will be Ehringhaus and Ruffin.

Conner, Carr, and floors five and six of Craig will be reserved for post-graduates. The two floors of Craige are especially for students in sueh fields as medicine and dentistry, since Craige is near the hospital complex.

Five Quiet Dorms

In response to several requests, including a petition from over 200 freshmen, five dorms wil be designated Quiet Dormitories. These dorms, Battle-Vance-Pettigrew, Old East, Old West, Grimes and Mangum will function under the premise that "a person will voluntarily remove his presence when objected to by other residents" because of loud and unruly conduct. Grimes and Mangum will be the only quiet dorms open to freshmen.

Other dorms will still be expected to observe quiet hours but violators will be subject to IDC jurisdiction.

Avery, Parker and Teague will be closed to freshmen but the remaining dorms, including the first four floors of Craige will be open to all four classes.

No Overcrowding

"Although Cobb will be converted to a women's dormitory, the addition of Carr, Craige, and Ehringhaus will mean, generally speaking, that there will be no overcrowding," said Dean Long. "Because of expected attrition, there will be a slight amount of overcrowding fo rthe first semester. It will not be equivalent to that experienced prior to the change, however."

"All of these new ideas, being tried on a purely experimental basis, are designed to make the dormitory a more livable place with increased dorm spirit and improved general moral. We feel that these theories deserve to be tried and tested before a permanent policy is established," he concluded.

Judicial Group Work

Long, Students Discuss Codification Of Codes

LEFT TO RIGHT is Bill Sullivan of the IFC and Linda Tesh of the Nurse's Dorm rpesenting checks to the Carolina Symposium represented by Joe Oppenheimer, Chairman, and Denis Rash, Treasurer. The checks total $450.

Ideas Offered To Committee

By LEE FERRELL
And RICHARD BURNS

Assistant Dean of Student Affairs William Long met yesterday afternoon with the Judicial Committee to discuss systematizing of procedures in Men's and Women's Honor Councils.

An open hearing on the codification bill will be held tonight in the Grail Room at Graham Memorial at 7. All students are invited to attend.

The Judicial Committee is currently working on a legislative bill for codification of procedures in Men's and Women's Honor Council.

Suggestions

Dean Long said that on the whole, there was no major criticism to the work of the Judicial Committee; however, he felt that he had several ideas which should be added.

One was that Central Records should be notified at the same time that the student is notified of his violation. This would prevent a student from getting an "unblemished" copy of his record for future use.

Long said that five character witnesses for a defendent is too many. Character witnesses, he said, are not to determine whether or not the defendant is innocent or guilty, but to determine the seriousness of the sentence. Long feels that too many character witnesses might cloud the case up with irrelevant facts.

Records Too Concise

Records of case procedings have been too concise in the past, said Long. All pertinent information should be included in these records.

A need for the recording of court procedures was expressed both by the committee and by Dean Long. Suggestions were made for the purchase of a tape recorder to be used during council trials.

Hank Patterson, a member of the committee, asked if tape recordings of the trials would be beneficial in case of appeal. Long said yes, providing that sound problems could be overcome.

Responsibility

Long felt that Men's Councils should be responsible for verdicts and sentences, and leave the definition of the sentences to the administration.

He said that conferences such as this were good because communications between students and administration could be direct.

Dean Long said he felt that the action of the students in council trials should not be contingent on what the University will do. He feared that the circumstances of the student might cause partiality made, Dean Long suggested that the student be required to notify the administration within 24 hours of his conviction, that he will appeal. The bill states that the student must submit a written request for an appeal within 92 hours.

Dean Long criticized the bill in that he felt it made disciplinary procedures too complicated and cumbersome. The committee felt, however, that stated motions were essential for uniform procedure.

Last Ring Sale Today

The Grail will hold its last ring sale of the year today at Y-Court from 9-1. Juniors and seniors can order official Carolina rings at that time.

YW Officers Voted Today

UNC women students will go to residence polls this evening to choose the 1962-63 YWCA executive officers.

Resident students will vote at 11 p.m. in dormitory and sorority meetings. Commuting and town students will vote Friday morning and afternoon in the "Y" office.

Nominees for YWCA president are Donna Bailey and Judy Bryant with Judy Alexander and Judy Brown as candidates for vice-president.

Candidates for executive secretary are Nancy DePue and Mimi Farguhar. Nominees for treasurer are Alica Ann Ainslio and Stuart Austin. Susie Mintner and Judy Blythe are candidates for membership chairman.

June Todd is nominated for program chairman and Sara Cullen for religious emphasis chairman.

Other YWCA officers and committee chairmen will be selected later by interview by the newly-elected executive officers.

Symposium Nearly Financially Stable

The 1962 Carolina symposium now is approaching a financially stable position. Dennis Rash, Treasurer for the Symposium, reports that the "break-even" point has been reached . . . provided that the bulk of the contributions pledged are honored.

Dennis further states that this year the Symposium has received the best financial support since its formation, with many organizations contributing as much as one dollar per member.

Few students realize the tremendous financial undertaking which the Carolina Symposium represents. The projected budget was in the vicinity of $10,000, but will probably be a good deal less. All of this money comes from contributions made by students, campus organizations, and members of the surrounding community.

No Men's Dorms

To date, sizeable contributions have been made or pledged by several Women's Dormitories: Alderman, Carr, McIver, Nurses' Dorm, Smith, Spencer, and Whitehead. All Sororities have contributed substantially, but no Men's Dorms have been heard from as a whole . . . yet!

Rash said response has been outstandingly good by a number of fraternities: ATO, Beta, DKE, KA, Kappa Sig, Lambda Chi, Phi Delt, Pika, SAE, Sigma Chi, St. Anthony, and ZBT.

The Art, Journalism, and RTVMP Departments have helped a great deal financially and with advice, as well as The Falk Foundation of Political Science.

Ciardi At Duke

Poet Cites 'Duty To Hate'

By GARRY BLANCHARD

Speaking at Duke University Tuesday night, poet John Ciardi said the trouble with national patriotism is that "there is inherent in patriotism the duty to hate. And hate is a frustrating and a warping emotion.

"Unless we solve this problem of nationalism — the feeling that 'I hate you because you were born on the other side of the world' — we're going to blow ourselves to pieces.

"The world has shrunk into one neighborhood," said the poetry editor of Saturday Review magazine. "We must either be citizens of the world or we have to learn to hate on demand."

Speaking on "The Poet and Society" at Duke's third annual student symposium, Ciardi declared the principal pressure poets — and every one — have to cope with is "Big Daddy in Washington — big, paternalistic government."

Ciardi said this situation is caused by "population pressures . . . neighbors . . . too many of them.

"The more densely settled we become, the more we need to be licensed. The danger is that this leads to too much regulation, and if we get into the habit of too much regulation, we begin to lose our freedom of mind."

Ciardi said he realizes "a great amount of regulation is necessary — but only as a necessary evil," because regulation "leads to the growth of government and Big Daddy in Washington.

"We're getting more and more government," he said, and this breeds "more and more bureaucrats, more and more forms to fill out, and more and more policing of thought."

This situation, he said, "has made protest unfashionable."

Ciardi said his own protests often have taken the form of signing petitions, which have caused a dossier on him to be compiled in official Washington. He added he was rather pleased with the evaluation stamped on his dossier: "Foolish But Loyal."

Billy Graham To Be Here Thursday

By RICHARD BURNS

Evengelist Billy Graham will be at UNC on Thursday, March 15 in a visit which will include a press conference, a luncheon in his honor, a reception at Graham Memorial, and an address to the student body.

His visit here is being sponsored by the Billy Graham Committee, a special branch of the Religious Emphasis Committee of the YWCA. The main purpose of the Religous Committee is "to emphasize the "C" in the YWCA" according to Chairman Mary Sue Simpson. Committee officials feel they can do this by bringing the students in contact with the most outstanding spokesman of their faith.

The hope that Graham can give the students "something to think about concerning the relationship between religion and problems on the international as well as individual level."

"World Dilemma"

At 10:00 a.m. Graham will hold an open press conference in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. A luncheon will be given in his honor at 12:30 in the Carolina Inn which will be attended by about 30 students and about15 faculty and clergy.

He will address the student body on the subject of "The Answer to the World's Dilemma" at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Following the address, students will be given the opportunity to meet Graham in a reception which will be held in the main lounge of GM from 9 to 10 p.m.

Admission to the address at Memorial Hall will be by ID card until 7.45 p.m. At that time the general public will be admitted. Faculty members may secure admission cards at the Y building.

Last Visit

Graham's last visit to UNC was ten years ago was described as very successful by a committee official. At that time he declared that there was a great redigious revival among college students throughout the country.

The 43-year old evangelist, a native of Charlotte, N. C., has recently returned from a seven-nation Latin American tour. His half-hour radio program, "The Hour of Decision," is broadcast every Sunday over nationwide networks. Additional shortwave stations in 17 countries carry the program.

Best Seller

Graham is the author of several religious works. "Peace With God" was published in 1953 and subsequently earned a "best seller" status. In 1955, Graham's second volume, "The Secret of Happiness" earned a place in the top 10 new non-fiction best sellers of the year.

On several occasions, Graham has been invited to address sena-

Right To Speak

There is not, as many devotees of the Right would like to lead everyone to believe, a clear-cut violation of civil liberties involved in the State Department's cool reception to the request that Katanga President Moise Tshombe be to speak at the YAF rally which, if all went as planned, was held in Madison Square Garden yesterday.

Tshombe, who does not have a Congo passport, and has not, according to the latest report, applied for a visa to the United States, was told by the consulate in Elisabethville that his proposed trip to the U. S. to speak at the YAF rally yesterday was not in the best interests of the U. S.

This naturally created a furor on the right and resulted in a attempt by the YAF to force issuance of a visa — even though it had not been actually requested — to Tshombe.

But, even though the YAF group is perhaps assuming a martyred pose in the whole affair, the case for letting Tshombe speak is a strong one—although not necessarily on the grounds that the YAF is pleading it.

Certainly there is some risk involved in allowing Tshombe to speak. His case for the secession of Katanga — which would no doubt have included some impassioned comments about the "brutality" of U. N. forces who intervened — would probably stir considerable sympathy and raise some questions about the rightness of the U. S. stand on the question. Tshombe has shown himself to be expert in shifting all blame for the Congo fighting to the U. N. In the exchange of firing which occured this week, Tshombe charged that 1200 U. N. troops attacked Katanganese forces. A U. N. report, however, declared that the skirmish started when Katanga gendarmes attacked U. N. troops, forcing them to return fire to "extricate themselves."

It is just such incidents as these that the Katanga president could have used in New York yesterday to play on the already existing anti-U. N. feeling that runs through the heart of the YAF. And it is for these reasons and similar ones, that the State Department felt that a Tshombe visit would be detrimental.

However, the YAF contention cannot be discounted. Regardless of the risk involved in letting Tshombe travel in this country, the risk involved in discouraging a free exchange of ideas must also be considered.

Tshombe's arguments should be heard; if necessary, they should be met with better ones. Other foreign leaders — certainly some more controversial ones — have been allowed to travel and speak here.

And, as the Washington Post pointed out recently in an editorial, an empty chair at the New York rally might have spoken more eloquently for the Katanga cause than Tshombe himself.

Martyrdom speaks passionately for any cause.

Blue Laws

The Kansas Supreme Court Tuesday struck down a century-old prohibition against selling on Sunday.

The statute, according to the Associated Press, attempted to prohibit the sale or exposure to sale of any merchandise on Sunday. A companion statute excepted the sale of "drugs or medicines, provisions or other articles of immediate necessity."

The basis for striking the statute was that it was so vague and uncertain as to be unenforceable. This argument, it seems, is the one which is currently arousing the most sympathy in dealing with blue laws. In Wake County Monday, a delegation of 10 merchants argued against the blue laws on basically similar grounds. The merchants said they felt the laws were not defined clearly enough to make a clear distinction between which items could be sold and which could not.

While this line of reasoning is certainly one with merit, it is not one which strikes at the heart of the matter. There is obviously something amiss in a law that allows souvenirs to be sold but not clothing, baubles but not houseware, etc. But the real issue is whether a government, whether it be state, county, or local, has the right to tell a merchant he can or cannot sell certain items because of religious considerations. The point is not that the laws are impractical, but that they are not in line with the spirit of constitutional guarantees.

The blue laws should be considered for what they are: statutes established for purely religious reasons and made mandatory for everyone, regardless of what individual conscience dictates.

They should be struck down, certainly. But they should be struck down because they are products of religious zeal, not because they are impractical.

Life In German University

GOETTINGEN, GERMANY — If you are an average German university student you woke up this morning to the feel of a cold floor on your bare feet, made haste to shove some wood and coal into the small oven in your little room on the third floor of someone's house, and immediately put a pot of water on the oven for coffee and washing. As the fired-up oven finally began warming the cold room again you ate your breakfast of bread, butter, marmelade, and coffee. After packing your papers and books into your briefcase (which every German university and high school student carries) you started out for the 8 a.m. lecture on an old bicycle.

And thus begins the day of the average student at a German university. The most of them live in private rooms in townspeople's homes while the minority lives in one of Goettingen's three private student dormitories or in the fraternity houses. And even those who live in the dorms practically all have single rooms. Because a quiet study atmosphere is the main attribute sought for in a student's room, double rooms are indeed the exception.

While at least half of the student's rooms are heated by the small coal ovens, more and more of them are being equipped with central heating. Almost all of them have running water, now, too, and a good many of those include hot water (except in late spring and summer, when none in Germany uses hot running water). For otherwise heating water and cooking in general, every student supplies himself with a cooking plate or an electric coil. The student probably pays his own electricity bill himself, too; electricity is one of the most expensive and most-saved commodities in Germany.

Almost all of the student's studying is done in his room (total studying hours are less, however, than those of the industrious American student). He (or she) also eats both breakfast (as described above) and supper in the room. Supper, called Abendbrot or "Evening Bread," consists mainly of bread and butter with meats and cheeses, perhaps a salad, and hot tea. Most students eat their midday meal (the mail meal of the day) in the student cafeteria, paying between 25c and 50c for a hot but very plain meal, with milk for about 4c.

Our German student makes quite an effort to give his room some cosiness and hominess, covering the walls with art, maps, signs, etc. Along with accumulating a nice collection of plateware and other items for his small household, the general result is one of a warm, practical, cosy place to live and work. One reason for giving the room a good appearance, of course, is that it serves social purposes as well. Students visit each other in their rooms very often, drinking a cup of coffee or a bottle of wine together, often taking Abendbrot together, too. If the room space and the landlady allow, four or five students sometimes get together in one of their rooms for an evening of records, conversation, a bottle of wine.

Everything said to this point applies to girls as well as boys. As is already obvious, the university does not concern itself in the least with the personal life of the student (besides providing the student cafeteria and a central point for room-finding). Likewise, no limits are put on the lives of the girls. Every student is expected to be quite capable of faring for himself when he (or she) leaves home and comes to the university. Every person keeps the hours he wishes. Some parties or discussion sessions in a tavern can last until three and four o'clock in the morning.

"Landlady trouble," however, is the perpetual thorn in the student's side. Although most students get along well with their landladys, the latter are famed for the restrictions they often put on hours for visiting, especially as involves the opposite sex. Urging the student too often not to use so much electricity or hot water often leads to some misunderstandings. During the room-hunting race which takes place before each new semester, many a student is turned away from what takes place before each new semester, many a student is turned away from what might be an otherwise very good arrangement because of too demanding a landlady.

During the winter students pay from fifteen to twenty dollars per month (a good bit, on the German standard) for their rooms, all inclusive. Twenty-five dollars a month, then, is an average expenditure for food. Most students have only thirty-five to fifty dollars a month to live on, many working for more in part-time jobs. Just like all Germans, the students learns to save and live on only a little money. University fees average fifty dollars per semester.

Because living space is indeed the greatest shortage faced by a country still recovering from a devestating war student rooms are extremely hard to come by. In putting every every possible foot of floor space to use, some truly interesting arrangements arise. There is, for instance, the one student who lives about one kilometer from Goettingen in an old watch tower. Standing in the middle of a field somewhere now, this tower was once important (centuries ago) to Goettingen as an "Early Warning System" of sorts (the student-sentry hoofed it into town when he saw an enemy coming). Accessible only by a ladder which the student pulls in the window after him, this tower still serves as the residence of one German student every year, at the approximate price of $3.75 per year.

And then there is the one bearded American who has been in Goettingen several years now. He lives in a one-room shack in the middle of a garden, a so-called garden house. For $7.50 per month he has his garden house and the garden (which produces practically nothing but weeds and dead trees anyway) for himself. No running water, no electricity, no nothing. But still it's home in this one room which had no windows when he first took it, which has the typical coal stove, and which is now an indescribable mess of books, clothes, papers, and cooking items. But I did get the first Aunt Jemima wheat cakes there that I have had since leaving the States!

And for a couple of centuries now there have been the traditional three theology students living in a Goettingen church steeple. The tallest in Goettingen, this steeple is one of two steeples of the Johannis Church and is owned by the city (the rest of the church is owned by the church), through several peculiar events of Goettingen history. Originally the three theology students served to watch for trouble (fire, etc.) in the city. Now they still receive their two rooms in the steeple free and watch out for the tourists who come up too high. I climbed the 268 steps to the top to find one of the cosiest student residences (and one of the smallest, per man) in Goettingen. A huge, old ship's lamp, swung by rope from the nearest beam, serves as their one light. Their kitchen-washroom is covered with various public signs, in keeping with the tradition that a new one must be added each year. Not so quaint, however, is the fact that the students have to bring their own water and coal up all 268 of those steps!

Separate Summits

Legislature Dilemma

We seem to have reached an impasse in the controversy over the jurisdiction of the Student Legislature. The situation is all the more regrettable inasmuch as either of the two solutions considered thus far wil involve an infringement on our rights as students and a denial of our duties as citizens. On the one hand, we are told that the Student Legislature cannot claim to speak for the majority of UNC students on non-campus affairs since its members are not elected on the basis of their social and political beliefs. If this is indeed the case, it would be a denial of our democratic rights to permit the Legislature to continue considering such issues. On the other hand, however, we are reminded that we have a stake in the future and an obligation to the present to mold public opinion as much as we can in the hope that we may inherit a better world; we have a right to be heard and, traditionally, students have had an obligation to lead. This is unquestionably true, and therefore any action that deprives us of the opportunity and duty to express ourselves as a group or at least as a majority of a group is wrong.

Must we then choose between the rights of democratic representation and freedom of speech? I think not, and submit the following proposal in the belief that it will preserve both of them. The Student Legislature should be restricted to the consideration of campus problems. In order to permit UNC to make its influence felt (or at least its opinion known) on broader national and international issues, an upper house should be created by constitutional amendment. The president of this body could be appointed by the President of the student body or elected by the students themselves.

Members could be elected.

I think that the present Di-Phi should be made into this upper house. By restoring its historical function to that body, we would be perpetuating a truly valuable part of the university's tradition, a tradition that very nearly disappeared this year.

A constitutional amendment to inaugurate this change is now being drawn up. Under the present constitution, ten per cent of the student body must sign a petition in behalf of a proposed amendment before it can be submitted to the student body for a vote. Many people will agree that this is not only important, but also an urgent, problem. Fortunately, it is one that can be solved in the spring elections if enough interested people will sign the petition. In my opinion, and that of many others, this is the ma over the jurisdiction of the Stubest way out of the apparent dilemdent Legislature; we should give it careful consideration.

'Twould Be Nice

—One could tell boys from girls these days. With those short haircuts and skirts that double as shorts, it's getting kind of hard—from the back.

—someone would put some old boards or something over that sea of mud in front of Wilson building.

—if Lenoir Hall would provide bike racks, like the library. Then bikes wouldn't be blocking the ramp all the time.

—more people had come to the Navy Band concert. So what if you can't "twist",—it "listened" good!

—someone would take a survey to see how much more business the chiropractors have been doing since the "Twist" became vogue. Bet it's increased!

—some people would observe Quiet Hours.

—the new arboretum is supplied with lots of benches. (?)

—we could know what the far left & far right lines REALLY like — why not invite both the Birches and their lecturer — together?

—someone would give the Lenoir chef a new recipe for hamburger.

—people wouldn't sit for an hour over a cup of coffee, but would help relieve the Lenoir congestion by at least offering their table to someone else.

—somebody would make a list of ALL the rooms open for study.

—the Student Government were to take a little money (not as much as the infamous $1,800) and give a really big formal dance for those not in fraternities. A majority don't belong to Greek organizations, anyway. Most would be very willing to kick in several dollars (say two or three) for a really nice dance.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Church Sponsors Volunteer Corps

About a thousand college students will put their human relations and technical skills to the test again this summer as members of a volunteer work corps sent over the nation and the world under the auspices of the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

More than 250 of them will take part in the drama of urban renewal taking place in many of this nation's cities. Others will work on Indian reservations, hold vacation church schools in finishing villages of Southeast Alaska, develop community recreation programs in old Spanish villages in New Mexico, work in hospitals, clinics, schools and community service projects in the Southern Mountains and Puerto Rico.

About a hundred will work in Chicago in settlement houses, churches, interracial centers, and an extensive camp program. Before beginning their work, they will attend extensive orientation sessions, during which they will meet with juvenile court authorities, social workers, urban development experts, and members of the youth commission.

Thousands of other college men and women will participate in ecumenical work camps abroad. These camps, conducted under the sponsorship of the World Council of Churches, will bring together young people of various racial, national, and denominational backgrounds from all over the world.

One project will involve the construction of a medical and social center in Hualpencillo, Chile, which was recently ravaged by an earthquake. In Africa students will aid new independent nations in construction projects, and medical and educational programs. Still others will work in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Holland, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, and Switzerland.

In Lamont, California, the ecumenical volunteers will work with members of a Lutheran Church in a creation and teaching program for the Children of migrant workers. They will also hold an evening program for adults and build a community center.

Students interested in participating in any of these four-to ten-week programs may obtain additional information from the Presbyterian Summer Service and Study Projects, 825 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pa. Cooperating in the program is the Presbyterian Church, U. S., as well as United Presbyterian, U.S.A.

Volunteers are generally expected to pay their own transportation costs. However, limited scholarship aid is available. Applications will be accepted from students of other than Presbyterian background.

The "Hot Nuts" will be twisting at the American Legion Hut from 8-12 Friday night, at the Junior class's second combo party of the year. Tickets will be sold at the door and beer will be sold inside. Everyone is invited.

tors and congressmen in Washington and members of Parliament in Great Britain. In 1955 Graham preached before former President Eisenhower at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington, D. C. That same year, Graham was invited by Queen Elizabeth to preach in the Royal Chapel at Windsor Castle.

Korean Visit

During the Christmas season of 1952, Graham visited the Korean battlefields. In 1954 Graham crusaded for 12 weeks in London, England. This crusade was climaxed by a meeting in Wembley Stadium when 120,000 persons gathered in the rain to hear him. He crusaded in New York for four months in 1957 and was attended by two million persons.

In 1957, Graham was one of three persons receiving Gold Medal Awards for "distinguished service to humanity" by the National Institute of Social Sciences. Graham was named "Salesman of the Year" at the Executive Sales Convention in New York in 1958 for successfully "selling religion."

Graham also holds the Distinguished Service Medal of the Salvation Army, the annual award of the National Freedom Foundation, and the Bernard Baruch Award of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for outstanding service in the cause of liberty and upholding the ideals of Americanism. The National Pilgrimage Society awared Graham the "Clergyman of the Year" award in 1956.

UNC Hopes To Stop Terp Reign In Games

By MARTY KRUMING

In what is shaping up as the most spectacular A C C Indoor Games in the history of the event, head coach Dale Ranson strongly believes that his Tar Heels have the potential to dethrone "king-pin" Maryland Saturday in a meet beginning at 1:00 in Woollen Gymnasium.

As hurdle and sprint mentor Joe Hilton mentioned "the outcome of the meet will depend on a lot of things, but we have a darn good track team which is real solid."

In order to revenge last season's embarrassing shellacking, 80-48, at the hands of the Terrapins, Ranson pointed out that the squad must advance its own scoring and at the same time cut down Maryland's. "The boys must put out a little but more than they are capable of doing. This can be no ordinary, humdrum performance, for it is a great opportunity for a squad of young athletes to do a tremendous job," Ranson remarked.

Carolina will be going into the meet at full strength. 30 runners and field specialists have been entered in the program.

Excitement will reign supreme in all 13 events. Right now the mile run is considered to be the feature event of the games with defending champion Mark Wells of Maryland. Jerry Nourse of the Blue Devils, Guy Harper of the Terrapins, and Jerry Stuver of the Tar Heels all vying for the Lionel Weil Trophy. Although Nourse failed to compete in the games last year, he is tapped as a slight favorite.

Other star-studded events will include the two mile run, the high jump ,and the always thrilling pole vault. Again Jerry Nourse appears to be a good bet to break the tape in the two mile run as well as set a meet record. The mark now stands at 9:19.3.

The high jump record, established in 1961 by Dick Estes and Jim Bland of Maryland, appears in definite jepoardy in the form of Carolina sphomore Tom Clark, who cleared the bar at 6' 6⅝ as a freshman.

In the pole vault, Maryland's Tom Belitza will be out to crack his own conference mark of 14' 6½" set last year, although he will receive strong competition from Carolina's dual combination of co-captain Barry Tiedemann and Heath Whittle. With Belitza tying German born Marine John Uelses at 15'4" in the New York Knights of Columbus meet last week and the Tar Heel vauters having both cleared the 14' height this season, a new record could be set.

Sport fans will be in for an entire afternoon and evening of excitement Saturday. In addition to the eight ACC squads represented, William and Mary, Virginia Tech, VMI, Citadel, Florida, Richmond, and Davidson comprise the 430 participants.

Esquires, Wieners And Pack Advance In Murals Playoffs

By JOHN MONTAGUE

The Alexander Esquires, Winston Weiners and Parker Pack advanced to the Dorm White semi-finals as the result of victories posted Tuesday afternoon in intramural page action.

The Esquires, paced by Ray Smith (14) and Mickey Branch (11), pushed past the Mangum Mau Mau's, 42-36, while the Weiners man-handled the Joyner Tunas, 45-26, with Jim Gallagher's 19 leading the way. Corbett Britt was top man for Mangum in defeat, scoring 13, while Elkins netted 15 for the losing Tunas.

The Pack from Parker nosed out the Avery Axes, 39-37, to gain a semi-final berth in the same bracket as Winston. A 19-point output by Fred Hollingsworth was the key factor here, while George Winnes (13), Dick Finger (12) and Jim Lee (10) led the losers.

The Fourth semi-final position was filled yesterday by the winner of the Aycock Twisters-Avery Addicts quarter-finals scrap. The winner here will take on the Alexander Esquires and the Parker Pack wil battle the Winston Weiners, both games scheduled today.

FRAT WHITE PLAY-OFFS

John Alexander burned the nets for 18 points in leading the Phi Kap Flashes into the Frat White semifinals, The Flashes knocking off the Delta Sig Plummers, 40-28.

The Phi Kap crew is the only team to reach the semi-finals so far. Most of the white teams are still involved in second-round and quarter-final contests.

One first-round game was played Tuesday and this saw the Phi Delt Loads crush the Chi Phi Foxes, 53-22. Once again a balanced attack did the trick for Phi Delta, as Joe Webb (15), Charlie Jonas (12), Tom Rogers (10) and George McDaniel (10) all were in the double digit department. Cutter Davis was the big man for the Foxes with 13.

Four second-round battles completed the day's action in the fraternity White Division, with the Chi Psi Styes ATO Roosters, Delta Sig Rogues and Sigma Nu Mavericks posting victories here.

Fred Seeley's 15 markers paced the Styes to a 34-10 rout of the Beta Szbticks and the ATO Roosters downed the TEP Tepids, 34-23, as Ed Burke bucketed 13.

The Delta Sig Rogues took a 42-41 thrilled from the ATO Drills, Jack Cassels and Doug Page providing the spark with 14 and 10 respectively. The Drills were led by Young with 13 and Dick Fleming with 10.

The Sigma Nu Mavericks, with Clement getting 18, conquered the PiKA Pandas, 34-24, and will take on the Chi Psi Styes in the quarter-finals next week.

Another quarter-finals pairing will find the ATO Roosters taking on the winner of yesterday's tangle between the GL-70's from Beta and the DKE Whites. The Delta Sig Rogues will remain idle until first and second round games in their bracket are completed.

DORMITORY BLUE PLAY-OFFS

The Town Touts and Aycock will fight it out tonight in the Dorm Blue semi-finals, the latter gaining this position with a 53-45 win over Manly on Tuesday. In that game Bill Brown netted 18 to pave the way, followed by Tom Henley's 13 and Roger James' 12. Jim Norton had 16 for Manly.

Ruffin will take on Cobb this evening in a quarter-final match, the victor meeting Winston next week.

LION'S PROVIDER

The jackal is called the "lion's provider." When on the trail of his prey, his hideous calls disclose his whereabouts to the lion, who folows in his wake and drives him away from the carcass when the kill is made, leaving him only the fragments when his own hunger is satiated.

PAST AND PRESENT stars in the 880-yard run for UNC are Dave Scurlock (left) and Jerry Stuver. Scurlock set the record of 1:52.7 for the event in the 1959 indoor games and his senior year. Stuver, now a junior, won the event last year with a 1:54.7 timing and is favored to repeat in Saturday's ACC indoor games.

Rog Hits First Spring HR; Weather Halts LA Game

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — (UP) — Roger Maris' big bat erupted for the first time in the New York Yankee training camp Wednesday as the home run slugger belted his first intra-squad game homer.

Maris' drive, a 400-footer which carried high over the rightfield fence, was one of two hits by the man who hit 61 homers last year. Maris' other extra base blow was a double high off the fence in centerfield.

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Manager Walter Alston called off a scheduled intra-squad game Wednesday because of cold weather and strong winds, but sent his Los Angeles Dodgers through a three-hour workout.

Alston plans to play the final intra-squad game Thursday. Friday will be devoted strictly to batting practice.

Don Drysdale, Sandy Koufax and rookie Joe Moeller were named to face the Kansas City A's in the exhibition opener here Saturday. Ex-Dodger Ed Rakow, Jim Archer and Art Ditmar will pitch for Kansas City.

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI) — Rookie third baseman Don Wert suffered a black eye Wedensday when he was hit by a ground ball during the Detriot Tigers' workout at Henley Field.

The ball struck Wert on the orbit bone, next to his left eye, and sent him sprawling to the ground. His eye was badly bruised but rays disclosed no fracture.

Outfielder Al Kaline and pitcher Ron Kline also were ailing.

Kaline is troubled by a sore left shoulder and manager Bob Scheffing said Kaline would miss Saturday's exhibition opener against the Milwaukee Braves. Kline is bothered by a sore knee.

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) —Mickey Vernon, manager of the Washington Senators, Wednesday named eight pitchers for the weekend Grapefruit League series against the Pittsburgh Pirates in Fort Myers starting Saturday.

Vernon named star rookie Jim Hannan, Joe McClain and Ray Rippelmeyer for this Saturday's game with Joe Schaffernoth the "backup" man. On Sunday, Pete Burnside, Dave Stenhouse and Claude Osteen are scheduled for three innings each with Marty Kutyna in reserve.

FORT MYERS, Fla. (UPI) — Rookie outfielder Donn Clendenon hit two home runs, one a grand slam, to pace the regulars to a 13-6 victory in the final Pirate squad game of the spring Wednesday.

MONOGRAM MEETING

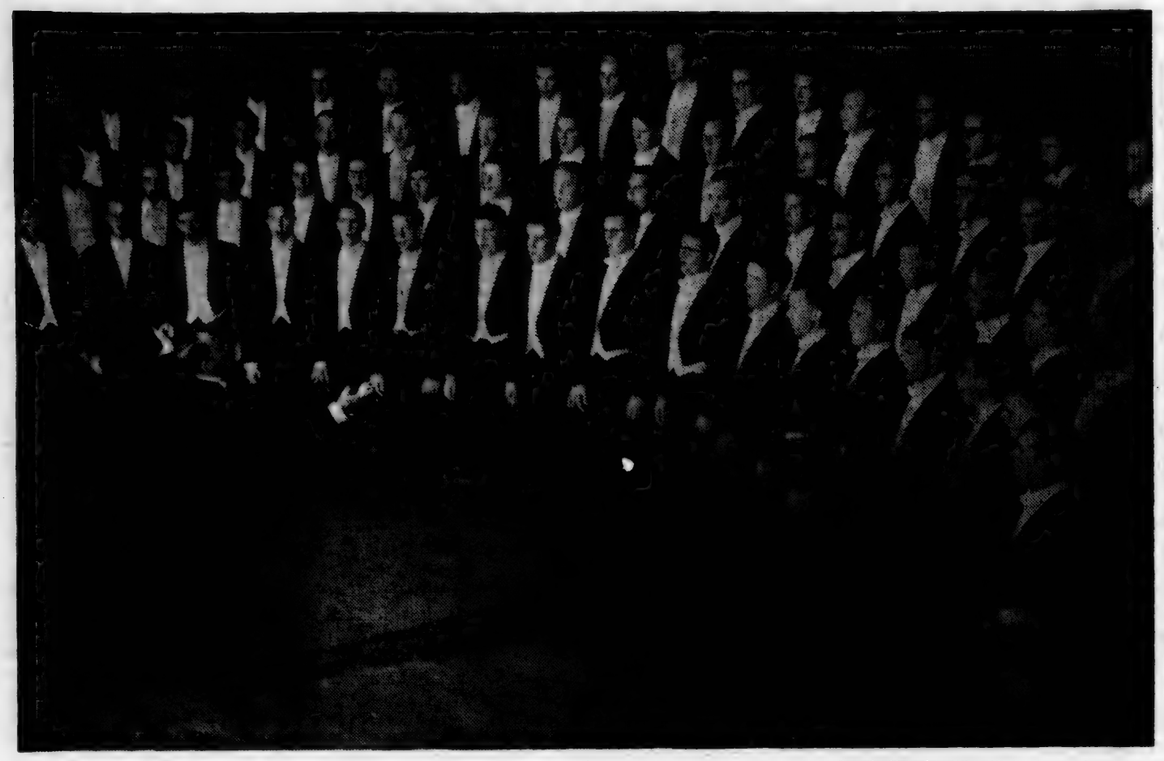
Yale Glee Club Sings Tonight



Wiffenpoofs Join Group In Concert

The Yale Glee Club, under the direction of Fenno Heath, will present a concert tonight at 8 in Memorial Hall. Students, dates spouses, and faculty members bearing ID cards will be admitted free for this performance.

Beginning its second century with the 1961-62 season, the club has traveled extensively throughout the U. S. and abroad. The club gave its first concert in 1861 in Guilford, N. H., and the following summer inaugurated a lasting tradition of glee club tours through the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

European Tours

Under Fenno Heath's direction since 1953, the club has had two tours of Europe. In 1954 the Yale singers won a highly respectable second place in competition with eighteen of the best European male choruses at Llangollen, Wales. In 1958 the group toured extensively behind the Iron Curtain for the first time since World War II.

Last summer the group spent six weeks touring throughout Central and South America for the first time since 1941. The club was the first North American student chorus to sing South of the Equator.

Directs, Composes

Although only 35 years old, Director Fenno Heath is established as one of the most talented choral conductors in America. His choral compositions and arrangements have made him respected also as a composer.

In 1960 Mr. Heath wrote the musical score for the Yale Drama School's production of John Brown's Body. After a successful off-broadway run, the play, now published, has been used by many amateur group across the country.

Whiffenpoofs

An an additional attraction the Whiffenpoofs of 1962 will also appear. This group of thirteen Yale seniors today perpetuates the tradition established more than 50 years ago in Mory's Temple Street Bar where the group originated: "then legacy of raising human spirits by toasting both themselves and their audience in song". They too have toured extensively in the U. S. and abroad.

Village Asks Protection

In response to a request by Chancellor Aycock, the Victory Village Board of Aldermen have drawn up a resolution asking for 24-hour police protection, free installation of night latches, and better street lighting.

At the time of the latest incident in the Village, when an unknown man frightened a Victory Village woman, police protection of the area was stepped up.

Residents have been warned about the indiscriminate or hasty use of firearms recently acquired for protection against burglars, peeping toms, and the like.

Gravely Request

The board also discussed a request from Gravely Sanitorium that Village children be kept away from the animal pens and cages since some of the animals are vicious, and some of the cages possibly contaminated by tuberculosis.

Symposium Names Speaker

Dr. Huston Smith, author of "The Religions of Man" which was published by Mentor and Harpers in 1958, will speak at the Carolina symposium at 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 4, on social and economic revolutions in our society.

Dr. Smith was the son of missionaries in Soochow, China, and lived there until he was 17. He has since lived in Israel "Kibbutzim." Indian "Ashrime," Burmese meditation centers and Zen monastaries in Japan.

In 1956 Dr. Smith was appointed first professor of philosophy at M.I.T. He accepted the offer because as he said, "It offers an unparalleled chance to tackle head on the problems of closing the gap in understanding which has developed between scientific and humanistic components of our culture."

Besides the "Religions of Man," Dr. Smith wrote "The Revolution in Western Thought" for the Saturday Evening Post's "Adventures of the Mind" series, "The Purposes of Higher Education" (Harper, 1955), and was editor and co-author of "The Search for America" (Prentice-Hall, 1959).

Lawler To Run For VP On SP Ticket

Mike Lawler was elected vice-presidential candidate for the Student Party Wednesday night at a party meeting. The SP also filled legislative seats and went over the preliminaries of its platform.

NSA Candidates

National Student Association candidates picked by the SP included: Bill Harriss, Hank Patterson, Bill Straughn and Dick Akers.

Jimmy Weeks, chairman of the SP, said that nominees for Chairman of Women's Athletic Association and Carolina Athletic Association will be selected at the party's meeting Monday night.

Also to be picked is the candidate for treasurer. Scott Summers was originally chosen, but withdrew.

Legislative Seats

Weeks said that the remainder of the legislature seats will be filled Monday night, and interested persons should contact him.

The party platform will be presented for adoption at that time.

The meeting Monday is at 7:30 p.m. in Howell Hall.

Already Chosen

The SP "big four" candidates already selected are — Dwight Wheless for president and Lindsay Raiford for secretary.

For Editor of the Daily Tar Heel, SP chose Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye.

LUTHERAN MEETINGS

The United Lutheran Church Women of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church will hold two Week of Prayer services next week, at 7:30 p.m. Monday and at 7:30 p. m. Friday, in the parish hall of the church. The program leaders will be Miss Katharine Jocher, for Monday, and Mrs. Clarence Sockwell, for Friday.

Spender Contrasts Concepts Of Poetry

By JEANIE BROWNE

Stephen Spender, a tall, dynamic, whitehaired Englishman, spoke of "organic poetry," "modern poets," and "intellectualization," Wednesday in Carroll Hall.

Spender, a leading poet, essayist, novelist and present editor of the English magazine "Encounter," defined "organic poetry" as the "perfect fusion of experience and language. The poet feels at one with poem. No mental shadow falls between the words expressed and the feeling for these words." In many of Shakespeare's Sonnets, "feeling is immediately clothed in the language."

Contrast Made

Spender contrasted this organic poetry with poetry which is the "straining of memory" of a poet's past. For example, Tennyson's "In Memorium" is a "word painting," in which "intellectually chosen" words are used to suggest a picture. This "intellectual, cerebral poetry," a result of "intellectualization" is the "conscious awareness" of the poet to his writing.

"Modern poets are doomed to be intellectuals. Intellectualization . . . is inescapable in the present situation. Modern poets have had to deal with the preoccupations of people living in a world of industry and science."

At the beginning of the Industrial Revolution, poets turned from "organic concrete thinking" 'to "scientific, abstract thinking," and reevaluated "the once primary place of imagination, in life, as well as poetry." If imagination is regarded as secondary, there is a "tendency for poetry to become academic."

"The real achievement of modern poets," Spender acknowledged, is their dual ability to use "critical awareness but still respect the unconscious."

Read Two Poems

Spender concluded by reading two of his poems: "Beethoven's Death Mask;" and "The Generous Days," which are "days when people are young, equally divided between life and death."

Currently a poet-in-residence at the University of Virginia, Stephen Spender is the author of "Poems," published in 1933; the much heralded "Collected Poems," published in 1951; "Backward Sun," a novel; "Trial of a Judge," a poetical drama; "World Within World," an autobiography; and many other works. In the 1940's, Spender co-edited with Cyril Connelley the famous "Horizon's Magazine."

New Jazz Group Plays

By LOUIS BOURNE

The appearance of live music, in particular progressive jazz, has been an-all-too-seldom occurence in Chapel Hill, but with the audition and apparent success of the Carolina Jazz Quartet at the Tempo, Tuesday evening, the advent of a permanent jazz group at the University seems likely.

Starting about 9:30, in an hour the CJQ had drawn a full crowd of listeners, many having heard the music on the street while passing. Phil Forger, the manager of the Tempo, happily remarked that he was drawing a Saturday crowd on a Tuesday. The evening was highlighted by Kenny Malone, a Navy band drummer, who sat in with group and gave a long, furious drum solo.

The group is composed of four UNC students; Jack Warren leader and drummer, Richard Vitek, vibes; d EHord, flute; John King, bass.

Progressive jazz is perhaps a misnomer for the music that the group plays which, although it is similar to the soft, delicate tones of the Modern Jazz Quartet, has a kind of cocktail lounge effect through the use of jazz arrangements of popular songs.

This produces the commercial jazz sound not unlike the Ahmad

Stevenson Terms Visit 'Adlai Night'

By GARRY BLANCHARD

RALEIGH — It was just like old times for UN Ambassador Adlai Stevenson at State College's Diamond Jubilee Convocation here Wednesday night. He called it an "Adlai" night.

It was just like those hectic days of '52 and '56, when he was hitting the campaign trail in his bids for the presidency, with people everywhere and barely time to think.

It began moments after Stevenson finished his speech to some 2,500 persons in Reynolds Coliseum, and left the stage accompanied by the other dignitaries: UN Mediator Dr. Frank P. Graham, former President of the Consolidated University; State College Chancellor Dr. John Caldwell; Consolidated University President William C. Friday; and Dean of the State College Faculty Dr. John Shirley.

But Stevenson was equal to the task. While he talked, he signed. Here are some of the things he said before the press got trampled under.

How are things at the UN? "Well, we're always busy. There's a crisis every day."

What's it like to hold such an important post? "Well, I feel tired."

Have you any future political plans? "I think my plans are all in the past."

What's your opinion of the coming Disarmament conference? "I'm hopeful that the foreign ministers, when they meet a day before the disarmament Conference opens, may find some common grounds to lay the basis for an agreement at

Former UNC President Dr. Frank P. Graham, who accompanied Ambassador Stevenson to Raleigh, was asked if he had any comments. "No," he said, "this is Mr. Stevenson's night. You just tell those people in Chapel Hill that I'm looking forward to seeing them again soon."

Stevenson agreed to stop a minute and answer reporter's questions in the wings.

As he talked, the small crowd of reporters swelled into a flock of admirers, all smiling, all waving pen and paper.

More Faculty Advisors Are Suggested

Plans to: establish a Social Science library in each dormitory, containing all the texts needed for Modern Civilization I and II,

* appoint presidential advisors to work in special areas,

* expand the number of faculty advisors,

* provide a transportation system for the dormitories now being built to prevent the Carolina campus from being "split," were all announced as parts of the University Party's platform at its meeting last night.

Advisors

Before expanding the system of faculty advisors, the party suggests that a detailed study of the system at Carolina and other schools be made. When the study is complete, the party feels that an increase in the number of advisors (especially in the General College) should be made.

The UP also wants special presidential advisors to be appointed that would work in dormitories to speed action on student government problems in the dormitories and to coordinate IDC and student government activities. The advisors would work with fraternities to provide a liason with the IFC.

The party also suggests that advisors for social activities, all campus weekends, cultural activities, national and international affairs, married and graduate students and faculty and administration be appointed.

Tar Heel Column

The platform calls for a Student Government column in the DTH that would make announcements and pertain to all phases of government activity.

The party also favors the expansion of the Intermural Manager salary program.

Physical Research

The establishment of a Student Committee for Physical Research and Development is advocated that would work with the administration in the improvement of dorm social facilities, parking problems, telephone inadaquacies, laundrymats, sidewalks, police protection, and the procurement of an Inter-Dormitory Council Hut.

Elections Board Outlines Spring Campus Voting

Chairman Dave Buxtom of the Student Government Elections board has announced that the following offices will be decided by the coming elections: President, Vice - president, Secretary, and Treasurer of the Student Body; Senior Class officers; President of the Carolina Athletic Association; President of the Women's Athletic Association; Editor of the Daily Tar Heel; Legislature and Men's and Women's Honor Council; and four delegates to the National Student Congress.

Anyone wishing to run as an independent candidate must submit a petition signed by himself and 25 other students prior to or at the Compulsory Candidates Meeting in Howell Hall at 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Re-Apportioned

Judicial Districts have been reportioned. The first Judicial District will be Men's Dorm District I, and will have one seat open on the Council. The second District will include Men's Dorm II, IV, and V and will have one seat. The third District having one seat will include Men's Dorm III and VI. The fourth District will have two seats and will include Town Men's I, II, and III. The fifth District will be Men's IV and will have one seat.

The first three Judicial Districts for women will correspond to the first three Women's Dorm Districts. I and II will elect one half-year honor seat and one full year one. Women's Judicial III will only elect one half-year seat. Women's Judicial IV will have one full year seat and two for a half-year.

Residence Council

The Women's Residence Council will interview candidates for Chairman on March 13-15. Senior girls can obtain application forms from the Dean of Women's Office this week. After the forms have been returned to the Dean's office, applicants may sign up for interviews at the Information Desk in Graham Memorial. Interviews will be held in Roland Parker from 4-6 p.m. each afternoon.

Women's Council Interviews Held

The Bi-partisan Selections Board is now interviewing candidates for the Women's Council (formerly the Women's Honor Council) and has stated that very few candidates have applied for approval to date.

Reapportionment

The Women's Council districts have been reapportioned into the following districts for the spring elections: I—Spencer, Alderman, Kenan, and McIver—a one year seat and a six month seat.

II—Whitehead, Smith and Carr—a one year seat and a six month seat.

III—Nurses—one six month seat.

IV—Town—a one year seat and two six month seats.

Interviews—will be held in Roland Parker III in Graham Memorial today from 3-5 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30.

Race Relations Subject Of New Book Due Soon

The relation of white and Negro leadership in an urban center in the Middle South is the subject of a book by M. Elaine Burgess of the Woman's College faculty to be published Saturday by UNC Press.

"Negro Leadership in a Southern City" examines the nature and function of Negro leadership in a Piedmont town of 80,000 population, and presents Negro achievements in dealing with white leaders over issues of standard Southern disunity.

Largely concerned with Negro policy and action in the movement toward desegregation of the schools and other public facilities, the Burgess book illuminates the high degree of success of Negro efforts.

Change In Leaders

The book introduces the thought that although strongly opposed on some issues, the city is characterized by a willingness to negotiate. As a result of this the character of Negro leadership is itself changing. "Minority leaders," Dr. Burgess writes, "are now mobilizing the resources of their community for the attainment of goals to which a general commitment has already been made within our society.

"What has occurred in Cresent City (a fictionalized name of the town) can be expected to occur in other communities as Negroes make additional gains in their bid for a strategic place in the community power structure."

A Matter Of Choice

The lead editorial in the Raleigh Times yesterday rapped the administration here for "inviting mediocrity" by imposing a low mimimum standard for fraternities under the 80 per cent rule. The gist of the argument was that the rule challenges the fraternities to the "lowest posible mediocrity" a student can maintain and still graduate.

This is all too true. The 80 per cent minimum is certainly not too high, and we do not oppose it on these grounds. We do oppose it on others.

First of all, the ruling is unfair in that it is aimed directly at the fraternities, imposing a requirement on them, as collective units, that is not imposed on the rest of the campus. Fraternity membership should be viewed in the same way as participation in any extra-curricular activity. If any academic requirement is placed on fraternities, it should be done on an individual, not a colective basis. The responsibility for maintaining a "C" average rests squarely with the student, not with the fraternity. If any member falls below a "C", then any action that is taken should be taken against him, not against an organization to which he happens to belong.

The logical extension of the 80 per cent rule would be to place on probation any organization that fails to have 80 per cent of its membership maintain a "C".

This would mean that an organization like the UNC band, for instance, would be required to have 80 per cent of its members maintain a "C", or be deprived of the privilege to accept new members.

That proposal doesn't make very much sense; yet, it would operate on the same basic principle that spawned the 80 per cent rule now imposed on fraternities.

We have no objection to raising standards. But the standards should be individual standards — not fraternity standards, dormitory standards, or any other group standards.

The problem of maintaining standards is one of choice. If a student chooses to put so much time in fraternity activities that he fails to meet mimimum grade requirements, then he has made the choice himself.

The ideal situation would be one in which the standards were set as high as reasonably possible, and the student given the responsibility of meeting them, or failing to meet them.

The Powers Case

The Senate Armed Service Committee, the Central Intelligence Agency and the special commission headed by Judge E. Barrett Prettyman have struggled manfully to reconcile the irreconcilable. They have produced probably as much information as it is prudent to produce about the extra-ordinary adventure of Francis Gary Powers. They deserve credit for the pains they took to clear up his name. The unanswered questions that remain are monuments to the incompatibility of democratic notions of open conduct of government and the essential elements of espionage. Basically, the authorities, from the beginning of the case, have been caught up in such contradictions. The response of President Eisenhower, at the time of the U-2 flight, reflected this embarrassment and nothing is likely to dispel it.

We have come a long way from the time when our country had no need in peacetime for such enterprises. In 1807, Thomas Jefferson, as an ex-President, could suggest to President James Madison that we allay Spanish fears that the Pike expedition to Sante Fe was for espionage purposes by telling Spain that "this government has never employed a spy in any case." If it was an honest assurance then, it did not long continue to be an explanation that could be used with candor.

The kind of espionage in which Francis Gary Powers engaged no doubt was a lot less embarrassing (and a lot less in conflict with old-fashioned notions of propriety) than some other kinds of espionage. His daring enterprise involved none of the duplicities and deceits in which more conventional spies have had to engage, throughout history. Photo-reconnaisance is morally tidier than some other types of inquiry. We have profited a great deal ethically by shifting emphasis to the camera —to "Mati Hari with a glass eye." We should be grateful for that.

Citizens who are at all sensitive well may be kept awake nights by speculation about the deeds that are done in their names. It is better that they lose their sleep than that we lose our country. The case of Francis Gary Powers came to light because his mission failed. Of other cases, involving like risks and dangers, citizens will never learn.

The Government has made an appropriate deferential bow to the right of citizens to know about operations of a kind that they never can have full knowledge about. The very frame of secrecy that inevitably surrounds such endeavors, however, imposes especial obligations on those who authorize and execute these missions. Their failures may involve not only the lives of their agents but also the fate of their country.

Since history does not disclose its alternative, we cannot say what would have happened if this U-2 overflight never had taken place. We can say for a certainty that events would have been different. We are left to wonder how different things might have been if the Paris Summit had taken place and if President Eisenhower had gone to the Soviet Union. And this wonder, on the whole, ought to transend our wonder about the fidelity with which the U-2 pilot carried out his contract. We cannot know much more about one of these riddles than we know about the other.

'Wall Of Shame' Splits Berlin

★ ★ ★

GOETTINGEN, GERMANY — Never have I felt the weight of the world situation upon my own shoulders the way I do now after another five-day visit to Berlin. This torn city of international strife, despite the many pleasures and modern beauties of its western side, brings the feeling of tension and inhumanity indelibly into the forefront of the thinking of any visitor who really understands Berlin.

Though Berlin (West) has many outstanding attractions and unusual features to offer her visitors, you feel yourself far more drawn to the ugly Wall that Ulbricht built, thus drawing a hard, thin line between East and West, between freedom and totalitarianism, than to famous museums, castles, or restaurants.

We visited Ulbricht's "Wall of Shame" (as we call it here in Germany) in many places along its 45-kilometer length. In the southern (American) sector we climbed up on little stands and parts of the Wall itself to gaze over at the two blank-faced German Vopos ten yards away on the eastern side. They say nothing to you, nothing to one another. We know they will use their tommy-guns on us and each other if necessary. All Vopos work in pairs, never alone. And the pairs are switched around from day-to-day so that the possibility of getting to know each other is excluded. Although the Vopos are without doubt the hardest of those few East Germans who have been convinced that communism and Ulbricht are indeed right, there is no doubt that many of them deplore the present inhuman situation. If, therefore, two Vopos got to know each other well enough to realize that both wanted to escape, there would be many more Vopos coming over The Wall to West Berlin every day. As it is more than one hundred have flown in the six months since the erection of The Wall.

In the middle of the sector border (British sector) stands the beautiful and impressive Brandenburg Gate, for years now the symbol worn on lapels and carried in the hearts of all Germans in their longing for a reunified Berlin and Germany.

Because on the 13th of August the Germans stormed the Russian memorial, which is guarded by Russian soldiers and lies on the western side of the the Gate, the West Berlin police cannot allow Germans, only foreigners, to approach within 200 yards of the Gate on the western side. Through the large columns of his Symbol of Freedom, the Gate, the West Berliner sees the long and beautiful boulevard, Unter den Linden, with his East Berlin brothers trapped behind an ugly wall, on the other side. Because they also realize the delicacy of the situation at the Brandenburg Gate point, the East German government built the Wall about seven feet thick here, as opposed to two feet thick everywhere else.

The most moving and cruel sight is the extension of the Wall along Bernauerstrasse in the north (French sector), where the most escape attempts and scrapes between East and West police have taken place. The border of the Soviet sector here comes exactly as far as the sidewalk, the fronts of the buildings forming the border. On the eastern side all the windows and doors have been bricked in, all the buildings within 100 yards of the border emptied of their families (in a city with an acute housing shortage). In the places where the Wall stands between buildings it is about thirty feet high, as opposed to ten everywhere else. And besides the barbed-wire on top, two-inch-square pieces of broken glas bottles have been embedded into the concrete, producing a tremendously bestial impression on the viewer.

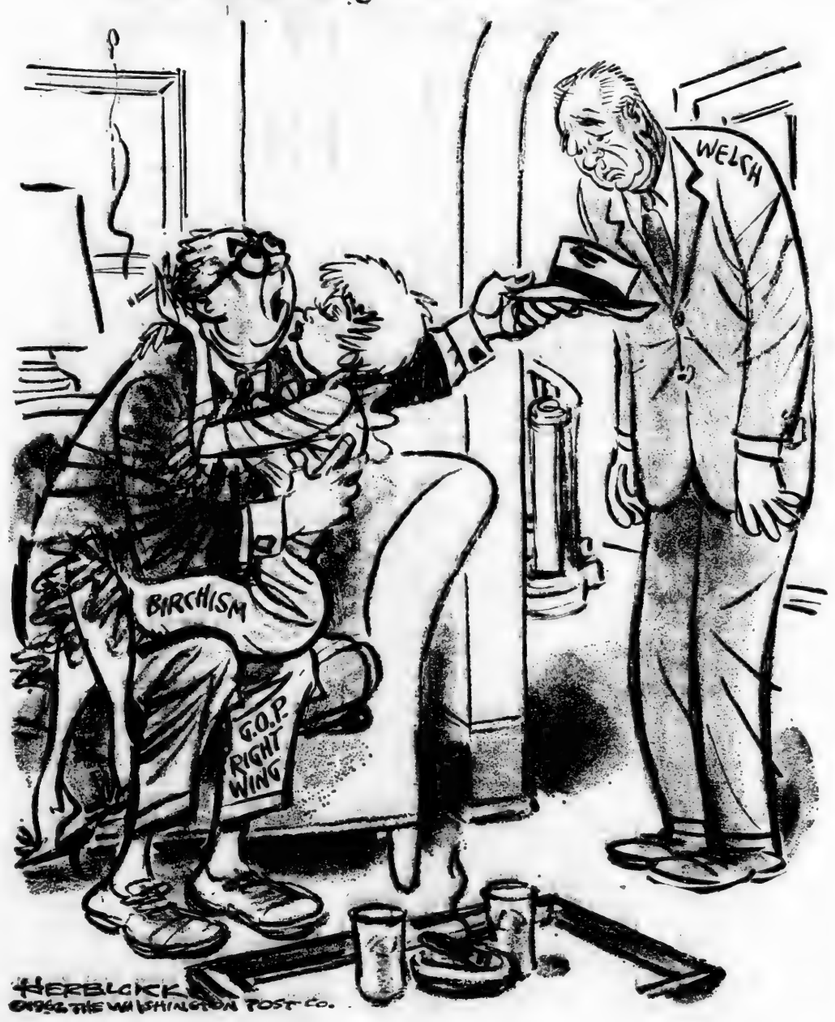
Along the sidewalk of Bernauerstrasse stand three memorials now. They commemorate three persons among them an old woman and a student, killed by the fall and Vopo bullets in their escape attempts. On the spot where each of them was killed stand three poles which are wrapped with barbed-wire, symbolizing the odds which they tried to surmount. Around the memorials are always a number of funeral wreaths, brought there by West Berliners (Attorney General Kennedy added one from the United States during his visit last week). In the Bernauerstrasse area especially, the West Berliners have written "KZ" on the Wall in many places, meaning "Concentration Camp." It was with an extremely grave and heavy feeling that we ended our tour of the Wall.

Adding most significantly to my feeling of compasion for the East Berliners and East Germans and the incredulity of the Ulbricht-Soviet inhumanity were my talks with East Berliners. Though the West Germans have to wait about three hours to get through the checkpoints into East Berlin, for foreigners it goes rather rapidly, although the checking police can make things just as difficult and lengthy as they feel like. Though you never lose the feeling of being in the concentration camp you are rather free to go anywhere in East Berlin. I found myself in a student's room.

We spoke about the future of the East German now. Now that the only exit route and contact with the free world has been walled up, that it. Since 1953's unsuccessful June 17th rebellion, the possibility of revolution has been out. And the hope that Ulbricht-Moscow will change their politics is gone. "For all these years since the war I have been holding out, living the rotten life they give us over here, hoping there would be a change or an escape someday," said an East German worker who was with us. He had to leave his home town, where there is no work for him, to come to Berlin where the Wall and the heavy police population has given them all too much work. "But now I've given up hope completely, there's not a chance now," he added. "Something like this just can't go on eternally," I replied. "Sure it can," answered my friends, "As long as those monkeys ruling us have the guns and Soviet support, there's no hope for us for anything better." There was nothing I could answer. I could only sit back and silently listen as the two depressed Germans talked of their situation, giving many examples and stories of life under a corrupt and inhuman system. Never has the sadness and hopelessness of a human situation rested itself so heavily on my own heart.

Life is bad in East Berlin. Many commodities are lacking. Fear and mistrust are everywhere. You don't know if your neighbor will turn you in to the Vopos for listening to the wrong radio station or not. A student's entire university career is endangered if he misses one of the many political meetings he is required to attend each month. The suicide rate of East Berlin has climbed considerably since the Thirteenth (of August). People have no more hope. What will Ulbricht pull next? What can we do? Where will it lead?

"Sorry, Old Boy, But Your Wife And I Feel You're Becoming An Embarrassment"



Go Home, Little Boys

The antics of these little boys from New Hampshire who are on a hunger strike at Fort Bragg because nobody will tell them when they're supposed to get out of the Army are getting boring.

Those little boys are Army reservists. They are at Fort Bragg because the nation need their services. If they hadn't been reservists, they wouldn't have been ordered to active duty. Most likely they were reservists in the first place so that they wouldn't have to go on active duty then and there.

Most people don't like being in the Army. About 15,000,000 Americans didn't like it a bit during World War II, but they did their duty and most of them did it well. They didn't act like little boys who went on hunger strikes because they couldn't have their own way.

It would seem entirely proper to suggest that the Department of Defense send these little fellows back to New Hampshire as soon as possible on grounds that their continued presence in the Army surely isn't doing the defense posture of this country much, if any, good.

Reflections

More on a detections than reflections point of view, we notice that the local merchants are stocking up on $9.95 a piece Bausch and Lomb small size telescopes.

At first this was interpreted as anticipation of a market of neuveau astronomers due to the recent Glenn flight, but scrutiny of consumers and of the major areas represented —i.e. Everette and Stacy Men's Dormitories — led DTH researchers to another conclusion. Sportsmen in that area are fitting these scopes on guns in preparation for open season to be declared on Cobb next fall.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the chance of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Comments On Blanchard Editorial

To the Editor:

As a member of the committee making arrangements for the visit to this campus of a group of 11 young people from the Soviet Union, to be here from the 21st to the 27th of March, I read Mr. Garry Blanchard's article about the visit in yesterday's TAR HEEL with some concern. It occurred to me that a hasty reading of the article might lead some to think that Mr. Blanchard has a hostile or negative attitude toward the visit, which I am sure is not the case. In order to contribute to a broader understanding of the matter, therefore, I would like to offer DTH readers some further facts about our visitors.

Most of the Soviets are in their late '20's or early '30's; the group includes several engineers and teachers, a journalist, an architect, and so on. Rather than being students, they are members of the rising generation of young Soviets, to whom the last war is becoming a dim memory (but let me warn you, not so dim as in this country!). In other words, these are people who, having already made a successful beginning to their careers, will in 10 or 15 years be occupying really important decision-making positions in Soviet society. It is obviously quite important that such people have an accurate understanding of the nature of our own society — and, of course, we of theirs. It is this broad purpose that we hope the visit will serve.

Mr. Blanchard was quite right in pointing out that our Soviet guests will undoubtedly be representative of what the Soviet regime considers to be the best the USSR has to offer. A trip to America is a great plum for a Soviet citizen, especially of the younger generation, and their selection as members of this group is a sign that our visitors are being rewarded for their exemplary behavior and achievements.

I think, though, that Mr. Blanchard may have exaggerated a bit in his estimation of the probable intellectual complexion of the group. My experience with similar examples of Soviet young people, both in this country and in the USSR, leads me to expect that our Soviets will be neither fanatic ideological zealots, nor mindless robots, tonelessly mumbling the Party line. They will simply be bright, intelligent young people, very much interested in seeing how things are done here, and quite eager to listen to what we have to say about ourselves. Naturally, much of their vocabulary on social problems will be structured in terms of the 'official' line their society lays down — but after all, nobody, including ourselves, escapes this entirely.

To those of you who have a chance to meet and talk with our guests (and we hope there will be many such opportunities), may I offer this advice: in meeting the Soviet visitor, throw away most of your preconceptions, and approach him for what he is — an attractive, intelligent person who shares many thoughts and perceptions with you, but also honestly sees some important matters from a different point of view.

Don't be afraid to vigorously urge your own point of view, of course — your Soviet acquaintance expects you to do so, and will be disappointed if he suspects you of deliberately holding back from a frank expression of your opinion. And while you should speak without hesitation of shortcomings in our own society, don't start apologizing for it, either; he will almost certainly misunderstand your meaning. Just talk with your Soviet friend (especially about anything you have in common) in a friendly, good-tempered way; you will be surprised to learn how open he is, and that he is not at all as rigid and doctrinaire as you may have expected.

To the Editor:

Garry Blanchard's editorial in Tuesday's DTH was aptly titled "A Unique Opportunity." It uniquely represented for our own society that which it was attempting to portray for communist society. The piece began with the traditional call to holy war by raising the traditional stereotypes, and proceeded to outline a texture of further preconceptions which could only serve to frustrate any possible good that the mission of Russian graduate students to the university could accomplish. Witness the self fulfilling prophesies. We are urged to condemn the Russian leaders "who have forged a system that turns people into semi-automatons as many persons expect our guests to be." Is this Southern hospitality? It would seem to stretch the meaning of the word hospitality beyond recognition to identify a warning such as the following with it:

We know that they are really a bunch of automatons who can do nothing but reflect and ventilate stereotypes, but let's tolerate them and listen closely. We MAY find out "what makes them tick." This is the author's hospitality. And further, "We are almost certain to be frustrated in our attempts to befriend the students." I wonder how many of us have become friends with people toward whom we were "almost certain" to become unfriendly. One could attempt to unravel other inconsistencies from this mass of unreasoned ideological projection but its final sentence sums up its themes rather well. ". . . we should expect to learn from them that which we are told we have most to fear from communism."

When one wishes to see what he already knows in a new situation, the odds are high that he WILL see it. No new knowledge can possiibly arise. When one wishes to see what he has been told to see, it would seem that there has been no knowledge to begin with. When one thinks what he has been told to think out of fear, the result can only be perversion. The editorial, in adapting the mode of thought which it condemns, has merited its own condemnation.

Peace Talks Said Calm Under Fire

EVIAN, France (UPI) — The Algerian rebels piled pressure on France at the Evian peace talks Thursday with a military offensive against French troops on the Tunisian - Algerian border and a threat to break off the negotiations.

But the fighting and the threats contrasted sharply with the quiet, workmanlike manner in which the negotiations were reported progtimism.

ressing in an atmosphere of op-

Both the French government and the rebels announced that the Algerians had been attacking French forces manning the electrified barbed wire defenses on the border with Tunisia for the past 48 hours.

At the same time the official rebel news service published a warning which would appear Friday in El Moujahid, official organ of the rebel army, that the peace talks will be broken off and the seven-and-a-half-year war prolonged unless France bows to Algerian demands at the talks here.

French officials were unperturbed. They interpreted both moves as designed partly for home consumption and partly to put pressure on France in the talks. But they said the pressures were not reflected in the "studious" atmosphere of the conference room.

Jamal Trio, with such songs as "Body and Soul", "September Song" in a "Beguine" tempo, a sycopated Latin number, "Tiko-Tiko", etc.

Warren states that he is not satisfied to stay with cocktail sound but is aiming for true progressive jazz, music that will be listened to for its own merits rather than acting at an insipid background for dancing. He feels that, given a permanent place of residence, the group could perfect this kind of music.

Med School Loans OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Commerce Committee approved Thursday an administration backed $750 million program of federal aid to medical and dental schools.

Construction

The funds would be used for construction. The bill also would set up a new system of federal loans to help medical and dental students.

This program would take the place of a $177 million scholarship program sought by President Kennedy.

The committee vote on the 10-year program was 19-6. The proposal is given a good chance of enactment.

The scholarships proposed by Kennedy eventually would have granted up to $1,500 a year to as many as one-fourth of the nation's medical and dental students.

The loan plan would offer up to $2,000 a year for five years to qualified students. Repayment, at low interest rates, would be due in 10 years.

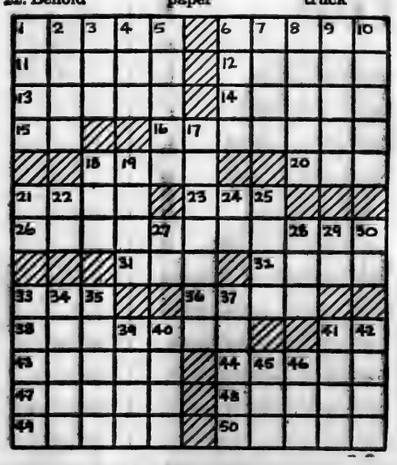
Yesterday's Answer



Taxpayers Offered Help On Returns

A tax expert from the North Carolina Department of Revenue will be at the Chapel Hill Town Hall all day this coming Friday, March 9, to help people to make out returns for their state income tax and their state intangibles tax.

This service is free to the public. Everybody is invited to avail themselves of it.

Infirmary

BAKE SALE SATURDAY

A bake sale will be held from 8 a.m. to 12 o'clock noon this Saturday at Fowler's Food Store by the wives of members of the Xi Psi Phi dental fraternity.

Tomatoes are the No. 1 truck crop in the United States.

'Body' Turns Out To Be Prank

What might have been a murder case for the police, turned out Wednesday to be somebody's idea of a joke.

Chapel Hill police received several calls Wednesday afternoon concerning what appeared to be a body lying in a ditch off Route 54 outside Carrboro. When police investigated, the murder case turned out to be a prank.

Chapel Hill Police Chief W. D. Blake said that the "body" was a dummy made out of old gas station uniforms and straw stuffed in just the right places, and thrown into the ditch.

least, in the field of nuclear weapons."

What about a Senatorial suggestion to have the U. S. loan money to the UN rather than purchase part of its Bond Issue? "My own feeling is that to loan money for a few years would not solve the problem at all . . . we'd be confronted with the problem again in a very short while . . . the refunding of this debt requires a much longer period of time."

What's been the biggest change in the UN since you've been there? "Well, it's increased in size since I first worked for it, at the very beginning, by more than double. This of course has made it much harder. We no longer have a built-in majority the way we had originally. We now have to struggle for every vote. The obsolute majority rests with the Afro-Asian countries, so this makes the work harder . . . . . I think it also gives the organization a greater universality, and therefore a greater impact."

Has your faith in the UN ever faltered? "No, it hasn't. My feeling that the institution or something like it is indispensable increases all the time.

How well has the UN overcome the loss of Dag Hammarskjold? "I think its new Secretary General, Mr. U Thant, has done extremely well. He's a splendid man of great courage and force and conviction."

What's the reaction of UN delegates from other countries to the Attorney General's recent trip around the world? "I don't know. I haven't had an opportunity to interrogate anyone about it because he's just returned."

Old Jump Record In Danger Sat.

The oldest record on the books could be axed at Saturday's ninth annual Atlantic Coast Conference Indoor Games, held in Woollen Gymnasium.

That would be Charlie Hubbard's record leap of 23' 8¼" in the broad jump, achieved in 1935. Hubbard, jumping for North Carolina, is now a Chapel Hill minister. He will also be, as usual, Chief Inspector of the meet.

Threatening Hubbard's record, as Maryland seeks to retain its team championship, will be North Carolina's John O'Bannon and South Carolina's Dan Upton.

O'Bannon won last year's event with a jump of 22'⅛". Upton has sailed 24 feet outdoors.

"Either boy has a good chance of breaking that record," says meet manager Joe Hilton.

Hilton lists at least seven other conference records which could fall: high jump, pole vault, shot put, 60-yard dash, mile, two mile, and 600-yard run.

Furman Defends Title

In the non-conference division — featuring defending champion Furman, Florida, Davidson, Virginia Tech, VMI, Citadel, Richmond, and Wiliam and Mary — Hilton expects at least five marks to vanish: in the shot put, one and two mile, 60-yard dash, and 880-yard run.

Maryland's freshman team will be favored to win in its division, which the yearling Terps did last year. There should be a heated battle for the other top positions, between Duke, North Carolina and Wake Forest.

Always the feature event of the Indoor Games, the Weil Mile shapes up to be the most exciting this year. Duke's Jerry Nourse, who was in the service last year, will bid to unseat defending champion Mark Wells of Maryland.

Also pushing Wells will be Guy Harper of Maryland, and Rett Everett and Charlie Little of North Carolina.

North Carolina's Jerry Stuver will be the choice to win the 880 again, though Jim Moorhead and Ray Dunkelberg of Clemson, David Turner of Wake Forest, and Bob Bennett and Charlie Little of North Carolina will be strong in the running.

In the 600-yard run Don Stauffer of Maryland has a good chance of breaking Dave Scurlock's record of 1:12.7. Definite threats to Stauffer are South Carolina's Dan Upton and North Carolina's Bob Hart.

Other exciting events in prospect:

High jump. Co-champions Dick Estes and Jim Bland of Maryland return, but teammate George Leonard has already beaten both this year. In addition, North Carolina sophomore Tom Clark has cleared 6'6⅜" as a freshman — which is 1⅜" above the Games record, held by Estes and Bland.

Belitza Tops Vaulters

Pole vault. Maryland's Tom Belitza will be out to break his own conference mark of 14'6½". Last week he vaulted 15'4" to tie 16-footer John Uelses in the New York Knights of Columbus meet. Other fine vaulters: Barrie Tiedemann and Heath Whittle of North Carolina and Tom Glass of Maryland.

Hurdles. Bill Johnson of Maryland won't be back to defend his titles in the high and lows. Succeeding him as the favorite will be Charlie Bradshaw of South Carolina, with hot competition from Jim Brown of North Carolina.

The ninth annual Indoor Games start with the shot put and broad jump at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the University Tin Can and Woollen Gymnasium.

Afternoon activity starts at 1 with the high jump in the Gym. Following in the evening will be time trials to qualify for the finals, starting at 7 p.m. The last event is the mile relay, starting at 10 p.m.

Shaffer Passes Up Football, Reports For Tennis Team

Charlie Shaffer Jr. has made his decision. He will pass up winter football practice and already has reported to the tennis squad. Next fall, however, he plans to join the football squad.

Charlie is a UNC sophomore, resident of Chapel Hill, Morehead Scholar, and former brilliant three-sport athlete at Woodberry Forest prep school. As a freshman here he sustained a severe knee injury which required an operation that was followed by complications. With remarkable patience, hard work and co-operation with delicate treatments by physicians and trainers, he readied himself for basketball and was able to play this past semester.

He played well. In fact, he played so well and with such an impressive competitive spirit and usage of skills that only excellent athletes have, that at times he was the toast and talk of the team. It was only his first few weeks in college varsity competition, but he captured the imagination and fancy of the crowds. He likely will be one of Carolina's all-time basketball greats.

North Carolina football coaches are just as certain that Charlie Shaffer can reach the heights in their sport. They did not press him, however, to report for football this winter, and he made his own decision. There had been apprehension that his knee might not hold up in the rugged sport of basketball, but it did. If it continues to do so through the tennis season, he should be ready for football next fall.

Charlie learns quickly. The football staff feels that in pre-season practice next fall, this remarkable athlete can catch up quickly. He showed, as a freshman, that he has all the equipment to make a great quarterback. He is an exceptionally good passer.

Meanwhile, tennis coach Don Skakle is a happy man. The Tar Heels have excelent tennis prospects this spring. It conceivably could be one of the school's finest ever. A half a dozen candidates rank with the best college players in the country. Shaffer, off his prep school and summer tennis record as a schoolboy, is among the six. Tar Heel tennists open the eason againt Dartmouth here March 20.

Oliver To Start In First Game For Cardinals

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) —Gene Oliver, who will compete with Carl Sawatski for the No. 1 catching spot on the Cardinals, will be behind the plate when St. Louis opens an exhibition game series against the New York Mets here Saturday afternoon. Manager Johnny Keane of the Redbirds said Oliver probably would catch the entire game.

Keane named six young pitchers to work in Friday's intra-squad game, the final warm-up for the exhibition schedule. They are John Anderson, Dennis Aust, Ed Bauta, Grover Gregory, Bob Duliba and Dick Hughes.

BOWERY WILL SPEAK

Dr. T. G. Bowery, director of the pesticide residue laboratory of State College's Department of Entomology, will speak on "Detection of Pesticide Residues in Food" at a UNC seminar in environmental hygiene at 10 a.m. this Saturday in room 123 of the north wing of the UNC School of Public Health building.

JOHN O'BANNON, UNC's 1961 individual champion in the ACC Indoor Games, defends his broad jump title Saturday. O'Bannon will be shooting for Charlie Hubbard's 1935 Games Mark of 23'8¼". Another top broad jump competitor will be South Carolina's Dan Upton.

LARRY NEAL (left) and P. W. SWING hold down third base and second, respectively, on Walt Rabb's baseball team. Both hit better than .300 last season as the Tar Heels racked up a 10-4 mark and finished second to Duke in the ACC.

Rabb's Men, After Snow, Prepare For Florida Trip

By ED DUPREE

With the snow gone and the annual Florida trip less than two weeks away, coach Walt Rabb's baseballers are working hard in preparation for the coming season.

When practice started in February, there were a few days of springlike weather suitable to baseball playing, but the snow and cold spell quickly put a temporary damper on outdoor work.

Now the weather seems to be ready to warm up again and Rabb and his men have until March 21 to prepare for the Florida trip which includes two contests with Florida, one with Vanderbilt, and one with Georgia Southern.

Lettermen Bob Wacker, Larry Jenkins and co-captain Dave Murr head the nine-man pitching staff. Five of the Tar Heel hurlers are sophomores, six are right handers.

The three lefties are soph. Clayton Burns, who pitched for the frosh two years ago and sat out last season, Jenkins, and Murr.

Two of the sophs, Andy Billesdon and Spencer Willard, will be counted on heavily to pick up the slack left by Nick Warren who was signed last season by the Los Angeles Dodgers. Warren had another year of eligibility remaining and had never lost a college baseball game.

Rabb's remaining two moundsmen are sophomore Bobby Cox and John Eichberg, a junior.

Another sophomore, Bernie Isgett missed last year's frosh season because of a broken leg, but is presently the number one catcher for the Tar Heel. Wendell Brande, a junior, is the most experienced man on the squad. Other for the Tar Heels. Wendell Grant, who doubles as a 157-pound wrestler in the winter, and transfer student Reid Davis.

Around the infield the probable starters are co-captain Len Dellolio at first base, Paul Swing at second, Larry Neal at third, and soph Jim Speight at shortstop.

Last season "Woogie" Dellolio, "P. W." Swing, and "Charlie Brown" Neal all hit in the .300 bracket. Dellolio and Swing were second team All-ACC selections.

Speight, in 1961, was one of the top hitters on the freshman team as a third baseman. Rabb shifted him to short and moved Neal from short to third in fall practice.

Other infielders are Bob Hundley and Bill Brown, both sophomore first basemen, Milford Cox and Tom Wright, both sophs and second-sackers, shortstop Croning Byrd, and third baseman Pete Rose. Byrd is a senior, and Rose a junior.

The list of 12 outfielders is led by three lettermen, Heyward Hull, Dee Frady, and Russ Hollers. Hollers started in the outfield two seasons ago, but by-passed the sport when he entered law school.

Dave Pope and John Kouri, both juniors, and Bob West and Jud Spainhour, seniors, should see a lot of action. Pope and West saw some duty last season. Kouri, a pitcher by trade, has had a sore arm since his frosh year and may not pitch any this season. Spainhour, who also plays quarterback in football, has seen light action during the past two seasons.

Coach Rabb's assistants are Dallas Branch and Ben Tench.

After the trip to the land of sunshine, the Tar Heels return to Chapel Hill for their first home game with Ithaca on March 26.

PREDOMINANTLY TAR HEELS

In addition to the two dozen Tar Heel natives, two hail from New York, two from Virginia, and one each from Michigan, Florida, New Jersey, Connecticutt, Delaware, South Carolina, and Washington, D. C.

Editor, Literary Critic, Poet To Lead Symposium Panel

Lytle, Aldridge, Eaton Named

Andrew Nelson Lytle, editor of THE SEWANEE REVIEW, John W. Aldridge, noted literary critic, and Charles Edward Eaton, North Carolina poet, will lead a panel discussion for the Carolina Symposium on "Contemporary Revolutions in Literature" on Tuesday afternoon, April 3.

Lytle became the editor of America's oldest literary quarterly, THE SEWANEE REVIEW, in the fall of 1961, coming to this position with a long experience of fictional and critical writing. He has been connected with Sewanee and the University of the South for many years. .

Born in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, in 1902, he received part of his education at Sewanee Military Academy. Lytle spent time at both Exeter College, Oxford, and the Sorbonne and was graduated from Vanderbilt in 1925, having been called home by the death of a grandfather. At this time he was interested more in acting than in writing and spent several years in New York on the stage.

When he returned to Vanderbilt, he came under the influence of the Agrarians at Vanderbilt and contributed to their symposium, I'LL TAKE MY STAND. Here he abandoned the theater for fiction. He has written four novels: "The Long Night," "At the Moon's Inn," "A Name for Evil," and "The Velvet Horn" and a biography, "Bedford Forrest and His Critter Company."

Style Resembles Faulkner's

Lytle has taugh history at Memphis Southwestern and the University of the South. From 1948 to 1961 he was Lecturer in Creative Writing at the University of Florida. He has been awarded both a Guggenheim fellowship in creative fiction and a Kenyon fellowship in fiction during his career.

Robert O. Bowen has said of Lytle's style that "Lytle's lyric prose resembles Faulkner's, though it is likely that the similarity indicates a common source rather than a borrowing. Where in Faulkner a character's rich emotive memories rush out with a hypnotic tremulo, in Lytle such pasages fall toward either the haunting cadence of the folk ballad of the declamatory rhetoric of a Lear."

Andrew Lytle

Writer For Harper's

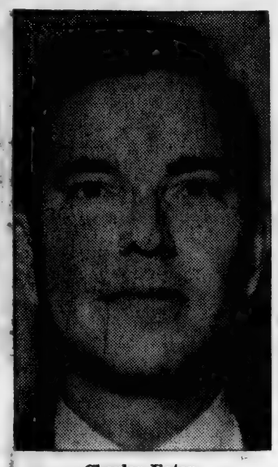
Aldridge was born in Sioux City, Iowa, but grew up in rural Tennessee, near Chanttanooga, where he lated attended the University of Chattanooga. In 1942 he received a fellowship to the Bread Loaf School of English.

After serving with the army in Europe, he returned to the University of California at Berkeley, where he was graduated in 1947. Later in the same year he published a controversial article on the new generation of postwar writers in HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

From 1948 to 1955 he was at the University of Vermont as Assistant Professor of English and Director of the School of Modern Critical Studies, in which Allen Tate and other writers and critics participated. In 1953 he founded and edited the magazine DISCOVERY with the novelist Vance Bourjaily. In 1953 he was also a Lecturer and Fellow in the Christian Gauss Seminars in Criticism at Princeton University and finished there work on material for a book, "In Search of Heresy."

Son At UNC

Mr. Aldridge has lectured at universities throughout the country, including Queens College, Columbia, and Oberlin. In 1958 he was a Fulbright Professor of American Literature at the University of Munich. His latest position has been at Hollins College, where he has been writer-in-residence. He is now Professor of English at Hollins. During the next year he will go to Denmark on a Fulbright scholarship. Mr. Aldridge has been married, and has a son on the campus in this year's freshman class, Henry.



Charles Eaton

Aldridge has been a frequent contributor to prominent literary journals in this country. He has written, in addition to "In Search of Heresy," "After the Lost Generation," "Critiques and Essays on Modern Fiction," and "The Party at Cranton." He is currently working on a critical study of the American novel which he has tentatively titled "A Beast in View." His best known work, however, is probably his first, "After the Lost Generation," in which he analyzes the currents and philosophers behind the present group of postwar writers and their relationship to the postwar writers o fthe Twenties.

Eaton was born in Winston-Salem and educated at North Carolina, Princeton, and Harvard. He has taught English in Puerto Rico, at the University of Missouri, and here at Carolina where he has been in charge of courses in Creative Writing. In addition, he has served for more than four years as Vice Consul at the Embassy in Rio di Janeiro. He currently divides his time between Chapel Hill and Woodbury, Connecticut and devotes himself to writing.

John W. Aldridge

Eaton's poems have appeared in many magazines, and he has published three books of poems: "The Bright Plain," "The Shadow of the Swimmer," and "The Greenhouse in the Garden." "The Shadow of the Swimmer" was recognized with the Ridgely Torrence Memorial Award. Eaton has also written a collection of Brazilian short stories, "Write me in Rio," which was published two years ago. More recently, a long poem, "Della Robbia in August," has been included in "American Literature: Readings and Critiques," recently released by G. P. Putnam. He is presently working on a book to be called "Allegiances."

Both Poetry and Prose

Eaton does not limit himself to either poetry or prose because he believes that they complement each other: "Poetry trains you to the niceties of writing . . . and prose has more range to it." In a recent interview with a local newspaper, speaking of himself as a poet, he said "A lot of people ask me where I get my ideas for poems, and you can give technical answers—you get an idea from an image, perhaps, but where the ideas really come from is your experience, your own way of looking at things. All life is poetry."

Men's Council Candidates Approved

Bi-part Board Endorses 14

Fourteen candidates for Men's Council seats to be elected this spring have been approved by the Bi-partisan Selections Board, Chairman George Strong announced yesterday.

Three candidates, Perry McCarty, Bill Whisnant and Fletcher Somers, were endorsed in Judicial District I.

JD II

Three candidates were also endorsed in the Second Judicial District: Rex Savery, John Mitchener and Walter Dellinger.

No students have been approved in the third district to date.

JD IV

Six applicants were approved in Judicial District IV. Max Boxley, Grant Wheeler, Whitney Durand, John L. Currie, Timothy Oliver and Peter Jason all got the Board's endorsement.

Two candidates, John Commander and Kent Peterson, were endorsed in the fifth district.

Political Interest Decline Is Cited By Dr. Wallace

The steady decline in political interest in this country was stressed by Dr. Earl Wallace in his speech before the North Carolina State Student Legislature last night.

Dr. Wallace is a member of the UNC Faculty Council, author of "Politics USA," and has written for the Law Review and the Journal of Politics.

He urged the legislators to take an active and informed part in politics and reminded them that they can be an influence on government.

Effect Of Apathy

"Those who do nothing more than vote participate in the political struggle because their apathy aids the group with the most power," he said. "I would remind you, however, that playing an active part in politics requires more than good will and an interest in community affairs. It demands a good deal of know how."

He said that challenges to government would be found in the fields of atomic energy, rockets and satellites, new methods of communications, newly asserted freedoms.

Domestic Problems

On the domestic scene he said that the growing labor force, automation, and unemployment would be our great problems.

These problems must be met by a more effective government he said. And more and better politicians is the answer to more effective government. "Better government will come," he stated, "when people put more trust in their politicians and become more informed about government.

It's Spring Again

YESTERDAY'S SNOW might have looked pretty, but that's all. Before noon the falling slop turned to rain, making things miserable. The weather bureau says today should be not quite as cold with partly clearing skies.

Peace Corps Regional Set

By STEVE LINDELL

Saint Patrick's Day will also be Peace Corps Day in Chapel Hill.

On hand for the occasion will be a number of top-ranking national Peace Corps officials from Washington.

Chapel Hill has been designated the location of a regional Peace Corps Symposium which will last two days and cover all phases of the Peace Corp's operations and up-coming projects. Plans for the event have been worked out by the campus Peace Corps Committee, chaired by Jim Wagner.

Direct Contact

The state-wide symposium will enable students and faculty to gain valuable information about the Peace Corps by way of direct contact and discussion with the Corps directors from the nation's capitol.

Among the topics taken up in detail wil be the selection and training of volunteers, areas of project development, volunteer recruitment and additional project information.

One highlight of the conference will be a noonday luncheon for delegates and interested students to be held in the Carolina Inn Ballroom. As in all meetings of the group, UNC students and faculty are especially invited to attend.

Yale Chaplain

The principal speaker at the luncheon will be the Reverend William Coffin, Chaplain of Yale University and a member of the National Advisory Board of the Peace Corps. Tickets for the luncheon are still available at $2 in the YMCA building, daily up to Thursday from 2-5 p.m.

The program of the Symposium will begin on Friday afternoon. Friday's feature will be an address by Mrs. Paul F. Geren, Deputy Director of the national Peace Corps, at 8:00 p.m. in Howell Hall. Following this a 52-minute film on the Peace Corps will be shown. After this a reception will be held in the Graham Memorial main lounge. The meeting will be open to the public.

Saturday Symposium

Saturday morning from 10 to 12 a symposium on Peace Corps work will be conducted by Washington officials in Howell Hall.

Then after the luncheon the second day of the Symposium will be concluded by a round of discussion groups on Peace Corps programs in Africa, Asia and Latin America. The regional study groups will be held in Howell Hall and will be attended by UNC professors.

Co-ordinated with the conference will be a special administration of the official Peace Corps enterance test. The examination will be held in rooms 200 and 208 Gardner Hall starting at 2:30 Saturday afternoon. The deadline for applicants who wish to take the March 17 test is Tuesday, March 13. All students wishing to take the test will please notify Anne Queen in the YMCA building before this Tuesday.

Corps Forms Due Tuesday

North Carolinians wishing to take the official Peace Corps entrance test in Chapel Hill on Saturday, March 17, must have their applications in by noon, Tuesday, Miss Anne Queen, co-ordinator, of the University's Peace Corps Committee announced yesterday.

The examination will be held at 2:30 p.m., March 17, in room 200, Gardner Hall.

Applications to take the test should be addressed to the Campus Peace Corps Committee, YWCA. All qualified U. S. citizens, eighteen years of age or over, who are interested in volunteering for the Peace Corps are eligible to take the test.

Questionnaire Forms

Application questionnaire forms for Peace Corps asignments will be available in Gardner Hall when the test is given on March 17. There are openings for qualified students and persons with academic, practical or technical experience in several fields to serve in countries where the Peace Corps is already in operation or will be in future months.

Especially needed are teachers: doctors, nurses, health specialists and educators; home economists; agricultural extension workers; land and road surveyors; architects; construction workers; librarians; statisticians; skiled craftsmen and technicians.

The Peace Corps test will be held during the first state college Peace Corps conference to be held here March 16-17. Most colleges in the state are expected to send delegates to the conference which will be attended by several top-ranking Peace Corps officials.

Freshman Camp Head Elected

Dick Manlove was elected president of the 1962 Freshman Camp this week and feels confident that "this year's program will be the best ever." Manlove served as athletic director at last years camp.

John Barrow and Bruce Cooper were appointed as assistant directors by Manlove and he then announced that all persons interested in working on the program for next year should attend a meeting Tuesday night on the second floor of the YMCA at 7.

Anyone unable to attend this meeting may call Dick Manlove at 968-9077 or Tom Davis at the YMCA office.

Chest Auction Falls Short Of Goal

Nets $300 Less Than Last Year

The Campus Chest, "UNC's only charity drive," fell short of its goal in the first of three fund raising efforts. Thursday night's auction netted only $600 as compared to last year's auction which netted $900.

The auction did have its lighter moments, however, as a wide variety of donated articles were sold by auctioneers Kemp B. Nye of Kemp's Records and Bob Cox of Town and Campus.

42 items provided by Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority sold for $35.

On the list was a six-pack of beer and a back rub by one of the sisters.

Kappa Alpha fraternity paid $20 for five Tri Delts who will work as "bar maids."

Kemp sold himself the entire ZBT pledge class for $12. The pledges will paint Kemp's store.

Disappointing Sale

In spite of these successful sales, Charlie Shelton, Campus Chest Chairman, said the group was

Chest Supports Tours Program

The Tours Exchange, a program similar to the Goettingen Exchange, will receive almost half its support from the Campus Chest solicitation drive now in progress.

The scholarship, inaugurated this year by the International Students Board, will provide money for a French student from the University of Poitiers to come here for a year of study, and Poitiers U. will provide a scholarship for a UNC student to go to France and study.

The scholarship for the French student provides for all expenses, including spending money, except for transportation which will be arranged by the University at Tours. All studies for the French student will be limited to the undergraduate level.

Mid-West Hit

Surprise Storm Blankets South

Work Crew's Clean Up

By United Press International

A fast-traveling winter storm Friday surprised Virginia and North Georgia with school-closing snows, stacked four-foot drifts on the Great Smokies and threatened to dump a heavy snow blanket along a broad inland belt of the storm-scarred Atlantic Seaboard.

Mid West Hit

The storm hurdled the Appalachians while it was still plastering parts of the Middle West with a mesy conglomeration that ranged from 9 inches of snow in Iowa and Nebraska to 2 to 6 inches of slush across the lower Great Lakes.

Along a thousand-mile stretch of the Atlantic Coast, work crews began cleaning up after a massive winter storm that lashed the seaboard for four days. The storm Thursday gave Florida's Gold Coast a parting backlash of 20-feet waves that took a multi-million-dollar damage toll.

Kennedy Takes Action

President Kennedy declared hard hit New Jersey a disaster area. Armed guards patroled coastal communities to protect against looters in the aftermath of the worst storm in 25 years.

The storm that kicked up terrific tidal waves was far out in the Atlantic Friday. But it still sent flooding tides over some shorelines stretches and created emergencies at sea.

Four-foot drifts piled up in Smoky Mountains National Park near the Tennessee-North Carolina line. More than 200 vehicles, most of them trucks, bogged down in a massive traffic tieup near Cressville, Tenn.

Snow Smacks Virginia

More than five inches of snow hit Western Virginia, and the snow kept falling. Forecasters said the snow was expected to spread eastward to the coast and north-eastward toward New York and New England Friday night..

Baxter To Deliver '62 Weil Lecture

James Phinney Baxter III, Pulitzer Prize winner and President Emeritus of Williams College, will deliver the 1962 Weil Lecture on American Citizenship, at UNC March 29, at 8 p.m. in Hill Music Hall.

The annual lecture has been a UNC tradition since its inauguration in the school year of 1914-15. The first Weil lectures were given by the late President William Howard Taft.

Currently, Dr. Baxter is a senior fellow on the Council on Foreign Relations, Inc., which maintains headquarters in New York City. He retired from his past as President of Williams College on August 4, 1961.

Harvard Ph.D.

A native of Portland, Maine, Dr. Baxter attended Williams College where he received B.A. and M.A. degrees in 1914 and 1921, respectively. He received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University in 1921 and 1923.

Dr. Baxter is the holder of numerous honorary degrees including the L.L.D. degree from Harvard University, Columbia University, Williams College, and Amherst College, the Litt. D. degree from Syracuse University, and the L.H.D. degree from the Case Institute of Technology and from the American International College.

Named President of Williams College in 1937, Dr. Baxter had previously been a professor at Harvard. He has served as the director of research and analysis for Coordinator of Information, Washington, D.C., 1941-42; deputy director, Office of Strategic Services, June 1942-43; historian, Office of Scientific Research and Development, Washington, D. C., 1943-46; and president of the Association of American Colleges, 1945, among other positions.

Pulitzer Prize

In 1947, Dr. Baxter was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in history for his book "Scientists Against Time." He is also the author of "The Introduction of the Ironclad Warship," published in 1933.

James Phinney Baxter III

Dr. Baxter is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; American Council Education, of which he was first vice chairman from 1954 to 1955; American Historical Association; American Society International Law; American Political Science Association; and many other professional organizations.

Whitney Durand

Whitney Durand Is Soph Of The Month

Whitney Durand, Morehead Scholar and Freshman Merit Award Winner last year, has been chosen as February Sophomore of the Month.

Announcement of the award was made by sophomore president George Rosenthal. Durand is the first winner of this award.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Durand of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., he has been a member of the Honor Council, the wrestling team for two years, the Communications Committee, the Sophomore Class Cabinet, the Campus Chest and Phi Delta Theta social fraternity.

Elected vice-chairman University Monday night, he has also been vice-president of the Phi Delt pledge class, a counselor in the Freshman Camp Program, and an orientation counselor. Before coming to Carolina, he attended the McCallie School at Chattanooga, Tenn.

The March Sophomore of the Month has not yet been selected. Nominations, which should include a list of honors, extra-curricular activities, and other reasons for recognition, should be sent to Rosenthal, at the student offices in Graham Memorial or at 144 Cobb.

UP Endorses Candidates

The University Party endorsed 38 legislative candidates Thursday night and decided that the remaining 12 seats would be filled by the Executive committee on the basis of future interviews.

The party also delegated the selection of 3 NSA candidates to the committee. Bill Imes was nominated as the fourth candidate at the party convention last week.

The group approved the party's spring platform as read by Inman Allen after Bob Sevier questioned Allen on what specifically the party planned to do to procure an IDC Hut and to reserve Cobb basement for all-campus use.

Charlie Shaffer was nominated for president of the Carolina Athletic Association.

Long's Suggestions

It is interesting to note some of the criticisms of the new judicial procedures bill lodged by Assistant Dean of Student Affairs at the Honor Council Commission meeting this week.

Chief among these criticisms was his feeling that the bill would tend to make "disclinary procedures too complicated and cumbersome." While there is little question that some of the proposals will make the judicial procedure more complex, they need not be either complicated or cumbersome. The new procedures, in fact, should render hearings more efficient and just. Many of the snarls that have occurred in the past could have been eliminated if a clear codification of judicial procedure had been available.

Dean Long also said he felt that the Councils should be responsible for verdicts and sentences, but leave the definition of the sentences to the administration. Besides the fact that this is supposed to be a student system—at least nominally—there are other reasons that this should not be the case. First of all, there are already good reasons for changing the definition of sentences. Many cases have been made unnecessaily complex because of the restrictions imposed on the Councils through a limited choice of sentences.

Being placed on probation, for instance, is a much more heavy penalty to some students than to others. A studer' engaged in a number of extra-curricular activities stands to be hit harder by a sentence of probation than one who does nothing more than attend class. The question of guilt or innocence thus often becomes less important than the sentence which will be used.

If these sentences are defined by the administration, they are apt to be less flexible and difficult to apply to infractions than if they are defined by the students who sit on the cases and thus become more fully acquainted with the difficulties of deciding on a just sentence.

It seems to us that the students who judge the cases have more first-hand knowledge of what sentences are needed in order to have one which will fit the circumstances of any particular case.

We believe the Councils are in a better position to evaluate their own procedure than is Dean Long, and equally able in judging cases..

Better, in fact.

Last Of The Wine

An odd problem has arisen in the twilight of colonialism. Few dispute the rightness of self-government for those who want it in the major colonia areas of the world. But wha about the tiny bits and specks of empire scattered around the globe? At what point does self-determination become absurd?

The United States is presently pondering this very question in relation to the 32,000 persons of the Virgin Islands and the 40,000 souls who inhabit the island of Guam. There are close to 50 colonial entities that fall into the same category—each a miniscular outpost too small to be viable yet large enough to constitute a political problem.

A number of the flyspect colonies are administered as United Nations trust territories, including the Marshall and Mariannas islands governed by the United States. Sooner or later, some decision will have to be made on what to do with the remnants of empire, and it might be wise to begin thinking about the problem now.

One avenue of approach is that taken by Western Samoa, a trust territory administered by New Zealand until this year. The 100,000 or so inhabitants of these South Pacific islands form a sovereign state, but they have agreed to let New Zealand help out on fiscal and foreign affairs. Similar arrangements can surely be worked out for other scattered islands; indeed, the pattern evolved in Puerto Rico, a self-governing commonwealth linked to the United States, may be suitable for other territories.

Another possibility is to continue to maintain a trustee relationship with the tiny areas, but to provide a greater measure of local participation in government. This would seem to make sense, for example, with the islands of Naru off Australia, where some 5000 persons are governed under a U.N. trusteeship. Concerning the Virgin Islands and Guam, perhaps a way can be found to extend some kind of representation in Congress, or to affiliate with other units such as Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

An especially difficult problem is posed by the British West Indies, where hope for a federation including Jamaica proved vain when that island voted to go it alone. Trinidad and Tobago then declined to join in an eastern Caribbean federation with Barbados and the Leeward and Windward islands. It is difficult to know what can be done with these small territories that seem fated to grapple wth the perplexities of self determination.

Indeed, the essential problem is that the doctrinal inheritance of the past is a poor guide to evolving a future for the tiny colonial fragments. We have leaned, as State Department officials concede, on the lofty gospel of Woodrow Wilson who preached that self-determination is all. In some cases continuing dependency may be the best for all concerned.

Poli. Sci. 41 'Inadequate'

Your editorial reply to my criticism of the teaching of Poli. Sci. 41 not only misses half the point, but also puts up some pretty weird rationalizations for academic propagandizing.

Conceding that the seminar casebook is loaded in favor of the Liberal viewpoint, you say that it is a clever design to make the student think, to provide the other side of the argument himself. Do you mean the professors load the course with Liberal arguments just so the students will think up conservative arguments?

Come on now.

You even claim that my criticism is a result of the clever stimulation of the course. As a matter of fact, had I not been stimulated to think and been provided with a good fund of political information before the course, I might easily have been directed into the particular channels of thought implicit in its presentation.

To understand the effect of the casebook we must examine, not what the authors say its purpose is, but how it is actually used. Some seminar leaders do allow dissent; a few may encourage it. Many seem to find it time to go on to another subject when some student raises a contrary interpretation.

Most students do not have the information to challenge the interpretation they are presented with even if they have the inclination. If there is such concern about getting the student to think why isn't a case presented objectively so he can make his own interpretation?

I personally took the course four semesters ago. I based the criticism not only on my own observations but on numerous other comments I have heard since then. The bias in the presentation of the course is obvious to ANYONE with any prior knowledge.

I picked on the casebook because it was the more blatant example. The approach cannot be called objective in text and lectures when a discussion of the reasons for the ratification of the Constitution is turned into a glorification of centralization of power, when a discussion on the workings of Congress becomes a sermon against the Rules Committee, or when a discussion of the function of the judiciary is turned into an exhortation to abide by the Black Monday decision. Many debatable points are presented as facts, pages are devoted to convincing the student that there is really no such thing as a completely free enterprise system, and lectures admittedly boost one party and condemn the other. The student is even obligated to give "right" answers to test questions in which there is room for disagreement.

I not only said the course was biased; I said it was inadequate. It dwells on many inessentials and neglects many important things. It does not give an overall realistic picture of American government.

For instance, it gives little idea how Congress really works or how Federal-state relations really function, or of the place of the powerful regulatory commissions.

Your statement that the course is "concerned" to help the student "think straight and develop a set of right values" gives your real position away. Who decides what 'straight thinking" and "right values" are?

Freshmen Dorm Idea No 'Go' In Ruffin

To the Editor:

Upon reading that Ruffin Dormitory will be designated solely for freshman students next fall, I was greatly perturbed. Most students in Ruffin have chosen to reside in this dorm because of its convenient location and the general congeniality of the students living here. For this reason many of the men here have never desired to move to other dorms and have thus established close friendships. We have learned to respect others study habits, as well as their likes and dislikes.

This does not imply we have a social clique excluding freshmen or new students to the dorm; on the contrary, we directly or indirectly help the freshman establish desirable study habits. To obtain correct study habits, most new students need some guidelines to judge their own success or failure. We feel an exclusive freshman dorm would take away these guidelines that upperclassmen have found satisfactory for their success at the University.

For these reasons, the residents of Ruffin Dorm ask that the plan of allocating this dorm exclusively for freshmen students next fall be reconsidered.

N.S.A. Meet Dissected

This is the fifth in a series of explanatory articles about the National Student Association. The first article dealt with N.S.A. in general; the second dealt with N.S.A. activity on campus, in the nation, and in the world; the third dealt with the National Student Congress; the fourth article dealt with the International Program. In continuing our explanation we felt we should examine a typical regional conference.

From February 23rd. through the 25th. the 32 N.S.A. member schools in this region (the Carolinas-Virginia region) were invited to participate in a seminar on "Student Involvement in Extra-Campus Affairs." The conference was held under the direction of Neal Johnson on the Academic Freedom Project of the N.S.A. The participants were given worksheets in advance of the conference held at the Duke Campus.

The university's delegation attended the five sessions. Here is a report of how they were conducted and what was said. The first session had Professor Glen Negley deliver the key-note speech, "The Student in the 1960's." The conference was concerned with student off-campus activities, especially in the field of student protests, and the consequences of such on campus. The first session dealt with the legitimacy of student activity in other than academic and campus affairs.

The second session discussed the relationship between the university and the protest group. In a short speech, a panel, and a consequent discussion, the group investigated the exact amount of control, air, or discouragement an administration or student government should give to the protesting group.

The third session was directed towards the topic :IN LOOC PARENTIS. This doctrine, condemned by the N.S.A., establishes the university as the "paternal guardian" over the students. From the theory derive such practices as not involving the student in formulation of university policy and controlling the student's interests, activities, speech, and thought. N.S.A. believes that students should be treated by the university as responsible associates in scholarship, not as "children" under parential guardianship and control.

The four session of the conference, held as all the others with much discussion, described the Southern Protest Movement. Miss Connie Curry talked first on non-violent demonstrations and the university's attitude toward them. The question of the moral validity of civil disobedience was discussed.

The fifth session was concerned with the responsibility of the university to society. Discussed was the proper relationship between the school and its legal owners and donors, the implications of the university's research for eternal truths, the best form of student commitment to attaining social justice, and the practical problems of runing a university.

All in all, this regional conference was helpful in orienting the participants about the issues so they could bring back these ideas to their campuses. After much discussion and debate the general attitude of the participants was a reaffirmation of the student's ability to think for himself, to be free to participate in a university atmosphere of academic freedom, and to be free to demonstrate off campus for the principles he believes in.

About Letters

The Daily Tar Heel invites readers to use it for expressions of opinion on current topics regardless of viewpoint. Letters must be signed, contain a verifiable address, and be free of libelous material.

Brevity and legibility increase the change of publication. Lengthy letters may be edited or omitted. Absolutely none will be returned.

Robinson's Ramblings

"Esthetically speaking, their minds must be a howling wilderness."

This was a recent comment on the designers of the new addition of bastard architecture to the campus — the red brick Hill Hall Annex now being tacked onto the yellow brick Hill Hall.

The union of these two buildings—one red, the other yellow — is symptomatic of the mental astigmatism that afflicts the administration in the realm of architecture. I just don't understand it.

The administration says be calm. Take it easy. But how can one be calm when there is a large red and yellow structure on the campus of the University of North Carolina that is an execrable and revolting as a combination of a pink suit, chartreuse shirt and purple suede shoes.

But, mercifully for those who look at them, the pink suit etc. wear out in time, but for generations to come North Carolinians will see the Hill Hall monstrosity and recognize it as it as an example of administration perfidy.

Ordeal Buy Clothes

And now to something a bit lighter.

Chapel Hill clothing emporiums have their good and bad aspects. One good aspect is the way in which they entertain the casual browser. The other day I over heard:

"Good afternoon, sir, may I help you?"

"He'd like a new suit."

"Of course, madame, right this way."

"Now is there any particular color you had in mind, sir?"

"Something dark. He needs something dignified."

"Certainly, madame. Now where's a dark suit in a 42? That's about your size, isn't it, sir?"

"He takes a 44."

"Yes, yes, I see madame. Well here's a medium blue that's popular right now. It's . . . ."

"Too light."

"Of course, madame. What about this gray, sir? You'll really look sharp in this. It'll make you look like a real Casonova."

"It's too young for him."

"Oh, I don't . . . yes, yes, madame. You're right. Absolutely right. Maybe this charcoal. It's very reserved, sir. Just the thing for a man who doesn't like to stand out."

"Fine, he'll take it."

"You're making a wise choice, Now, let's see—that'll be $88.40, madame."

"Don't talk to me. Talk to him. He's buying the suit."

—MIKE ROBINSON

Nuisances Blasted By O. Connor

I could wring that old mocking bird's neck. He perches outside my window, drops a nickle in his juke box and grinds away, hour after hour, day after day. He doesn't know when enough is enough, even of a good thing. But that is nothing to the satisfaction I would get out of wringing a few other necks, simply because they are a nuisance.

How in the world can President Friday, Chancellor Aycock, and other Chancellors of the consolidated University run the University if every Tom, Dick, and Harry that comes down the beat has to tell them how to run the University. Basketball was a recent incident. Now comes along a lawsuit proposing to take the discipline out of the hands of the Student Government and the administration and put it in the hands of the Board of Trustees. Could anything be more absurd than that! Can you imagine having to run to the Board of Trustees every time a matter of discipline comes up at the University. The Trustees are business men, they have neither the time nor the temperament to devote to academic affairs. Their job is to pick men who are able and competent to do the job, and let them do it. Otherwise, they won't be able to get any able men to accept the job.

The Honor System is not perfect, but neither are the civil courts, where important reforms are badly needed. But no one advocates doing away with courts because they are not perfect.

If the Trustees have near the brains and common sense that we have a right to expect of them, they will decide to keep hands off the discipline and administration of the campus. They have every right to have complete confidence in the men they have chosen to direct the University. They should show the world that they intend to back these men up.

Dentistry School To Produce Films

Motion pictures to be filmed in the UNC School of Dentistry next week will be used for teaching purposes in dental schools throughout the United States.

Films showing effective use of chairside dental assistants will be produced in the television studio of the University School of Dentistry.

Three training films will be produced under direction of the UNC Bureau of Audio-Visual Education here.

Dr. John O. Wilson of Atlanta, an authority in the field of dental practice administration, has been selected as the principal practitioner in the films. Each of the three films will be 15 minutes in length.

The project is being sponsored by the Manpower and Education Branch, Division of Dental Public Health and Resources of the U. S. Public Health Service.

It is planned to distribute these three films to other dental schools throughout the United States. They will be used to train dental students how to work effectively with a dental assistant.

On Monday, March 12, Dr. Wilson will address the faculty and the student body of the School of Dentistry, plus members of the Durham-Orange County Dental Society and other members of the N .C. Dental Society.

He will speak at 8 p.m. in the Health Affairs Auditorium of the N. C. Memorial Hospital.

During Monday, a "dry run" of the three movies will be made and the actual filming will be completed Tuesday.

LUTHERAN MEETINGS

The United Lutheran Church Women of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church will hold two Week of Prayer services this week, at 7:30 this evening and at 7:30 p.m. Friday, in the parish hall of the church. The program leaders will be Miss Katharine Jocher, for this evening, and Mrs. Clarence Sockman, for Friday.

Manville Does It Thirteenth Time

NEW YORK (UPI)—Much-married asbestos king Tommy Manville said today his 11th wife is no Elizabeth Taylor but is sufficiently endowed to become a film star.

The 67-year-old millionaire said in an interview he intends to become his 22-35's latest matrimenial partner, Christina Erdlon Manville, whose vital statistics are 39-23-35, is black-haired and stands five feet seven inches.

"You and I know she's not an Elizabeth Taylor—but I'll tell you, Christina sings and dances beautifully," said Manville.

Cuba Names Reds To IRO

HAVANA (UPI) — Ten top Cuban Communists were named Friday to a 25-man national board to convert the Integrated Revolutionary Organizations (IRO) to a Soviet-type single political party.

The IRO presently functions as a Cuban politburo. When it becomes the "United Party of the Cuban Socialist Revolution," it will have achieved the unilateral status of the Russian Communist party.

Limited Membership

Membership will be limited, as in Russia, to a comparatively select few or, as the official announcement put it, "to the best Cuban men and women." One woman was named a board member.

Premier Fidel Castro was listed as titular head of the board. Its Communist party veterans include Blas Reca, Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, the Escalante brothers, Anibal and Cesar, and Lazare Pena. They are Moscow-trained party veterans of from 18 to 35 years experience in Cuba.

Not named to the board was Juan Marinello, aged and ailing Cuban Communist party president. Marinello, whose eyesight has been failing, was named recently as rector of Havana University.

Passed Over

However, Marinello was the only member of the Cuban Communist party hierarchy to be passed over. Other veteran Communists named to the national board included Severe Aguirre, Flavoi Brave and Joaquin Ordoqui. The young blood in the Cuban Communist world is represented by Esnesto Che Guevara, Maj. Raul Castro, Maj. Juan Almeida and Education Minister Armando Hart and his wife, Mrs. Haydee Santamaria Hart.

Peace Talks Said Proceeding Swiftly

EVIAN, France (UPI)—French-Algerian peace negotiations were reported making fast progress here Friday and conference sources said a cease-fire may be proclaimed by Tuesday—two days ahead of the informal traget date.

The delegations met in two sessions totalling 5½ hours in the third day of their final round of talks aimed at ending the 7½-year Algerian war and paving the way for the independence of that violence torn north African territory.

Despite a blackout on official news, informed conference sources said the negotiators for the French and Algerian rebel governments pushed swiftly ahead.

Expect Monday Signing

There appeared to be a good chance that a cease-fire agreement might be signed by Monday night and proclaimed simultaneously by the French and Algerian rebel governments Tuesday, conference sources said.

The negotiators, meeting under heavy security guard in this lake resort's Hotel Du Parc, stepped up the pace of their talks amid these allied developments:

In Algeria

In Algeria, French fighter planes and bombers were reported to have gone into action with rockets against Algerian rebel forces who have been fighting heavy gun battles with the French along the Algerian-Tunisian border for three days. Terrorists violence also flared in Algerian cities between Arabs and Europeans.

"very disappointed. "We're going to have to depend almost entirely on solicitations."

Campus Chest officials pointed out that both Duke University and N. C. State College were successful in meeting the goals of their drives and that this should "provide a challenge to Carolina students."

Solicitations for the Campus Chest wil begin next Tuesday and run through to the following Thursday. Officials say that a one dollar minimum per student will be required to meet the Chest's goal.

Five Charities

The Campus Chest at UNC was started in 1945. Funds raised by the Chest this year will go to Mental Health at Butner, N. C. and to Heart Research at Memorial Hospital. The World University Service, a "student-to-student aid service," is another benificiary of the Campus Chest.

The Chest helps sponsor the Tours Scholarship, a student exchange program with the University at Tours, France. Chest funds also go to the American Friends Service," an organization of international scope helping America and nations in distress with food and technical assistance."

SHAKESPEARE DOESN'T LIVE HERE ANY MORE

A recent and most heartening development in American college life has been the emergence of the artist-in-residence. In fact, the artist-in-residence has become as familiar a sight on campus as Latin ponies, leather elbow patches, Rorschach tests, hula hoops, and Marlboro cigarettes.

And we all know how familiar that is—I mean Marlboro cigarettes. And why should it not be familiar? Why, where learning is king, where taste is sovereign, where brain power rules supreme, should not Marlboro be everyone's favorite? The same good sense that gets you through an exam in Restoration Poetry or solid-state physics certainly does not desert you when you come to pick a cigarette. You look for a flavor that is flavorful, a filter pure and white, a choice of pack or box, a lot to like. You look, in short, for Marlboro—and happily you don't have to look far. Marlboro is available at your friendly tobacconist's or vending machine, wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states and Las Vegas.

But I digress. We were speaking of the new campus phenomenon—the artist-in-residence—a man or woman who writes, paints, or composes right on your very own campus and who is also available for occasional consultations with superior students.

Take, for example, William Cullen Sigafoos, artist-in-residence at the Toledo College of Belles Lettres and Fingerprint Identification.

As we all know, Mr. Sigafoos has been working for many years on an epic poem in rhymed couplets about the opening of the Youngstown-Akron highway. Until, however, he went into residence at the Toledo College of Belles Lettres and Fingerprint Identification, his progress was not what you would call rapid. He started well enough with the immortal couplet we all know: They speed along on wheels of rubber, rushing home in time for supper . . .

Then Mr. Sigafoos got stuck. It is not that his muse deserted him; it is that he became involved in a series of time-consuming episodes—a prefrontal lobotomy for Irwin, his faithful sled dog; fourteen consecutive months of jury duty on a very complicated case of overtime parking; getting his coattail caught in the door of a jet bound for Brisbane, Australia; stuff like that.

He was engaged in a very arduous job in Sandusky—posing for a sculptor of hydrants—when an offer came from the Toledo College of Belles Lettres and Fingerprint Identification to take up residence there, finish his magnum opus and, from time to time, see a few gifted students.

Mr. Sigafoos accepted with pleasure and in three short years completed the second couplet of his Youngstown-Akron Turnpike epic: The highway is made of solid concrete and at the toll station you get a receipt.

"What is truth?" said one.

Then a few gifted students came to visit him. They were a prepossessing lot—the boys with corduroy jackets and long, shaggy beards; the girls also with corduroy jackets but with beards neatly braided.

"What is truth?" said one. "What is beauty?" said another.

"Should a writer live first and write later or should he write and do a little living in his spare time?" said another.

"How do you find happiness—and having found it, how do you get rid of it?" said another.

"Whither are we drifting?" said another.

"I don't know whither you are drifting," said Mr. Sigafoos, "but as for me, I am drifting back to Sandusky to pose for the hydrant sculptor."

And back he went, alas, leaving only a fragment of his Youngstown-Akron Turnpike epic to rank with other such uncompleted masterpieces as Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, the Venus de Milo, and Singer's Midgets. © 1962 Max Shulman

* * *

Take cheer, good friends, from one masterpiece that is complete. We, refer, of course, to Marlboro cigarettes. Filter end and tobacco end are both as good as tobacco artistry and science can make them.

Maryland Favored, But UNC Strong

Ninth Annual Indoor Games Begin At 10:30

Weil Mile Features Today's Nine Races

By ED DUPREE

The Weil Mile, scheduled for 8:25 tonight, highlights a list of nine track events on today's ACC Indoor Games program.

The late Lionel Weil of Goldsboro, N. C. established a trophy for the conference indoor mile winner in 1939 and it has been awarded to the top miler each year since.

In 1940 Davis of UNC set the record of 4:12.5, which has been tied by Burr Grim of Maryland in 1958, and Bill Latham of South Carolina in 1959.

Other winners of the event were UNC's Jim Beatty and Duke's Cary Weisiger. Beatty won the event three straight years, 1955-56-57. Wiesiger was the league's top miler last season.

But this year's field is the best ever and as many as four runners are capable of snapping the record established 22 years ago.

Nourse Favored

After spending last in the service, Duke's Jerry Nourse is favored to win the race and to break the record. He could come in near the 4:00 mark.

Maryland's Mark Wells won the race in 1961 with a 4:21.1 time and is back to defend his title. The number two man last year, Maryland's Guy Harper, is also back, as are Jim Moorhead, Clemson, John Pfalzgraf, South Carolin, and Louis Van Dyck, Duke. Moorhead, Pfalzgraph, and Van Dyck finished three-four-five in last year's Games.

Carolina's entries in the Weil Mile should be Rett Everett, Charlie Little, Charlie Tromba, and Carmine Lunetta.

Everett returns to defend the title he won last year in the two mile event. His time was 9:27.5, compared to another Tar Heel's 9:19.3 record—Wayne Bishop in 1959.

But Duke's Nourse is favored in this race also. He has run under nine minutes and could capture first places in each of the long races.

Scurlock Holds Mark

The record for the 880-yard run was set in 1959 by UNC's Dave Scurlock. Last year Jerry Stuver took a blue ribbon with a 1:54.7 performance, two seconds under Scurlock's mark. Other half-milers are Moorhead, second in 1961, Ray Dunkelberg, Clemson, Dick Smith, Maryland, Dave Turner, Wake Forest ,and UNC's Little.

Scurlock also holds the Indoor Games record of 1:12.7 for the 600-yard run in 1958. Maryland's Don Stauffer, with a time of 1:14.6, won the event last year and is back to try again. Chief threats to his title are UNC's Bob Hart and South Carolina's Dan Upton. Gil Faccio of Virginia was fourth last year and Dunkelberg of Clemson, fifth. Others in the race will be Doug Dobbs of Maryland and Jack Shaw of Clemson.

In addition to Hart, Don Jeffries, Gordon Howard, and Dave Brunson will run the 600 for Carolina.

Bradshaw Tops Hurdlers

In the 70-yard high hurdles, South Carolina's Charlie Bradshaw is the favorite, but a tight race is expected. UNC's Jim Brown rates high. Other high hurdlers will be Wesley King, Clemson, John Lindley, UNC, Wilfred Turner, UNC, and Carl Hendrix, South Carolina.

Bradshaw and King are the favorites in the 70-yard low hurdles. Other low hurdlers are Brown, UNC, Marv Pixton, Maryland, John Hepler, Virginia, and Bob Vermillion, Maryland.

The low hurdle record was set in 1949 by UNC's Bill Albans. His time was 7.6. Corpening of UNC, 1940, and Starboard of Maryland, 1959, holds the high hurdle record—8.5.

The shortest race of the day is the 60-yard dash, in which Dave Sime of Duke holds the 6.1 record. Jonas Spiegal won the sprint last year, but is not back to defend his title. Don Van Reenan of Maryland finished second to Spiegal in 1961 and is favored this time. UNC sends Tommy Brooks, John McNinch, Joe McLamb, and David Henry into this event, while other entries ar Clemson's King, Tony Sepp, Virginia, Ernest Williams, Wake Forest, Don Gilbert, Clemson, and Bill Grey, Maryland.

The mile and two mile relays could decide the winner of the meet. Maryland won the mile relay in 1961 in a record time of 3:24.1. Maryland also holds the two mile mark of 8:05.4, set in 1960.

Running the mile relay for UNC will be Brown, Stuver, Hart, and Bob Bennett, while Bennettt teams up with Mike Folk, Scott Brent, and Brunson in the long relay.

Furman Heads Outside Teams

By ED DUPREE

Furman's defending champions head the list of non-conference teams entered in today's ACC Indoor Games. The South Carolina Baptists won the Southern Conference title on Feb. 24 and boast four individual non-conference champs from the 1961 Indoor Games.

Tony Etnyre in the high jump, Dick Patterson in the two mile run, Dave Segal in the 60-yard dash, and Thad Talley in the 880 are Furman's big four.

Other individual champs returning to defend their titles are Bob Dietrich of William and Mary in the high hurdles and Jim McDowell of VMI in the shot put.

Richmond, The Citadel, Davidson, Virginia Tech, and Florida are also entered.

Coaches Boast Long Tenures

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

The tenure of a coaching position in the sport of track and field is much longer, and much more secure than that of any other sport.

This fact is apparent (at least in the ACC) on looking at the respective tenures of the coaches who today gather for the 1962 ACC Indoor Games in Woollen Gym.

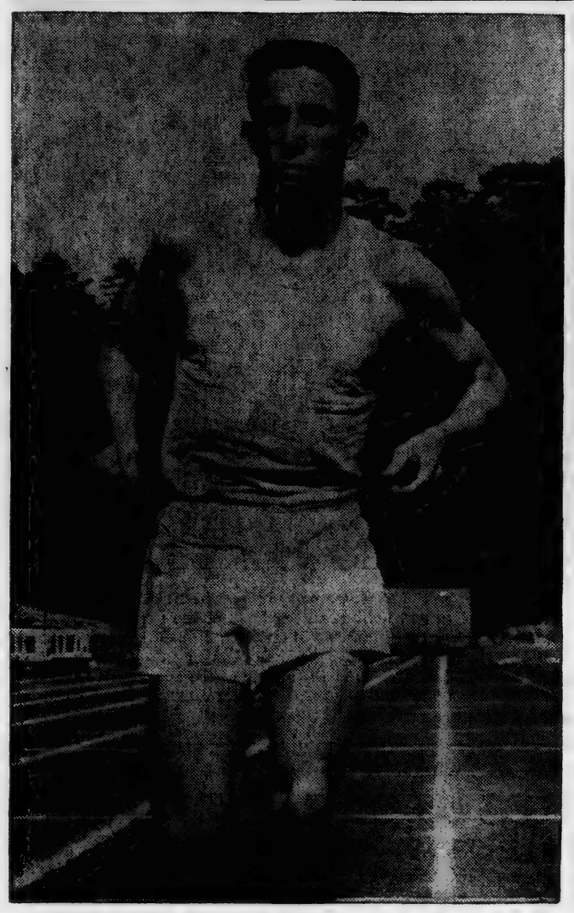
Of the eight ACC coaches, only P. Wee Greenfield of Clemson has served less than eight years at his present school. His two-year term added to the remaining mentors' combined tenures brings the coaches total to a fantastic 90 years.

Duke's Bob Chambers leads the pack with 24 seasons at the helm of the Blue Devils. Jim Kehoe has guided the fortunes of the Maryland Terrapins for the past 15 years while Weems Baskin of South Carolina follows Kehoe with 14 years as the Gamecock coach.

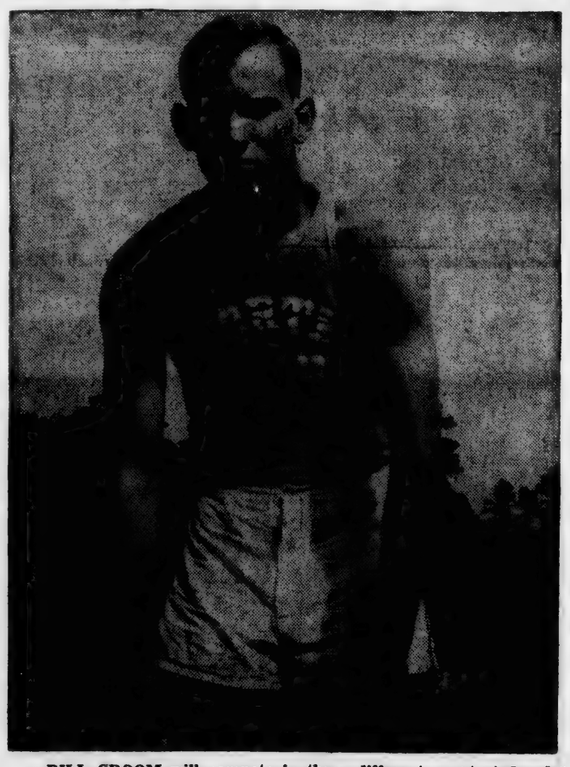
UNC's Dale Ranson is in his 10th year here as head coach after serving for over 20 years in an assistant's capacity.

Louis Onesty has been at Virginia for the past nine seasons while Paul Derr of North Carolina State and Bill Jordan of Wake Forest round out the remarkably-durable positions of ACC coaches with eight years apiece at their respective schools.

Maryland coach Kehoe has copped seven of the previous eight ACC Indoor meets — his only loss coming in 1955 when UNC's Tar Heels, under Ranson, just nosed out the Terrapins. Maryland also boasts nine of last year's 13 individual winners.



SCOTT BRENT, UNC middle distance man, will run in the 880-yard run and the two mile relay this afternoon in the Atlantic Coast Conference's ninth annual indoor games.



BILL CROOM will compete in three different events today for Coach Dale Ranson's track teams. Croom will be in the high jump and broad jump for UNC, in addition to the 70-yard low hurdles.

Schedule Of Evenst

10:30—shot put, broad jump
1:00—high jump finals

Champs Return In Four Field Events

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

Record-holders in three of the four field events return to defend their championships today as the 1962 edition of the ACC Indoor Games gets under way in Woollen Gym.

The title-winners, all of whom set their records last year, are: Dick Estes & Jim Bland, Maryland's double-barreled high-jump punch, Tom Belitza, a pole vaulter also with the Terrapins, and Dick Gesswein, a shot putter from Duke.

Estes and Bland, who both jumped 6-5 last year to tie for first place, will be hard-pressed to retain their co-ownership of the title this time out. The reason for this is two high-flying leapers by the names of George Leonard and Tom Clark.

Leonard, a Maryland teammate of Estes and Bland, has beaten both this year while Clark, the sophomore pride and joy of UNC's track team, has cleared 6-6⅝.

Belitza's record of 14-6½ in the polt vault is one of the eight marks meet director Joe Hilton predicts will be broken. The Maryland vaulter just last week tied 16-footer John Uelses at 15-4 in the New York City Knights of Columbus Meet. His strongest competition should come from Carolina's Barrie Tiedemann and Heath Whittle.

Shot Put In Tin Can

The shot put event, which takes place in the Tin Can at 10:30 this morning, will feature Duke's strongman, Gesswein. The big Blue Devil hurled the 16-pound ball 53'7½" last year for the record and is favored to repeat as the winner today. UNC's Harvey Henry, Virginia's Dave Graham, and Steve Hameroff of Maryland are considered the only threats to Gesswein.

The fourth record-breaker of a field event mark will be on hand today but not in a competitive role. He is Charlie Hubbard, currently the minister of the First Methodist Church here in Chapel Hill.

In 1935, Hubbard, broad-jumper for North Carolina, leaped 23'8¼" to establish the oldest record now on the ACC books, and today, he will be present in his usual capacity as Chief Inspector of the meet.

Threatening Hubbard's record will be John O'Bannon of UNC and South Carolina's Dan Upton. O'Bannon is the defending champion in this event, having placed first last year with a leap of 22'⅛" while Upton, the Palmetto state's chief challenge for a first place, has jumped 24' outdoors. Other jumpers in the running are Bob Vermillion of Maryland, Mike Elzay of Duke and UNC's Bill Croom.

Touts Win As Beck Hits 29

Lennie Beck's 29 points paced the Town Touts to a 59-41 victory over Aycock in Thursday's basketball action. The win advanced the Touts into the finals of the dorm blue division.

In a quarter-final game, also in dorm blue action, Cobb edged past Ruffin, 39-33.

The closest contest of the day came in a semi-final game in the dorm white division. The Winston Wieners nosed out the Parker Pack, 46-43. Freshman footballer Jim Gallagher poured in 22 points to lead Winston to victory.

In the other dorm white semi-final contest, the Avery Addicts defeated the Alexander Esquires, 48-34, with Byron Bowman's 15 points taking high scoring honors.

In the only other intramural basketball action, a fraternity blue game, Sigma Nu drubbed the Phi Gams by the lop-sided score of 61-21. Bob Wacker's 18 points for the victors almost topped the entire Phi Gam output.

CARMINE LUNETTA — runs both the mile and two mile in today's ACC Indoor Games in Woollen Gym.
